INCOMPLETE returns show a gain of 130 borough seats for the laborites and a loss of 69 for the tories, 49 for the liberals and 21 for the independents. This result shows that the

REVIEW GROWTH OF U. S. S. R. AT NOV. 7TH MEETS

Disappoint Capitalism With Unbroken Unity

On the eve of the Ninth Anniversary of the Russian Revolution, the party of the Russian proletariat that made the revolution possible is holding a memorable congress. The capitalist press of the world is attempting to find comfort in this congress because there is a divergence of views in the party. But before November Seventh the organized vanguard of the Russian proletariat will have again proclaimed the invincible unity of the Communist Party of the Soviet Union and again dash the hopes of world capitalism. In this unity they will celebrate the ninth anniversary of their revolution and the militant workers of the entire world will join with them in a demonstration of international solidarity.

If on the occasion of previous anniversaries of this historic event, working-class orators have had ample reason to point out the huge strides made in the economic strengthening of the workers' and peasants' government, on the occasion of the ninth anniversary it will be possible with all the more emphasis to stress the

STAGE TWO NEW YORK AFFAIRS TO HELP THE DAILY WORKER FUND

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, Nov. 3.—Saturday, Nov. 6, will witness two affairs in New York given to aid The DAILY WORKER in its drive for the "Keep The DAILY WORKER Fund." A Lettish ball will be given at the Bohemian National Hall, 321 E. 73rd St., at which a one-act play will be featured together with a splendid musical program including numbers by the Lettish orchestra, a quartette, vocal solos and a violin duet.

On the same day a Veteherinka for The DAILY WORKER will take place at the Workers' House, 108 E. 14th St. Half the proceeds of each affair will go to The DAILY WORKER.

Gunmen on Trial.

Frank Koneli and Joseph Saltis, charged with the murder of John "Mitters" Foley last August, today went on trial before a second jury.

The first jury was discharged when a juryman was found to be insane.

Special Prosecutor Lloyd Hath said he expected to complete his case by tomorrow afternoon.

Rum Trial Continues.

CHICAGO, Nov. 3.—Bernard Rumpe was called to the witness stand yesterday to substantiate charges of bribery at the resumption of the trial of former prohibition administrator Percy B. Owen, state Senator Lowell B. Mason and others charged with conspiracy to violate the dry laws.

BANKERS OPEN WAR ON OHIO COAL DIGGERS

Reserve Bank Chairman Gives Signal

By HARVEY O'CONNOR,
Federated Press.

CLEVELAND, Nov. 3.—Credit capital, ultimate authority in America's industrial life, has decreed that the miners' union must go. Speaking thru George de Camp, chairman of the board of the Cleveland Federal Reserve Bank, the Wall Street interests in control of the federal reserve have ordered the miners to sacrifice the gains of long years of struggle by going back to work underground for approximately the same wage that the unskilled city street laborer gets—$5 a day.

Chairman deCamp's ultimatum is published in the Clevelander, official organ of the Cleveland Chamber of Commerce, one of the most bitter anti-union organizations in the country. Under the title, Ohio-Dug Coal, de Camp recalls with enthusiasm the $2.56 scale the miners got before the war and urges the adoption in Ohio of the wages now being paid in southern West Virginia.

BLAINE ELECTED TO U. S. SENATE; MAGNUS LICKED

Zimmerman Wins State from LaFollettes

John J. Blaine, LaFollette candidate for United States senate won easily over his opponents in last Tuesday's election, the the LaFollette machine was badly cracked thru the election of Fred Zimmerman, secretary of state, to the governorship.

Unless Blaine changes considerably his presence in the senate will not bring much aid or comfort to Coolidge. And there is no very good reason why Blaine should change now, since the insurgents, of which he is considered one, will hold the balance

G. O. P. VICTORY IN ILL., LITTLE GOOD TO CALVIN

Smith Almost Certain to Be Blocked at Desk

The only silver lining in the dark cloud that hangs over the white house today is an invitation from William Randolph Hearst to Coolidge to spend next summer's vacation on the publisher's ranch in California.

The victory of Frank L. Smith, republican of Illinois, has not put a drop in Calvin's empty cup of joy. Neither did the election of Vare at Pennsylvania.

The last days of election campaigning in Illinois were marked by a bitter attack on the president by Smith, because of Coolidge's remark that Smith

The Party Must Mobilize Faster to Keep The DAILY WORKER

By C. E. RUTHENBERG,
National Secretary, Workers (Communist) Party.

THE response to the Keep The DAILY WORKER campaign for a period of two or three weeks during October showed that the party had taken up the campaign in earnest. The forward drive raised the total contributions to the Keep The DAILY WORKER Fund to $14,223.52 on November 2.

The support given The DAILY WORKER in its hour of great need, however, proved too spasmodic. During the last ten days the contributions to Keep The DAILY WORKER Fund have fallen off to such an extent that a new crisis has been created for The DAILY WORKER.

The situation which our paper faces and will face unless the Keep The DAILY WORKER campaign is given more systematic and sustained support is as dangerous as when the campaign for the Keep The DAILY WORKER Fund was started. Unless the whole party can be drawn into the campaign for The DAILY WORKER and a systematic and sustained drive made until the $50,000 fund is completed WE WILL NOT BE ABLE TO KEEP THE DAILY WORKER.

The contributions received for the Keep The DAILY WORKER Fund to date represent only $5.00 each for approximately 3,000 party members. THAT MEANS THAT 7,000 MEMBERS WHO ARE ON THE PARTY ROLLS HAVE NOT YET MADE THEIR CONTRIBUTION TO THE "KEEP THE DAILY WORKER" FUND.

The whole party organization must be mobilized immediately to collect from and thru these members the $5.00 which every member is assessed to raise.

In order to meet obligations which are now overdue and represent a serious danger to The DAILY WORKER the party must raise $5,000 for the Keep The DAILY WORKER Fund during the present week.

There are unquestionably considerable sums of money for the Keep The DAILY WORKER Fund in the hands of the party members and the various party units and committees. This money must be remitted to The DAILY WORKER immediately.

We cannot slow down on the work of raising the Keep The DAILY WORKER Fund if we are to pull thru The DAILY WORKER. The work must go forward with increasing momentum until the whole $50,000 fund is raised. Only that will Keep The DAILY WORKER as the fighting organ and militant voice of our movement.

THE PARTY HAS THE POTENTIAL STRENGTH TO KEEP THE DAILY WORKER. IT HAS SHOWN THRU THE WORK WHICH WAS DONE FOR SEVERAL WEEKS OF THE PRESENT CAMPAIGN THAT IT CAN MAKE GOOD IN RAISING THE KEEP THE DAILY WORKER FUND.

THE STRENGTH OF THE PARTY MUST BE BROUGHT INTO PLAY. EVERY RESOURCE MUST BE EXHAUSTED TO MEET THE CRISIS WHICH THE DAILY WORKER IS AGAIN FACING BECAUSE OF THE LETDOWN IN THE COLLECTIONS.

PUSH THE WORK OF SELLING THE DAILY WORKER CERTIFICATES.

EVERY PARTY MEMBER WHO HAS NOT MADE HIS OR HER CONTRIBUTION MUST DO SO IMMEDIATELY.

RUSH ALL FUNDS COLLECTED FOR THE "KEEP THE DAILY WORKER FUND" TO THE DAILY WORKER IMMEDIATELY.

...class struggle is growing in intensity in England and that, contrary to what the capitalist papers have been telling us, the workers are not experiencing a reaction unfavorable to the general strike, which was made an issue in the elections by the tories and liberals. Should a general parliamentary election take place in England today, in all probability the labor party would poll a majority of the votes despite the many restrictions under which the workers' ticket labors. But with such leaders as MacDonald, Clynes, Thomas and Snowden in the saddle, the workers would only win an imaginary victory. They would be sold again. About the only thing they would have accomplished would be to demonstrate their strength. One of the most important tasks confronting the British workers is to get rid of the reactionary leadership.

Gold-Slush Twins Elected to Senate

FRANK L. SMITH WILLIAM SCOTT VARE

In spite of the flood investigation that revealed millions of dollars of corporation boodle money spent in the primaries on Smith of Illinois and Vare of Pennsylvania, additional funds from the same sources spent like water in both states, made possible the election of the two gentlemen who made Newberry look like an amateur. The question of their being seated is, of course, another matter. The fact remains that they were elected by money.

STALIN REPORTS TO COMMUNIST PARTY CONGRESS; 14 SPEAKERS DISCUSS INTERNAL SITUATION

By JOHN PEPPER
(Special to The Daily Worker)

MOSCOW, U. S. S. R., Nov. 3.—Met with a long and tremendous ovation, Joseph Stalin, secretary of the Communist Party of the Soviet Union, made his report to the All-Union Party conference on the internal situation and the Opposition Block on Nov. 1. The delegates listened with rapt attention during the four hours it required Stalin to make his report.

The debate is still progressing and so far fourteen speakers have had the floor following the report. They are as follows: Kamenoff, Trotsky, Yaroslavsky, Larinin, Zinoviev, Sulkharin, Osinsky, Sterisky, Uglanoff, Kosarivish, Gusa (secretary of the Putilov Works workers' Bolshevistic or-

REBELS OBTAIN NEEDED ARMS IN LIBERTY FIGHT

Nicaraguans Prepare A Huge Offensive

(Special to The Daily Worker)

MANAGUA, Nicaragua, Nov. 3.—Reinforced with a shipment of 4,000 rifles landed today, the revolutionists headed by Gen. Moncada are preparing an offensive against the reactionary government to liberate the people of Nicaragua. The first attack will probably be at Rama, a stronghold of the Camorroists.

Thousands of revolutionists have been waiting to join the military forces, held back only by lack of arms.

The international situation in Central America is becoming more complicated. Mexico and Guatemala are backing the liberals, with Honduras becoming more sympathetic toward the rebels, while Salvador and Costa Rica are reported backing the reactionaries.

American gunboats continue to patrol the entire east coast in an attempt to intimidate the revolutionists.

In the elections the United States is openly backing the conservative candidate, Adolf Diaz.

Why don't you write it up? It may be interesting to other workers.

NEW YORK, Nov. 3.—Four men were killed and at least two others desperately wounded in a mutiny of prisoners in the Tombs prison this afternoon. Nearly 250 shots were fired before the outbreak was quelled.

Police machine guns mounted on the walls of the prison yard; police sharpshooters firing down from the windows and roofs of over-looking buildings and police and detectives surrounding the block and firing over the structure made the spot a battle scene, with the authorities inflicting severe

BRITISH LABOR LEVIES DAILY TAX ON ITS MEMBERSHIP FOR MINERS

LONDON, Nov. 3.—The Trades Union Congress delegates today decided to give financial support to the striking coal miners, ordering a voluntary levy of two cents a day on each of 5,000,000 members for the aid of the miners. The Trades Union congress voted to give the striking miners $60,000 immediately for relief purposes.

Move to Coal Fields.

LONDON, Nov. 3.—The executive of the Miners' Federation, its headquarters moved into the Midland coal fields where there had been signs of weakening, are conducting a whirlwind propaganda campaign in company with miner members of parliament to lift the morale of the strikers and their families and nail the defeatist propaganda being spread in that section by the owners.

Fourteen thousand miners in Nottingham who had returned to work under the delusion of false reports rejoined the ranks of their striking brothers after being addressed at various meetings by A. J. Cook, the miners' secretary.

Independent Jewelry Shops Sign Contract After 5-Days Strike

NEW YORK, Nov. 3.—Within five days after the beginning of the jewelry workers' strike, the union has signed agreements with all the independent shops, according to Anthony Capraro, manager of Local No. 17, of the International Jewelry Workers' Union.

Twelve shops employing 375 workers have gone back to work under the union contract, which provides for hiring all workers thru the union employment bureau, a 44-hour week, 10 per cent increase in wages and time and a half for overtime.

The other shops in the trade are tied up in an employers' association, but the union expects a break in the association's ranks within two or three days, which will mean the settlement of all the shops in the industry, which employs 900 workers including the 375 already working

BROPHY WARNS MINERS BEWARE OF NEW SLUMP

Advocates Aggressive Policy

CLEARFIELD, Pa., Nov. 3.—(FP)—"Do not be lulled into false security by the present revival of the American coal industry," warns president John Brophy of the central Pennsylvania miners, in a District Bulletin. "It is due to the British strike. While the coal of the world is being shipped into England against the brave British miners, the American industry booms. This winter there will be another temporary boom while the American capitalists are heaping up stocks for use against our own strike that may come in May."

Towards Nationalization.

Saying that the District union is taking advantage of the present situation to force the restoration of the union contract in non-union mines, Brophy continues: "But hard times will come again in this terribly over-developed industry. Therefore it is important for our union to look beyond the present and work out a permanent solution. We must take steps to carry out the program of nationalization our conventions have ordered and end the state of chaos that prevents you from knowing from one month to another whether there will be a job or not."

Chicago and New York Protests.

It was announced today that two large protest demonstrations will be held in New York and Chicago in the coming weeks as an expression of determined solidarity with the two workers who are still in danger of legal condemnation. In both cities the meetings will be held under the auspices of Sacco-Vanzetti conferences. Madison Square Garden has been secured in New York for November 18, with Elizabeth Gurley Flynn, national chairman of International Labor Defense, as one of the chief speakers. In Chicago preparations are being made for the mass meeting and arrangements are being made to have some of the most prominent labor leaders in the city speak.

Teapot Dome Case.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 3.—The Teapot dome oil case reached the supreme court today.

Attorneys for Harry F. Sinclair, Lessee of the Wyoming Naval oil reserve, today filed with the court a petition for a writ of review, of the federal circuit court's decision holding that the lease was fraudulently executed and was invalid.

Eight officials of the Carpenters' Union have been arrested in San Francisco where the carpenters are on strike against the open shop and charged with murder in connection with the death of a scab carpenter. They are: Sam and Albert Moore, top; Christopher O'Sullivan and John J. Cannen, center; Paul J. Clifford and Archibald J. Mooney, bottom.

of power and can hold up hustlers unless they get what they want.

The LaFollette brothers did not vote for Zimmermen but declared they would write in the name of their favorite. As the situation stands now the state machine is in the hands of Zimmerman with the senate patronage at the disposal of the so-called progressives.

The only socialist candidate in Wisconsin to pull thru is Victor Berger.

According to incomplete returns Magnus Johnson, farmer-labor candidate suffered defeat in Minnesota. Since the reactionaries got control of the farmer-labor movement in that state it was evident that there was little hope for the ticket, since the leaders were more concerned with stressing their patriotism than with putting up a fight for their candidates.

Brookhart Wins in Iowa.

DES MOINES, Iowa, Nov. 3.—Smith W. Brookhart, former United States Senator, who was ousted from the senate a few months ago, rode back into office on the crest of an Iowa republican wave, incomplete returns showed today.

Brookhart had a lead of more than 50,000 over Claude R. Porter, Democrat.

Coolidge Disappointed.

Washington, Nov. 3.—President Coolidge arose early today to get returns from the elections.

He asked particularly for detailed reports to show whether the republicans had lost control either of the senate or house.

It was said at the White House that no statement on the elections would be forthcoming from the president. There was no disguising, however, the keen disappointment felt at the white house over the defeat of Mr. Coolidge's friend and campaign manager, senator William M. Butler, in Massachusetts.

CHEYENNE, Wyo., Nov. 3.—After two years of feminine rule in two states of the union, the nation will be without a woman governor after Jan. 1 next.

FIGHT WRITS IN HARTFORD

Fighting for Union in Openshop Town

HARTFORD, Conn., Nov. 3.—Faced with two injunctions and suits for a total of $50,000, upholsterers local union 36 of Hartford, Conn., enters its fourth week of strike for union conditions and recognition. Goldman Bros. has already signed with the union but two of the largest manufacturers —Acme Upholstering Co. and B. Dworkin & Co.—have secured injunctions forbidding picketing and are suing the union for $10,000 apiece.

Eight strikers have been arrested and charged with contempt of court under the injunctions. The union is requesting the dissolution of the injunctions and hearing will be next week in court. Hartford Central Labor Union has promised financial aid and help in securing a favorable settlement, encouraging the strikers to carry on their fight.

Two Years Activity.

For two years the upholsterers of Hartford have been trying to build a union. The manufacturers did all they could to smash the organization. Active union men were fired and the employers tried to force yellow-dog contracts on the workers. These attempts all failed and now the entire industry of Hartford is tied up. B. Dworkin & Co. has a shop in Springfield, Mass., which has been pulled out, crippling this firm which has fought the union for years.

The Upholsterers Intl. Union is giving organizational and financial help to the Hartford strikers. Other local unions of the city are showing interest in the strike because Hartford has been one of the cities where openshop interests have tried hardest to keep out unions. The Hartford Courant—Coolidge Republican paper whose editor died recently—runs frequently full page ads of openshop concerns, labeling them as such and runs in addition special openshop news—or propaganda from the Natl. Mfrs. Assn. and similar bodies.

BOSSES REFUSE TO DEAL WITH DATE STRIKERS

Negro Women Again on Picket Duty

With the bosses of the Maras and Company-date-stuffing factory refusing to grant any of the demands of the 150 negro women strikers, militant picketing was resumed Wednesday morning.

At the conference between the employes and the strikers the bosses declared they would not make a settlement until the strikers went back to work under old conditions. They intimated then that settlements would be made when the bosses "were ready."

The conference ended in a deadlock. The strikers received the news calmly and evidenced their determination to maintain their fight until the union has won.

Antone Johansen of the Chicago Federation of Labor is directing renewed activities, aided by the Women's Trade Union League.

The strike is now in its fifth week. It was called when the Maras Company posted wage reductions that would bring the workers' scale below a bare subsistence level. The women formed a union and are now fighting for recognition of their organization as well as increased wages and better working conditions.

Labor Must Glean Some Wisdom From Election for Struggles to Come

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

If Americans voters have decided to vote republican, the greatest graft exposures will not turn them from their course.

This has been shown again by the huge majorities run up by the two republican senators-elect, Frank L. Smith, in Illinois, and William S. Vare, in Pennsylvania.

The voters were not bothered, it seems, by the fact that the public utility multi-millionaire, "Sammy" Insull, dumped hundreds of thousands into the Smith-Republican campaign fund, while the Mellon interests gathered in a total reaching into the millions in its effort not only to elect Vare, but to maintain a stranglehold on the republican state organization in Pennsylvania.

This is but a repetition of the indifference with which the voters generally viewed the "Teapot Dome" oil scandal. The Coolidge administration, from Cal down, wallowed up to its very eyebrows in one of the choicest revelations of political filth this nation has ever seen. But this did not prevent the Coolidge administration from being overwhelmingly re-elected in 1924. To be sure the democrats were caught covered with the same slime, but credit for most of the corruption went to "the Ohio gang," the crew of political bandits gathered about Warren G. Harding while he was president and later attaching itself to Coolidge.

It is clearly to be seen that something more than skimming the slime off the surface of the open sewers of capitalist thievery is necessary to get the masses of the voters, the workers, into action in their own interests. It must go deeper than the so-called "wet and dry" issue that both the old parties use extensively for campaign purposes.

Some inkling of a conscious effort on the part of the workers to strike for their own interests at the ballot box was shown in Massachusetts.

Here the leader of the "open shop" interests in the textile industry, the multi-millionaire, Senator William M. Butler, was defeated for re-election, in spite of every effort of President Coolidge, also of "the New England gang," to put him over.

Butler was the living personification of "wet and cut." When 10 per cent cuts in wages were inaugurated in the mills, Coolidge became frightened and sounded a warning. But the cuts were ordered him to mind his own business, they were satisfying their own hunger for profits as they say fit and they didn't want any interference from Washington.

Discontent in the Massachusetts mills did not flare into apother Passaic. The grip of the ruling class terror was too secure for that. But dissatisfaction did manifest itself at the polls. The first returns coming in from the mill districts of New Bedford, for instance, showed the tide turning against Butler-Coolidge rule in Massachusetts. But it turned only in favor of his democratic opponent, David I. Walsh, equally a tool of the predatory interests, altho he serves better the railroad than the textile interests.

Labor at the polls thought little of Sacco and Vanzetti, its two champions in prison. Altho Butler was booted out of office and Coolidge thereby kicked in the shins, nevertheless, the republican governor Alvan T. Fuller, who refuses to pardon labor's prisoners after knowing full well of the dastardly frameup against them, is kept in office by a majority of 150,000 votes.

In an effort to make political capital for the 1928 campaign and to hide its own crimes, the democrats will raise the cry of "Slush!" in the next congress and fight the seating of Smith and Vare.

It should be an interesting struggle as it it must reveal, not so much the corruption of the electorate in order to put this or that candidate into congress, but instead expose the use of money by the great corporate interests to finance and control the old political parties. The unbeliefs of the capitalist parties is thus shown to be, not merely an incident, but quite the regular thing, in season and out of season, on the theory that the control of the smallest precinct is the beginning of the fight to win a national election.

The republican party can have but one defense in Pennsylvania and Illinois. That defense has already been advanced by Senator-elect Smith and he will no doubt vigorously adhere to it in his effort to retain his seat in case his right to it is challenged. Smith will make an effort to line up the republican party machine in support of his style of defense, even demanding the support of the sanctimonious "Silent Cal" Coolidge.

The Federated Press correspondent at Washington states that Smith says, in effect, to Coolidge:

"You were nominated and promoted and elected by the wool trust, the steel trust, the aluminum trust and a lot of other special interests that fatten on the tariff. You knew they would demand payment thru a tariff gouge of the masses of the people, and you gladly accepted their help. After you were elected you paid the price. That is to say, you made the public pay the price to these trusts. Now when I get $200,000 cash from Sam Insull and Studebaker and other public utility millionaries to buy my nomination to the senate, when I am the head of the state commission that fixes the tariff the people must pay their utility corporations, what moral difference is there between you and me?"

Thus Senator-Elect Smith will argue that it is good farm, in capitalist politics, to collect campaign funds from the interests the old party candidate expects it to serve after election day. Smith asks:

"When the president of the United States is a candidate for re-election does he resign because the steel trust, the sugar interests, the national wool trust and other big financial and industrial companies interested in the protective tariff contribute to the campaign fund of the republican party? You know the president has arbitrary powers to lower or raise the present tariff rates 50 per cent if he thinks the economic conditions warrant such action."

In fact, it is pointed out, this is a sharp reminder that Coolidge did exercise his arbitrary power to help the sugar trust in 1284, and he "got away with it."

The picture should therefore be a little clearer to the workers and farmers of the land. Instead of seeing the pockets of a Vare, Smith, Doheny, Sinclair or Fall, stuffed with loot, and becoming quite calloused to the sight, these same workers and farmers must behold the old parties themselves completely in the pay of the great capitalist interests, to do their bidding every day thruout the year.

Realizing therefore that these capitalist parties are the creatures of the exploiters of labor, the workers and farmers must clearly see that what they need is a party of their own—a Labor Party—to fight in their interests. This should be the beginning made in the campaign that will lead to the exercise of greater wisdom in the struggles ahead.

...RADICAL FACES DEPORTING BY U. S. AGENTS

Anarchist, Now Rich Farmer, Protests

By CARL BRANNIN,
Federated Press.

SEATTLE, Nov. 2.—Pending a hearing on the charge of being alien anarchist and by reason thereof liable to deportation, Carl Lanis, British subject, and Gustava and Leah Lantz, citizens of France, are at liberty on bonds of $2,000 each. The De Lantzes are prosperous chicken ranchers at Home, Wash., and Lantz is a Tacoma contractor.

Like a clap of thunder out of clear sky came the arrest of these parties by an inspector of the department of immigration. He stated that he was acting on orders from the department at Washington, D. C.

Deny Charge.

All of the arrested parties deny the charge that they are anarchists and claim that the whole affair is nothing more than spite work on the part of a neighbor. They claim that a dispute over the use of their telephone by a neighbor led to the charges being filed.

Formerly Active Reds.

Several years ago the De Laurens were very active in the radical movement. He was known as an effective soap-boxer in cities from coast to coast. During the war he had a Red Cross assignment, the loss of a leg in the Spanish-American war having unfitted him for active service. In 1920-21 he was state organizer for the Private Soldiers and Sailors Legion, and was candidate for state treasurer on the farmer-labor ticket. During the Palmer deportations in 1919 rumors began to float around that this fellow was a spy in the employ of the government, but nothing damning could be proven and he continued his activity as a radical.

Deserted Movement.

Of late years he has dropped out of all movements, living at Home, Wash. Home 30 years ago Home was an anarchist colony, but after several years dissolved this form of community life. Now there is a very successful co-operative store and a progressive community life.

De Lauren is said to have held anarchistic views when he came to Home, but is now simply known as one of the most successful chicken raisers there. His reading is chiefly confined to the Hearst Seattle Post-Intelligencer and the Saturday Evening Post.

King and Queen of Belgians Arrive for "Socialist" Ceremony

STOCKHOLM, Nov. 2.—King Albert and Queen Elizabeth of Belgium, accompanied by their younger children, Prince Charles and Princess Marie Jose, arrived here this morning by special train from Gothenburg to attend the civil wedding of their son and heir, Prince Leopold, and Princess Astrid, niece of King Gustav of Sweden. The civil wedding will take place at 4 o'clock on Thursday afternoon, Karl Lindhagen, "socialist" mayor of Stockholm, will perform the ceremony.

N. Y. PAPER BOX STRIKERS TRY A NEW PICKET GAG

But They Are Arrested All the Same

NEW YORK.—Striking paper box workers of New York are trying out a new picketing manoeuver; autos follow police-protected scab delivery wagons, each auto bearing signs calling attention to the situation. "See the strike breaker. He is protected. But not the pickets," read one auto sign. "The police protect property. How about the workers' standards," exclaimed another. "Watch the police prevent every effort to unionize the strike-breakers," declared a third.

Arrest Them Anyhow.

One car was stopped by a policeman and the pickets in the car arrested on disorderly conduct charges. They were bailed out by the Paper Box Makers Union, conducting the strike for higher wages, the 44-hour week, union shops and better sanitary conditions. Another car was stopped later and the driver forced to take down the signs. He asked if it were a violation to advertise a strike, asserting: "Every show that comes to town is allowed to advertise itself in a similar manner." The policeman answered that this wasn't "advertising" but "agitation—bolshevism." When the driver asked if the union demands were bolshevism, the cop got sore and threatened arrest.

$16 to $20 A Week.

A taxi full of colored girl strike-breakers was driven on the picket line by a guard to slash the coats of girl pickets with safety razor blades. One striker was badly cut on the arm and head and had to be taken to the hospital. A strike-breaking detective agency has been advertising: "Wanted—50 Colored Girls—to learn" and offering $16 a week pay. The girls are sent out as strike-breakers under protection of a $10-a day guard—the agent gets the $10—under arrangements made by the so-called detective agency and the paper box manufacturers association. For every girl who stays on the job three days the agent collects $5 in addition to his fee.

PROMISES HELP OF A. F. L. UNION TO BOX WORKERS

Scabs Slash Pickets With Razors

NEW YORK, Nov. 2.—John P. Burke, president of the International Brotherhood of Pulp, Sulphite and Paper Mill Workers, addressed a mass meeting of striking paper box makers in Webster Hall here.

He told the workers that if the union had had the present honest and intelligent leadership two years ago the split with the international would never have occurred.

Promised Aid.

He promised the New York union the wholehearted support of the A. F. of L. international, and urged the workers to show their appreciation for Fred Caiola's leadership by sticking together and giving the bosses such a licking that they will not want another strike for 10 years.

Ghlow Talks.

Ben Ghlow, Workers' Party candidate for governor, also spoke. Ghlow attacked the capitalist class for subjecting the workers to low wages and long hours of labor at the same time that millions are being spent to wed Crown Queen Merle of Roumania to America.

Use Razors.

Thursday evening a taxi full of colored girl strike breakers armed with safety razor blades, descended upon a group of pickets at the corner of West Broadway and Grand street, slashed two pickets badly and wounded one girl in the arm and back. The girl was sent to St. Vincent's hospital, but was able to leave yesterday. One of the pickets was arrested and fined $5 in the first magistrate's court, White and Center streets, for disorderly conduct.

Three more pickets were arrested yesterday on the same charge and fined $5 each.

Cleveland I. L. D. to Give Unique Bazaar to Raise Needed Fund

CLEVELAND, Nov. 3.—Local Cleveland, of the International Labor Defense, announces the arrangements for an international bazaar to be held at Moose Hall, 1000 Walnut street, on December 4 and 5.

This bazaar will consist of booths arranged by each of the various language branches of the local I. L. D. On Saturday there will be, in addition to the bazaar, a children's program in the late afternoon, and dancing in the evening. On Sunday there will be a bazaar and a grand international concert.

We will send sample copies of The DAILY WORKER to your friends—send us name and address.

Many Meetings for "Debs Enrollment" in I. L. D. Held Here

Among the organizations that have held Debs memorial meetings in Chicago are: Northwest Mothers League, speakers Harry Kivact and Manuel Schachter; Chicago local of the International Labor Defense, Latvian Workers Society (I. L. D.); Hungarian Branch of the I. L. D., S. T. Hammermark, speaker; Russian I. L. D. branch, and Greek Workers' Educational League. Other special meetings are in preparation in other parts of the city.

At these meetings the activity of Debs for labor defense was stressed among other things, and workers joined the International Labor Defense in line with the "Debs Enrollment" campaign.

The "Debs Enrollment" will be one feature at the following meetings this week: Karl Marx Scandinavian club, Thursday, Nov. 4, 8 p. m. at 2733 Hirsch boulevard; Billings branch, Friday, Nov. 5, 8 p. m. at 2409 North Halsted street; Harnett branch, Friday, Nov. 5, 8 p. m., at 2733 Hirsch boulevard; Lakeview Scandinavian branch, Thursday, Nov. 4, 8 p. m. at 3206 Wilton, Hirot corner; South Slavic branch, Saturday, Nov. 6, 8 p. m. at 1305 South Racine avenue.

The local committee invites all who want to help all labor prisoners and defendants to attend these meetings.

Los Angeles to Have Debs Memorial Meet

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Nov. 3.—The workers of Los Angeles will pay tribute to the memory of the life and work of Eugene Victor Debs in the labor and revolutionary movement at a meeting on Nov. 12, at the Music Art Hall, 233 South Broadway. The meeting is being held under the auspices of International Labor Defense, and prominent labor and progressive men will speak. Workers are invited to attend this memorial to the great rebel.

Preacher who Murdered Lumberman Asks for A Change of Venue

FORT WORTH, Tex., Nov. 3.—Testimony intended to show that the Rev. J. Frank Norris, pastor of the First Baptist Church here, charged with the murder of D. E. Chipps, lumberman and prominent clubman, July 17, could not have had a fair trial in Tarrant county occupied the second day of the trial.

The testimony was in support of the defense motion yesterday asking for a change of venue.

MINERS DO HONOR TO STRIKER WHO DIED IN BATTLE

Madera Coal Diggers Mourn Endie's Death

MADERA, Pa., Nov. 3—(FP)—While Madera miners seem on the point of winning their year-and-a-half strike against the Pa. R. R. Swoope interests, they are paying tribute to the memory of Andrew Endie, a local leader who gave his life for them the other day.

Endie's death followed a brutal eviction during sickness. He lived in a company house which he had been buying on the monthly payment plan. He had been paying for years and most of the sum was in. But during the strike his payments lapsed and the company threatened to take his home away. This was a tragedy for a man of 57 with seven children. The company offered this alternative: Advise the men to go back to work and you can stay.

Endie was recording secretary of local union 1558 and had been checkweighman before the strike. He was a man of influence in that mining community. He was a key man. He knew what his defection would mean to the fight. He was sick. But he said No.

So they put Endie and his folks into the street. A week later he was dead.

The Presbyterian church was jammed at the funeral service. Paul Fuller, education director of Dist. 2, and a friend of Endie's had been invited by the family to give the funeral sermon.

Rev. West, fearful of offending Swoope, vetoed the plan at the last moment and confined Fuller to prayer. In the prayer Fuller laid the death to the door of the coal corporation, in words like these:

"Our heavenly father, thou knowest and we know, that thou didn't not take the life of Brother Endie. His life was taken by the H. B. Swoope interests who put him out into the street and when he was sick because he stood by his fellow workers."

Reverend Upset.

The charge created a murmur of assent in the West Rev. rushed madly to quiet in the sermon that followed. West urged the workers to think of heavenly, not earthly things, and get close to God thus. But at the grave, instead of the opportunity for a more sustained message to the hundreds of men there, including some of the scabs.

Soon after the scabs at one of the two mines struck and as this is written the scabs at the other mine are meeting union organizers.

H. B. Swoope was a hard master, instead of scrip he used metal "trading checks," coined to resemble Uncle Sam's dollar, and fifty cent and smaller pieces, and good only at the company store, where prices were high.

Letters from Our Readers

An Appeal to Reason.

Editor, THE DAILY WORKER:

I would be very pleased if you will publish this letter in an early issue of your paper.

October 14, 1924, T. A. Barraclough, 559 Irving boulevard, Los Angeles, Calif., made an affidavit of insanity against me, charging that I had a delusion that he had a daughter with whom I claim to be madly in love; that I had been in his house, and his wife was heared to death of me; that he believed he needed police protection against me, but did not care to ask for it, for he really did not think that I knew just what I was doing.

Such affidavit of insanity caused me to be taken from my employment and lodged in the psychopathic ward, General Hospital, 1100 Mission road, Los Angeles, California.

On October 16, 1924, Superior Court Judge Walter Guerin told me that I would be tried before him on the 20th, at which time I was entitled to be represented by legal counsel and to subpoena witnesses, and if I was committed I had five days in which to demand a jury trial.

That afternoon I wrote to Mr. C. L. Thilgren, an attorney-at-law in Los Angeles, but received no reply. On October 20 I was without legal counsel and Judge Guerin put me on probation.

Before the expiration of the five days prescribed by law I had made written application for a jury trial.

I have been told that it is on record as part of my case.

Whether it is or not, I would like to point out that a defendant's statements must be accepted as true unless they can be proved untrue; that a defendant must be given the benefit of the doubt. It is not up to me to prove that, I demanded a jury trial within the time prescribed by law; it is never reasonable to expect the defendant to do so. The defendant is continuously under lock and key and must rely upon others to transmit whatever messages are given. Instead of being granted a jury trial I was kept at the General Hospital in Los Angeles until November 4th, 1924, when I was committed to Highland.

I was committed to this hospital for the insane January 23rd, 1925.

During all this time I have failed to obtain the services of a lawyer. I have written to both the California state and federal supreme courts in my efforts to obtain a writ of habeas corpus, but have received no reply to any of my letters.

If my case is an example of humanitarianism as practiced in California the sooner it is known the better.

I do not believe this is the American ideal of law and justice. If it is, the American ideal is a whole lot lower now than it was at the time this republic was founded.

A. N. Brearley,
California.

CONFERENCE FOR SACCO-VANZETTI TO MEET IN N.

Emergency Committee Takes Active Steps

NEW YORK, Nov. 3.—As a step in an organized protest against Judge Thayer's denial of a new trial to Sacco and Vanzetti, a hurry-up call was issued today by the New York Sacco-Vanzetti Emergency Committee of 80 East 11th street, to its members representing 300 labor organizations in this city, to attend a conference Thursday night in the auditorium of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union at 3 West 16th street.

The sending of Thursday's conference was delayed until the Emergency Committee had secured Madison Square Garden for a protest mass meeting on Thursday evening, November 19, 1924.

Will Start Drive.

Thru the delegates at Thursday night's conference, the Emergency Committee will start a drive among labor unions and labor organizations in support of the continued demand for a new trial for the two condemned workers.

"We never expected anything but a denial of a new trial from Judge Thayer, whose prejudice has been apparent for five years," said Elizabeth Gurley Flynn, secretary of the Emergency Committee which has issued the call. "We know that anyone who has conducted such a trial as he did in the Sacco and Vanzetti were convinced would never consider that any warranted a new trial.

Workers United.

"But workers all over the world stand united in their determination that these two persecuted workers shall have a new trial. The recently published evidence shows, without a doubt, that they are innocent.

"We will fight with all our power against any possible attempt of the state of Massachusetts to salve its conscience by commuting the sentences of Sacco and Vanzetti to life imprisonment. They must be freed. They are victims of the crime for which they were convicted, and we are certain they would be acquitted by a new jury not under the influence of astute lawyers.

"Sacco and Vanzetti must have a new trial."

Young LaFollette Talks Here Sunday

Philip LaFollette, younger son of the elder Senator LaFollette, will be the speaker at the Chicago Forum Sunday afternoon, November 7.

LaFollette will speak upon the subject, "A Progressive Looks at His Country."

The meeting will be held at the Harlanger Theater Sunday afternoon at 3:15.

Towards Shanghai—And Imperialist Intervention

The irresistible march of the Cantonese forces towards the capture of Shanghai brings with it the growing fear and hatred of the imperialist powers and an increasing movement for an imperialist allied intervention in China to suppress the Cantonese.

The British, who have always led in this move, have recently been joined by Mussolini, following the Anglo-Italian conversations off the coast of Italy. Now the semi-official Temps of Paris declares that the great danger for western civilization "would be the final success of the army of Canton," and that if Shanghai is occupied by the southern troops "it will perhaps be necessary to visualize the eventuality of a concerted policy of the powers." In diplomatic language "concerted policy" means concerted action.

That such action would only be the continuation of foreign imperialist policy in a more brutally open form can be seen from the publication of an article in the organ of British imperialism the North China Daily News, which relates the story of the sale of aeroplanes to Chinese armies by French companies under the patronage of the French legation at Peking. It is well to remember in this connection that the accord signed by all the big powers in the spring of 1919 specifically pledges them to "prevent their subjects and citizens from exporting or importing into China arms and munitions of war, as well as all material destined for the manufacture, until the establishment of a government whose authority is recognized in all the countries."

Since that period it has been found that the Mercenaries have helped Chang Tso-lin in the manufacture of modern explosives, that there is a British munitions expert located at the arsenal in Mukden, and that German officers have been both newspaper for Tuchul Chen, Japanese officers are employed by the side of Chang Tso-lin, and it is not even necessary to phesizes the fact that the French aeroplane salesmen are taking no risks, but are engaged in their work with the closest relations to the French legation, at which the contracts and sales are recorded with the same care and regularity as French official business with the Chinese government. During the last three years some 150 aeroplanes have been sold in this manner, most of them to Chang Tso-lin. The French aviator, Poulet, is the chief technical adviser of Chang. Another, the Count de Boigne, is technical adviser to General Chang-Chung Tchiang, who has built the largest aerodrome in China at Paisan-fu.

British, American and French men of war are constantly at hand in China for a concerted interventionist movement. Cruisers steam up and down Chinese waters, doing their best to provoke active indignation of the people, as with the British massacre at Wahnsien.

In addition to the news that Feng Yu Hsiang, just returned from Moscow, is organizing an army in Mongolia to come to the aid of the Kuomintchun, it is known that not only Wu Pei-fu, but also Sun Chuan Fang are almost out of their scene. The troops of the latter become daily more demoralised. It seems only a question of days now until the Cantonese will have taken Shanghai. The moral effect of this victory—the capture by the national revolutionaries of the city in which the massacre of students occurred over a year ago—will bring tremendous strength to the nationalist forces.

It is by no means improbable that the capture of Shanghai will be the signal for a united imperialist drive against the revolutionaries.

Russia Breaking Thru The Baltic Cordon

With a treaty successfully signed between the Soviet Union and Germany comes the news that a Soviet representativa has left Moscow for Riga to conclude a similar treaty with Latvia. Should such a treaty be successfully accomplished, the Soviet Union will have delivered two telling blows against the policy of Intervention which is being inspired by Chamberlain in the Baltic and the Balkans against Russia.

Pilsudski, in the meantime, actively supported by London, continues to fulminate against Lithuania. A very important military conference has just been held in Warsaw, lasting four days, which included all the important army officers and the members of the general staff, presided over by Pilsudski himself. No official explanation of the reason for this conference has been issued, but its intent is quite clear.

Part of the Polish prese is proposing the return of Danzig to Germany in return for German acquiescence and aid in securing for Poland some other outlet to the sea. Danzig is at present the chief port, the only one of real importance, in fact, and it it should be returned to Germany, which would go a long way towards the restoration of the eastern frontier of the old empire, Poland can look for a seaport only in Lithuania. The reactionary Polish imperialism, which is more and more abandoning its "eastern orientation," i. e., a friendly policy towards the Soviet Union, will not be unlikely to support Pilsudski's imperialist ambitions in Lithuania, that is, for the invasion of Memel, the Lithuanian seaport. The prospect of the return of Danzig has undoubtedly heightened the German desire to render aid to Pilsudski.

There is no doubt but that the Soviet Union would firmly oppose this combined attack upon Lithuania, which is another form of an attack upon the Soviet Union itself. The policy of peace which is being pursued by Moscow is wheeling away from each beehive in a Anglo-French imperialism, the Baltic countries which have become the tools of the anti-Soviet forces.

Towards a Great Coalition in Germany.

The appeal made at the Dresden congress of the German industrialists by Dr. Silverberg for a government of the great coalition, from the populists thru the center to the social democracy, is meeting considerable headway. The need for a government of "republicans" representing "all classes," a government directed against the working masses and for their more intensive exploitation, has become more urgent with the progress of capitalist "rationalisation," which has resulted in such sharp suffering of the German toilers.

Germany industry has reached the point where, in order to live and develop, it must be able to compete on the international market and secure for Germany a favorable export balance of trade. Despite all endeavors, accompanied by a tremendous flood of Anglo-Saxon capital into the country, the balance of trade has achieved only a slight gain of exports over imports. The huge debts which are piling up in Germany make it imperative for her to secure a favorable export balance if the structure of stabilization is not to collapse.

A favorable export balance, ability not only to export but to have its exports compete favorably on the world market, necessitate for Germany an industry with low production cost, which mean intensified exploitation of the workers, lower wages and longer hours of labor. The bitter period thru which German labor is passing can only be maintained by German capitalism under relatively peaceful conditions, that is, with a passive working class. In spite of the fact that there are millions of unemployed and part time workers who are a constant threat to these German workers who are on the verge of strikes for improved conditions, the militancy of German labor is on the upgrade. The

To check this movement, to maintain that "Locarno spirit in industry" which is so essential for the German bourgeoisie, they are putting forth the proposal for a coalition government, a united rule for the oppression of the workers. The German chancellor, Marx, has already invited the social democrats to participate in the treasonable great coalition. The democratic party, in favor the move, and the party of the center is not opposed. To make it still easier for the social democrats to take once more their dirty place of driver, the most anchist general, Von Seeckt, has been dismissed from the Reichswehr and Severing from the Prussian ministry of the interior. In the national government it is proposed to add the social democrats; in Prussia, where the social democrat, Braun, presides over the Landtag, the populists (Volkische) will enter more responsibility into the government.

The official social democracy officially hesitates. The drift of honest socialist workers away from the party and towards the Communist Party, gives them good cause to hesitate about taking so outrageous a step. And this drift has not been stemmed by the action taken by the social democrats in the Prussian Landtag when they sanctioned the proposal to remunerate the former kaiser to the time of 125,000,000 marks, thus preventing the defeat of the proposal.

But if the official social democracy hesitates, its leaders do not. Already Hilferding and Breitscheid, the former of whom is one of the independent social democratic party, have announced their agreement with the proposal for a great coalition. They have been seconded by the leader of the right wing, Muller. The Gompers of the German trade unions, Leipart, has been carrying on negotiations with Stresemann towards the same end.

The revival of the great coalition in Germany will mean the repetition of capitalist betrayals and the growth of

Conversations in Leghorn, and Turkey

The conversations between Chamberlain and Mussolini on board a yacht off Leghorn are swiftly bearing fruit. Briefly is already making streams of Italy to secure from France the mandate over Syria, which will give Mussolini a strong foothold in Asia Minor and place him in immediate proximity to the Mosul oil district. Dispatch from Constantinople announces that local papers are displaying news that Turkey has mobilized four army corps in the last few days because the country is being menaced.

This report is either a fabrication of the British, in which case it shows that the Anglo-Italian alliance is beginning to work overtime to create the proper atmosphere for an armed attack by Mussolini upon Turkey, or else it is true, which would indicate that the plans for an offensive decided upon at Leghorn are coming to a speedy realization and that Turkey is preparing to defend itself against an imperialist attack. The sharpness of the struggle between the newly-developed alliance in Europe, of France and Germany on the one hand and England and Italy on the other—imperialist, war-instigating alliances which give the lie to the innocuous word Locarno means and peace—is further shown by the fact that England is instigating an attack upon Turkey which is notoriously an ally of France, with which Turkey has only a short time ago concluded a treaty.

The semi-official Angora newspaper, Bakimiatti Millies, carries a sharp attack upon the imperialist ambitions of Italy in Anatolia. The journal points out that the entire armed power of the republic and Turkish people as a whole will prove, if necessary, to any foreign power that Turkey can no more be trifled with than Ismail Pasha made unmistakable attacks, very recently, it is true, upon the Soviet Union. The negotiations between Britain and German industrialists is one of the ways in which Germany is trying to show that it is not dependent upon

Thoiry and Romsey

Great Britain's alarm over the conversations between Britain and Mussolini at Thoiry, where steps were taken towards the conclusion of a Franco-German entente, and over the conclusion of the European security pact (we) which threatens Britain's steel industry, was expressed in more ways than the publication of articles in the press.

A few days ago, at Romsey, in Hampshire, representatives industrialists of Germany and England met to discuss, according to the London Daily News, four points: to examine the question of resuming the negotiations concerning the alliance between the German dye trust and the British Dyestuffs, Ltd.; to study the process of extracting chrysotile in British steel; to discuss the question of an agreement on the delivery and sale of coal; to discuss the attitude of Great Britain in face of the European steel cartel.

No definite steps were taken at Romsey, but provisions were made for the continuation of the negotiations with the likelihood of a meeting in Germany in the near future. It is significant that the latest developments in which Germany has figured have forced England to approach her with the object of weaning Germany away from any entente with France—an alliance which would deal a heavy blow to Britain's influence on the continent, not to speak of other parts of the world. Chamberlain realizes that an alliance with Italy is only a substitute for an alliance with the much more powerful—potentially—Germany. That Germany will not be averse to the continuation of negotiations with Britain is certain. The progress of the Franco-German-alliance has not been so swift and untrammeled that Germany would like to see it. Powerful influence is being exerted upon a section of the French ruling class to prevent the consummation of the pact—and to the best of our knowledge the powers being the United States. Powers are, and numerous lesser lights, have made unmistakable attacks, very recently, it is true, upon the Soviet Union. The negotiations between British and German industrialists is one of the ways in which Germany is trying to show that it is not dependent upon

Recognize Russia, Is Keynote of Huge Detroit Celebration

DETROIT, Nov. 2.—All preparations are completed for the greatest celebration of the Russian Revolution ever held in this city, to be on Sunday, Nov. 7. The famous Ukrainian Workers' Chorus, to be heard on various dates on or contiguous to November Seventh. It will be brot up to date as reports come in:

"Recognize Soviet Russia" will be the keynote of this great demonstration. Rose Gittlow, from New York, will be the principal speaker. Gittlow needs but little introduction to the workers of Detroit, thousands of those who have heard him before will be on hand to hear him again. Rebecca Grecht will be the real attraction being one of the best women speakers in the entire labor movement.

Arrangements are being made to have the Ukrainian Workers' chorus lead the mass singing of the International by the audience at the opening and the close of the mass meeting. The celebration will be held in the Detroit Armory, corner Brush and Larned streets at 3:30 p. m. Admission of 25 cents is being charged.

this year. Gary's steel corporation comes next with earnings of $146,562,216 during the same period. It is time Henry Ford should look to his laurels. And it is time the officials of the American Federation of Labor should do something about organizing the workers in order that they may get more of this wealth that is sweated out of their bodies. Green is too busy driving rivets in battleships for his capitalist masters to bother about organizing wage slaves.

FRANK H. SIMONDS, self-styled political and military expert declares that France is on the verge of bankruptcy. Simonds was a notorious Francophile during the war and one of the loudest shouters for allied victory. But now he finds that victory brought bankruptcy to France and not much less to England while Germany is again approaching the industrial domination of Europe. And to make matters worse, Simonds says that the French believe the United States is the cause of their financial woe. The next time the French go to war, they will not be so anxious to get saved.

WE warned our readers a few days ago not to swallow everything in the line of news that is broadcasted by the press agents of the British empire conference. The impression was given a few days ago that South Africa was the only dirty little duckling in the imperial brood that wanted to swim its way to freedom. Ireland and Canada are satisfied! But while the conference is going on, Desmond Fitzgerald, Free State minister for foreign affairs is in Geneva depositing with the league of nations treaties that Ireland contracted with other countries, a proceeding which is quite displeasiog to his majesty's government hnt about which his majesty can't do a darned thing.

AIMEE McPHERSON'S counsel agrees with Arthur Brisbane that a girl should have a perfect right to go where she pleases and return when she is ready. This means that Aimee has just about thrown np the spoge and the great hoax of this champion fraud is riddled. If Aimee was not the head of a nutty religious congregation and wealthy, thru the ignorance of her followers she would have been in jail ong ago as a common confidence woman. But she had money and was able to buy off judges and law enforcement officers until her accomplices squealed because she did not share the graft with them as she promised.

LEST people might think that religioo has fallen on evil days let me point out that the peddling of indulgences was a lucrative practise in days gone by and still flourishes in the catholic church. If Aimee had not been found ont already she might have continued to get away with the graft for many years to come. In one respect we agree with the rotarians. You cannot run public business with pleasure and do justice to both.

MEREDITH NICHOLSON, Indiana author, calls his native state, "the Land of the Books." I doubt if there will be one dissenting voice against this little outside of the Hoosier state. But why pick on Indiana? Today's elections prove that bookery is rampant in every state in the Union. It is true that they are not as ludicrously stupid as the klukers of Indiana but they are bad enough.

AN open shop contractor was killed here some time ago and shortly afterwards a union business agent was arrested and charged with the murder. The inevitable snitch was on hand who agreed to "identify" the union business agent in consideration of $38.50 a week which was paid him by the Citizens' Committee to Enforce the Landis Award. A jury took a good look at the stoolpigeon and returned a verdict of, "not guilty" in a few minutes. At the same time we are of the opinion that had the union man been without money the jury would take a longer time to bring in such a verdict.

WITH THE YOUNG WORKERS

CONDUCTED BY THE YOUNG WORKERS LEAGUE

Young Workers Stand Solid in Cigar Strike

PASSAIC, N. J. —About 100 workers of the E. A. Klein Cigar Co. here, of which about one-half are young workers, walked out on strike last week and sent in the following demands to the boss:

1—Increase of 10 cents a hundred for the cigarmakers and 5 cents for bunchers.

2—That all tobacco be put in working condition so that the workers do not have to waste their time.

3—That the hours of labor shall not exceed in each week more than the legally required amount of working hours for women, according to the laws of the state of New Jersey.

4—Better sanitary conditions—clean toilets and wash rooms.

5—More civil and courteous treatment be extended to the workers by the foreman.

6—That a shop committee of the workers themselves be recognized.

Demand Pay Increase.

The same company had a shop in New York where they paid the workers $3.40 a hundred cigars. Now they pay only $1.60, including the cigarmakers and the bunchers. All that the girls now demand is 10 cents increase a hundred! Klein grew rich on the sweat of the workers in New York, hot moved to Passaic, the town that used to be known as the open shop town, to squeeze even more profit out of the workers.

The workers are compelled to work 10½ hoors a day and 6 hours on Saturday—a total of 60 hours, and often overtime to top it all off with no time for luoch. The "beoevoient" state law of New Jersey prohibits women from working more than 54 hours! And even this law the bosses violate!

As to the conditions in the mill. The work is so noheaithy that people who work at the trade for not many years are soon scrapped on the waste heap, in addition the toilets and wash room are in a terrible condition. And this surely does oot add to the delight of a 10½ hour work day!

Won't Give Up Organization.

And the shop committee is the one thing that the workers will not yield. Some months ago, the workers learning the lessons of the Passaic strike, formed a club. And now they won't stand for the meanness of the foreman! And they will come to the boss to settle their problems only thru the shop committee and not individually. The boss won't yell, "You're fired!" every time he gets such a whim.

As usual, the Passaic police were on the job trying to break the picket line. But the attempts of the police failed and all the girls are on the line—an all-day line at that. The young workers especially are determined.

And will they win? With such fine spirit they're sure to.

A CORRECTION.

Laurence Todd, Federated Press Washington correspondent under whose name the DAILY WORKER in its issue of Friday Oct. 29 carried a story concerning the decision of the Supreme Court in the Dorchy strike case, calls our attention to the fact that an important seotence in his story was miscoostrued by us and changed the meaning of his report. Our error, Todd points out, coosisted in leaving the word "absolute" out of the sentence reading, "Labor in America has no ABSOLUTE right to strike." Todd claims this distorts the meaning of the story. We are glad to make the correction.

Italian Youths Meet Despite Arrests

TARANTO, Italy, (by mail)—In the course of the campaign of the Factory Councils that was carried on thruout the whole country and that are still in progress of preparation, a factory conference took place here during the first days of September, in which members of the Young Communist League and also non-Party youth participated. (There exists no organization of the young workers here). Young workers from the following industries took part: Metal, "building, quarrying, wood working, and also young tailors, barbers and shoemakers. The calling of the conference was made more difficult thru the arrests of June 20th perpetrated by the Mussolini dictatorship. The conference issued a call for active support of the fighting British coal miners.

BOSTON PAPERS IGNORE BUREAU OF EMPLOYMENT

Suppress News Because of Advertising

By PHYLLIS FENIGSTON.
(Worker Correspondent)

BOSTON, Mass., Nov. 3. — The Massachusetts public employment office at 25 Pearl street, Boston, has issued a report of its September activities, and Boston newspapers. It has been learned ,refuse to print this report because it will interfere with their hundreds of thousands of dollars of advertising from private employment agencies.

Every year a bill is introduced in the legislature appropriating a sum to the bureau for advertising. And every year the pressure used by the Merchants' and Manufacturers' Association defeats the bill.

Ignorant of Existence.

Many workers in Massachusetts do not even know of the existence of the free service furnished by the state, which maintains employment offices at 23 Pearl street and at 25 Tremont, street, Boston, and which also has offices in Worcester, Lawrence and Springfield. These workers continue to give up their hard-earned wages to the blood-sucking private employment agencies.

The Boston newspapers maintain a persistent and discreet silence on the matter of free employment offered by the state bureau, because they do not wish to antagonize the private agencies which subsidize them so generously. The Boston Globe refused to print a single line of this report. The Transcript gave a short squib, and another paper summed it up in one paragraph. They have a good reason to ignore the report: it affords a clear and authoritative insight into unemployment conditions existing among the workers of Boston, and a graphic illustration of "Coolidge prosperity" here!

Many Jobless.

In the month of September 20,259 workers were turned away without jobs, out of 21,844 applicants only 1,575 positions were reported filled. Of these 20,000 jobless turned away in one month there are, says the report, "large numbers of men without any trade, looking for inside work for the winter months, but there is practically no demand for their services."

Want Only Young Girls.

Factory workers in the women's department, says the report, "the principal demand is for young girls, 16 years of age. There are numbers of experienced help over 20 years, but the employers do not seem to want them." The deliberate purpose of the employers to beat down standards by using younger workers at lower wages is very clear. The same condition is found in the men's department. Here not only do they require boys instead of men, but the boys must have high standards of workmanship—at boys' wages.

The report goes on: "The demand for boys continues good, but some difficulty is experienced in securing the right kind of boy for some of the positions." And why? They have plenty to choose from, for "there is an overabundance of boys seeking factory work, and practically no demand for their services."

Soldiers Favored.

The building industry, printing industry and shipyards called for highly-skilled men of various descriptions; the demand for carpenters was very slow. The general trades called for rubber workers, condenser men, hard candy makers, chauffeurs, shippers and packers. The ex-service men, as a matter of course, seemed to receive the best treatment. Of 299 applicants sent out 199 secured jobs—that is over 85 per cent. This is quite a contrast to the 7 per cent of the "soldiers of industry" who received jobs during the month—1,500 out of over 20,000.

The employers of Massachusetts do not like to use the free public employment service, we are told. They prefer to have the long line of employes waiting at their gates, in order that the spirit of the workers may be further crushed by being turned away in large numbers.

Worker Correspondence

1000 WORKER CORRESPONDENTS BY JANUARY 15 1927

THIS WEEK'S PRIZE WINNERS

Heinz Schroeter of Rock Falls, Wisconsin, is awarded first prize in this week's worker correspondence page for the story he sent in on conditions in lumber camps in Wisconsin, Minnesota and Michigan. Schroeter gives a vivid picture of conditions, and presents it in a well-handled manner. He receives a copy of the interesting and important book by Friedrich Engels, "The Peasant War in Germany."

The second prize is awarded to Phyllis Fenigston, worker correspondent in Boston, Mass., for her story on how Boston newspapers suppress news about the free employment agencies there because of advertising revenue from pay agents. Her story is crammed full of facts and is organized in a splendid "newspaper" manner. She receives a copy of the celebrated collection of Red Cartoons.

Rudolph Harju, worker correspondent of Waukegan, Illinois, is awarded the third prize, the heard bound edition of the Russell-Neering debate. It is unusual to offer a prize for a "publicity" story, such as Harju wrote, but his had such exceptional merit, illustrating how publicity should be handled, that he was awarded the prize. BUT NOW—

PRIZES TO BE OFFERED NEXT WEEK.

Three very splendid prizes will be given for stories sent in by worker correspondents between now and next Thursday that are considered the best examples of worker correspondence of the week. Send in these stories, workers. Here are the prizes:

First, "Left Wing Unionism" by D. J. Saposs. A new book that William Z. Foster advises every trade union rebel to read for its valuable information.

Second, "Flying Osip," short stories by nine of Russia's leading new writers.

Third, The Workers Monthly, a six-months' subscription to the best workers' magazine.

LUMBER WORKERS TRICKED INTO ACCEPTING LOWEST WAGES AND FILTHY CONDITIONS IN CAMPS

By HEINZ SCHROETER, Worker Correspondent.

ROCK FALLS, Wis., Nov. 3.—Very little is heard about life in the northern lumber camps of Wisconsin, Minnesota and Michigan. The number of workers employed in the three states probably runs as high as 100,000.

The employment bureaus of Minneapolis, St. Paul and Duluth furnish the great bulk of the lumberjacks who come from the harvest fields, road and construction camps, and general farms.

It is these employment "sharks" that give the necessary information in regard to wages to the employers.

They know the supply of unemployed men and give this information to the employers, with the amount of wages that will bring enough men to work in the camps.

Wages Low.

In the latter part of October the range of wages in Minneapolis was $35 to $50 a month for general woods work. There is no organization among the lumber workers. The I. W. W. has not done anything here.

The fee for a job ranges from one to five dollars, according to the supply of men who are in need of a job.

Trick Offers.

In order to guarantee that certain wages can be paid, attractive offers are given by the employment bureaus. These are advanced railroad fares and fees. These are later taken out of the wages. As a security, the employment bureaus take all of the extra clothing and valuables and have them checked at the railroad station in the name of the lumber company. The baggage is not released by the company until the advanced fare and fee has been paid. These force the worker to stay several weeks before he has any money coming to him.

When much of the timber already cone, the camps are situated 15 to 20 miles from the nearest towns.

Filthy Bunk Houses.

Bunk houses hold as many as 100 men. The steel beds are double-decked and wide enough for two, making four in a bed. These are placed side by side with a space of about two feet between. The same blankets are used the whole winter thru.

A newcomer never knows who has previously slept in his blankets. He doesn't know whether his bed partner is inany or diseased. Camps become quickly lousy and sickness continuously prevails.

Bad Ventilation.

One or two huge stoves furnish the heat. Considering the number of men in the bunkhouse, ventilation is far from sufficient. Men with rheumatism have to endure great amounts of heat as possible, making it uncomfortable for the others. Wet and damp shirts, shoes, and socks, are hung all around the stoves, making the air damp and smelly.

The only recreation is card games relating ones experiences and jokes. A few daily papers come in by mail, but these hardly ever circulate around, and most of them are foreign papers. The commissary sells no periodicals.

Food Is Bad.

The food is hardly ever satisfactory. The stuff comes mostly canned, canned milk, canned fruit, canned vegetables. Oleomargarine is used instead of creamery butter. Meat is not always of the best quality. Stomach trouble is common on account of this.

The hours of actual work are from sun up to sun down. Wholesale dismissals are common. The work is one of the most dangerous. Semi-skilled labor is mostly employed. There is a general mixture of piece work and day rates.

A few days ago in this camp, the men were working by the day were told to keep account of the number of logs cut.

Organization work is highly favorable, but difficult. The isolation of the camp makes communication very poor. The composition of the lumberjacks is largely foreign, Finns, Russians, Swedes, Poles, Slavs, and Germans make up the majority.

PROCEEDS FROM CELEBRATION TO GO TO OUR DAILY

Waukegan Plans A Fine Program

By RUDOLPH HARJU.
(Worker Correspondent)

WAUKEGAN, Ill., Nov. 3.—The ninth anniversary of the establishment of the first workers' republic will be celebrated here the evening of November 6 at the Workers' Hall, 517 Hembolts avenue, under the joint auspices of the Workers (Communist) Party, the Young Workers' League and the Finnish Club. A joint committee has been appointed by the respective organizations, which is exerting every possible effort to make the event the most successful ever held in Waukegan.

Two-Act Play.

The program thus far outlined by the committee for the evening includes speeches by prominent leaders in the revolutionary movement and revolutionary musical selections by the well known Waukegan Finnish band and the Young Workers' League orchestra. To cap the climax of the eventful evening, there will be a two act play, which the Young Pioneers will present with their usual enthusiasm and dramatic ability.

Help DAILY WORKER.

The committee in charge of the affair fully realizes that a mere "commemoration" of the revolution will not be sufficient, but that whatever enthusiasm can be aroused by such events should be utilized to the full for advantage for the revolutionary movement. This, the committee believes, can be best accomplished by making the future safe for the English Communist press of this country. Thus the meeting will be two-fold in purpose: first, to commemorate and pay tribute in great achievements of the Russian workers and second to "Keep The DAILY WORKER," and the Young Worker, which both are destined to play a very important role in building a mass revolutionary movement which will ultimately lead the American workers in their struggle against their exploiters. The net proceeds of the affair will be turned over to The DAILY WORKER and the Young Worker on an equal basis.

Every wage earner in Waukegan is urged to be present at this most important event of the year. The program will be both educational and entertaining, thus a good time is assured to all.

BOSTON COMMON SCENE OF HUGE PROTEST MEET

Workers Voice Sacco-Vanzetti Backing

By a Worker Correspondent

BOSTON, Nov. 3.—In spite of a driving rain, a rousing demonstration of protest against the recent decision of Judge Thayer, was held by a large crowd of Sacco and Vanzetti supporters, Sunday, Oct. 31, on Boston Common.

Ballam Flays Decision.

The meeting was called by the Workers Party of America. Among the speakers were William Z. Foster, John J. Ballam, candidate for U. S. Senator on the Workers Party ticket, and V. De Nammo in Italian. Ballam called the decision a contemptible display of prejudice on the part of a judge who is the tool of the employing class". He charged that the activities of the United States Department of Justice agents would render he American government guilty of murder if the accused men were executed.

Foster Points Way.

Foster pointed out that the employers are always trying to crucify the leaders of the working class for their activities and that the only way to free Sacco and Vanzetti was for the workers to raise the issue in all their organizations and demand the freedom of these innocent men.

Denounces Press.

De Nammo denounced the capitalist press for its part in attempting to prejudice public opinion during the trial against the defendants. The following resolution was adopted unanimously by the crowd, who remained at the meeting in spite of the drenching downpour:

Whereas, Mr. William G. Thompson, a leading attorney of the commonwealth of Massachusetts, has submitted to the Supreme Court of Dedham an array of new and unsossing evidence, which has established in the public mind a deep conviction as to the innocence of the two Italian working men, Sacco and Vanzetti, and

Whereas, the evidence of responsible agents of the department of justice has further tended to prove that Sacco and Vanzetti were the victims of a desperate attempt to persecute them for their ecconomic views in the labor movement, and

Whereas, Judge Thayer in his decision refusing to these working men a new trial, has denied another opportunity to establish their innocence has not only shown an utter contempt for the facts and authoritative testimony presented by the defense, but has demonstrated his unshakable bias and determination to expedite the judicial execution of Sacco and Vanzetti; therefore be it

Resolved by this mass meeting assembled in Boston Common, this 31st day of Oct. 1926, that we protest most strongly against the unjust and unjustifiable decision of Judge Thayer, and be it further

Resolved, that, in behalf of the workers of the city of Boston, we demand of Governor Alvan T. Fuller a complete investigation of the conduct of the case of Sacco and Vanzetti, and the activities of the agents of the district attorney of Norfolk county as well as the Boston agents of the department of justice to determine to what extent there has been a conscious effort to thwart the ends of justice and to convict innocent men for their activities in the labor movement, and be it further

Resolved, that we here demand of the supreme court of Massachusetts in the name of thousands of toilers of this city, who have deeply concerned in the welfare of their fellow workers, Sacco and Vanzetti a speedy decision for a new trial in order that the accused men may establish their innocence and secure the release which they deserve.

Strike Call Issued to Non-Union Miners

CLEARFIELD, Pa., Nov. 3 —(FP)— A strike call in all non-union miners in the central Pennsylvania bituminous field has been issued by the executive board of Dist. 2, United Mine Workers. Revival of mining, with some more men at work under the union scale has created a shortage of labor.

Two thousand of the men getting jobs this week are the employes of the Peabody Coal Co., which operates eight mines for a subsidiary of the Erie Railroad. The Peabody men returned under the checkoff after the company gave up a futile attempt to scab its property.

Bunny received a letter from Rachel. "Dear Mr. Rose"—she always addressed him that way, alone of his class-mates. It was her way of maintaining her proletarian dignity, in dealing with a person of great social pretensions. "We are home after picking all the prunes in California, and next week we begin on the grapes. You said you wanted to attend a meeting of the Socialist local, and there is to be an important one tomorrow evening, at the Garment-workers' Hall. My father and brothers will be there, and would be glad to meet you."

Bunny replied by a telegram, inviting one old and four young Jewish Socialists to have dinner with him before the meeting. He took them to an expensive restaurant—thinking to do them honor, and forgetting that they might feel uneasy as to their clothes and their table manners. Verily, it is easier for a camel to pass through the eye of a needle, than for a rich man to enter into the feelings of the disinherited.

Bunny found Rachel quite altered from the drab, hard-working girl he had known. She belonged to that oriental type which can pick fruit in the sun for several weeks without worrying about complexions; she had sunset in her cheeks and sunrise in her spirit, and for the first time it occurred to Bunny that she was quite an interesting-looking girl. She told about their adventures, which seemed to him extraordinarily romantic. Most people, when they indulged in day-dreaming, would picture themselves as the son and heir of a great oil-magnate, with millions of dollars pouring in upon them, and a sporty car to drive, and steel widows and other sirens to make love to them. But Bunny's idea of a fairy-story was to go off with a bunch of youngsters in a rattle-trap old Ford that broke down every now and then, and camp out in a tent that the wind blew away, and get a job picking fruit along side of Mexican and Japanese and Hindoos, and send home a post-office order for ten or twelve dollars every week!

Papa Menzies was a stocky, powerful-looking man with curly yellow hair all over his head and a deep chest, though he was bent over by toil. There were certain English letters could never pronounce; he would say, contemptuously, "Dis talk about de vorld revolution." His son, Jacob, the Sue Simpkins, Bunny knew as a stoop-shouldered, pale student, and found him much improved by outdoor life. The other two boys, the young "left wingers," were talkative and egotistical, and repelled the fastidious Bunny, who had not insight enough to guess that they were meeting a young plutocrat for the first time in their lives, and this was their uneasy effort to protect their working-class integrity. Nobody was going to say that they had been overawed! In addition to this, they were hardly on speaking terms with the rest of the family, because of the bitter political disputes going on.

They went to the hall, which was crowded with people, mostly workers, all tense with excitement. There had been a committee appointed to deal with the policy of the "local," and this committee brought in a report in favor of expelling the "left wingers"; also there was a minority report, in favor of expelling everybody else. So then the fat was in the fire, and Bunny listened, and cried valiantly to keep from being disillusioned with the radical movement. They were so noisy, and Bunny had such a prejudice in favor of quiet. He wouldn't expect working people to have perfect manners, he told himself, nor to use perfect English; but did they need to shriek and shake their fists in the air? Couldn't they debate ideas without calling each other "labor fakers" and "yellow skunks" and so on? Bunny had chosen to call upon Local Angel City of the Socialist party at a critical moment, of its history, and decided it was not putting on company manners for him!

Here was Papa Menzies( clambering onto the platform, and shouting at his own sons that they were a bunch of jackasses. Is imagine they could bring about mass revolution in America. "Vy did de revolution come in Russia? Because de whole country had been ruined by de war. But it would take ten years of war to bring de capitalist class in America to such a breakdown, and meanvile, you are you young fools doing? You vant to do ever de Socialist party over to de police? Dey have got spies here—yes, and dose spies is de mainspring of your fool left wing movement!"

That seemed reasonable enough to Bunny. The business men of Angel City would want the radical movement to go to extremes, so that they might have an excuse to smash it and when they wanted something to happen, they did not have to plot to make it happen. But to say this to the young extremists was like waving a red flag before a herd of bulls. "What?" shouted Ikey Menzies at his own father. "Vhou talk about the police? Vhat are your beloved Socialist Democrats doing now in Germany? They have got charge of the police, and they are shooting down Communist workers for the benefit of the capitalist class!"

WORKERS WHO PLAN TO JOIN CLASS IN WRITING SHOULD ATTEND FRIDAY

This is to again remind Chicago workers that the class in worker correspondence here opens this Friday night in the editorial office of The DAILY WORKER 1113 West Washington Blvd.

The meeting is very important and all who intend to join the class in new writing should be there without fail at 8 o'clock. The full course will be outlined at the meeting Friday and suggestions will be asked for from the members of the class, as all are urged to attend in order to express their ideas.

Remember: Friday night, 8 o'clock, 1113 West Washington, Blvd., third floor. Be there, ready to go to work!

STRIKE STRATEGY

By WILLIAM Z. FOSTER

ARTICLE VI

THE FIGHT AGAINST THE RIGHT WING.

The present dominant trade union leaders ideologically and organizationally constitute a definite group, a conservative machine that is controlling the labor movement, are unwilling and incompetent to practice an aggressive and effective strike strategy. They are reactionary, stupid, and ignorant. They refuse to fight the employers. Their conception is not to build the trade unions into fighting organizations, but to reduce them through the B. & O. plan and similar schemes into mere instruments to increase the capitalists' profits by the speeding up of the workers in industry. And the Socialist trade union leaders are hardly one whit better than the old line Gompercites.

More and more this reactionary leadership is proving its incapacity to lead the workers' struggle. It cannot organize the unorganized, it cannot conduct strikes successfully. It betrays and sells out every real fight made against the bosses. Under its control the trade union movement loses strike after strike, its membership falls, its morale declines, and the workers are in retreat before the attacks of the militant employers.

treacherous and incompetent leadership and in replacing it by a militant, fighting left leadership. This means a fight for control all along the line, during, before, and after strikes, by the organized left wing against the organized right wing. This fight manifests itself in a maze of forms and presents the greatest difficulties. Now to conduct it, constitutes a whole section of the general left wing strike strategy. Let us, for brevity sake, confine ourselves to that part of the fight which actually takes place during strikes.

A DANGEROUS ILLUSION

First, let us dispel the illusion that the left wing cannot and must not fight the right wing during strikes. There are some left wingers who, victims of this illusion, claim that "the workers cannot fight on two fronts at the same time;" that is against the employers and the right wing simultaneously. Hence, when they fight the employers they refuse to struggle against the reactionary bureaucracy, and vice versa.

These workers make the serious mistake of not realizing that the employers and the right wing constitute pretty much one front against the rebellious masses of workers and the organized left wing. If there are two fronts, they are two fronts of the employers' forces. In the needle trades, for example, when the left wing gets into a violent clash with the reactionary officialdom the latter never fails to call in the employers to help them. The bureaucracy in the Miners, Machinists, and many other unions use the same tactics. And by the same token, when strikes take place, the employers may always depend upon the active support of the right wing bureaucrats against the "unreasonable" demands of the masses. Indeed, it is during strikes that the right wing is most dangerous in its treachery and it is exactly then that it has to fight most skillfully and resolutely. The treason of Thomas and others in the British general strike demonstrates this fact.

The left wing must always carefully and skillfully expose the machinations of the right wing in strikes. This is strikingly necessary in the present strike of the New York Cloakmakers, when the right wing has carried out the hypocritical policy of going to the masses with revolutionary phrases and more radical demands than the left wing controlling the strike, while at the same time working privately to knife the strike and for a treacherous settlement. The "cannot fight on two fronts theory" is a dangerous illusion which has no place in a militant strike strategy.

RIGHT WING STRATEGY

The strategy of the right wing is to break up all militant attacks against the employers and to reduce the struggle to a class collaboration basis. The strategy of the left wing must be to make the struggle militant in spite of the saint workers.

The strike sabotage of the right wingers manifests itself in various ways. First, let us consider their attitude towards strikes conducted by independent unions under control of the left wing. In such cases no treachery is too extreme for them. Take the I. W. W. strike in Lawrence. In this historic struggle the leaders of the United Textile Workers did not hesitate to furnish strikebreakers to the employers. Or take the more recent case of the Passaic textile strike. This was one of the bitterest ever waged in the history of American labor. But the A. F. of L. leaders openly played the employers' game and denounced it, using the charge of dual unionism as a blind for this attack. They sabotaged the collection of strike relief and they attempted to demoralize the strikers.

In such cases the left wing must maneuver carefully to kill the dual union charge by moving for affiliation with the A. F. of L. In Passaic affiliation was actually brought about in the midst of the struggle and the A. F. of L. was compelled to endorse openly the strike which for seven months it had shamelessly sabotaged. But in carrying through such affiliation maneuvers the left wing must be careful to maintain its theological and organizational control over the striking masses and to prevent it sell out settlement by the right wing, for which the left wing would be held responsible by the workers. This can be accomplished by an intelligent and determined left leadership.

The Illinois Scandal

The most disgraceful episode in the history of the Illinois labor movement is the election of Frank L. Smith, candidate of Samuel Insull, open shop millionaire utility magnate, with the active assistance of the leaders of the Illinois Federation of Labor and the somewhat passive support of the officials of the Chicago Federation of Labor.

Not that Frank L. Smith would be any more undesirable in practice to labor than George E. Brennan, also an Insull beneficiary, or Hugh Magill, fake reformer and candidate of Julius Rosenwald, fake philanthropist and exploiter of labor. But the candidacy of Frank L. Smith became particularly odious because of the fact that he was chairman of the Illinois Commerce Commission which had the power of fixing rates in the public utilities that were controlled by Insull. The assumption was that Smith received $200,000 from Insull because of favorable action taken when the matter of fixing rates for Insull's properties came before his commission.

We do not take much stock in the indignation manifested by capitalist opponents of Smith because of this unethical conduct on his part. His opponents are just as corrupt and unscrupulous as he is. But one would expect that the trade union movement, which should aim to send a clean breeze thru the polluted political atmosphere would at least have the decency not to drag the name of labor in the mud by supporting a man whose name had become synonymous with corruption.

Nor was there any excuse for the labor leaders to support Smith on the ground that there was no alternative candidate, since Brennan was the favorite of big business, excepting that section that favored Magill because of conscientious scruples against good liquor. There was the candidate of the Workers (Communist) Party, J. Louis Engdahl, and for those to whom class consciousness is still in swaddling clothes, but who like to be "decent," there was Farley Parker Christiansen, running on no recognizable platform, it is true, but surely a man a worker could vote for without having to go on a debauch afterwards to forget his shame.

Of course, the labor leaders will say that it is no use voting for a candidate who stands no chance of getting elected. And we say that it is still more futile to vote for a candidate who can, unless he is a candidate who stands for working class interests on a working class ticket. In electing a capitalist candidate the workers always lose. But the defeated when fighting for the election of a representative of labor the workers are always victorious. Every word spoken that will raise the morale of the workers, every move that brings more class consciousness into their heads and solidarity into their ranks is a gain.

What have the workers of Illinois gained by electing Frank L. Smith? What will Smith's presence in the senate accomplish for them even should he be seated? The answer is an emphatic "nothing."

The present elections, not only in Illinois but thruout the nation, show that the class consciousness of the workers is at a very low level. They do not yet seem to realize that they should unite on the political field as they do, or should, on the industrial field. They cannot yet see the connection between the employer they strike against in the shop and the employer who is a cog in the capitalist party they vote for. But they will be forced to see the connection. The policemen's club, the capitalist judge's injunction and the capitalist jail will open their eyes.

THE DAILY WORKER, official organ of the Workers (Communist) Party is in existence solely to point out to the workers the road they must follow in order to free themselves from the misery of capitalism. The first step they must take on the political field is to organize a labor party and wage unceasing war against the two old parties of capitalism and get rid of the crooked labor leaders who sell them to both.

The Knights of Reaction

An organization known as the Knights of Columbus is raising a million dollar fund to make war on the Mexican republic. This aggregation of inverted khakera is deluging the country with literature calculated to arouse the lowest human passions against the Mexican people who are struggling to emancipate themselves from the heritage of ignorance and superstition which was all that was left to them by the corrupt, immoral and thieving papel agents that had the country in their grasp before the revolution wrenched them loose from their graft.

One of the leaflets put out by the "Knights" is headed: "$1,000,000 for Civilization." How many thumb screws, racks and iron virgins one million dollars would buy? A goodly supply. How those heavy jowled human buzzards would like to have the old inquisition days back again so that they could strangle all those who doubted the papal mummeries!

Those assassins of liberty prate about "right and freedom" tho the smell of the burning flesh of thinkers, who thought differently from some bawdy pope, can be smelled across the centuries.

They are waging war on Mexico as they have waged it on Soviet Russia, but real civilization is on the march and the incantations of the ex-bartenders and capitalist flunkeys that comprises the membership of the Knights of Columbus will be as ineffective today as the curses of the papacy were against woman suffrage. Proletarian civilization will make the organ grinder on the fiber either work or starve. The catholic church, which is one of the main bulwarks of capitalism as it was of feudalism, will go down with the social revolution, because there will no longer be a ruling class based on the private ownership of property that would find it to its advantage to subsidize a religious opium joint for poisoning the minds of its slaves.

The Knights of Columbus are raising one million dollars to wage war on the Mexican people. This scurry gang did not raise a nickel to defend the Irish people against the terrorism of England. On the contrary, they supported the British terror. What have the Irish workers in America, the backbone of the Knights of Columbus, to say to this? Are they so steeped in superstition and so cowardly that they will permit themselves to be used by Wall Street in all

GENERAL MOTORS AND U. S. STEEL REAP HARVEST

Workers Unorganized in Both Industries

NEW YORK, Nov. 3.—The country's two largest industrial companies—United States Steel and the General Motors—today announced unusually large earnings for the third quarter, with General Motors still holding the lead both for this period and the first nine months of the year.

All records were broken by General Motors, with earnings of $149,317,553 for the nine months, exceeding those of any previous year. The steel corporation earnings up to September 30 stood at $145,502,216. Relatively the same ratio was manifested in the third quarter figures, which totalled $56,031,870 for General Motors and $52,626,526 for U. S. Steel.

Both companies already have built up profits far in excess of dividend requirements. The General Motors surplus for the three quarters was $17.17 a share, while U. S. Steel's earnings were equal to $13.06 per share.

FRANCE MAKES OFFICIAL PROTEST AGAINST ACTS OF ITALIAN BLACKSHIRTS

PARIS, Nov. 3.—The French government has instructed its ambassador at Rome to register a vigorous protest with the Italian government against the anti-French demonstrations at the border town of Ventimille, where the French consulate was entered by fascists.

Italy has already offered its regrets to France for events at Tripoli and Bengasi, where fascists invaded the French consulates and attempted to force the consuls to lower the French flags. The Italian government has promised severe actions in these cases.

Keep The DAILY WORKER.

By ANNA E. DAVID.

By this time we are all acquainted with the call issued by the party for the $50,000 campaign to KEEP THE DAILY WORKER. I will not emphasize the need for THE DAILY WORKER. Comrades Ruthenberg, Bedacht, Dunne, Engdahl, Bittelman, Bedacht, Lovestone, Swabeck, and others have impressed you with that.

There is no doubt in the mind of every reader and sympathizer of the importance of The DAILY WORKER as the only revolutionary expression of the workers of America in English. Neither is there any doubt in the minds of our comrades of the critical position in which The DAILY WORKER finds itself at present. We must therefore realize that the DAILY WORKER campaign is the most important campaign which the party is conducting at the present time and that every party member must consider it his duty to be the first to respond. The response must come with joy and pride in the spirit of revolutionary sacrifice.

We must keep the weapon of revolutionary education in the hands of the workers by saving it from the deadly grasp of capitalist debtors. Comrades, we are not compromising ourselves when we appeal to workers and workers' organizations for donations for the continuance of The DAILY WORKER the only newspaper that fights the everyday battles of the oppressed workers and helps to awaken them more fully to class consciousness and a realization of the part they are to play in the revolutionary movement in this country. We have been able in the past to keep The DAILY WORKER with dollar, half dollar, and quarter dollar donations. That fact should give us the courage to go out now and raise tenfold the amount we raised in the past.

We must start today. First, let us send in our own donations. Then let us sell the books of coupons to workers and sympathizers. It must become for us one way of going to the barricades against capitalist society. With the unconquerable weapon of revolutionary education for the workers thru our daily press. We will not surrender that weapon. We will not let our press perish.

Insurance Denied by U. S. Account Morals, Widow Launches Suit

Selection of a jury to try Mrs. Corinne Hanna's suit for $8,000 war risk insurance against the government was begun before Federal Judge Cliffe here today.

Mrs. Hanna, 29-year-old widow of Major Mark Hanna, killed overseas on Armistice Day, is accused by the government of not having been actually married to Hanna. She already has received $2,000 of the $10,000 policy.

After the first payment had been made Mrs. Hanna was found in company with Edward Wagner, said to be a notorious criminal.

Mrs. Hanna entered suit charging the authorities had no right to deny her the insurance money, regardless of her personal morals.

New Orleans Boiler Makers Win Increase

NEW ORLEANS, Nov. 3.—New Orleans boilermakers on strike for about a month voted October 25 to accept compromise terms of the employers and end the strike. The vote was 58 to 46. The local union, in presenting the new scale, asked for an increase from 75 cents an hour to 90 cents for mechanics and from 45 cents to 60 cents for helpers. The compromise scale is 80 cents for mechanics and 48 cents for helpers, with all former employes reinstated in their positions.

Preacher-Slayer Case Won't Come up Before January; Judge Hints

AUSTIN, Tex., Nov. 3.—The trial of the Rev. J. Frank Norris, charged with the murder of D. E. Chipps, a wealthy lumberman of Fort Worth, will come up for setting the first Monday in December, Judge J. R. Hamilton stated today.

The heavy docket here indicates the possibility that the case will not be

Colorado Remains in Dry Column,- as Wet Referendum Loses Out

DENVER, Nov. 3.—Repeal of the Colorado state prohibition law failed to carry in yesterday's election, according to a statement by Peter Bond, head of the committee of one hundred, who had charge of the "wet" campaign.

With reports from nearly two thirds of the state's 1,591 precincts, the "dry" state showed a majority of approximately 2,600.

SETTLEMENT IS NEAR, LEADER TELLS WORKERS

8,000 Passaic Strikers Cheer Starr's Report

PASSAIC, N. J. Nov. 3.—Eight thousand striking textile workers braved the elements to welcome to Passaic the representatives of three New York committees working for Passaic strike relief, who spoke at Belmont Park Casino, Garfield, and then at James A. Starr, U. T. W. leader of the strike, report on the mayor's conference of last Thursday.

Settlement Near, Says Starr

Mr. Starr told the meeting the chances for settlement were better now than at any time since the strike began, as a result of the conference held in Passaic last Thursday upon the call of Mayor McGuire. He also stressed that efforts were being made in several others quarters, mentioning Senator Borah and Governor Moore.

Scoring the mill owners and their agents for the spreading of pessimistic reports on the results of the conference he declared:

Force Bosses to Confer.

"I know how active the bosses and their stools have been since last Thursday. Why? Because we have got them now in a position where they cannot longer justify their stubborn refusal to deal with their strike thru workers and will be forced to sit down with us around a conference table to settle the strike."

3 N. Y. Union Teachers Barred from Promotion

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK Nov. 3 Three members of the New York Teachers' Union have been barred from justly earned promotion, the union declares, by the Lundy economics department head at Girls' Commercial High. Brooklyn is head of the eligible list for principalship. Jessie Wilkie H ghan has been on the eligible list for first assistant in English for six years and has served as acting head of the department at Textile High for three years. Abraham Lefkowitz, history teacher at Commerce High, is likewise eligible for advancement which has not been given him. The board of examiners say frankly Hughan's "radical tendencies prevent her permanent promotion. She is a Socialist. Hardy's public letter of objection to advancement to a certain school is used against her and no special reason is given in Lefkowitz's case.

"Three Internationals" Class Tonight

All comrades who have registered for and who are ready to join the class on the Theory and Practice of the Three Internationals, conducted by Comrade Shachtman, are urged to attend the next meeting of the class tonight, Thursday, November 4, 1926, at 19 S. Lincoln.

Comrades are requested to be present sharply at 8 p. m.

Confess Swindle.

DETROIT, Nov. 3.—George Miles De Bork today confessed, according to Assistant Prosecuter Seward Nichols, that he was the tool of a large band of swindlers in disposing of upwards of $100,000 in forged bonds thruout the country. De Bork's operations extended to Des Moines, Chicago, Davenport and other western and mid-western cities, Nichols said.

DARROW SCORES INJUNCTION AT N. Y. MEETING

Call for Volunteers to Aid Cloakmakers

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, Nov. 3.—At a meeting under the auspices of the American Civil Liberties Union held at Community Church to lay plans to test the injunction against the striking cloakmakers of New York City, Clarence Darrow was one of the speakers and scored injunctions on the ground that there never was an impartial judge.

Defandad Dabs.

Darrow told of defending Eugene V. Debs in the railway strike of 1893 when an injunction was issued against Debs. "You can't find a judge who is impartial. There never was an impartial judge except one who is dead," Darrow said.

"At present," he said, "in a money sense and injunctions are a part of it."

Call For Volunteers.

At the meeting, volunteers were called for to go out on the picket line with the 40,000 striking garment workers, members of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, and help in the fight against the most sweeping anti-picketing injunction ever issued in New York state.

Arthur Garfield Hays pointed out that while the police were arresting strikers enmasse, they had been busy issuing them on disorderly conduct charges and levying heavy fines instead of charging them with violating the provisions of the injunction.

"MYSTERY" CARPENTERS BUSY SELVES GETTING READY FOR NOVEMBER 7

This is unusual activity among the carpenter members of the Workers Party. They are often seen these days lugging their tools around the Local Party office. A great deal of lumber has also been seen lying around, at a certain workers hall. The carpenters refuse to give out what they are working on, except to say that they are co-operating with the committee in preparing the program for the November 7th, anniversary meeting commemorating the Russian Revolution at the Ashland Auditorium, this coming Sunday.

Voters Repudiate Cal Coolidge at Polls

other of the parties. In New York they supported Al. Smith, in Massachusetts, David I. Walsh, and in Illinois, the state labor officials supported the Samuel Insull candidate Frank L. Smith. Elsewhere they supported capitalists candidates who were not so well known nationally as the two Smiths and Walsh.

The chief interest in the election was centered on the contests in New York, Massachusetts, Illinois and Indiana.

Political Death Sentance.

In the defeat of William M. Butler, millionaire mill magnate and chairman of the Republican National Committee, president Coolidge, in all probability saw his own political death sentence. Butler was Coolidge's "angel", the man who pushed him to the front, the man who put over his presidential campaign. Coolidge refused to risk his own fortune by endorsing the republican (reactionary) candidates but he went to the hat for Butler. Whatever chances Butler had before Coolidge wrote the letter praising him he had none as soon as the voters of Massachusetts got thinking over the matter.

The most important factor in Butler's defeat is the widespread unemployment in the textile industry and the wage cutting policy that has prevailed there for years back and in which Butler played a prominant part. The Volstead law also played an important part, thousands of wet republicans deserting the dry elephant for the wet lonker. The Republican Party in the Bay State was tied up with the anti-saloon league, which did not forgive an asset to Butler.

In New York Al Smith won, with the greatest priority in his political career, carrying Wagner, the Tammany candidate for senator along with him, defeating Ogden L. Mills, his opponent and senator Wadsworth Hearst conducting a violent but ineffective campaign against the governor.

Brennan Defeated.

George E. Brennan, democrat, was defeated by Frank L. Smith, republican. Both were supported by Samuel Insull, but Smith got more money from the utility magnate than Brennan. In all probability Smith will not be seated and Governor Small will appoint somebody to fill the term.

Returns from Indiana indicate that the two kian senators, Watson and Robinson were elected tho the issue is yet in doubt. Vare won easily in Pennsylvania, proving that a large slush fund is no handicap, as far as the voters are concerned. Capitalism has the American masses thoroly corrupted. Only the corrupt politicians who have not yet been caught profess indignation over the acceptance of large sums from business—big business.

Wets Win Victory

The wets won an overwhelming victory over the drys, New York and Illinois voting five to one for repeal.

As a result of victories at the polls, three men stand out prominently in the democratic party as candidates for the presidency on the democral ticket. They are: Al Smith, of New York, Governor Donahey of Ohio and governor Ritchie of Maryland.

The republicans are now scanning the political horizon for another "wise man from the east" to lead them out of the desert. Coolidge's sun has set forever. Bruce Barton, author of the book: "the Man Nobody Knows," in a famous interview, introduced a Coolidge that nobody knew to the American people.

The public now awaits another book by Mr. Barton, entitled: "The Man Nobody Wants."

Narrow Margin

More complete figures from western states made it clear that the republican margin of control in the senate of the seventieth congress will not be larger than one vote—if it is that.

If Frederick Stelwer, the regular republican candidate wins, the republicans will have 48 votes in the new senate as against 47 Democratic, and 1 farmer-labor.

Considered Doubtful.

Late returns from states this morning considered doubtful established that the democrats gained seven seats to oats net, exclusive of Oregon. The democrats elected Walsh in Massachusetts, Wagner in New York, Bayley in Kentucky, Tdyings in Maryland, Hawes in Missouri, Hayden in Arizona, and Thomas in Oklahoma.

Snow in Peoria.

PEORIA, Ill., Nov. 3.—Peoria was covered with its first blanket of snow today. A heavy snow storm struck with the interstate commerce commission, the U. S. Chamber of Commerce and various agencies, both financial and governmental, which are clamoring for the destruction of the United Mine Workers as an obstacle in the way of a completely non-union America. DeCamp's statement is no empty pronouncement, for his institution controls the credit facilities of every national bank in Ohio and can easily compel them to deny advances to union operators.

Bankers Open War On Miners

The extent to which West Virginia is cutting into union production in Ohio and the imperative necessity of instituting a more vigorous policy in fighting non-unionism in that state, appear in the bureau of mines final report for Ohio coal operations in 1925. Due to the low labor costs of West Virginia, unlimited Ohio experienced the worst coal year since 1909. Production last year fell to 28,000,000 tons, a decrease of one-third from 1923, when West Virginia was partially organized. The comparison with 1926 is even more startling, for in that year Buckeye miners tossed nearly twice as much coal into their squat little mine cars as in 1925.

While Ohio has been experiencing a 50 per cent decrease in output, non-union Kentucky, to the south, has increased from 35,000,000 to 82,000,000 tons, while non-union West Virginia has shot up from 80,000,000 to 128,000,000 as a result 18,000 Ohio miners have been cut completely off the pay-

15,000 given less than 5 days' work a month. Average employment has been 151 days, altho in Hocking Valley, the average was but 109 days.

Gov. Donahey, closely in touch with the coal situation, predicts that production for 1926 will be cut to 21,000,000 tons, the lowest in the present century.

Attack Weak Spots.

Ohio operators, checkmated in their decisions to open this fall on the 1917 scale of $5 a day by the iron well determination of the miners to save their union, are seeking weak spots in the union armor. Already successful in the Pomeroy district of southern Ohio and in the West Virginia panhandle—under Ohio jurisdiction—they are probing union strength in Hocking and Belmont fields.

J. A. Paisley, tri-state operator who defied the union in the panhandle, tried recently to open his Ohio mines across the Ohio river from his scab properties. Subdistrict officers ordered the union day men not to clean up the mines until they had conferred with Paisley at his Cleveland offices. Hard hit by the failure of his non-union panhandle mines to avorega more than one-third of union production, due to the employment of unskilled coal diggers, Paisley offered to pay the Jacksonville scale in Ohio. Union officials made it plain that he could not try the old game, worked successfully in other districts, of operating half his mines union and the other half scab. The conference broke

'LOVELESS WIFE' CAUSED MURDER; ATTORNEY SAYS

Halls-Mills Scandal Bared in Court

(Special to The Daily Worker)

SOMERVILLE, N. J., Nov. 3.—In a dramatic presentation of the state's case in the Hall-Mills murder trial today, special prosecutor, Alexandar Simpson promised the jury he would prove to them that the three defendants "are guilty of this amazing crime."

"I will offer you no irrelevant evidence. I will give you the facts. Every piece will fit," he said.

Accused Unmoved.

Mrs. Frances Stevens Hall, proud and aristocratic looking, sat unmoved as the prosecutor talked, as did the other two defendants, her brothers, "Willie" and Henry Stevens. They are accused of having murdered the Rev. Dr. Edward Wheeler Hall and pretty Mrs. Eleanor Mills, who were shot and killed on a "lovers' lane" on the night of September 14, 1922.

Simpson said he wanted the jury to reserve judgment on any facts until all the evidence had been presented.

"Loveless Wife."

"Dr. Hall married a woman seven years older than himself," said Simpson, "and he got what men usually get when they marry that way—he found himself in a cold, loveless home."

Mrs. Hall's face remained expressionless and very pale as he made this statement.

"And as he turned elsewhere for friendship and love"

G. O. P. Victory in Illinois Is Good to Calvin Coolidge

should not have taken any money from Samuel Insull, the utility magnate. Coolidge later on denied that he made such a remark, but Smith hopped onto the president and charged the latter with being just as culpable in the matter of slush funds.

Two Black Kettles.

It is just as politically immoral to accept money from the industrial interests for campaign funds as it is for which the president can raise 10 per cent any time he wants to, as it is to accept money from a utility magnate, even when the recipient charges that the latter has the power to regulate rates. That is the kind of language that Smith indulged in during the closing hours of the campaign.

Smith promises to raise the roof of the senate if he is not seated when he walks up to the president's desk to get a certificate. Unless the republicans come across with their votes for him, Smith promises to open his mouth so wide that the noise made by a hungry lion is only a squeak in comparison.

To Appoint Substitute.

If Smith is not seated Governor Small will appoint a substitute and Len will have nothing to worry about. Not that he has any love for the thing he Smith, who has suffered much for the machine. Here is a chance for some worthy labor faker to get his reward. Perhaps John H. Walker may be the lucky one.

Should Vare of Pennsylvania be unseated Governor Pinchot will have the privilege of appointing a substitute. Both Len Small of Illinois and Pinchot of Pennsylvania are not particularly friendly to the Coolidge-Mellon administration so no matter how things turn out it looks bad for Cal.

Chicago and New York.

Notable among these meetings be the Chicago celebration at Ashland auditorium on Sunday, Nov. 7 at which Wm. Z. Foster, Wm. F. Dunne, Sam Darcy will be the main speakers. New York City will commemorate the day with three meetings, one on Nov. 6th at Webster hall, one on Nov. 6th at Manhattan casino and one on Nov. 7th at Grand Assembly Hall in Brooklyn. Also on Nov. 7th as follows: Cleveland, Ohio, Duluth, Minn., Superior, Wis., Gary, Ind., Cincinnati, Ohio, Akron, Ohio, Toledo, Ohio, Youngstown, Ohio, Detroit, Mich., Milwaukee, Wis., Kenosha, Wis., Racine, Wis., Minneapolis, Minn., St. Paul, Minn., Seattle, Wash., Portland, Ore., Los Angeles, Cal., San Francisco, Cal., Oakland, Cal., Berkeley, Cal., San Jose, Cal., Sacramento, Cal., Stockton, Cal., Fresno, Cal., Boston, Mass., Worcester, Mass., Springfield, Mass., Lowell, Mass., Lawrence, Mass., Fall River, Mass., New Bedford, Mass., Lynn, Mass., Haverhill, Mass., Providence, R. ## Who Is Supporting
The Keep The DAILY WORKER Fund?

HOW THE DISTRICTS STAND

By C. E. RUTHENBERG

General Secretary, Workers (Communist) Party.

THREE districts of the party have raised close to 50% of their quota of the Keep The DAILY WORKER Fund. Three other districts are below 20% of the quota assigned to them. Here are the figures showing the quota of the district based upon the members in the districts, the amounts they have collected and the percentage of their quota collected thus far:

DONATIONS TO OCTOBER 30.

| District | Quota | Amount Raised | Percentage |
|---|---|---|---|
| District No. 1 | $ 4,000.00 | $ 715.00 | 17.9 |
| District No. 2 | 15,000.00 | 3,092.90 | 20.6 |
| District No. 3 | 3,000.00 | 1,380.04 | 46 |
| District No. 4 | 1,100.000 | 418.25 | 38 |
| District No. 5 | 2,500.00 | 510.39 | 20.4 |
| District No. 6 | 3,000.00 | 448.83 | 11.8 |
| District No. 7 | 2,500.00 | 1,226.05 | 48 |
| District No. 8 | 7,500.00 | 3,413.06 | 45 |
| District No. 9 | 3,500.00 | 680.10 | 19.4 |
| District No. 10 | 1,000.00 | 493.10 | 49.3 |
| District No. 12 | 2,500.000 | 221.10 | 8.8 |
| District No. 13 | 3,000.00 | 703.26 | 23.4 |
| District No. 15 | 1,000.00 | 151.00 | 15 |
| Agricultural District | 400.00 | 166.00 | 40.3 |
| TOTAL | | $13,644.27 | 27.28 |

This table throws light on who is giving support to Keep The DAILY WORKER. Seattle seems less interested insofar as the work done so far is concerned than any other district of the party. Next in lack of activity to support the Keep The DAILY WORKER Fund are the comrades of Cleveland who have only raised 11.6%. The Connecticut membership shewed an equal lack of interest, having thus far raised only 15% of their quota.

Next in line, with a little better showing but still a very poor showing, are the members of the Boston district, the Minneapolis district, the New York district, the Pittsburgh district and San Francisco district, all of whom have only supported The DAILY WORKER to the extent of the strength of 20% of the membership of the district.

The best district in the country in supporting The DAILY WORKER is the Kansas City district, with 49.2% of its quota already collected. Next [illegible] with 49% collected, Philadelphia is third with 46% collected [illegible] with 35%. The [illegible] districts which are far behind in the list must immediately take steps for better[illegible] which it is facing AND TO KEEP THE DAILY WORKER.

If the membership in Kansas City, Detroit, Chicago and Philadelphia could raise nearly 50% of the quota for their district in six week's time, why should not New York, Boston, Cleveland, Minneapolis, New Haven, Seattle and San Francisco do the same thing?

The DAILY WORKER is the fighting, revolutionary organ of our whole party and every section of the party must give it equal support. Those districts which are far behind in the list must immediately take steps for better organizational support of the Keep The DAILY WORKER campaign. The membership in these districts must take up more energatically the selling of The DAILY WORKER Certificates.

For Kansas City, Detroit, Philadelphia and Chicago the goal for the month of November must be to raise their total to the 100% mark. If the campaign in these districts is pushed with continued energy and the momentum kept up, there is no reason why these districts should not go over the top by the end of November.

Every party member should study the above table carefully and then make himself a committee of one to stir up action in his district in support of the Keep The DAILY WORKER campaign. Every committee in the districts which have fallen below so badly must take up the Keep The DAILY WORKER campaign with new energy.

If every district had done what Kansas City, Detroit, Philadelphia and Chicago has done, The DAILY WORKER would be well out of the crisis which it still faces, because the other districts have not given the same support. Instead of still fighting to Keep The DAILY WORKER, we would be carrying on the campaign to put it on a sound foundation for the next year with a better and bigger paper to serve our movement.

The end of the month of November must show a different standing of the situation. Funds must be rushed to The DAILY WORKER by all party poor showing can by energetic action win a better position and show they really want to Keep The DAILY WORKER. The districts which have given the best support must strain every bit of energy to go over the top with 100% quota.

Because of the unavan support which the Keep The DAILY WORKER campaign has received The DAILY WORKER is still in a serious critical situation. Funds must be rushed to The DAILY WORKER by all party nucial which have made collections and the work of collecting $5.00 per manbar intensified.

In these districts in which the members are far behind the work of elding The DAILY WORKER to overcome the present difficulties must be taken up with the will of catching up on their quota and thus carrying The DAILY WORKER thru its financial difficulties.

IF THE WHOLE PARTY WILL GET BEHIND THE "KEEP THE DAILY WORKER" DRIVE, WE CAN WIN THE STRUGGLE AND KEEP OUR MOST IMPORTANT WEAPON IN THE REVOLUTIONARY STRUGGLE AGAINST CAPITALISM IN THIS COUNTRY.

Negro Journal Gives Issue to Discussion of W. Indian Problem

The entire November issue of Opportunity, Journal of Negro life, is devoted to a discussion of problems of the Negro in the West Indies.

Some of the articles are: "The Garvey Movement," by Franklin Frazier; "In Our American Language," by Waldo Frank; "The West Indies," by W. A. Domingo; "Negro Composers and Musicians of the West Indies," by A. M. W. Mellliet, and "West Indian-American Relations," by Rev. Ethelred Brown.

Opportunity is published at 127 East 23rd street, New York City, by the National Urban League.

ANNIVERSARY OBSERVED FOR 9TH TIME HERE

Ninth Year of Soviet Union Celebrated

For the ninth time, workers of Chicago will gather to observe the anniversary of the Russian revolution of November seventh, 1917. The ninth birthday of the First Workers' and Peasants' Republic will be celebrated at Ashland Auditorium, Ashland and Van Buren, next Sunday, at 8 p. m.

William Z. Foster, noted militant trade unionist, William F. Dunne, editor of The DAILY WORKER and Sam Darcy, national secretary of the Young Workers' League will recount the historical achievements of the Russian proletariat and draw the lessons from their struggles by which the still exploited workers of the rest of the world can profit in the fight against capitalism.

Eye-Witnesses.

Both Foster and Dunne have made frequent trips to the Soviet Union. It will be their task to tell in the words of eye witnesses the strides forward made by the Soviet Union in the nine short years of workers' rule.

But there will be more than speeches. The Ashland auditorium meeting will be a genuine celebration. A group of Czecho-Slovak dancers will present folk dances from the opera, "The Bartered Bride," in native costume. A fourteen-piece orchestra will play thruout the program. A solo singer of prominence, a radio artist and other numbers will feature the concert. A pageant staged by the Young Pioneers, junior Communists, will open the demonstration.

The committee of the Workers (Communist) Party that is in charge of the arrangements has set 8 p. m. sharp for the opening time. The program will begin on the dot without delay. The hall seats only four thousand people. It will be necessary to come early to get a seat. Arne Swabeck, organizer of district 8, of the Workers Party will be the chairman.

On the Saturday preceding, at 5 p. m., an automobile parade advertising the Ashland Auditorium celebration will carry banners thruout the important working class sections of the city. All comrades with automobiles who wish to participate in the parade will report to 19 S. Lincoln St., the district headquarters of the Workers Party.

Modern Society Only 30% Efficient, Says Professor at Yale U.

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Nov. 4.—Seventy per cent of the efficncy of workers is lost by the present system, Prof. Hudson B. Hastings of the scientific school of Yale University, said in a speech here.

Of this total, he said, about 20 per cent is due to uoemployment, and the other 50 per cent due to methods in selection, training and supervision of the working force.

British Sub Stranded.

LONDON, Nov. 4.—The British submarine R-4 is stranded in the fog off Exmouth. The vessel is not in danger.

MINERS' SUB-COMMITTEE ON ANTHRACITE QUESTIONS TO CONSIDER TOOHEY CASE

SCRANTON, Pa., Nov. 4.—The sub-committee appointed by the International Executive Board of the United Mine Workers of America, at its recent meeting in Indianapolis, will convene at Scranton, Pa., beginning Nov. 9, on questions affecting the anthracite region. The committee is composed of John J. Matee, Dennis Brislin and John Ghizzoni, members of the International Executive Board from Districts No. 9, No. 1 and No. 2, respectively.

Under instructions of the International Board, the committee will hold a hearing on the appeal for reinstatement of Pat Toohey, expelled member of the union

N. Y. FASCISTS RAID PLANTS OF ITALIAN PAPERS

Pulls Gun on Employes; Smash Machinery

The plants of two Italian anti-fascist newspapers were raided here early Tuesday morning in retaliation for the attack upon the life of Premier Mussolini in Bologna, Italy.

Just after midnight six armed fascists entered the plant of Il Nuovo Mondo at 85 East Tenth street and drove out the employes at pistol points. They descended to the basement, where Michael Serka, a pressman, was preparing to run off the paper, and after ordering him to leave with the other employes and sealing [illegible] chinery, rendering operation of the press impossible.

A few hours later twenty fascists, most of them armed, went to the plant of Il Martello, of which Carlo Treece, well known Italian Socialist, is the editor, at 77 East Tenth street. They drove the newspaper employes to the street, and then took sledge hammers and wrenches and wrecked the two linotype machines.

Mr. Treaca, who reported the raid to the police, said that whenever an attempt is made upon the life of Mussolini the fascisti here retaliate by attacking members of the Anti-Fascist Party. He declared that the bomb explosion several weeks ago at 116th street and First aveoue, when two men were killed, was caused by the fascisti. The two men, he said, were on their way to an antifascist meeting and had planned to hurl the bomm there but it exploded prematurely.

Texas Company Plant at Craig, Colorado, Threatened by Fire

CRAIG, Colo., Nov. 4.—A spectacular fire threatened today to destroy the newly completed million dollar Texas Company oil refinery here.

A heroic fight by refinery employes, the Craig fire department and scores of volunteers confined the blaze to the boiler house and office building. The damage has not been estimeted.

Earthen dikes thrown up by the fire fighters prevented spread of the blazing oil to the thousands of barrels of stored gasoline, kerosene and fuel oil.

SOVIET PARTY CONFERENCE VOTES UNANIMOUSLY FOR STALIN PROPOSALS

By JOHN PEPPER.

(Special Cable to The DAILY WORKER.)

MOSCOW, U. S. S. R., Nov. 4.—The closing sessions of the conference of the Communist Party of the Soviet Union unanimously adopted as resolutions the theses on economic problems submitted by Rykoff, chairman of the Council of People's Commissars and the theses submitted by Tomsky on trade union work.

Closing the conference, Rykoff, in a lengthy speech, pointed out that the opposition had completely failed to win the endorsement of the party for their position and that the propagation of their wrong ideas was unanimously condemned. In spite of the recognized seriousness of the situation, he said, the party will continue unanmously its work of socialist construction on the principles of Leninism and will struggle against the opposition.

Stalin's Support Unanimous.

The debate on Stalin's report on the internal party situation was concluded with [illegible] Maslenikiff and Clara Zetkin, whereupon Stalin, met again with a tremendous ovation, made a two-hour concluding speech. With no one abstaining, the conference unanimously adopted Stalin's resolution with no emendments on the question of the opposition block.

The conference unanimously adhered to the decisions of the central committee and the Central Control Commission, reappointing Ordjonokidze as head of the latter body, and called the fifteenth party congress to

LONDON, Nov. 4.—England is organizing a European financial bloc to block the progress of world economic domination by the United States. This information was secured from an unquestionable source.

It is worthy of note that when British professions of friendship for the United States are at their height, Downing street is conducting a campaign against Great Britain's foremost commercial rival.

It is now revealed that the reason for Britain's objection to the sale of German railroad bonds in the United States was that the plan would in-

ISHPHEMING, Mich., Nov. 4.—A strong was the force of the mud and water which surged into the entries and rooms of the Barnes-Hacker iron mine from a cave-in of swamp ground, that the fifty-three miners working on various levels were stripped of their clothing and horribly mangled, as evidenced by the condition of seven bodies so far recovered.

The fifty-three men who met their death in the mine constituted one-third of the population of the mining camp at North Location six miles west of here. Wives, children and relatives of the trapped miners gathered in hysterical groups around the shafts and

G FIGHT FOR E MAYORALITY 'S NOW OPENED

William Hale Thompson Lining Up Support

No sooner had the tumult of the congressional elections died down in Illinois, than the capitalist politicians of Chicago began to lay their lines for the next big battle for the mayoral prize of this wealthy city.

Successful candidates on the republican and democrat tickets that led their respective slates were mentioned as aspirants. Among those are Patrick Carr, successful candidate for sheriff and Charles Barrat, who was re-elected president of the board of Review.

Dexter Got Much Dough.

Last Wednesday night Dr. John Dill Robertson met with a goodly company of supporters and was handed $300,000 to be used in his mayoral primary fight. Fred Lundin, Swedish boss in Cook county, who testified before the Reed senate slush fund inquiry that he was not a politician, is the prime mover in the Robertson candidacy.

William Hale Thompson, former mayor and rog in the Thompson-Harding-Lundin machine, is seeking 300,000 signatures of citizens who pledge themselves to vote for him. Thompson is now lined up with the Crowe G. O. P. faction.

Labor leaders are passing Thompson cards among the membership of their unions and forcing them to sign.

Impaired Crowe's Prestige.

The defeat of Joseph Savage for county judge has considerably impaired the prestige of State's Attorney Robert E. Crowe who was looked upon until recently as the most powerful politician in the state. His association with gangsters, however, and the immunity enjoyed by them has rubbed the tinsel off this notorious foe of organized labor.

The Lundin-Robertson faction is in alliance with the notorious Len Small, and is officially dry unless the wet cyclone that hit the state last Tuesday will cause it to "rush the growler."

On the democrat side Mayor Dever is mentioned, but in all probability the mayor has had his last fling at the city hall. Dever was a disappointment to the thirsty folk of which there a goodly number in the democrat ranks. He is a willing tool of big business. Paddy Carr would be a popular candidate and he comes recommends from every pore.

Some Thinking.

Chicago be a good time for the to begin preparing for the election. A United Labor Ticket would attract thousands of workers who cannot fail to be doing some thinking over the folly of transferring their support from one capitalist flunkey to the other. Not one of these political grafters take the trouble to mention the needs of the working class. Why should they since the workers themselves seem to have no concern over their own interests!

Denies Incommunicado.

A flat denial of charges that Frank Nitti, Chicago gangster, awaiting trial for murder in Porter county, Ind., was being held incommunicado from his attorneys was made today by Walter H. Daly, warden of the Indiana state prison, Michigan City.

VIC DONAHEY

With Al Smith carrying New York for Tammany by a huge margin and Vic Donahey winning Ohio for the Democrats there; the two governors will command attention at the next Democratic national convention as possible choices for the presidential run. Al Smith stands in very well with Wall Street and Donahey has done nothing to make the money lords think ill of him.

Militant workers, gathered in dozens of huge demonstrations thruout the country on November Seventh, are letting the capitalists of America know it is high time to stop their misrepresentations about the workers' and peasants' government.

MUSSOLINI CALLS EXTRA SESSION TO GET DEATH PENALTY FOR ASSASSINS

ROME, Nov. 4.—Premier Mussolini has decided to convene an extraordinary session of the chamber of deputies on November 9, to enact the proposed bill providing the death penalty for those who make attempts on the life of the premier.

Agitation for the immediate passage of this bill has been great since the attempt made in Bologna on Sunday to shoot the premier.

NICE, France, Nov. 4.— Colonel Ricciotti Garibaldi was summoned before the police here today and subjected to a lengthy examination, with regards to a reported plot against Premier Mussolini by Italy.

"Socialist" Weds Royal Couple as Four Kings and Two Queen Look on

STOCKHOLM, Nov. 4.—In the presence of four kings and two queens, and scores of lesser royalties, Crown Prince Leopold of Belgium and Princess Astrid of Sweden were this afternoon married in a civil ceremony in the throne room of the royal palace.

The king of Sweden, the king of Belgium, the king of Denmark, the king of Norway, the queen of Belgium and the queen of Norway, were all seated in the throne room when the crown prince and Princess Astrid entered and went thru the ceremony, which is to be followed by a state religious ceremony in Brussels next week, performed by the "socialist," Mayor Carl Lindhagen, of Stockholm.

BUTLER DEFEAT BRINGS GRIEF TO 'SILENT CAL'

Voters Have Seen Thru Pasteboard Giant

WASHINGTON, D. C., Nov. 4.— There is no attempt to conceal administrial chagrin over the loss of the two senatorial seats in New York and Massachusetts. The literary touis who have been gurgling over Coolidge and turning a cardboard politician into a giant, will have to endgel their mental vacuums for, new tricks. Their moral assembly simply will not stand up.

Blame it on Volstead.

Republican apologists attribute the repudiation of Coolidgeism to ten revolt against the Volstead law and the snooping of the sour-faced scruffets who run the Anti-Saloon League. That this was a factor is quite obvious.

But this does not explain why the wet Wadsworth of New York was defeated or why William M. Butler, the millionaire magnate lost, while the republican candidate for governor who was not so closely connected with Coolidge won by a tremendous majority in the same state.

Six of the eight states that voted on modification of the prohibition law expressed their disapproval of Volsteadism. Only in Colorado did the drys win a victory, a slim one. Missouri voted down the question and elected a wet senator. The Minnesotans did not like the way the question was framed.

Prophets Differ.

Prophets have differences of opinion as to whether Senators Smith and Vare will be allowed to take their seats in the senate. Some believe that the democrats will let them seat but will open fire on them during the winter session of 1927 when both parties are laying their plans for the presidential campaign. They expect that a new airing of the scandal would then wreak the most damage.

The so-called republican insurgents will have the chance of a lifetime to show their stuff in the next congress. With 48 votes at the disposal of the republicans and 47 in the hands of the democrats, one foot-loose farmer-labor senator, the insurgents who are allied as republicans can make things disagreeable for the administration should the insurgents propose any radical legislation. It remains to be seen how the democrats will vote.

Some of the papers are predicting that Senator Shipstead, farmer-laborite of Minnesota, will return to the G. O. P. fold in view of the defeat of Magnus Johnson.

FRANCE, ITALY AT ODDS OVER RECENT CLASH

French Foreign Office Sends Protest

PARIS, Nov. 4.—The French foreign office has delivered an emphatic protest to Rome over Fascist excesses at Ventimiglia, an international town on the Franco-Italian border where the French consulate was raided by black shirts and French railwaymen severely beaten because it was claimed they neglected to raise their hats to the Italian flag.

Imperialist Demands.

There is also considered perturbation in official quarters here over the imperialist demands being made by the Fascist press for the Italian squilation of the French Rivera, including Nice and an Italian share in the French North African possession, Tunis.

The Italian press is filled with charges that the various plots on Premier Mussolini's life have been engineered in France with the French officially winking at the manauvers. Fear is expressed of further clashes in the Rivera where there is a large Italian population.

Fascisti Slay Opposition Members.

ROME, Nov. 4.—It is reported here that many persons have been killed and injured in fascist rioting thruout the country following the attamptad assassination of Premier Mussolini at Bologna last Sunday. Newspaper plants of the opposition have been sacked. Homes of known members of the opposition have been entered and damaged. In Naples, the home of the famous philosopher, Bennedetto Croca, was wrecked.

Mussolini returned in triumph to Roma. A meeting of the Fascist Grand Council to meet here soon is expected to take up the following questions: Dissolution of all opposition parties, suppression of all opposition newspapers, a house-cleaning within the party, and the organization of a separate fascist police.

Fish Dealer Admits He Engineered Delivery Attempt in N. Y. Prison

NEW YORK, Nov. 4.—A signed confession was obtained by the police today from Robert Weiner, a 24-year-old fish dealer, that he engineered the daring plot of a Tombs jail delivery which resulted late yesterday in the death of four men and the wounding of two others.

Weiner was the bosom pal of "Hymie" Amberg, one of the prisoners, who blew his brains out when the plot failed and he was ringed around with shooting policemen.

Two Affairs for Daily Worker in N. Y. Tonite

NEW YORK, Nov. 4.—This Saturday night, November 5, every DAILY WORKER reader in New York should enjoy one or both of the following affairs:

At the Workers' House, 108 East 14th street, there will be a Verbinka in celebration of the opening of the building next door. A door has been cut thru the wall, doubling the size of the top floor, making it ideal for a DAILY WORKER builders' social and dance. A good orchestra has been secured and good eats are promised.

The same evening a splendid musical program will be rendered by the Lettish workers in connection with the ball in the Bohemian National Home, 321 East 73rd street. Half the proceeds of each affair will go to The DAILY WORKER.

Real World Trade Union Unity Will Come in Spite of Reaction's Opposition

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

ON THE same day that the Detroit convention of the American Federation of Labor adjourned recently, the International Federation of Trade Unions (Amsterdam) issued a declaration refusing to officially recognize the proposed trade union conference to be held at Mexico City at the suggestion of the Mexican Federation of Trade Unions.

There is no doubt considerable significance to this coincidance. The American Federation of Labor officialdom has also refused to recognize the Mexico City conference, altho a little more diplomatically than Amsterdam. Fraaident William Green was given permission by his executive council to go. He did not decline, but merely stated he didn't have the time to make the trip, a threadbare evasion.

The outright rejection of the Amsterdam International and the evasion of the A. F. of L. drive toward the same goal. It is a very evident and joint blow against the militancy of Mexican labor.

Amsterdam is clearly taking the orders of the A. F. of L., with which it is seeking an anti-Bolshevik alliance. It was therefore to be expected that it would make the most of the excuse that it had heard that Michael Tomsky, secretary of the Russian Trade Union Congress, had also been invited. The officialdom of the International Federation of Trade Unions therefore issued its blanket refusal of participation in the gathering at Mexico City by declaring:

"The executive, in view of the conditions under which the delegation is to go to Mexico, decides that, on its own behalf and on that of the I. F. T. U., it must decline to take any responsibility whatever for it."

There were two votes cast against this declaration, however. It is not stated who cast the two insurgent votes. Thus the gross service of the Amsterdam International coincides with the result is that neither Purcell, altho he is the president of the I. F. T. U., nor Brown, altho he is secretary, have had any instructions to represent the I. F. T. U. in Mexico or in other American countries, any more than do the other members of the delegation."

It is not known definitely who will go to Mexico City from Europe. It was rumored about the time that Edo Fimmen, former secretary of the I. F. T. U., but now head of the International Transport Workers' Federation, would attend. But he has not been heard from.

It has been reported that Arthur A. Purcell, president of the I. F. T. U, would not attend because of his activity in the British coal miners' strike. Purcell made the trip to Mexico City following his attendance at the A. F. of L. convention at Atlantic City, last year, as fraternal delegate of the British Trades Union Congress.

Among those who originally were invited and planned to come to Mexico were Jouhaux, of France, and Mertens, of Belgium, vice presidents of the I. F. T. U. Evidently heavy pressure was brought to bear upon these two, since it is now announced that neither of them will attend. Thus the I. F. T. U., in common with the A. F. of L., does all in its power to wreck the courageous efforts of the Mexican trade unions, now numbering close to 2,000,000 members, to bring unity into the world trade union movement.

European trade officials going to Mexico City, therefore, will go on the same basis as the A. F. of L. has forced trade union officials from this country to go to Moscow, merely as individuals. But it will be a beginning.

It was three years ago that the Mexican trade unions expressed a desire to have a delegation from across the Atlantic visit their country, in the hope of establishing closer relations between the trade unions of the old world and the new. The Mexicans were even ready to provide the necessary funds for this purpose. The invitation was originally accepted, but it was claimed that the European situation at that moment prevented the various trade union leaders from leaving their respective countries.

Instead of trying to build upon the Purcell visit to Mexico City last year, the I. F. T. U. executive went out of its way in an effort to belittle its results. This was a prophecy of the repudiation of the Mexico City conference that has now been issued by this same executive.

Thus the labor reaction in the United States and capitalist Europe tries to place itself as an obstruction in the road that leads to trade union progress and unity. It will be bowled over and left in the dust unnoticed by the forward moving masses. Real world trade union unity, embracing the trade unions of all countries, including those of the Union of Soviet Republics, will blot out the reactionary alliance of the International Federation of Trade Unions with the American Federation of Labor.

MURDER NIGHT DESCRIBED BY HALL WITNESS

Stevens Collapsed at the Scene Year Later

COURTHOUSE, SOMERVILLE, N. J., Nov. 4.—Ralph Gerstine, tall, thin, veary man in the slain Dr. Edward W. Hall's church, denied on the witness stand today that he had seen or spoken to Henry Stevens on the Phillips farm the night four years to when the Rev Hall and his choir singer, Mrs. Eleanor Mills, were shot to death in De Russey's lane.

He told of going to the scene which was a "Lovers' Lane, at about 10:30 on the night of the double murder. He was accompanied, he testified, by Miss Catherine Rastall. He parked his car near the famous crabapple tree where the murders were committed. Soon he heard the mumbling of voices, a shot, a woman's scream, than three shots and then moans.

Didn't See Stevens.

"Didn't you ever tell a man that you were in the lane that night and that you saw there Henry Stevens and that he said to you: 'Get to hell out of here!' and fired two shot into the ground?" Special Prosecutor Alexander Simpson shouted.

"I did not," the witness replied.

He said he met Miss Rastall in front of the Y. M. C. A. in New Brunswick, about 10 o'clock on the night of the murder. He invited her for a ride in his car. They then drove to the lane, about 700 feet from the crabapple tree, and put out the automobile's lights.

"How long were you in the lane when you heard the shots?"

"A few minutes."

The witness then was excused.

LABOR 'LEADERS' FEEL HONORED IN DESTROYER RITES

Green Subscribes to the Warship Program

By SYLVAN A. POLLACK.
(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, Nov. 4.—William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, and other national and local labor leaders drove the first rivet into the keel of the cruiser Pensacola at the Brooklyn navy yard here.

This ceremony was watched by 5,000 people, including fifty "labor leaders," who were present at the invitation of Rear Admiral Plunkett, who wanted the officials of the American Federation of Labor to have the "honor" of placing the first rivet.

Costs $10,000,000.

The Pensacola will be of 10,000 tons and will cost $10,000,000. The building of the ship is expected to take over two years. Within the next few weeks 8,000 men will be at work on the vessel, and if it is decided to make it a rush job 2,000 more will be added.

The labor leaders were assigned official position as follows: Right-hand riveter, William Green; left-hand riveter, John Sullivan, president of the New York State Federation of Labor; holder on, Joseph Ryan, president of the New York Central Trades and Labor Council; rivet feeder, A. A. Canfield, president of the plumbers' union; rivet passer, Frank Morrison, secretary of the A. F. of L.; standby, Roy Horn, president of the Blacksmiths' International Union.

Mentions Armament Treaty.

Admiral Plunkett, in addressing President Green before the ceremony, cited the provisions of Articles 11 and 12 of the limitations armament treaty, and said:

"There is no limitation on the number of ships of this class which may be built by any of the contracting powers. Since the conclusion of the world war the United States has completed ten cruisers of 7,500 tons. Congress has made appropriations for the construction of five of the Pensacola type. During and since the war nine of the signatories has built, or is building, 50 cruisers, another 25, and we are building ten, for five of which the money has been appropriated. This is the first of the five whose keel is being laid.

"I make this statement in order that you may all clearly understand that we are not only within the limits of the most wording of the treaty, but also within the spirit of the treaty.

"Let us hope the world will have more peace."

Green Says Labor Honored.

Green, in replying to Plunkett's speech, said that labor is highly honored to be called upon to lay the keel and promised the organized labor would help to promote understanding and good will among the nations of the world (by building battleships).

Celebrate Navy Day.

Crowds thronged the navy yard all day to help celebrate Navy Day. They saw, among other craft, four submarines, the S-12, S-49, S-50 and the P-3, a new type designed to go with the fleet in its maneuvers. Also there were two destroyers, the Brooks and the Barry, and the S-51, which had been raised from the ocean floor off Block Island.

At the right is Harry Pollitt telling the 800 delegates assembled at Battersea Town Hall of the fight the Communist and left wing delegates made at the Margate conference of the Labor Party for full support to the striking miners. This was a historic congress. The Party has more than doubled its membership in the last year and increased the circulation of the press 50 per cent. The main question before the congress was assistance to the struggle of the British miners in which the Communist Party is playing an important role.

EIGHT WOMEN HAVE INCOME OVER A MILLION DOLLARS IN U. S.; HOW ABOUT THE WOMEN IN PASSAIC?

(Special to The Daily Worker.)

WASHINGTON, Nov. 4.—Woman's rise to power in the big money world was graphically illustrated in details of income tax payments for 1925, made public today by the Bureau of Internal Revenue.

Supremacy in money-grabbing, once dominated by men is slowly being attained by women, according to official figures which showed that in 1924, the last year for which accurate statistics are available, there were eight women with incomes of more than $1,000,000.

Women were officially classed as the heads of 153,278 American families. Returns were filed by 738,814 other women.

Women heading families reported incomes aggregating $408,284,000, while all others—the unmarriageable class—had an earning capacity of $1,883,784,000.

Wives, not classed as family heads, had personal incomes amounting to $956,000,000, 173,325 of this class having made separate income tax returns. Joint returns of husbands and wives numbered 3,951,550, representing net income of $16,695,378,000.

Big Foreign Income.

Internal revenue statistics disclosed that 2,653 aliens paid taxes amounting to $5,923,571. Non-resident aliens reported incomes amounting to $39,702,000 and foreigners in the United States of $23,586,000.

The income of American citizens from foreign sources amounted to $46,364,000, with a tax liability of $2,476,000.

Few Farmers Pay.

Agricultural returns for 1924 showed the unsettled condition of the farm industry. Approximately 69,600 farmers made returns. Of this number, 49,884 reported net profits of $90,403,000, while 20,017 reported net losses of $45,631,000.

Personal industry accounted for $24,698,873,000, or 73 per cent of the total taxable income. Individual incomes from business totaled $47,854,430,000. Manufacturers reported a profit of $230,057,000 and general trade $1,603,558,000.

Taxes other than federal income assessments amounted to $1,097,607,000 in 1924, an increase of $78,000,000 from the preceding year.

Half-Million Corporations.

Reports from corporations showed 417,481 returns, of which 236,389 accounted for had incomes of $7,586,483,000, paying a tax of $881,649,000.

New York, with 16 per cent of all tax returns, reported 30 per cent of the total national income and paid 33 per cent of the tax. The average net taxable income in New York state was $4,332.

New Jersey and Rhode Island tied for second "honors" with average net incomes of $3,325, while Florida was fourth with $3,902.

Per capita net income in New York was $194, Rhode Island $137, Delaware $128 and Hawaii $119.

53 Miners Drown in Cave-In

No Warning.

No warning accompanied the cave-in. Witnesses said that the largest section of the mine surface, 300 feet long and 200 feet wide, was seen to quiver and then, with a dull sucking, dropped into the workings more than 250 feet.

Engineers say the collapse wrecked the first level, 600 feet under and that the water and mud inundated the levels to a depth of 1,000 feet. Most of the men were working in the first level when the disaster struck.

Exits Blocked.

All exits were blocked. The only recoveries that have been made are bodies that floated to the surface or were carried out of a side entrance by the rush of muck.

The Barnes-Hecker mine, operated by the Cleveland Bluffs Mining Co., is known in this section as a "wet" mine. Such workings are always considered dangerous.

A like disaster occurred in Minnesota several years ago when an underground lake inundated a mine in a similar manner. Four years ago forty-one men were drowned under the same circumstances in the Milford mine in this district.

One Survivor.

There was only one survivor, a boy of 18 who started up the shaft for dinner at the moment the cave-in began and worked his way thru the mud and water to the top. It was his opinion that the men died where they stood, smoking and preparing for dinner.

CHAMORRO WILL BE RECOGNIZED BY U. S., BELIEF

Kellogg to Disregard Approved Treaty

WASHINGTON, Nov. 4.—Disclosure that Secretary Kellogg is reconciling his conscience with the possibility of recognizing a Chamorrist regime in Nicaragua, much desired by Wall Street bankers, is made at the state department at the moment of arrival of reinforcements from Mexico for the constitutional party now in rebellion against Chamorro's dictatorship.

Treaty Signed.

All Central American republics signed a treaty, approved by the United States in a special letter wherein they agreed to give no recognition to a regime in Central America based on seizure of power by armed force, or upon any other than constitutional title.

Chamorro, former dictator, defeated in an election held during American military occupation two years ago, seized the capital by aid of military revolt and expelled the duly elected liberal administration. Refused recognition, he drove from the Nicaraguan congress most of the liberals, placed his own henchman in their seats, and is now about to have one of his relatives or lieutenants "elected" as president, while he holds command of the army. The liberals are in revolt and have a fair chance of overthrowing his regime within the next few months.

Kellogg Fears Mexico.

Secretary Kellogg's apparent change of front is thought to be due to fear of the influence in Latin America of the help which Mexican liberals are giving to the liberal rebels in Nicaragua.

The matter was discussed in the conference on Mexican affairs held recently in the white house between President Coolidge, Kellogg, his assistant, Olds, Ambassador Sheffield and Charles Beecher Warren.

Many Refugees From Russian and Armenia Are Now Unemployed

WASHINGTON, Nov. 4.—At least 350,000 Armenian and Russian refugees are unemployed, according to statistics gathered by a commission of the league of nations and reported to the state department from Geneva. The total number of refugees from these countries now in Europe is estimated to be 1,5000,000.

At an inter-governmental conference last May a form of refugee passport was adopted in place of the more cumbersome forms previously used, and $500,000 was declared to be necessary as a fund with which to assist in the migration of these people. Self-supporting refugees are to be taxed $1 a year to create this fund. Twenty-two countries signed the pact.

To date 46 governments have ratified it with reference to Russian refugees, and 35 with reference to Armenians.

Paterson, Near Area of Strike, Agog at Picture of Passaic

PATERSON, Nov. 3.—Interest, bordering on excitement, has been aroused here by the announcement of the intended showing of the seven-reel motion picture of the Passaic textile strike in this city on Wednesday night, November 17. According to present plans, the presentation will be given in the East Side High School.

Because of Paterson's proximity to the city of Passaic, center of the struggle of the workers for a 5% living wage, the entire population is deeply interested in the big strike now in its tenth month in that city. Paterson's leading newspapers and citizens have repeatedly espoused the cause of the strikers, and the picture is sure to have a large and sympathetic audience.

Britain Builds Gold Barrier Against U. S.

terfere with Britain's schemes to thwart the United States.

Brains of Scheme.

Montagu Norman, governor of the Bank of England, is credited with being the brains of the scheme. The general strike prevented the plan from going into effect already. The movement dates from the Genoa economic conference in 1921, when the Bank of England was handed the leadership in the crusade.

It is reported that British banks are considering favorably the granting of a $150,000,000 thirty-year loan to the Soviet Union.

THE RUSSIAN WORKERS HAVE GIVEN $4,000,000 TO HELP THE BRITISH MINERS—MORE ON THE W

By LELAND OLDS, Federated Press.

This week the Russian Soviet Union reaches its 9th milestone and the British miners carry on into the 7th month of their great strike to save their union. These two events are united by a bond of interest, although the miners are not revolutionists but trade unionists defending themselves against great odds. Russian trade unionists alone have adequately recognized the importance of supporting the greatest British union against the onslaught of the employing class.

The latest trade union bulletin from Russia reports nearly $4,000,000 sent by Russian workers to fill the depleted war chest of the British union. The flow of fraternal contributions will continue, for the Russian trade union movement is sending 1% of its wages so long as the British coal strike continues.

As a result bankers, coal operators, manufacturers, landlords and press magnates united have failed to starve the British workers into submission. The capitalist offensive to establish slave wages throughout industry has been held up at the start.

Such a demonstration shows that the growing strength of Russian labor

SYNDICALIST LAW IN CALIFORNIA RAPPED BY I. L. D.

Palo Alto Times Also for Repeal

PALO ALTO, Cal., Oct. 28.—California's criminal syndicalism law was given a scathing arraignment at a meeting here under the auspices of the Palo Alto Housewives' Union in Russell cafeteria by Edgar Owens, organizer for International Labor Defense.

Reviews History.

The speaker reviewed the history of the labor defense organization and summarized the development of suppressive labor legislation during and since the world war, and outlined the program of International Labor Defense in California for the repeal of the criminal syndicalism law and the release of all of the war prisoners.

Babbit Protests.

The announcement of the meeting appeared in the Palo Alto Times. One of the Times' readers, signing himself "Law Respecter," sent a communication to the Times forum denouncing the meeting and calling on the good people of Palo Alto to prevent it. In his letter he stated that he "had not read the text of the criminal syndicalism law, but had been told that it was against the radicals and the I. W. W. and therefore must be a good law."

A member of the Housewives' Union took "Law Respecter" to a beautiful cleaning, which led the editor of the Palo Alto Times to devote more than a column editorial in commenting on the criminal syndicalism law and wherein he declared that "the Times shares the view that the criminal syndicalism law of the state should be either repealed or revised in order to prevent injustices that have been committed thru its enforcement."

Must Work 12 Hours for Construction Co. at Jamestown, N. Y.

By ALBERT ESTES
(Worker Correspondent)

JAMESTOWN, N. Y., Nov. 3.—Building laborers who work for the Warren Construction company here must work 12 hours a day for straight time or lose their job.

A worker who starts at 6 a. m., and who wishes to quit at 3 or 4 p. m., is told by the slave-driver to stay until 6, or "get his time."

A committee from the Laborers' union who went there to get them into the union, was told by some of the workers that they would have to ask the boss before they could join. No doubt, the slave-driver told them not to join a union if they wished to hold their jobs. This is the condition that exists at the Art Metal plant, where they are building an addition.

secret or republican. Those are happy days for the American ruling classes.

AMERICAN capitalism like the Coolidge myth will have its day. Not so long ago the British empire looked rather stable. Today it is slipping rapidly into the historical abyss. So we see the British working class yearly growing in strength and in militancy. We see a general strike, the biggest of its kind in labor history. A few days ago elections to the borough councils gave labor an increased representation of about 150 over the previous elections. Every social system bears within itself the germs of its own decay. This has been stated hundreds of thousands of times, but it cannot be said too often.

WHILE the American working class were kidding themselves by voting for capitalist candidates the fifteenth congress of the Communist Party of the Soviet Union was taking place in the Kremlin, one of the many palaces of the czars. Now the czars are no more and all his palaces are at the disposal of the workers and peasants. Yet in 1914 the czar was sitting pretty, in one of the 1,157 rooms in the Winter Palace at St. Petersburg (now Leningrad) and it took faith born of conviction on the part of the Russian revolutionists to persevere in the struggle.

THERE is nothing in life as constant as change. Workers, smoking cigarettes, now saunter thru the gorgeous rooms of the Winter Palace in Leningrad and thru the Kremlin in Moscow, where once the flower of the Russian nobility amused themselves. Today the remnants of this nobility are scattered all over the world, many of them not knowing where the next meal is coming from. And the work and peasants they once trusted like dogs are governing one-sixth of the earth's surface and doing the job well.

WHILE everything is quiet and beautifully peaceful in the Soviet Union, the same cannot be said of Italy, where another but a different kind of dictatorship prevails. We made a mistake in The DAILY WORKER a few days ago when we had it that the last attempt on Mussolini's life was the fifth. It was the sixth, but that does not matter much, in all probability Mussolini will have to hire a special accountant to keep tally if the marksmen continue to miss the mark. Tho many attempts on the dictator's life and the bloodshed which is so normal in the Italy of today show that a cancer is eating at the country's heart, and its name is fascism.

THE latest reports from Italy inform us that severe battles are taking place between the fascists and their opponents. Many were killed, among the dead being several black shirts. Mussolini is now convinced that the fascist ranks are honeycombed with members bent on having his life at all costs. Mussolini has inaugurated a new reign of terror against the masses. Perhaps Mussolini will be able to survive the present crisis, a dictatorship of the few over many is bound to fall.

AS we expected, the masses were impressed much by the alleged resignation. It is very doubtful if Frank L. Smith was seriously hurt by the adverse publicity he received thru his acceptance of the money. Capitalism is a corruptible game that has reached down to the workers. There are six-month cases going on around them that they have accepted it is a normal condition. "I'll get mine any way I can, if I get away with it." This sentiment often expressed epitomizes the whole standard of life under capitalism. So, when one is caught with the goods on the ground and received graft, there is a general raising of the eyebrows, as much as to say "He's sore because he did not get his."

AS far as Cook county is concerned, there was a tribute to organized graft, personal politics and honest to goodness deals. The alliances were so complicated that an attempt to unravel them almost makes one dizzy for a review. Now for a two-party system, with the Democrats running for president of the United States, won by a two-to-one majority, Patrick Carr, democrat, running for sheriff won by a 117,000 majority. Denison faction of the G. O. P. was for Harrett, but knifed Joseph Savage, another Crowe pet. Thus it goes. Those local leaders compare unfavorably with Chinese tuchuns, whose chances their allegiance with much more reluctance than they change their underwear.

THE leaders of the American labor movement are screaming like frightened hens in a barnyard because the International Labor Defense, of which Eugene V. Debs was an executive member, organized a nation-wide campaign to tell the story of the real facts in the workers and the pacifist caricatures that the labor fakers and the ministers of failures of the socialist party make him out to be. The workers Communist Party statement points out facts was always long-reached with the Hillquit gang. While Hillquit favored the Red Cross and the league of nations, he was bitterly opposed to the enactment of capitalist imperialism.

OF all the carrion crows that ever made a row croaking over Debs' grave, Rev. Norman Thomas is the most nauseating. Thomas would turn Debs into a democrat. "Gene was a Debs was almost a romantic believer in democracy" says Thomas. It was a pity Debs devoted so much time to democracy as we know, Debs never bothered very much about freedom in general. He was concerned only with the freedom of oppressed peoples. Those being a prerequisite to the natural genius of all classes, and being a socialist preacher he believes that the capitalists to be the greater sinners and starvation could. From such as he may the shades of Marx and Lenin save the memory of Debs.

...KERS' SCHOOL ...ES COURSE IN ...RTY FUNCTIONS

...ganization Methods and Problems

NEW YORK, Nov. 4.—The most ...ant course offered by the New ...Workers' School this year is ... course in "Organization Methods ... problems," with Jack Stachel as ...ructor. This course is regarded ... of prime importance by the school ... it aims to train party func...aries in the technique of organiza... to give them an understanding ... the basic theoretical considerations ... planning for organization methods; and ... raise the general organizational ...vel of the party by the proper train... of its actual and prospective func...aries.

Party Work For Graduates.

Those completing this course with satisfactory record and having sufficient general training as well, will be selected by the party for assignment to organizational posts in New York or other parts of the country. No one is admitted to the class who has not already had the equivalent of a Fundamentals of Communism course, unless the two courses are taken simultaneously. Applicants for admission must also demonstrate that they are active members of the Workers (Communist) Party.

Outline of Course.

This course will deal with the following problems:

1. Relation between Organization and Politics. 2. Principles of Party organization. 3. Reorganization of the party. 4. Fractions in Non-Party Organizations. 5. Functions of the different organs of the party—C. E. C, D. C. C., Section, Sub-Section, etc. 6. Work of the different offices and departments. 7. Work in the shops, sale of literature, shop committees, shop papers. 8. Recruiting new members and leaders for the party press. 9. How to run meetings, conferences, conventions, etc. 10. How to finance the party. 11. How to keep records, bookkeeping, control of party membership and activity.

Tuesday Nights.

The course is offered for Tuesday evenings from 8 to 9:15. It will begin on Tuesday, November 16. All units, fractions, sections and language bureaus are urged to assign their active comrades as functionaries to take the course in "Organization Methods and Problems." Register at the Workers' School, 108 E. 14th St., 108 East 14th St., any afternoon or evening. Do it today.

We will send sample copies of The DAILY WORKER to your friends—just send us name and address.

DUNN TEACHES CLASS IN NEW BOSS TACTICS

Schemes of Employers to Be Analyzed

NEW YORK, Nov. 4.—The problems of class collaboration, of company unionism, of employes stock ownership, of industrial group insurance and pension plans, company magazines and clubs, profit-sharing bonuses, speed-up systems, the black list, the open shop and the labor spy—these are the vital problems affecting the American labor movement today and presenting new difficulties to it.

Dunn Is Instructor.

The Workers' School of New York is making an important contribution to the solution of these problems and to the training of a new and better leadership for the American labor movement by having secured the man who is probably the foremost authority in America on most of these matters, namely Robert W. Dunn, to give a course entitled "New Tactics of Employers" on Wednesdays from 8 to 9:15 p. m.

This is a course of only six sessions (a month and a half) and a special fee of $2 is charged for the same.

Unions are specially urged to select one or more of their officials and members of their executive board to send them to the Workers' School to take this important course.

Has the Facts.

Robert W. Dunn is the author of various studies on the labor spy, the company union and other of the matters taken up in the course. He is also giving a course for the Workers' School dealing with imperialism and the place of the United States in international relations. This course is entitled "American Foreign Investments" It will begin in the spring term. Robert W. Dunn is the author of a book recently published by B. W. Huebach under the same title.

A description of these and other courses offered at the Workers' School can be secured free by sending for the printed catalog to Bertram D. Wolfe, director, 108 E. 14th street, New York City.

Reconstruction Work.

MOSCOW, Nov. 4.—The work of reconstruction is going on with persistent energy. At the regional congress of directors and engineers of metallurgic industry in Leningrad it was reported of a project to build in the near future several factories, including two factories of agricultural machinery in Rostov and Kama, railway carriage workshops in Nijni Tagil, tractor factory in Stalingrad, metallurgic workshops in Ekiva Rog and Kursetsk, textile machinery factories in Zlatoust, and others.

Terrific Great Lakes Gale.

CLEVELAND, O., Nov. 2. The Great Lakes today were being lashed by a 70-mile gale which had caused the wreck of one steamer prevented three others from reaching port here and damaged property along the shores near here.

Pittsburgh Workers Invited to Attend Anniversary Event

PITTSBURGH, Nov. 4.—The Pittsburgh celebration of the ninth anniversary of the Russian revolution will be held at the Labor Lyceum, 35 Miller street, Sunday, Nov. 7, at 8 p. m.

The program will begin with the singing of the International.

The program includes: Violin solo by John Doyle, accompanied by Kato Doyle; piano solo by Kato Doyle; piano selections by Professor Harry Tanashill; recitations by A. Gusakoff in Russian.

Speakers include L. H. Keith of the American Negro Labor Congress, Julius Bucko, D. E. Earley and speakers in other languages.

With every year that passes the importance of the Russian revolution to the workers of other countries is more clearly shown. Russia stands out as the beacon light pointing the way that must be followed by the workers of the entire world.

Every worker in and around Pittsburgh should attend this meeting and join in the celebration of the ninth anniversary of the Russian revolution, which establishes the rule of the workers over one-eighth of the earth.

Visitors Invited to Street Nucleus Meet

Members of Street Nucleus, No. 25, District 8, invite all readers of The DAILY WORKER in Chicago to attend their social meeting on Tuesday evening, Nov. 9, in order to become acquainted. The meeting is held at 4658 North Crawford avenue.

Communists CAN Do It, and WILL Do It!

AMERICAN labor stands before a great crisis. From all directions attacks are being launched against the workers, their organizations and institutions.

American capitalism grows daily stronger. With increasing brutality and brasenness the small ruling class holds and wields the power of government to supplement their economic exploitation and oppression of the workers.

Stands Alone.

Only the Communist Party stands today in open defiance of the power of capitalism. Pledging and declaring that the rule of the few who possess all wealth and power must go, that the workers must and will secure power.

Cynics Sneer.

Some there are who are cynical. Some there are who are made skeptical by their cowardice. "It is too hard. it can't bo done, we might as well be practical and realize that we are biting off more than we can chew."

This is the view of those who, standing outside of the Party, pretend to be better able than we to see the difficulties in our way to the final goal of the Communist Party and to our immediate aims.

Can't Do It.

From such as these comes the advice: You can't support The DAILY WORKER—why try?

And indeed they cannot see how we can succeed in keeping the DAILY, for they themselves are too spineless to be capable of the determination and sacrifice necessary if we are to preserve our most valuable weapon, The DAILY WORKER.

Nor has it been the privilege of these impossibilists to witness the meetings where our comrades have come together to consider the ways and means of contributing to the safeguarding of their DAILY.

Had they seen how workers who have difficulty in maintaining themselves on the starvation wages which they are forced to work for, borrow money to be paid up in the coming months from their sacrifices of meals, and other necessities. If some of these "practical" people were to see with what courage these workers give their $5 and $10 contributions to keep The DAILY WORKER for the American working class, they would indeed realize that the Communists cannot indeed do miracles, but those things which can be done by determination, courage and sacrifice.

Let Them See.

Let these sceptics come to Syracuse, where in a little meeting of eight workers, forty-seven dollars are raised in a few minutes, where a worker for the first time, unemployed, because he has lost an arm in the struggle to wrest a living from a demon-driven machine, gives $5.

Let them come to Endicott, where a worker who slaves for the honevoleut George F Johnson and $12 per week, starts off the collection for The DAILY with a contribution of $15 and another worker who has to support nine children on $18 a week makes also a contribution to support his paper, and he will see that difficult tho it may be:

The Communists can do it!
The Communists will do it!
We will keep The DAILY WORKER!

ATHEISTS FIRMER "GAL" TO THANK GOD SOONER THAN HE HAD EXPECTED

NEW YORK, Nov. 4.—That the American Association for the Advancement of Atheism scared President Coolidge into issuing his annual religious Thanksgiving proclamation several weeks earlier than he had planned, is the opinion here. On October 30, the association sent a telegram to Coolidge asailing upon him to refrain from issuing such a proclamation. The same day the president received the telegram the proclamation was released. Usually it is not released until after the first week of November, at least.

The telegram, signed by Freemen Hopwood, said in part: "The Atheists in America call on you to return to the precedent of Thomas Jefferson, who, during his eight years' incumbency of office as Chief Executive, refused to issue a single religious proclamation. When asked for his reasons, Jefferson said, 'I consider the president of the United States as interdicted by the constitution from meddling with religious institutions, their doctrinism discipline, or exercises.'"

British Restrict Rubber Export to Maintain Prices

LONDON, Nov. 4.—British exports of rubber will be reduced one-fifth the amount produced because of the recent slump in price. This action was taken by the government under the Stevenson plan of restriction, because the average price of rubber per pound during the three months ending Oct. 31 was under 42 cents a pound.

If the base price has been equalled rubber growers would have received licenses to export all they produced, but not under existing conditions

WITH THE YOUNG WORKERS

CONDUCTED BY THE YOUNG WORKERS LEAGUE

YOUNG MINERS WANT RECOGNITION!

By AUGUST VALENTINE

THE recent statement of the Ohio Coal Operators Association that its members would reopen their long closed mines under the observance of "a broad labor policy" is but another link in the chain of the open shop drive of the coal barons in their attempt to wreck the United Mine Workers of America.

Thruout the Ohio fields there are countless mines which have been closed down for many months and years. Prior to their closing these mines operated under the terms of the Jacksonville agreement signed between the Operators and the "representatives" of the United Mine Workers of America in 1924. Since that time many Ohio operators have openly repudiated the contract and have attempted to reopen the open shop under the "1917" scale. The bosses have smashed the union completely in the Pomeroy Bend region and in other places thruout southern Ohio coal fields.

Reactionaries Lose Ground.

Thruout the nation, in practically every coal producing state and locality, excepts of the anthracite territory, the bosses, in collaboration with the reactionary leaders of the United Mine Workers of America, have waged an onslaught against the union. In the states of Virginia, Kentucky, Tennessee, Alabama, Colorado, Texas, Washington, the United Mine Workers of America has disappeared entirely in the immense coal producing state of West Virginia, after a two-year "organizing campaign" the U. M. W. of A. boasts of six local unions.

At one time the union had some 50,000 members in this state in western Pennsylvania, which had 50,000 members, today there is no more than about 10,000, and these constantly locked out, on strike or working part time, or in other words, battling for existence. In District 2, central Pennsylvania, some 20,000 members have been lost. In Nova Scotia and Alberta, on the Canadian side, the U. M. W. of A. is practically a thing of the past. In the Illinois district, 100,000 were listed, but for the past several years 50,000 are due paying dues, payments in no way are a barometer for plenty work, etc., for a miner must work only five days per month to be checked union dues.

The foraging proves that the union faces a crisis of no little magnitude. The Jacksonville agreement expires in the spring of 1927. While the operators concede to recognize the skeleton of the once-mighty U. M. W. of A.? The union is in danger that none can deny. The union must be built from the bottom thru the united front of the coal operators and the betraying officialdom of the U. M. W. of A., the kind of Frank Farrington, for years president of the Illinois miners who sold out to the coal companies and Robert Marshall, sub-district president of the Hocking Valley miners (Ohio), exposed as another agent of the operators while in the employ of the union. There are many more Farringtons and Marshalls still in prominent positions in the union, and those must be weeded out before a change in the situation can be brot about.

Young Miners.

The first to feel the brunt of this situation in the mining regions are the young miners. Thruout the bituminous area the young miners, together with the old, have fought well, but operator and union official combined whipped them.

The issue comes to a showdown soon. The international elections will soon be held and the miners, young and old, will write their decision if their union is to be wrecked irreparably or to be saved. The youth have nothing to hope for from the Lewis administration. The organized youth in the mines know that the Lewis administration has ruthlessly expelled the leading youth elements in the U. M. W. of A. for no other reason than that the youth opposition challened the right of the administration to wreck the miners' organization. In practically every convention of the United Mine Workers of America there appear youth delegates bent upon fighting in the convention for changes in the organization's law or policies affecting the youth. No attention is paid to the issues of the youth, and their representatives are steam-rollered by the machine in power.

Reinstate Youth.

No attention is paid by the machine to the youth miners, this very large section of the miners. It is from this element that the future leadership of the union comes, but the machine hangs on, and on, bent upon smashing anyone who opposes their reticent policies. The union is in danger of extinction. The youth shall not permit this. In the coming election the youth must wreck the Lewis machine and sweep into office the opposition ticket in the election. The opposition ticket, notwithstanding its many differences of opinion, will fight for the organization of the youth in the unorganized regions and the proper recognition of the youth in the organized territory. The opposition is pledged to fight for the reinstatement of all expelled militants, expelled by the Lewis machine, and among those of the expelled are three of the youth leaders.

The United Mine Workers of America must be democratized. The hawkeye censorship maintained over the U. M. W. of A. Journal, official publication of the union, must be eliminated and freedom of expression of the rank and file permitted thru the columns. More than that, the union must provide for a youth section in this Journal.

Haverhill Workers Enthused Over Film of Passaic Strike

By FRED E. BEAL.

HAVERHILL, Mass., Nov. 4.—Workers of this city packed the Lafayette Theater last night and tonight to see the first strike ever filmed, "The Passaic Textile Strike."

The Shoe Workers Protective Union is the dominant union of this city, with a membership of around 10,000 dues-paying members. A committee of Passaic strikers visited every local of this union as well as the A. F. of L. unions and told of the great struggles the Passaic strikers are putting up for the right to organize and gain better living conditions. The strike picture was described to them and every workers urged to attend.

The seven-reel strike picture was shown six times in the two days, along with a stirred picture called "Harry Mary;" two comedys and a "Weekly News." A slide was thrown on the screen asking the workers to donate shoes and clothing.

Passaic Strike Film Shows Again in Ohio

CLEVELAND, Nov. 4.—The successful showing of the Passaic strike film at the Engineers' Auditorium has induced the showing of the film once more. It will be presented on Sunday, Nov. 7, at 10 a. m. at the Polonia Theater, Broadway and 71st street. Every worker should see it, for he will witness one of the most inspiring events in the labor movement in modern times in this country.

ACTION NEEDED IN CLEVELAND ON OPEN SHOP

Labor Faces Serious Problem

By a Worker Correspondent

CLEVELAND, Nov. 4.—Sixty union leaders, comprising some of the Cleveland Federation of Labor and officials of locals, have been cited for contempt for refusing to order back to work the 600 building workers who have been off the job since Sept. 20.

Won't Work with Scabs.

Since the termination of the strike of the painters and glaziers, four non-union glaziers have been doing work on the Ohio Bell Telephone building. The union workers refused to work with the scabs and left their jobs. The court ordered the union officials to return the men to their jobs. Their rejoinder was that they had not ordered the men off and therefore could not order them to return. A meeting, however, was called, where the men overwhelmingly refused to go back to work, regardless of what the union officials might say.

Imported Judge.

Thereupon a judge from out of town was brought to Cleveland to hear the charge of the contractors against the union officials. Sixty of the officials were cited for contempt and a date set for the hearing.

A new development has now taken place. The non-union glaziers have brought action in the federal court before the "well-known" Judge Westenhaver on the grounds that they have individual contracts with the contractors and that they are being "molested, intimidated and prevented from working on construction jobs in Cleveland."

The non-union men claim that the union leaders threaten to call other strikes than the one on the Ohio Bell Telephone building.

Important Issue.

It is apparent that the non-union glaziers are the means whereby the contractors, the so-called "citizens' league" and the chamber of commerce hope to be able to break the hold of union labor on the building trade of this city. This battle is one of the most important that has taken place in Cleveland. If the court should decide that union men are interfering with the work of non-union men it will foreshadow a desperate attempt of the contractors and chamber of commerce to introduce the open shop and thus destroy the trade union movement.

Need Action.

The local leaders will have to wake up. This is a most serious situation for all organized labor in this city. If this case is won by the contractors and the non-union glaziers, a procedure will have been established whereby, by entering into individual written contracts with non-union men and demanding the support of the courts, contractors will be able to bring into the city hordes of scabs. This can and will happen, provided the trade union membership of the city does not immediately taken action to also fight the case outside the court, provided it does not mobilize its forces and build up the trade unions generally.

Spring Strike Looms.

The likelihood of a general strike in the spring makes the case more acute. The building trades workers know that the calling off of the painters' and glaziers' strike was not a settlement, but a truce.

The building workers face the probability of a general strike, and yet nothing has been done to get the trade union movement organized and prepared for the struggle.

The rank and file of the trade unions must demand action. This action must be, it is suggested, to form a "committee of action" composed equally of the officialdom and of the rank and file of the unions. This committee must be authorized to take immediate steps to mobilize all resources for the fight. It will not pay to wait till spring. The $5,000,000 of the citizens' league may or may not be a reality yet, but there is no question that it will be a simple matter for the people in the league to raise that amount, or twice that amount.

The open shop is the aim of these people and they will go to any lengths in order to get it.

"The pen is mightier than the sword," so you know how to use it. Come down and learn how in the worker correspondent's classes

A SKTECH IN CUSTOM TAILORING

By M. PERLIN
(Worker Correspondent)

MAX SMUCLER, a young man of about 27, is a custom tailor. He worked seven years for Ben Rosner, 219 South Dearborn street, Room 512. The room is 8 feet wide and 12 feet long. In this small room he worked with four others, three men and one woman. On the sunniest day, they work by electric light. When Max once suggested to his boss that it would be advisable for him to move into a more spacious room, on account of it being too crowded, and that if he was there much longer he would be sick, the boss told him that he would rather lose his best worker than have bigger expenses.

That is an illustration of what unorganized labor does.

In this same place there is a woman, of about 40, whose name is Mrs. Shiden. She always tells the other workers that they should have pity on the boss. Many times she gave a few dollars of her $17 pay back to the boss, remarking that she wasn't like the rest of the workers. She had sympathy with him. And the boss, taking her few dollars, told her with a smile that she was a very good woman.

Later the same Max was working for G. Askerow, 106 Dearborn street. This is also a custom tailoring shop. There are 18 workers employed there, of which 17 are foreigners and one is an American-born. The American is Mr. Arnberg. He is a very loyal slave. He works 58 hours a week for $22. If sometimes he hears the workers talking among themselves about shorter hours and bigger wages, the "wise" Mr. Arnberg begins to tell: "You are socialists, Communists, Bolsheviks, robbers, etc. If a man wants to work up you won't fet him!" The boss likes Arnberg very much.

If the workers ask for a raise, Mr. Askerow tells them that the foreigners aren't of any use, that they are a bunch of trouble-makers, and that the best thing is to have American workers.

POLICE HELP IN DISTRIBUTION OF "FORD EDITION"

Kearney Workers Eager to Read Daily

By a Worker Correspondent

NEWARK, N. J., Nov. 4.—Last week a comrade of the Young Workers' League and I went over to Kearney to distribute the Ford issue of The DAILY WORKER. At 4 o'clock, just as we were crossing the Passaic river bridge, we saw a stream of workers walking out of the enormous plant.

The factory is in the meadows far away from any houses. We immediately made our headquarters on the bridge (we were half in Newark and half in Kearney) and distributed the papers to the workers as they passed by.

Workers Interested.

The name, DAILY WORKER, attracted much attention and the workers stopped in their tracks for the bus to read the article on the front page about their "own shop."

"Good stuff. They know what they are talking about," were some of the comments of the workers. One of them told us to wait, as more workers were to come out.

Police Help.

As we waited one of the two cops who were stationed in front of the plant came over to us and asked what we were giving out. He apparently had never heard of The DAILY WORKER, but he took one and soon came back to us.

"There are some workers going the other way," he said. He took a few from us and soon we saw the Kearney police force giving out The DAILY WORKER. When he finished he came to us and spoke about the summer uniforms they still had to wear on the cold days, which are much colder where he stands because of the river.

There were many workers who came out in the last shift, and they expressed their regret at not receiving a copy.

All Are Read.

We rode home with some of Henry's slaves and everyone that did not fall asleep from fatigue was reading The DAILY WORKER. Not one was thrown away. Such lifeless people I had never seen, hollow cheeks and expressionless looks in their faded eyes. But we brightened their eyes quickly, for The DAILY WORKER pointed out Henry's scheme to make slaves out of them.

PASSAIC IS NOT STRANGE CASE, SAYS WEISBORD

Conditions Typical All Thru Nation

By a Worker Correspondent

PERTH AMBOY, N. J., Nov. 4.—An enthusiastic and large crowd heard Comrade Albert Weisbord, leader of the Passaic strike, at the mass meeting arranged by the party. In introducing Weisbord, the Chairman told how they were refused a permit to issue leaflets if Weisbord was to speak, but later the permit was issued after a fight was threatened. But they were not allowed to distribute the leaflets in the factories.

Not Single Instance.

Weisbord emphasized the fact that Passaic is not an isolated instance of poor economic and social conditions, but as a matter of fact, the same conditions of long hours, poor sanitation, and low wages prevail all thru the country. Passaic, he said, was well known because of the strike.

Passaic is a wonderful example of the awakening of the American workingclass masses, he pointed out. No longer will the workers be willing to be slaves. Now at last they are ready to fight.

W. P. in Front Line.

It is equally clear, he said, that the Workers (Communist) Party not only talks, but fights in the front line of every struggle. Its leaders are not afraid of the bosses, no matter what terrors are imposed upon them. He closed by calling upon all workers who are ready to fight for their class interests to join the Workers (Communist) Party of America.

One worker asked Weisbord if he would be willing to help them in case of a struggle in Perth Amboy. His answer was characteristic. Not only will he help them in their struggle, but he will also be ready to help them in the preparation for the struggle.

TRY TO BREAK UP MEETING IN BROWNSVILLE, PA.

Grafting Cops Trump Up Charge

By a Worker Correspondent.

BROWNSVILLE, Pa., Nov. 4.— An attempt was made to break up the political campaign meeting held here by the Workers (Communist) Party, which was addressed by H. C. Wicks, candidate for governor of Pennsylvania. The chairman of the meeting, A. Rodriguez, was fined $10 and costs. The charge that was trumped up against the workers was that an American flag was not displayed, according to law.

Cops Unsuccessful.

The cops were unsuccessful, however, in stopping the meeting, for the crowd waited until the chairman and speaker had come back from police headquarters and the meeting was resumed.

Constable Linn, known as a notorious petty grafter here, led the officers' raid on the hall. Brownsville is notorious for its bootlegging establishments and houses of corruption under the regime of Linn. It seems he is active only in denying rights to the workers.

Police for Underworld.

Linn and his gang of deputies, who are recruited from the red light districts and underworlds of other cities were attacked at the meeting by the speakers, and this is one of the reasons the raid was made. Another reason is that Vare, the republican senatorial candidate, was also attacked.

The Brownsville Telegraph came out with its usual lines on the case, in order to antagonize the Brownsville workers against the Workers (Communist) Party.

HUGE PROFIT REVEALED BY REPORT ISSUED BY DU PONT DE NEMOURS CO.

Huge profits made by the E. I. Du Pont de Nemours and company are revealed in a quarterly statement issued, the first in recent years. The statement shows that the total income for the three months ending Sept. 30, 1926, was $13,674,874. After deducting taxes and interest on funded debt, the net income was $12,497,856.

Dividends on debenture stock amounted to $1,183,907, leaving more than $12,000,000 for common stock holders. This is equal to $9.21 a share, compared to $4.74 per share for the quarter ending Sept. 30, 1925, and $1.93 per share for the quarter ending Sept. 30, 1924.

The company has a huge amount of money invested in General Motors. Surplus at the end of the quarter amounts to more than $70,000,000, an increase of $8,000,000 this year.

NEGRO WORKERS SHANGHAIED IN STATE OF TEXAS

Labor Bootleggers Put In Appearance

AUSTIN, Tex., Nov. 4.—Blackbirding and peonage is being practiced in the handling of cotton pickers in Texas, E. J. Croker, labor commissioner, charged in a statement on Wednesday.

One man has been fined and six others are under heavy bond as a result of the activity of the labor department, which is seeking to end the practice, Commissioner Croker said.

Held Up Men.

"The facts are that there are a number of men who own large trucks who await cotton pickers on highways going out of San Antonio and other labor centers and offer the pickers a bonus and free transportation to go with them to some fictitious plantation they own to pick cotton for them, thus evading the private employment agency law. The cotton pickers barter accepted terms, are taken to some distant point outside of a town and there go into camp.

Auctioning Them Off.

"The would-be employer leaves them under guard and finds farmers who need cotton pickers. He enters into negotiations for the sale of the cotton pickers at as much a head, often $5, depending, of course, on how bad the farmer wants his cotton picked. Often the labor bootlegger comes back and gets the same bunch of pickers before the cotton picking is completed and by offering further bonuses, takes them on to some other place and sells them again, getting another $5 a head for them.

Labor Bootleggers.

"In five days the forces of the labor department have captured nine of these labor bootleggers. One was fined $500 and costs on Tuesday, and five others are under heavy bond awaiting trial before various county courts. If we can get the judges to fine them the maximum, I believe, with the co-operation of the sheriffs in the various counties, we can break up this nefarious practice of bleeding our farmers."—Pittsburgh Courier.

Want I. W. W. Barred From U. S. Vessels Board Asked to Act

GALVESTON, Tex., Nov. 4.—M. E. Shay of the Galveston Labor Council and Alex Thrash, business agent of the International Seamen's union local here, appeared at the hearing of the United Shipping Board in Galveston and pleaded that members of the I. W. W be prevented from manning shipping board vessels.

The I. W. W. is a menace of American shipping, the two gentlemen said.

Oil A NEW NOVEL Upton Sinclair

(Copyright, 1926, by Upton Sinclair)

"Yes, and they will do the same thing in California!" cried the other brother. "You are a bunch of class-collaborators!" That was a new word, and a dreadful one, it appeared. The question was whether the tottering capitalist system could be propped up for another ten years or so; and the "right-wingers" would take office under the capitalists, and help to save them. "You make yourself their agent," proclaimed Joe Menzies, "to bribe the workers by two cents more wages per hour!"

And so there was a bust-up in Local Angel City, as everywhere else in the world; the "reds" withdrew, and presently split into three different Communist groups; and Joe and Ikey Menzies left home, and set up house-keeping with two girl-workers of their own of thinking. So Bunny was more perplexed than ever; life appeared so complicated, and happiness so hard to find!

III

One Saturday the telephone rang, and it was Vernon Roscoe calling Dad. Bunny happened to answer, and heard the jovial voice, "Hello, how's the boy Bolshevik? Say, Jim Junior, I thought you were coming up to my place! Eventually—why not now? Annabelle is resting from 'Pangs of Passion'—she'll be glad to see you. Vee Tracy is there, and Harvey Manning—quite a bunch of people over Sunday. Sure, I'll be up! You go ahead, your old man will tell you the way."

Bunny told Dad he had accepted the invitation, and Dad said that Mr. Roscoe's domestic arrangements were such that Bunny ought to be told about them in advance. Annabelle Ames, the moving picture actress, was what the people called his mistress, but it wasn't really that, because she was devoted to him, and all their friends knew about it, and it was just the same as being married; only, of course, there was Mrs. Roscoe, who lived in the house in the city, with her four sons. Mrs. Roscoe went in for society and all that, and had tried to drag Verne n, but he wasn't cut out for that life. Sometimes Mrs. Roscoe would go out to th emonastery, as the country place was called, but of course not when Miss Ames was there; Dad said they must have some system to keep from running into each other. Miss (A)mes had her own house, near to the studio, and the Monastery was a "show-place," where they took their friends over week-ends.

You drove up behind a chain of mountains that lined the coast: another of those wonderful roads, a magic ribbon of concrete laid out by a giant's hand. The engine purred softly and you raced ahead of the wind, up long slopes and down long slopes, and winding through mazes of hills; there were steep grades and vistas of tumbled mountains, and broad sweeps of valley, and stretches of shore with fishermen's huts, and boats, and nets drying in the sun; then more hills and mountain grades—for hours you flew, as fast as you pleased, for you were twenty-one now, and Dad no longer expected you t oobey the speed-laws.

There was a road that branched off towards the ocean, and after climbing ten miles or so, you came t oa high steel fence, and steel gates, and a sign: "Private: Turn Back Here."—and a wide place in the road, made especially so that you might obey. The gate was open, so Bunny drove on, and climbed another hill, and came over the brow, and then, oh, wonderful—a great bowl of yellow and green, two or three miles across, with one side broken out towards the ocean—and in the center of the bowl the grey stone towers of the Monastery! Mountains on every side, and the oil magnate owned everything in sight, both the land and the landscape; if the public wanted to see his retreat, it would have to get a row-boat or swim.

You came down the winding drive, through tumbled masses of rocks and clumps of live oaks a century or two old, and came to a fork in the road, and one way said "Delivery," and the other said, "Guests." If you were so fortunate as to be a guest, your road led under a porte-cochere big enough for half a dozen double-deckers; a footman appeared, and summoned a chauffeur to take your car to the garage, and you were escorted into a living room—well, it was like going into a cathedral, your eyes would follow the arches overhead, and you might trip yourself on the skin of an aurochs or a gnu or whatever the dickens it was. What grim gothic architect had played this jest of Gothic towers and steeples and crenellations and machicolations—here in the midst of a new pagan empire, and called by such a vrey suggestive name! Assuredly, the onastery would need to be of pre-reformative style, to fit the ways of the monk who occupied it!

The transcept of the cathedral concealed an elevator, Bunny discovered; and out of it tripped suddenly a diminutive vision in lemon-colored chiffon, with lemon-colored stockings and shoes, and a big lemon-colored hat such as shepherdesses used to wear when Mhaving their portraits painted. It was complete and costly, for Bunny was one of that ninety per cent of all males in the civilized world, and perhaps seventy per cent in Madagascar, Paraguay, Nova Zembia, Thibet and New Guinea, who could have told the number of lashes in each of Annabelle Ames's eyelids, or drawn a diagram of her dimples, and the exact course of a tear down her cheek. He had seen her as the "wild" daughter of a Pittsburg steel king, duly chastened and brought to faith in mother, home and heaven; as the mistress of a French king, dying elegantly to expiate elegant sins; as the mistreated and eloping heiress of a Georgian manor-house; as a bare-legged "mountainy-girl" in the Blue Ridge—"Howdy, stranger, be you-all one of them revenooers?" All this fin the "movies"; and now here she was in the "speakies"'

WORKERS WHO PLAN TO JOIN CLASS IN WRITING SHOULD ATTEND TONIGHT

This is to again remind Chicago workers that the class in worker correspondence here opens this Friday night in the editorial office of The DAILY WORKER, 1113 West Washington Blvd.

The meeting is very important and all who intend to join the class in news writing should be there without fail at 8 o'clock. The full course will be outlined at the meeting Friday and suggestions will be asked for from the members of the class, so all are urged to attend in order to express their ideas.

Remember: Friday night, 8 o'clock, 1113 West Washington, Blvd., third floor. Be there, ready to go to work!

PRIZES TO BE OFFERED NEXT WEEK.

Three very splendid prizes will be given for stories sent in by worker correspondents between now and next Thursday that are considered the best examples of worker correspondence of the week. Send in these stories, workers! Here are the prizes:

First, "Left Wing Unionism" by D. J. Saposs. A new book that William Z. Foster advises every trade union rebel to read for its valuable information.

Second, "Flying Oslo," short stories by nine of Russia's leading new writers.

Third, The Workers Monthly, a six-months' subscription to the best workers' magazine.

STRIKE STRATEGY

By WILLIAM Z. FOSTER

ARTICLE VII

In established unions, where the left wing is in a minority or where its control of the official machinery is weak, the fight against the right wing takes on other forms. The general policy of the right wing leadership is to use its control of the union to dampen the fighting spirit of the workers and to sell them out over the conference table. Hence, the policy of the left wing in strikes of organized unions must be to spur on the masses to fight and, by mobilizing them against the reactionary leadership, prevent the latter from betraying them in the settlement.

This policy proved successful in Illinois during the 1922 national strike of the bituminous miners. The union was in a desperate struggle, fighting for a national agreement. And just at the most critical moment, when its very life was at stake, President Farrington of the Illinois union, who has since gone openly into the service of the mine operators, declared that he would make a state agreement for the Illinois miners.

If he had been able to accomplish this it would have broken the strike. But the left wing, by holding a series of mass meetings of strikers throughout the state, so aroused the membership that Farrington could not go through with his betrayal. This saved the entire union from disaster. What would have happened had the left wing in the Illinois miners been afflicted with the "cannot fight on two battlefront" theory?

Mobilizing the Membership

The recent strike of the New York Furriers was another instance of a successful mobilization of the membership by the left leadership to balk a menacing right wing treachery. The local Joint Board which actually conducted the strike was in the hands of the left wing led by Ben Gold. But the machinery of the International was controlled by the right wing. All through the strike the fight was sabotaged by the head of the International, Schactman. Finally, believing his opportunity had arrived to deal a decisive blow, he, in close combination with President Green of the A. F. of L., made a tentative agreement with the employers, the famous "eight points."

But the left wing leadership rejected this agreement, mobilized the strikers against it and carried on the struggle till a much better settlement was arrived at. This was a major defeat for the arch-reactionary, Green. Powerful enemies of his among the upper bureaucracy of the A. F. of L. are now using it against him, claiming that he compromised the A. F. of L. badly by permitting himself to be so badly out-maneuvered by the Communist trade union leader, Gold.

If treacherous strike settlements are special danger points that the left wing strategists must guard against in their fight against the right wing, so also are those situations when the masses are in a state of great foment and the right wing leaders refuse to mobilize them for the struggle.

Cases in point were the failure of the Brotherhood chiefs to strike their aim in common cause with the railroad shop mechanics in 1922; and the failure of Lewis to call out the bituminous miners in 1925 in conjunction with the strike of the anthracite miners. Both these failures, which amounted to treason to the workers, were disastrous. In one case the great shopmen's strike was lost and the backbone of railroad trade unionism broken, and in the other the very life of the Miners' Union has been threatened by the disintegration of its bituminous section.

Forcing the Issue

The left wing strategists must find ways and means to force the hands of the right wing leaders in such critical situations by mobilizing the membership against them. This is a real test of our strike strategy, especially where the left wing has but little organization. In the past, in such instances, there has been too much recourse to the unauthorized, or "outlaw" strike, and, dual unionism.

Sometimes, in especially desperate circumstances, after carefully weighing the situation, the unauthorized mass strike may be used with success, but in American labor experience it has been mostly a failure. In nearly every case where there is sufficient sentiment to call an effective unauthorized strike the same sentiment could be better utilized through the regular union channels to set the organization as such into motion.

A case in point was the so-called outlaw railroad switchmen's strike of 1920, which completely paralyzed the railroads over great sections of the country. There was a tremendous volume of rebellious sentiment behind this ill-fated national struggle. With intelligent left direction the movement could have forced the Brotherhoods officially into action and probably would have driven numbers of the bureaucrats from power. But the leadership of the "outlaws" was afflicted with utopian dual union illusions and the great movement went down in crushing defeat.

In the coming Spring the left wing will have a severe test of its strategy against the right wing in the Miners' Union. Its task will be to force Lewis to call out all the bituminous miners and then to hold them out till a victorious settlement has been secured. At every step in the struggle it will have to defeat the most ruthless and corrupt bureaucracy in the American labor movement, the John L. Lewis machine.

Belated But Welcome

The decision of the special conference of the British Trade Union Congress to impose a voluntary levy of two cents a day on each member affiliated with the congress, in aid of the striking miners, is a welcome tho inadequate and belated move on the part of the reactionary leadership in response to pressure from the masses.

Had even this action been taken from the beginning of the struggle the strike would in all probability be over now because the coal owners and their government would be convinced that the entire trade union movement was with the miners in their struggle. Even at this late date the miners will win because they do not know how to surrender.

The action of the T. U. C. conference fell far short of the demands of the executive of the Miners' Federation, which called for an embargo on imported coal as well as a levy. An embargo would tie up British industry as tight as a drum. It would force the government to put the screws on the operators or risk disaster.

In striking contrast to the failure of the right wing labor leaders of Britain to support the miners financially or otherwise is the splendid response of the workers of the Soviet Union, who have contributed over $4,000,000 already to feed the starving dependents of the heroic miners.

The British miners are not only fighting the battles of the entire British working class but of the workers of the world. American workers should continue their efforts to raise funds. It is to the lasting disgrace of the American trade union movement that only a little over $50,000 has been raised by the A. F. of L. for the British miners. Those capitalist lackeys at the head of the A. F. of L. are too busy laying the keels of battleships and boosting the capitalist military machine to bother with the starving wives and children of the British miners.

All the hysterical anti-red propaganda that may come in the future from the mental cesspools of capitalist scribblers will not be strong enough to convince the British working class that the trade union movement of Soviet Russia, under Communist leadership, is their foe, while that of the United States under capitalist leadership is their friend.

Action has spoken louder than propaganda.

Fascism In The United States

Armed hoodlums, members of the Italian fascist organization in United States, entered the premises of two anti-fascist papers in New York, shortly after news of the latest attempt on Mussolini's life reached this country, and destroyed the printing machinery in both plants, after threatening those on the premises with immediate death if they moved to protect their property.

Surely this is a sample of violence that should suit the most liberal interpreter of what comes within the meaning of whatever New York law covers such conduct. Yet we have not heard that New York police authorities have shown half as much activity in apprehending the fascist gangsters as they once did in arresting a seven-year-old youth for having some Communist literature in his possession.

This outrage committed by the New York fascists should spur the Anti-Fascist Alliance to renewed activity against the Fascist menace in the United States, and to give whatever aid possible to the victims of the bloody black-shirt reign in Italy. The American fascists are armed and boast of their intention to use the same methods in combatting opposition that Mussolini used in Italy. Yet the government of city, state and nation so far have looked on fascist activities with a benevolent eye, an attitude which is in striking contrast to the persecution of even conservative workers who struggle against the employers for higher wages.

The struggle against fascism takes second place to none that we can think of, among the duties that rest upon the shoulders of the class conscious American workers. In the Anti-Fascisti Alliance of North America the workers have a fighting non-partisan organization that has already given a good account of itself in this light and is deserving of support.

The Ninth Victory Celebration

On November 7 of every year since 1917 the class conscious workers of all lands gather to celebrate the first victory in the history of labor that established a workers' and peasants' government on the ruins of capitalist rule.

No worker in whose being burns the divine fire of rebellion against oppression can fail to be thrilled by the knowledge that the red flag of social revolution flies over one-sixth of the earth's surface and that, despite the worst that international capitalism could do, the Soviet Union is today so strong, so powerful, that even the most optimistic of the Union's enmies are giving way to despair.

In hundreds of halls thruout the United States American workers will join their voices to the international chorus in celebration of the ninth anniversary of proletarian victory. But mere clapping of hands and rejoicing is not sufficient. The American workers have their work cut out for them. They have yet to get rid of capitalist government. Therefore it behooves them to take advantage of the enthusiasm that this coming celebration will excite among the workers to prepare for the American 7th of November.

THE DAILY WORKER is the most effective weapon in the arsenal of the American working class in their daily struggles against the employing classes. THE DAILY WORKER is in serious financial difficulties. The proceeds of the November 7 celebrations will go to help THE DAILY WORKER. No better way of celebrating the birth of the first workers' republic in history could be devised than to turn the demonstrations into a great drive to smash the financial fetters that now embarrass THE DAILY WORKER and to give it the necessary guarantee that will enable it to continue the work of organizing the workers of this country for final victory.

Russian Revolution Endured the Fiery Test

The Western Prophets Failed to Calculate on the Bolsheviks in 1917—Why Finland Failed—the Fiery Test of 1917—Critical Moment Approaches in Europe—The Power and Will Are There, October Will be There—Comrades, are You There?

By W. O. KUUSINEN
Member of the Secretariat of the Communist International.

BEFORE the October revolution the best prophets of the western countries looked across to Russia and declared "Anarchy will soon triumph there."

This prophecy was not fulfilled. Order was victorious: the power of organized labor.

And how often since then has Soviet Russia belied the best prophets of the western countries! By the skill with which it has cut the Gordian knot, whether by the sharply whatted sword of theory or by the sword of Alexander the Great.

The western prophets fall into the same error again and again. There is one factor which they invariably forget: the Bolshevik. The rest of their calculations have been very correct.

It is true that General Ludendorff might have captured Petrograd in 1918. But the Bolsheviki concluded the peace of Brest Litovsk. It is true that the first of General Krasnov's troops, or the Czecho-Slovakian legions, might have occupied Moscow—if the Bolsheviki had not organized the Red Army. And the armies of the peasantry might have followed the prophecy of Karl Kautsky, and transformed the proletarian revolution into a temporary and chaotic peasant insurrection, a mere episode in bourgeois evolution, had the Bolsheviki organized no proletarian class struggle in the country.

Bolsheviks Upset Calculations.

THE Bolsheviki, with weapons or tools in their hands, the Bolsheviki with written and spoken word, with diplomatic notes and trade agreements, the Bolsheviki with food taxation and party purges—again and again have arrived on the scene and upset the calculations of the paid prophets of capitalism, from Kautsky to the last Menshevik, from Krasnov to Petlyura and Pilsudski.

This was practically the case in October, 1917.

It has been said that the Bolsheviki had an easy victory at that time. This may be so, but the victory was not so easy that it could have been won without a struggle.

It is true that at that time the objective prerequisites for the proletarian revolution were mature and favorable. No doubt it was easy to see that the Kerensky soap bubble was bound to burst very soon, that the bourgeoisie had more talkers in their constitutional assembly, and no real power, and that every reaction had no more powerful forces at its disposal than a few bandit chiefs of the type of Kornilov.

The Alternatives.

THE victory of the proletarian revolution was therefore possible. And yet it might have failed to come about. Without the Bolsheviki it would undoubtedly have failed to come about. Matters might have turned out very differently: anarchy, or the dictatorship of the white generals, or fresh attempts at a coalition with the bourgeois parliament, or the dismemberment of the country into a multitude of conflicting republics and the dissolution of the proletarian class struggle into a chaos of confused separate struggles in town and country. Any one of these eventualities was historically as possible as the victory of the proletarian revolution.

The Bolsheviki stepped in at the decisive moment and directed the course of history. The moment had not yet arrived when the struggle for power was inevitable. Yet the Bolsheviki intervened. Their struggle, and their leadership of the struggle, converted the possibility of victory into actuality.

The Finnish Example.

THAT this issue was by no means a matter of course may be seen from the object lesson of events in Finland. The Russian October revolution was immediately followed by a revolutionary situation in Finland. General strike. Value but great expectations among the masses of the working people. Parades and drills of the unarmed Red Guards. Long nights of discussion among the party and trade union leaders. Irresolute vacillation for many days and nights. And then the calling off of the general strike.

In these days the victory of the workers' revolution in Finland would have been possible. But the struggle was not absolutely unavoidable and was avoided. There were no Bolsheviki.

A few months later and the position in Finland was reversed. Now the struggle was inevitable, but victory no longer possible.

What Were Bolsheviki in 1917?

WHAT were the Bolsheviki in October, 1917?

An organization. Not such an organization, it need scarcely be said, as they are today. But even at that time they represented a powerful proletarian organization.

A party organization gathered round a central core of tried and tested revolutionists. An organization with the experience of many years of detailed revolutionary work in the factory nuclei, hardened by conspirative party work of every description, schooled by long fractional struggles; trained in the school of revolutionary class war to the natural centralization of a fighting organization, to strictest party discipline and readiness for duty; fired and enlightened by the experience won in the great mass action of 1905 and later; and finally victorious, as leader of the open party struggles of 1917, against the Mensheviki and social revolutionists, in the struggle for the majority in the soldiers' and workers' councils, and for the confidence of the working people and of the army.

The Fiery Test.

THE Bolsheviki have formed an efficient revolutionary workers' party, ever prepared, competent, and tactically elastic. Their leaders have been true Marxists, never imagining themselves to be infallible, and yet never paralyzed by an exaggerated fear of committing mistakes, but rather learning the lesson of past errors.

This has been a party able to emerge with honor from the fiery test of the great change of function in the historical "October Days," the transformation of a political party into the leader of an armed revolutionary struggle—this was the ordeal by fire passed thru by the Bolsheviki. It is true that they did not find the change of function in October, 1917, to be any super-human task. The situation did not demand from them the enormous exertions which have doubtless to be faced by our comrades in the west European countries. The preparations for revolutionary war made by the Bolsheviki in October were by no means so perfect as those of our comrades of western Europe will certainly need to be in order to insure victory. It is possible that the degree of revolutionary fighting readiness possessed by the Bolsheviki some years ago will never again suffice in any capitalist country.

But at that time in Russia it sufficed. The Bolsheviki were the historically adequate instruments of the October Revolution. They were competent to cope with their task. The proof of this is still in their hands.

Europe is Next.

THE same critical moment is approaching in Europe. Victory is possible. Its prerequisites are fermenting and maturing. To us, indeed, the rate of advance appears slow. But in actual fact great things are taking place, week by week, beneath the husk of capitalist society.

The social traitors are the last allies of the capitalist rulers. But a traitor is not an absolutely reliable armor-bearer to his new master, any more than to his old one.

The mere existence of Soviet Russia renders the situation more hopeless than ever in capitalist continental Europe. Deprived of the foodstuffs and raw materials which they once obtained from Russia, and of the Russian markets for their goods, the European capitalists are hard put to obtain their profits. But the revolutionary labor movement, is all the more roused to enthusiasm by the flag of Soviet Russia.

Conflicts in Capitalist Camp.

THE decentralizing nationalism in Europe, supported in part by British imperialism, is forced to defend itself against French efforts at centralization. The greater the progress made by the alliance of extreme sabre-rattlers all over the continent of Europe, the more it calls forth various coalitions among the bourgeois democracy, especially among the oppressed nations. In this way even the rapacity of French capital serves to increase the confusion of capitalist Europe. The devil cannot do otherwise.

With the same necessity by which the earth turns on its axis is the fate of the capitalist countries of Europe hastening towards its next inevitable historical turning point.

Some day the moment will arrive. We shall be at the turning point. The old order totters, the old bonds of society loosen. There will be a cry for the overthrow of the old power, an appeal to the prepared and faithful leaders of the proletarian revolution.

Be Vanquished or Victor.

IT may be that then the struggle will be unavoidable, that history will force the party of the proletariat into it. "Here you must fight, be vanquished or victor!"

This position is the easiest to face. Even death may be easier to a slave than to advance to the fight before an irresistible pressure urges him into it.

It may be that when the time comes Destiny with outstretched finger will say: "Here you can gain the victory. Everything is ready. If only you are ready."

This would be more difficult to face. Are our comrades prepared?

Among the masses of the proletariat all over the world there are hearts beating for the revolution, for the social world revolution set rolling by the Russian proletariat.

The will is there. The power is there. October will be there.

But are the Bolsheviki there?

Comrades in Germany, in France, in England, in Poland, in Austria, in Italy, and, in other countries. Comrades, are you there?

Dinner Pail Epic

By BILL LLOYD, Federated Press.

You folks may think that I'm no guy to write a word of fond good-bye to dear old lovin, foldin 'Gene, who in our ranks no more is seen. But I'll appeal to 'Gene's own love, to say if he's too far above the poorest trick that I can turn to lay a tribute at his urn, to add one leaf to his oak crown, and set this song of sorrow down.

'Gene Debs is gone; a man has passed, whose fiery words and deeds will last long after Woodrow's pittie slumps under the fires of hell's worst dumps), whose zeal shall light the way to man to rise to man's own height again, whose vision of a better day shall rise above his mound of clay.

'Gene gave his love, heart, mind and soul to help us workers win our goal.

Lay down the wreaths and shoulder arms! After I hear class war's alarms,

Visits of Commissions from Other Lands Are Real Experiences for Workers and Peasants, Anna Strong Tells

By ANNA LOUISE STRONG.

LIVADIA, Crimea.—When Germans, English, Dutch, French and all the other labor delegations visit the Soviet Union (there has been a continuous flood of them this summer) they go home and report on what they have seen. But nobody ever reports from the other side—from the folks who saw the delegation. To those also—these Russian workers and peasants—it is a much-prized experience, bringing them into personal touch with their fellow workers of the world.

Visit Sanitarium.

Our sanitarium—to which the German working women came, is No. 2 of the Central Social Insurance, located at Livadia in the grounds of the czar's summer palace in a former hospital for army officers. To it come workers from all over the Soviet Union, but chiefly from the textile mills of Ivanovof, the coal mines of the Donets, the metal mines of the Ural, the metal works of Leningrad. Workers who have injured their lungs in the dust of badly equipped mills and mines; chiefly from the industrial centers, therefore, the raw and then of railroad worker arrives from the far north, where the six months' night of winter has affected his health; but is the sanitarium for the worst cases? more than half our patients have developed infectious tuberculosis. For we have an X-ray, and a laboratory, an electric cabinet and a surgery; patients who do not need these things are sent to other less equipped sanitoria.

ALL the patients in the sanitarium knew that the delegation was coming. Dinner was half an hour early so as to clear the tables for the fifteen German women and their interpreters and escorts. But the ducks were drying and the ice cream melting in the kitchen and bell had long since rung for the "dead hour" after dinner when all good patients go to bed. Yet still the women did not come. We knew that they were lingering in the Peasants' Sanitarium, ten minutes' walk away, in the famous summer palace of the czar, with its gorgeous park and gardens.

One Eager to See Them.

I sat on the driveway among beds of red and golden flowers looking down thru vineyards to the Black Sea. One of the women physicians sat beside me, her eyes wandering alternately down the driveway towards the gate and then back to the balconies of the sleeping rooms. Thru the railings peered multitudinous insubordinate faces, which should have been in bed. "They are like children," said the doctor, smiling. "You wouldn't think they were grown up workers. Yet I can't blame them. This is the first group of foreign women we have seen since the revolution."

SUDDENLY a gaggle rang out from the women's wing of the building, followed by another and another. It was like that at two four rooms were full of laughter. Swiftly the door for went into the sanitarium, returning in a moment with a hardly suppressed mob. The representative of the Lux young patients—prepared her speech. She is scared stiff. She was never met a delegation before."

Patients Organized.

You see, we have organized ourselves into a collective here. For a sanitarium like this we have just a dozen or so physicians. With levels, as it is impossible to know all the patients personally. We have a staff of nurses. There is no deficit. If they [illegible] treatment of the food [illegible] to a better place—if they [illegible] in and hear it if they [illegible] out. But here the work [illegible] Socials. It [illegible] and the [illegible] collect- [illegible] arrived [illegible] organ- [illegible] to See [illegible] their com- [illegible] Thereafter, it [illegible] doctors [illegible] [illegible] about it. And if Germans women's delegations [illegible] but you [illegible] received not only by the management, but, above all, by the general assembly of the patients.

IT is worth noting, however, that no one "dressed up" for the delegation. There were not even clean kerchiefs doled out to the women; the white shapeless sanitarium clothing and what passed by wear, and the black woolen cloaks remained in their everyday condition. But the men's section and the women's section and the young people's section each chose four representatives to make speeches—and these workers, some years ago were suppressed, shot, illiterate even, were thinking over the words of welcome for their distinguished guests. Others were preparing for labor delegations in the Soviet Union, but with clothes, but with speech.

They Come—At Last.

At last arrived the two large autocars, and the delegation proceeded to the chief dining room to wash up for dinner. The doors of a dozen dining rooms [illegible] and the patients poured into the corridors, filling them with curiosity. Between cheering and clapping flies there passes into the dining room a thin line of tired, pleasant, rather dowdy-looking German working women, smiling back at their hosts. Then the doors were closed and the voices of nurses sound in the hall: "Get back to bed, for heaven's sake. You can get a whole hour of rest before they will finish dinner."

IN the living room I sit next to the president of the delegation, a kindly German working woman, for many years a member of the social democratic party of Germany. The German elderly woman beyond her has belonged to a union for 34 years and to the social democratic party for 37 years. One remembers from this how long the workers' movement is in Germany, how much it has seen and endured. Yet now these veteran members are threatened with expulsion and their party for daring to come on this visit to Soviet Russia. They form one-third of the delegation; another third consists of non-partizans and slightly less than a third Communists.

Peasants Are Magnets.

"We couldn't drag ourselves away from peasants' Sanitarium," says the president of the delegation, explaining their interest. "This was our first chance to talk to peasants from all over the Soviet Union, and they were also anxious to talk to us. They wanted us to see what a gorgeous place the czar used to live in, and asked us what we had done with the palaces of our princes. When we told them that we were giving billions of marks to our princes they couldn't understand it. They laughed and hooted joyously. "But what did you have a revolution for, if you gave it all back? As for us, we ourselves sit in the house of Nicholas—"

Two Bakers' Unions Combine for Fight on Baking Monopoly

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, Nov. 4.—Agreeing to refer amalgamation of the two unions to another conference and committee, representatives of locals from the International Bakers and Confectionery Workers' Union and from the Amalgamated Food Workers met in a joint conference and chose a joint committee of five from each side to plan an intensive organization drive and campaign against the bread trust. The committee, chosen in drafting suitable literature, leaflets, etc., and may call a mass meeting to inaugurate a real fight on the growing, powerful bread trust begun by Ward baking interests.

The Independent Amalgamated locals have a somewhat different conception of organization work, tactics, shop control, contracts, jurisdiction, said one of their representatives and would prefer to refer the amalgamation issue raised by the American Federation of Labor union to another conference. This was agreed upon.

Debt Settlements Settle Nothing.

WASHINGTON.—(FP)—War debt settlements have settled nothing finally, is the conclusion reached by Dr. Harold G. Moulton and Leo Pasvolsky in a new book, "World War Debt Settlements," just published by the Institute of Economics in Washington.

"With the exception of the Russian debt," say the authors, "practically all of the international obligations bequeathed by the war have been funded and thus formally settled, but the primary economic issues which have been involved from the beginning have not been resolved."

The Ninth Year

There was darkness: now there are Comsomols.
There was silence: now there is song.
There were priests: now there is Science.
There were Cossacks: now there are teachers.
LENIN! LENIN! LENIN!

Men beat their wives: now all are comrades.
Men drank vodka: now they read books.
Men died in famine: now there are tractors.
Men feared the Czar: now there are unions.
LENIN! LENIN! LENIN!

Now there is Nep: but wait, there'll be Communism.
Now still is struggle; wait, there'll be plenty.
Now is hard work: rejoice, there'll be holiday.
Now there's Soviet Russia: there grows the Soviet World!
LENIN! LENIN! LENIN! LENIN!

ALEXIS IVANOVITCH RYKOFF

M. Tomsky

WE celebrate the Ninth Year of the Russian Revolution. Nine years of titanic effort by millions of workers and peasants to withstand capitalist aggression. Nine years of creative mass activity to build a new order of society. Nine years of world history of which every inch of space and second of time breathes hope and inspiration to the oppressed and exploited the world over.

Socialism as a step to Communism is taking concrete shape and form in the Soviet Union. The ideal of ages is becoming a reality before our very eyes. We are immeasurably proud of the gigantic achievements of our brothers in the great workers' republic. We are with them. We are for them. And we will continue unceasingly to work for the great day when the workers and poor farmers of the United States will realize their historic task and power and will start out on the great march of struggle which leads to victory, freedom and happiness.

WHAT is the power that stands like a rock behind the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics?

It is the Communist Party of the Soviet Union. Lenin's party. The party of several million adult and young workers and peasants. J. Stalin is its general secretary. N. Bucharin is the chief editor of its central organ, the "Pravda." These together with M. Tomsky, head of the Russian trade unions, A. Rykoff, chairman of the Council of People's Commissars, M. Kalinin, president of the Soviet Union, and Voroshilov, head of the Red Army, constitute the leading committee of Lenin's party.

Intellectual Vagabondage, By Floyd Dell. Doran, New York. $1.00

FLOYD DELL is in a state of incipient arterio-sclerosis of the spirit. His book, "Intellectual Vagabondage," subtitled An Apology for the Intelligentsia, contains no hint that its author was not so long ago the world's gayest and sanciest Bolshevik.

In the old Masses-Liberator days Floyd Dell used to show us how to be happy the revolutionary. He was the liveliest, most sensitive, the most readable critic of his day. His criticisms used to move and exhilirate as the they were so many poems. And come to think of it, they practically were poems. The best criticism is always essentially poetry. But the author of "Intellectual Vagabondage" is scarcely apt to write very poetic criticism. He is too old in spirit.

But if his revolutionary nerve is gone, the literary scholarship, the esthetic insight, the social sense are there as of yore. These qualities have made "Intellectual Vagabondage" worth reading despite the weariness of tone and tepidness of thot that characterize the latter part of the book. The first part, entitled "Literature and the Machine Age" is swell. It is literary history of the sort you don't find in the textbooks. It aims not merely to recount what the famous figures of modern literature have written, but to explain why they have written as they have. And that means considering such matters as the literary influences of the reading public; why writers are important when they express what that reading public consciously or subconsciously feels and desires; and how economic conditions and great socio-economic catastrophes like revolutions and wars determine what the reading public and its chosen writers do feel and desire. "Literature and the Machine Age" is incisive, lucid and stimulating. It is well worth reading.

Part Two of "Intellectual Vagabondage" has something of these qualities of Part One. It purports to be "A Spiritual Autobiography of My Own Generation in Its Literary and Social Aspects." As comments on certain literary trends of our time are illuminating. It is particularly effective when Dell strips the Brittling gentlemen, the Ivory-Towerites, the Round Squirmers of their protentious and fine-spun intellectual mantles revealing them in all their fragile and shoddy nakedness.

But all too often one catches the phoney overtones in the voice of the new and "mature" Floyd Dell. And while he throws his bright light on present literary currents, a stray beam flashing back now and then in reflection reveals him canonized high and dry on the safe and comfortable rock of bourgeois conformity.

And yet, if the tale he tells of his intellectual experiences is sound, it is not so hard to understand why as a whole his generation has admittedly been a failure, and why Floyd Dell himself stands where he does. His "vagabonds" were a weak and self-centered tribe of romanticists, insufficiently bookish. Life for them seems to have been a mere concession of literary fetishes. They worshipped at the feet of many idols the they did not stoop for long before any single one of them. Or, to vary the metaphor, the long and strenuous trail they took seems to have been strewn with volcanic, as many stepping stones along which whirled smiling their toes the Yogs fitted and hopped to wisdom and best-sellerdom: Verne, Baudelaire, Omar Khayyam, Heine, Dell Henry, Karl Marx, Carpenter, Max Stirner, Kipling, Walt Whitman, George Moore, Henry James and, inevitably, Wells and Shaw.

Naturally, like true vagabonds, they passed along the way now and then for an hour or two of dalliance—some of them even evangelically took the trouble to expound for the benefit of the ladies the true feminist gospel. A few "waltzed around the soap-box" sang or do tally up the ballots that would vote dear, swollen old capitalism out of existence.

But what impresses this reviewer most is this fact that books seem to have been so decidedly the most important factor in the intellectual growth of Dell's literary generation. Books are important, of course. But profound understanding belongs only to them who can assimilate the lessons of life as well as the wisdom of the printed page.

To us of that still younger generation which was in its adolescence during the war and Russian revolution books did not mean so much. Life was our Great Mentor. Shaw, Wells, Omar Khayyam, and the rest—like Floyd Dell we discovered them too. But they provided the dessert not the meat of our intellectual nourishment. Mr. Britling wasn't a tithe as interesting to us as say Lloyd George or Karl Liebknecht. "Fannie's First Play" could scarcely hold our attention as well as the little mass play staged in and around Smolny Institute, Petrograd, by the Russian Communist Players headed by the great impressarios, Lenin and Trotsky. And a jug of wine and she beside me in the wilderness seemed very mild stuff with the boom almost in our very ears of Big Bertha dropping shells into Paris from placements several-five miles away. The eternal drama on the world-stage had mounted to stupendous climax showing humanity doubled up in vital, tragic agony—the birth-pangs, we hoped of a new age. In the circumstances "Bookes for to reade" could not much "delighte" us.

It never occurred to us to become vagabonds, intellectualor otherwise. We couldn't run away from the echoes of Europe's guns. And we certainly did not want to flee the inspiring strains that came floating out of Red Russia—Young Russia Hail Victorious! The first great conquest of the world's dispossessed, the first government in history to fall from the hands of the insanely selfish. Mighty Ones into those of hard-bited, keen-eyed idealists. Russia was then, as it still is, a source of inspiration to us who saw in the working class the great instrument of destiny to break down the old economic order and build the world anew.

But to the intellectual Vagabonds the Russian revolution was a disappointment apparently because it failed to convert by some Red Magic the wreck of old Russia into a house for Men Like Gods. The revolution has, in fact, made a fetish of the Vagabonds' bugaboo, Duty. As Floyd Dell sees it, they failed as artists because they were derelict to their duty "to explain life in terms of the arts so as to make living more comprehensible and more enjoyable in its widest sense." Failing in this artistic duty, it is no wonder that they suddered at the prospect of infinitely more arduous revolutionary duties.

The world war gave the intellectual Vagabonds intellectual shell-shock. Their liberal-radical movement, Dell further points out, is bankrupt. His literary generation—himself included, I take it—has left a record of "mere pain chagrin, disgust, cynicism, defeat and failure." This from the same Floyd Dell who used to cavort so gracefully, so brightly, so world-hopefully, in the columns of the old Masses and Liberator. Isn't it positively pathetic!

Yet he is not entirely without hope now. There is still the younger generation to be heard from. It may make over "the shattered social, political and economic ideals" inherited from the Vagabonds. These up and coming youngsters may remake the world by beginning "to formulate and direct into socially accepted conventions and where possible into laws some healthy modern ideals of marriage, divorce and the relations of the sexes." My gosh! Won't that be grand? Wot a vision!

"It may not be difficult for them," he goes on, referring to the rising generation of artists, "to find the political terms upon which they can accept, serve, and use a machine civilization." Join the Republican Party and the Authors Club, I suppose. If not, then what?

Once Floyd Dell himself made the discovery that only in and thru the revolutionary labor movement is it possible to "accept, serve, and use a machine civilization." That discovery seems to mean little to him now. It does not occur to him that some, at least, of the rising generation of intellectuals and artists, as well as workers, will make that same discovery, as he himself made it; as the youthful Shaw made it fifty years ago, as old Bishop Brown made it only yesterday; as John Reed made it; as Lenin made it; as Mike Gold, Albert Weisbord and unnumbered millions the world over have made it.

That discovery means courage, power and insight for the artist. Out of touch with the vital social and economic currents, the artist's work is apt to be tenuous, timid, ephemeral. Floyd Dell's own writing exemplify the point. His criticisms, conceived in catalytic contact with the revolutionary movement, will live. Who will read his novels twenty years from now?

Personal Recollections

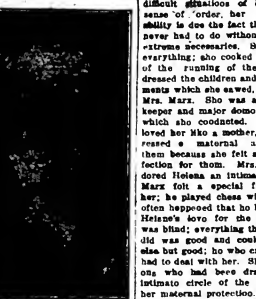
By PAUL LAFARGUE.

V.



Engels

MRS. MARX had had many children. Three of them died at a tender age, in the period of privation thru which the family had to go after the Revolution of 1848, when, having fled to London, they lived in two very small rooms in Dean Street, Soho Square. I only knew the three daughters of the family. When, in 1845, I had been introduced at Marx's, the youngest, the present Mrs. Aveling, was a charming child with the character of a boy. Marx asserted that his wife had been mistaken in the sex when she brought her into the world as a girl. The two other daughters formed a most charming and harmonious contrast at which one could marvel. The oldest, Mme. Longuet, had, like her father, a deep Semitic complexion, black eyes and magnificent hair; the younger one, Mme. Lafargue, was blond and rosy; fine curly, luxuriant hair glistened gold-like if the setting sun had embedded itself in it; she resembled her mother.

In addition to those named, the Marx family consisted of still another important member: Miss Helene Demuth. Born in a peasant family, when quite young, almost a child, she had come to Mme. Marx as a servant girl long before the latter's marriage. After she was married, Helene did not leave her; in fact, she dedicated herself to the Marx family with such devotion that she completely forgot herself. She accompanied Mrs. Marx and her husband on all their trips thru Europe and shared their exiles. She was the practical house-spirit that knows how to get along in the most difficult situations of life. To her sense of order, her economy, her ability it due the fact that the family never had to do without at least the extreme necessaries. She moderated everything; she cooked and took care of the running of the house; she dressed the children and cut their garments which she sewed, together with Mrs. Marx. She was at once housekeeper and major domo of the house which she coodnucted. The children loved her like a mother, and she possessed a maternal authority over them because she felt a motherly affection for them. Mrs. Marx considered Helena an intimate friend and Marx felt a special friendship for her; he played chess with her and it often happened that he lost the game. Helene's love for the Marx family was blind; everything that the Marx's did was good and could be nothing else but good; he who criticised Marx had to deal with her. She took everyone who had been drawn into the intimate circle of the family under her maternal protection. She had, so to speak, adopted the entire family. Miss Helene has survived Marx and his wife; she has now transferred her attention to the house of Engels whom she came to know to her youth and to whom she extended the affection which she felt for the Marx family.

Moreover, Engels was, in a way, a member of the family. Marx's daughters called him their second father; he was the altar ego of Marx. In Germany, for a long time their names were never separated; and they are still always record them together in its pages. Marx and Engels have made a reality in our century of the ideal of friendship which the ancient poets painted. From youth on they had developed together parallelly, lived in an innermost community of ideas and emotions, participated in the same revolutionary agitation, and, as long as they were able to remain united, they also worked together. They probably would have worked together their whole life long, had not events compelled them to live apart for about twenty years. After the breakdown of the Revolution of 1848, Engels had to go to Manchester while Marx was compelled to remain in London. Nevertheless, they continued to carry on their spiritual life in common, communicating almost daily thru letters to one another their opinions on the political and scientific events of the day as well as their own spiritual labors. When a scientific could free himself from his work, he hastened to leave Manchester and set op his home to London, where he settled only a minimum away from his dear Marx. From 1870 on, op to the death of his friend, oot a day went by that the two men did not see each other, now at the place of one, now at the place of the other.

It was a festival for the Marx family when Engels said that he was coming over from Manchester. For a long time before, they spoke of his approaching visit. And on the day of his arrival, Marx was so nervous that he could not work. The two friends then sat smoking and drinking all night long in order to talk over all the events that had taken place since they were last together.

Marx placed Engels' opinion higher than anyone else's, for Engels was the man he considered capable of being his co-worker. Engels was an active public for him; no labor was too great for Marx to convince and win him for one of his ideas. For example, I here recall how Marx read whole volumes in order to find the facts which he needed again to change Engels' opinion on some minor point—which I cannot recall—of the political and religious law of the Abligenses. To win Engels' opinion was for him a triumph. Marx was proud of Engels. He commended for me at great length all of the natural and intellectual qualities of his friend. He himself travelled to Manchester with me in order to show him to me. He admired the extraordinary versatility of his scientific knowledge. He grew enthusiastic over the almost universal knowledge that Engels possessed, suffering thru the vastness, inside house, and taking all obstacles."

Marx was as good a friend as he was a tender husband and father. Nevertheless, in his wife, his daughters, in Helene and Engels, he also found beings who deserved to be loved by a man like himself.

A PEEK EACH WEEK AT MOTION PICTURES

SUBWAY SADIE

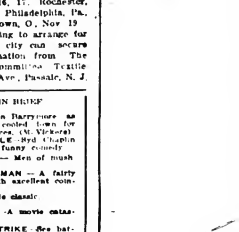
THIS is a clever thing. A fight, wisecracking picture of little account—but clever. You'll find it will well repay a visit to your neighborhood theater if you have no meeting or good book to read. It is extremely well directed, the photography is excellent; the sub-titles snappy and it is spoiled only by the usually stupid (and in this case nonecessary) ending.

The story concerns itself with the love affair of a New York clothing sales girl and a guard on the subway. Dorothy Mackaill plays Subway Sadie and gives an able characterization. Jack Mulhall has risen well in our humble opinion by his work as a subway guard.

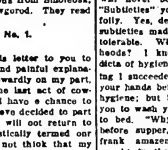
The picture has humor. The director has sensibly concerned himself with giving as hoomor a characterization as the story allows. In fact he did so well he did the author a favor. Subway scenes are splendidly pictured and if the story like a glove a sub-title writer added a number of laughs to help the picture along.

As a whole the picture is mighty thin stuff. Light, in fact, as the foam on the beer you get over. It also has grevious faults. But then nobody looks for a meal in a cream puff in a world of worse pictures Subway Sadie easily gets by.



Corinne Griffith in "Syncopating Sue"

Corinne Griffith essays the role of a sophisticated, slang-slinging, gum-chewing music store piano player in her latest comedy hit, "Syncopating Sue," which will open Monday at the Chicago Theater.



Douglas Fairbanks in a friendly caricature made by a Russian artist on his recent visit to the first workers' government. Both he and Mary Pickford were enthusiastic about the progress made by Russian movies and pronounced the Russian picture, "The Armored Cruiser Potemkin" the greatest film ever made. Fairbank's latest picture, "The Black Pirate," done in natural colors, is now showing at the Roosevelt Theater and will be reviewed in the next issue.

THE PASSAIC STRIKE IN TWENTY CITIES

SO great is the demand for showings of the recently produced motion picture of the Passaic strike that labor circles in over twenty cities have already made arrangements for a showing before December 3. The following, among others, are listed for an early showing.

Baltimore, Md., Nov. 7; Canton, O., Nov. 14; Cincinnati, O., Nov. 16; Collinsville, Conn., Nov. 6; Pittsburgh, Pa., Nov. 16, 17; Rochester, N. Y., Nov. 13, 14; Philadelphia, Pa., Dec. 3, 4; Youngstown, O., Nov. 19.

Labor units wishing to arrange for showings in their city can secure terms and information from The General Relief Committee Textile Strikers, 713 Main Ave., Passaic, N. J.

EMIL JANNINGS AND DOROTHY GISH IN NEW YORK

EMIL JANNINGS, star of the widely praised "VARIETY" is the leading feature of last week's performance at the Rivoli Theater. Some of the most forceful moments of his previous picture, such as "The Last Laugh," "Variety," "Passion," etc. were shown, and a first sketch of his forthcoming picture "Faust." This short piece from "Faust" was the throwing a bone to a hungry man. He wants more. Now we cannot await the day of the complete showing of "Faust." (It might come with the opening of the new Paramount Theater, one of the Public Theaters, and advertised as being "at the crossroads of the world").

Aside from the above Dorothy Gish was shown in the British picture "London." (a Paramount Picture). This picture is a story of two social extremes; the poor and their life in the "Limehouse," and the rich and their loose life at the "Mayfair," the extreme sections of two classes in society. Were it not for the conscious desire to keep the trash of class antagonism from the working people, who visit the movie theaters, this picture came close to portraying the life of the idle capitalist and poor workingclass. He shows the two extremes: First a saloon; then, an expensive restaurant. Hunger on one side; and the waste of food, on the other. Opportunities for three-dollar pictures are avoided by those who make the pictures for the present public.

Nevertheless, it was a valuable treat—to see Emil Jannings.

TWO LETTERS—A Story - By Moissaye J. Olgin

THE following two letters were simultaneously received at so address in Moscow, one from Smolensk, the other from Novgorod. They read as follows:

Letter No. 1.

Dear Alexandor:

I am writing this letter to you to avoid a personal and painful explanation. It may be cowardly on my part, but this will be the last act of cowardliness you shall have o chance to blame me for, I have decided to part ways with you. I will not return to whet we oophemistically termed our home. Please do not think that my affection for you has decreased. I am fonder of you than ever; in fact, after two years of sharing our lives' I appreciate your qualities with a clear and frank understanding. If it is any comfort to you, I will say that I like yoo very much, Alexander. And please don't think that I am going away from you with o light heart. It simply could not go on any longer. I think we were misamated from the very start.

Was it practical considerations that drew me to you originally, as you seemed to have intimated more than once? In honesty, I cannot say that. It is true that I was destitute, despairing, unable to earn a living. I was oot alone in this plight. There were hundreds of thousands of os starving, physically and spiritually, in those ominous years. Collective sufferios was easier to bear, no matter what you may say about the absence of collectivist feelings on my part. No, it was not the case of no "offspring of the bourgeoisie" clinging to a "powerful croissant." It was not as simple as that, believe me. I wish I were as simple as the inanity of your comrades in thought, presomes os to be. No, it was something strong and beautiful, something that made me dizzy. It was your strength, that masterful assurance with which you and your like bestrode the conquered and half devastated bot by no means pacified territory. That was your irresistible attraction to my eyes. Yoo have been blaming me for having romantic ideas. Yes, I was brought up to seek romance in life. Romance, in my imagination, was never disassociated from a hero, o man. Here you came, fearless, headless, sociology impervious to pain or pleasure, o god of revenge, o forlorn spirit of the revolution, an elemental force that wreeks havoc on people and lands, rushing to its destination which may oot be knowo to any living mae. I, a daughter of the class that was crushed oodor your feet, saw a fierce beauty in your onward march. I was captured by you the very first day you appeared in our town the our meeting took place much later. Do you remember that day when you rode into the main street of the town at the head of your Red cavalry division? Yoo seemed to be towering above the rest of your comrades, you made a sweeping gesture embracing the whole town, and I was thrilled by the metallic sound of your voice when you warned the crowds of inhabitants that acts of resistance would be suppressed with all the austerity of revolutiooary law. It seemed to me that one of the legendary bogatyri had resurrected as in Nieronts in a mail coat on a fiery horse, trampling over our land. Did not your starred helmet resemble that of our legendary heroes?

The very manner in which you took my love was a source of delight for me. Where the well-bred men of our class would have spent weeks in conversing, alluding, a preaching, flirting, wooing, proposing, you smashed right thru, bear-like: "Do you like me? Do you want to marry me? All right." I saw in this a manifestation of superhuman strength. I was sentimental enough to say to myself that a class whose representatives were able to go after a thing they desired in such a direct and supremely frank manner was destined to rule the earth. You see, Sasha, I was not always "hedged in within the walls of bourgeois psychology," as you often said. Why, I was worshipping at the shrine of the class that produced e man like you.

Have I become disappointed in you? I cannot say that. Here I am approaching the most difficult part of my task because there are things you will never be able to understand "Subtleties" you called them disdainfully. Yes, dear, poor freedom from subtleties made my life with you lo tolerable. What is there to clean hoods? I know you recognize the dicta of hygiene; after long maneuvering I succeeded in making yoo wash your hands before a meal. That was hygiene; but I never could persuade you to wash your hacds before going to bed. "Why, I just washed them before supper," you used to say in frank amazement, refusing to be caught in the meshes of what you called "bourgeois eqoeamiahnoss." You were right from your standpoint. Hot this trifle was only a symbol. You didn't understand the finer things to life. Whatever was beyond your heroism, you rejected point-blaok. How often and how persistently did I try to persuade you that your inability to appreciate the symbolist poets does not make them imbeciles or madmen. You scoffed at those highly refined, almost ethereal emotions which, in my judgmeot, are the highest achievements of human spiritual culture. It would not have hurt me so much if you understood what you rejected; that would have meant meotiog me on the same level. What was exasperating was your repudiation of just those things which were beyond your conception. Talking to you in this field was like talking to a deaf-mute.

As time passed your very fearlessness began to be a drag upon me. I realized that you were careless because you did not know many things. Let me be frank: I hated your self-confidence. Life was too straight in your conception. I could preoccupy myself to the fact that one drew his window, his absolute and final guidance from one or two books. Why, those books became catechisms to you. You mocked at my "religious fantasies," but was it not religious fanaticism to take a couple of books written by mortal men as the final gospel?

You see, I could never talk freely to you. You magnificently waved away everything that did not fit into your scheme of thought or life. I therefore had little chance to make myself clear. You see, I find truth dispersed everywhere. History, to me, begins not from a certain revolutionary date, but from times immemorial. Humanity, in my judgment, is not the working class come to power, but all men and women groping thru generations to a higher level of intelligence, to the realization of a common spiritual goal.

I see a sardonic smile playing on your lips as you read these last sentences. In my opinion, it is a smile of ignorance. Dear friend, you are ignorant and conceited, the you have read many books on sociology and economics, and the you never take a step without the decision of the higher bodies. You are ignorant of the higher things in life, and you have not humility enough to acknowledge this very obvious truth.

The absence of humility . . . This is perhaps the key to the understanding of our discord. You were trampling over a field it took generations to cultivate. You destroyed in gay spirits, you tried to build with sheer recklessness. I could not stand the way you were unconcerned. "Nothing like trying," was your beloved expression. We learn by our mistakes." You almost made a fetish of mistakes. You expanded colossal quantities of energy without equivalent returns. Even this waste was sublimated to the state of a virtue. You referred to the "fine, beautiful energy of the working class." To me it was gnerile, superficions errorance.

It would not have mattered had you been your social affairs beyond the confines of the home. I would have made it my business to loquire as lit tle as possible about your activities in your party, in your offices, in department, had you been willing to create something like the privacy of a home. There must be a line of demarcation drawn between social and private affeirs. I wanted a home, a beautiful atmosphere, a nest full of loveliness, untouched by the hideous superstitions of the bigger events outside. You refused. You smashed thru the privacy of our home as a horse would send thru the rarest flower beds. You were so filled to overflowing with your social activities that you split them everywhere, you flooded with them my house, our house, you spouted them at our meals, you took them with you into our bed. There was no escaping them. There was no other Sasha outside of his work.

I know you will not understand this. To you and yoone absorption in public affairs may even be a virtue. But here is one little illustration: our evenings at the theater. Instead of enjoying the beauty of the acting, instead of allowing the aesthetic experience to enrapture the soul, instead of allowing yourself to be stooped in the waters of pure sensuous enjoyment which at the same time is of the highest spiritual quality, you and like a censor called to judge the social content of the plot. Whenever the play ill-fitted your sociological conceptions you cursed under your breath. It was not "proletarian" enough for you. May I divulge a secret now? Theater-going with you was a source of continuous irritation. I have never spent ooo evening at your side without pain.

What was more trying. I could not complain. You would not allow what you called "scenes." You overwhelmed me with good humor, with words of endearment, as if I were a child. You made up your mind once and for all that my objections were emanating from an inferior order of intelligence. You hardly noticed my pain. I don't blame you: public life absorbed all your faculties and attention.

There was something else. You never craved for beauty in your immediate environment. You could afford to have beautiful, artistic things in your rooms. We must surround ourselves with objects of beauty; we must let them influence us consciously and subconsciously, if we want to retain the freshness of our souls. You in your position, could have had beautiful fabrics, inspiring paintings, hundred and one lovely objects which it is a joy to behold or touch. You insisted on making our home as dull and commonplace as that of any day laborer. You called this simplicity. It was hideous, Sasha, hideous!

It would not have been so humiliating had I not known that for the public, for the "proletariat," you do cherish the ideas of beauty. It took my breath away to hear you chastise with Solovyov all the details of decorating the club. Confound it, you had inventiveness, you exhibited extraordinary sensitiveness to color schemes and artistic effects. You gave yourself to your club; you refused to give one-hundredth of your attention to the building up of our own home, our little private world.

I am humiliated, Sasha, humiliated beyond words. I am fond of you, like to hear your gay laughter. I love to watch your white teeth glistening under the curled in a smile. But I feel a peculiar estrangement while I grows with time. I will continue to have most some of my own standards in contact with them. I realize most than ever what strangers we are, you and I. It took me a long time to decide on this step. It hurt me to know that you did not even notice my sufferings and despair. You lived personally in a world away from my own. I do not believe you will miss me much. After all, I am only an "offspring of the bourgeoisie."

Be happy, Alexander, and if you can retain a thankful memory of the things I have tried to give to you, so shall I.

Good-bye.

Yours,
Maria.

TO A PIONEER

See, child . . . ?
sweet, brave little one,
—that valley there
where the men and the women,
the lads and girls,
move hand in hand, looking forward and above?

And every while another falls as they march up the slopes of the mountain;
and see, child of mine,
how the flag is thrown from this eagar hands to hands more powerful and young?
—how the flag is slowly relayed to the summit?

Go then, my little comrade,
into the struggle,
for you are one of us;
you are young blood
to stir and heartan the failing ones.

We have need of you, Pioneer,
My brave Pioneer kid!

—OSCAR RYAN.

WAR DEFENSE IS EMPHASIZED BY EMPIRE CONFAB

Ulster and India Recent Slight

(Special to The Daily Worker)

LONDON, Nov. 28.—The imperial conference of prime ministers from all the British dominions has ended after five weeks of deliberation. The chief results of the conference are two: formal recognition of the autonomous status of the dominions and the laying of plans for "better defense" of the empire.

All of the dominions except India and Ulster are now recognized as separate sovereignties, altho theoretically still a part of the British empire.

Stress Laid on Suez.

In the discussions on defense, special stress was laid on the importance of holding and defending Egypt, because of the Suez canal, the maintenance of which is considered extremely important to the "safety" of British trade routes.

A significant resolution is that which provides for the establishment of airplane bases thruout the empire, designed to reinforce the navy and army.

"Regret" Militarism.

While making plans for more military defense provisions, the conference passed resolutions "regretting that more progress could not be made toward disarmament."

An immediate result of the conference is the arousing of the ire of both Ulster and India because of the action taken on recognizing dominions as equal powers to England. Ulster and India were both omitted from this provision, and public sentiment is decidedly antagonistic to their treatment.

Ulster to Investigate.

The Ulster cabinet has ordered that Sir James Craig, prima minister, should go to London immediately to protest the action in ignoring Ulster and to discover the reason.

The New India of Madras has made this comment: "India will now be subordinate in a household in which there are six mistresses instead of one."

Bulgarian Communist Killed in Jugoslavia

VIENNA, Nov. 28.—The body of the Bulgarian Communist, Ivan Christov, was found in Morava, Jugo-Slavia, according to a dispatch in the Bulgarian newspaper, Politika. The causes of Christov's murder have not been established.

Chinese Servants Strike.

HANKOW, Nov. 28. — Foreigners here were without house boys, and cooks today, as a result of a strike among servants in the foreign settlement. The servants walked out after a demand of higher wages was refused.

WHAT THEY THINK OF THE DAILY WORKER IN EVERY SECTION OF THE COUNTRY

From R. Burns Wilson of Berkeley, California, we get the note:

"Sending you a donation soon. Keep on with the good work. In my heart I am cheering you."

From J. M. Haggerd, Longvaw, Texas.

"I would like to get every working man of all crafts and the farmers interested in The DAILY WORKER. I think it is the best labor paper published."

From Thomas E. McGrath, Chicago, Ill.

"I am interested in the efforts of The DAILY WORKER to better the livelihood of the worker.

"There is a place and a positive need today as there always has been in the life of the worker, for a daily newspaper presenting and upholding the cause of the wage-earner.

"So far as I know, if otherwise I would be pleased to be informed, there is no paper of any description today that is fighting the cause of the wage-earner as vigorously and fearlessly as is The DAILY WORKER.

"I would like to see The DAILY WORKER remain a factor in the uplift and betterment of the toiler, the producer of the world's wealth."

To The DAILY WORKER.

Dear Comrades:

Three additional affairs for The DAILY WORKER have been arranged for early in Dec. If we are short of our quota by the 1st of December we will manage to make a loan to complete it, which loan is to be paid off by the proceede of the December affairs.

Fraternally yours,

CATALONIANS, FAILING IN PAST AND PRESENT METHODS, MUST FALL BACK ON COMMUNIST TACTICS FOR SUCCESS

(Special to The Daily Worker)

MADRID.—One of the most serious events occurring since Primo de Rivera's government came into power was the recent Catalonian separatist putsch. In order to understand the great significance of this, it is necessary to know something about the Spanish civil war history.

In the past century, the Carlist army (monarchical absolutists) maintained a constant civil war against the state's army. The Carlist army was not very numerous but was well organized, but their soldiers knew the country perfectly well, as they were fighting on their native ground. This Spanish civil war was very long and bloody. The Carlist strategy was similar to that used by the tribesmen against the Spanish imperialists in the Morocco war.

Francisco Macia, the leader in this late separatist putsch, had organized an army of 3,000 men. Those men, fighting like the Carlists on the mountains of Gerona, could quite easily have kept the government army busy for a long time if they would also have had the real help of the inhabitants of the region, where the separatist cause has many partisans.

Catalonian Separatism.

In Catalonia, which has a history, language, literature, and customs entirely apart from the rest of Spain, the feeling for independent administration has existed since long ago. Since the beginning of the present century, this old movement, led by business and industrial men, became an important political issue.

Previous to the coup d'etat of 1923, the Catalonian separatist movement was quite strong. It really was the reflection of the struggle of some other European countries for their independence. Primo de Rivera himself says that one reason for his coup d'etat was the increasing development of this movement. At that time, the Catalonian masses were deserting their leaders, because they could live without trouble in Madrid and even expect to be crown ministers.

Three Tendencies.

The Catalonian separatist movement comprises at present three tendencies, represented by the "Lliga Regionalista" (Catalonian League), the "Action Catalana," Catalonian Action, and "L'Etat Catala" (Catalonian State).

The Lliga Regionalista is formed by the big Catalonian bourgeoisie. It really does not have a true separatist or independent sentiment. It is just a political group trying to obtain advantages for their products.

The intellectuals of autonomous feeling make up the Action Catalana. The real separatist nuclei are enlisted in L'Etat Catala, the members of which are mostly from the middle class, peasants and a few industrial workers.

The Repression.

In a former article in The DAILY WORKER, we have seen that the dictator's repression was equally intense for the Communists and separatists. The government has closed their club houses, has prohibited the speaking of Catalonian in public, the hanging up of the national flag, and the singing of their hymns.

All of these measures have caused a more violent increase of the separatist movement. The old leaders, the ones who used the movement as an easy way for becoming ministers at Madrid, have been abandoned by the Catalonian masses, who are helping in every way possible the triumph of the cause.

Francisco Macia, ex-colonel of the Spanish army and Catalonian deputy, is at present the idol of the Catalonian peasants. Since 1923, when he crossed the border, he has been organizing from Perpignan the separatist movement, being helped by the Catalonian French.

The Putsch Tactic.

Since 1923 the Spanish Communist Party has concentrated itself to propagate the united front of all workers and other forces in order to fight against the dictatorship with success.

This is why it organized in Paris a Committee of Action," former of anarchists, separatists and Communists." The committee was not able to live long, on account of the differences existing from the very first moment between the Communists on the one side, and separatists and anarchists on the other. The Communist Party considered it necessary to organize an agitation campaign all over Spain, while the anarchists and separatists were trying to realize some putsch.

The anarchist putsch in 1924 in Vera Guipuzcoa was a bloody defeat. The government, informed by the Spanish police in Paris, repressed violently this anarchist movement.

Communist Tactic.

The failure of the present separatist movement on the border will be a good experience for the Spanish revolutionary movement in the future. A putsch will never bring Primo de Rivera's defeat. The only tactic is the establishment of the united front in a vast revolutionary movement, as has always been proposed by the Communist Party since 1923.

Primo de Rivera has a great number of spies among the Spanish emigrants in France and knows ahead of time of the movements prepared against his dictatorship, and this is why the putsch of 1924 at Vera and the present program at Perignan have been a complete failure.

N. Y. Cloakmakers Denounce Right Wingers

makers of the dictatorship of the governor's commission, says the statement.

Following are a few salient paragraphs from the declaration:

After nineteen weeks of bitter struggle, we succeeded in forcing the manufacturers to a settlement, which freed the union entirely of the dictatorship of the governor's commission. The fight against the jobbers—the most important factor in the cloak industry—is still on. And now, when it is absolutely necessary for the union to mobilize all its forces for the fight against the jobbers, the right wing leadership of the labor movement—friends of the governor and his commission—are compiling a list to minimize our gains, misrepresent the facts about the strike and confuse the minds of the workers, so as to demoralize our ranks and hinder the further development of our fight against the jobbers.

Our enemies dare not deny that we have won, thru this strike, a five-day week, which means the first 18 months of the agreement, and a 40-hour week the last year of the agreement—a demand which was entirely ignored by the governor's commission.

The chief attacks directed against us by our enemies are based principally on our inability to defeat the demand of the bosses for a 100% reorganization, recommended by the commission and openly accepted by our international officials. The union, nevertheless, succeeded in limiting the power of the bosses to take advantage of the reorganization fight, due to the courageous struggle conducted by the cloakmakers.

These gains were won by the strikers despite the strong opposition of the bosses, who were supported by Governor Smith, the police, mass arrests, injunction, courts, detectives, paid sluggers, etc. Not only did the strikers have to fight against the attacks of the enemy from without, but also against the sabotage practised by the right wingers who attempted to hinder the strike by spreading rumors amongst the workers that the strike was lost and the fight hopeless. This was done with the object of destroying the fighting spirit of the strikers and thereby strengthening our enemy.

Brothers and sisters! In face of the difficulties and hardships endured in this fight, our gains are a significant to minimize the significance of our gains and to belittle your brave struggle are intended to demoralize our ranks and strengthen the position of the enemy. Our fight must continue. The jobbers are not yet defeated. The attacks of the Forward and our own right wingers must not weaken our fight. You have proven that you can fight courageously and with determination against all enemies under all conditions.

26,000 Cloakmakers Affected by Strike.

NEW YORK, Nov. 28.—Twenty-six thousand of the 40,000 New York cloakmakers who struck in July are affected by settlements of their employers, Salvatore Ninfo, chairman of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' settlement committee announces. Union representatives are discussing settlement now with the sub-manufacturers, or contractors, who do work solely for jobbers employing no needle workers themselves. Their shops employ nearly 10,000 of the workers. Independent manufacturers make up the bulk of other settled shops. Sub-manufacturers are asking the union to abandon its demand for limitation of contractors per jobber and jobbers refuse to accept responsibility for conditions at work in their contractors' shops—another union demand.

SURFACE LINES, SUBWAYS, PAWN OF BIG FINANCE

Worker Asks for Strap to Hang On

The traction situation is holding a considerable portion of the spotlight in Chicago. The situation is complicated by the fact that the twenty-year franchise of the Surface Lines expires on Jan. 31. According to the opinion of many lawyers, the holders of the $165,000,000 in bonds will immediately call for a receivership, since by no stretch of the imagination can a traffic solution be arrived at before that date.

In the mayor's office stress is placed on the immediate need of building downtown subways, and Mayor Dever favors considering this matter apart from the general traction muddle. The mayor's plan calls for a north and south subway on State street thru the loop, with another somewhat in the shape of a horseshoe from the Van Buren tunnel, bending to Michigan avenue, and turning west to the Washington street tunnel.

To finance this scheme, Mayor Dever suggests that the cost be met partly from the traction fund and partly from special assessments levied against the property to be benefited. Opposed are those councilmen who object to using any of the fund for work which will benefit so small a section of the city, and who feel that property owners should meet a much larger proportion of the expense.

Two Ordinances Offered.

From the office of Corporation Counsel Busch comes word that the city's assistants have been at work for some time preparing two ordinances to be presented to the council a week from today. Engineers and attorneys have been called into consultation in the matter. One ordinance, which has the support of local interests, calls for a consolidation of all lines. The Harland ordinance, on the other hand, provides for another twenty-year franchise for the Surface Lines.

All hopes of unravelling the tangle before the expiration of the Surface Lines' franchise at the end of January disappeared the other day, when Corporation Counsel Busch pointed out to the council transportation committee that a referendum on the question could not be held, under the law, before Feb. 22. Some aldermen suggest a six-months' temporary extension of the Surface Lines' franchise, to ward off a receivership on behalf of bondholders, but the committee was told that the would hardly be settlement, and this is why the putsch of 1923 at Vera and the present program at Perignan have been a complete failure.

Franc Takes Jump, But Financiers See New Slump Coming Soon

PARIS, Nov. 28.—The franc took a slight climb despite much pessimism in financial circles because of an expected political battle involving finances. Monday the franc was quoted at 27.43 to the dollar. The previous Saturday the quotation was 28.

Some financiers do not believe that the too rapid rise of the franc is a good sign, and predict that ne[w] ay of speculators will cause a s[ud]den decline soon.

ALBERTA WHEAT POOL OWNS 40 BIG ELEVATORS

Handle 2,000,000 Bushels This Season

CALGARY, Alberta, Nov. 28.—Forty elevators owned by the Alberta Pool Elevators, Ltd., are now in operation in this province. A number of these, which have been constructed for the pool, have been completed and brought into operation in the past month.

Well over 2,000,000 bushels of wheat have been handled since the season opened, by the total of just over 30 pool elevators which have been in operation since that time. Considering the lateness of the season in several important crop districts, this makes a very creditable showing. Some of the elevators are filled to capacity of 100,000 bushels, and in exceptional cases more than 150,000 has been handled.

Early in the shipping season it was announced that the Cooldale Pool elevator had received over 30,000 bushels and shipped over 20,000 bushels in the first few days of consecutive days. Later figures show that for the fourteen consecutive days the same elevator received approximately 110,000 bushels and shipped approximately 65,000 bushels.

The manager of the pool elevators, C. M. Hall, states that the pool members are patronizing their own elevators apparently to the fullest extent possible, and that only lack of larger facilities has prevented a much greater handling.

While reference has been made to the receipts at Cooldale, there are various other points correspondingly good. As a number of points records will be established for the handling of grain for the season.

Owing to the lateness of the season it will not be possible for the pool to build many additional elevators before the spring.

Political Program

1. Relief from the evils of the mortgage and tenantry evil thru the adoption of a land tenure system which will secure the land to the users.

2. The nationalization of the railroads, the meat packing plants, grain elevator combines and the control and development of these marketing organizations by the organizations of working farmers in co-operation with the organizations of city industrial workers who are employed in these industries.

3. The control and operation of the farm credit system by the organizations of working farmers, in place of the present capitalist banking institutions which now use this, the farm credit system, for their enrichment.

4. Relief for the farmers from the present burden of taxation thru levying higher income taxes, and increasing taxes on the profits of the present great capitalist exploiters and higher taxes on the profits of the railroads and great industrial combines.

5. Against the expenditures for a big army and navy, which serve no other purpose than to support the imperialist adventures of the great financial magnates of Wall Street in other countries.

6. Fight against Wall Street Dollar Diplomacy" and expenditure of blood and gold produced by the farmer and industrial workers to support the capitalist exploiters in their efforts to make profits out of the people of Cuba, the Latin American countries, China and the Philippines. Freedom for the Philippines. Self-determination for Porto Rico, Hawaii. Withdrawal of all American soldiers and marines from the Central and South American countries. No intervention in China.

7. Against the Dawes plan, thru which the American banking houses are securing control of European industries and paving the way for a new war.

8. Close co-operation with the farmers of other countries and particularly the farmers of Russia, who are an important factor in the world revolutionary movement. The recognition and establishment of economic relations with the first workers' and farmers' government—the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics.

9. The alliance of the working farmers and city industrial workers to establish a workers' and farmers' government of the United States. Only a united struggle of the farmers and workers, together with the city industrial workers, in support of this program will win relief for the farmers from the conditions under which they now suffer.

JAPANESE LABOR NEWS

By ANNA ROCHESTER, Federated Press.

Cotton and Silk Wages

TOKIO—(FP)—Cotton and silk textiles still employ more workers than any other industry in Japan, according to a report on industrial conditions and labor legislation in Japan which has just reached Tokio from the Intl. Labor Office in Geneva. Of the 993,366 workers in textiles in 1922, more than 500,000 were women over 16, and $19,221 were children, chiefly girls, under 14 years.

The girls and young women in the city cottonmills are largely recruited from country districts by agents of the companies. Those who come from outside the city are housed in company dormitories which make them inaccessible to labor organizers. They get meals furnished below cost. The Cotton Spinners Assn. of Japan claims that the dormitories, kitchens and other "privileges" increase the earnings of operatives to something over one-third the cash wage.

No exact wage figure for spinners later than 1921 are available. At that time the average cash wage for a woman spinner was 40 cents a day, American money. Women weavers in February, 1924, were reported earning 45 cents American money. In visiting one of the show cottonmills of Japan at Osaka, we were told by the manager that women spinners earned 75 cents a day. American money—but all other information indicates that this must have been the highest wage of the most skilled worker in the factory.

Five years ago a spinners' union conducted a strike in a cotton yarn mill employing more than 1,000 workers. That strike was lost and the union never regained its strength.

Meantime, the latest report from the Japan Cotton Spinners Assn. shows that while 12 of the 50 member firms reported losses during the first 6 months of 1926, the average half-year dividend of cotton spinning firms was 15.3%.

New Social Legislation

TOKIO—(FP)—The new health insurance act becomes effective throughout Japan, Jan. 1927, for all persons employed in factories, mines, building operations, transportation, loading and unloading goods, but not for shipping workers, farmers, nor domestic workers. It extends compensation to injuries, or death arising out of or in the course of the employment.

A maternity benefit of $10 at time of confinement and a continuing payment of 60% of the daily wage is granted to a wage-earning woman before and after childbirth for a period to be fixed by imperial ordinance. Insurance funds will be set up from payments by the state, the employer, and the worker. The maximum of insur-

Labor Party Bars Reds

TOKIO—(FP)—Left wing radicals who reject parliamentary action, who believe in dictatorship and who would suppress the minority within the organization have been excluded from the councils of the new Labor-Farmer Party of Japan. The party represents, however, the first attempt to organize a proletarian party to lead the 3,000,000 new voters enfranchised since the last general election.

Toyohiko Kagawa, Motojiro Sugiyama and others active in organizing the tenant farmers took the initiative in creating the party. Various industrial unions are unofficially represented on the executive committee. Many other unions are led by communists and left-wing sympathizers who consider the platform too moderate.

The social and economic demands are: Recognition of the right to strike, collective bargaining, right to cultivate idle land, legal minimum wage, abolition of night work for women and children and their exclusion from dangerous trades, 8-hour day, better factory and mining laws, equality of men and women before the law, abolition of licensed prostitution, insurance for sickness, old age and accident, compensation for those injured or contracted industrial, free text-books and education, limitation of landlord's right to evict tenants from dwellings.

Wages Way Below U. S.

TOKIO—(FP)— Even the highest paid Japanese factory workers earn less than unskilled workers in the United States, according to two Japanese factory experts reported early. Wages are said to average approximately $1.30 a day in American money. But the average for all male factory workers is just under $1 a day, and for all female factory workers less than 50c a day.

The minimum cost of living for a worker and his family is estimated at $35 per month. The foreign resident in Japan finds that prices are at least as high as in the United States. The increase in wages in Japan since the beginning of the war still leave the regularly employed factory worker unable to support a family even at a decent Japanese standard of living. Japan is still feeling the depression and on every hand one hears of serious unemployment among the building trades workers still engaged in reconstruction in the earthquake area.

TOKIO—(FP)—At least 75,000 of the $10,000 day laborers of Japan are now finding work through the public employment exchanges which have

Short Session Will Perhaps See Passage of Farm Relief Bi

WASHINGTON, Nov. 28.—The short session of congress, soon to assemble will see a renewed drive for farm relief. Senator McNary of Oregon has completed a new draft of the McNary-Haugen farm relief bill, which previously was defeated. He had made changes in some features which de merely mitigated against its passage.

The advisory board, a feature of the other bill, is eliminated. Instead, federal farm board on the plan of federal farm loan board, is proposed. There will be twelve farm districts with a representative of each on the board.

The equalization fee feature is retained, but the manner of its collection is simplified. A stabilization fund for grain is set up. Wheat, swine, and rice would be collected not from the farmer directly, but from the grain dealer, the miller, or the packer.

Senator Capper of Kansas will support the new McNary bill. He believes that farmers of the west and south will be stronger then ever with the bill or some similar plan, "to see that the farmers get control and manage excess supplies of crops at their own expense." He believes that the farmers are now doing "more good and thinking this fall than in any former year."

A rumble comes from Representative I. J. Dickinson of Iowa, who says that it seems that a surplus in the United States treasury of three hundred million can cause more excitement than the loss of several times that amount by the producers of our basic commodities." This is a slam at Coolidge's tax refund, the greater portion of which goes to large corporations.

Eastern Farmer Has to Face Competition of Industrial-Wage

HARRISBURG, Pa., Nov. 29.—That the farmer in the east is being forced to compete in paying his farm help with the wages paid in industrial centers of the eastern states, and on the other hand to compete with the foreign-born farmer who works the whole family, and therefore pays no wages at all, is the basis for a suggestion necessary to keep his consort and offspring alive and working—is the way that goes up from a regional conference held in this city between representatives of agriculture and other industries from Pennsylvania, New York, New Jersey, Maryland and West Virginia.

Montgomery Robinson of the New York State College of Agriculture of Cornell University, after giving some very debatable figures on the increase of industrial wages as compared with the increased cost of living, asserted that, so far as the farmer was concerned, wages in the farming industry had increased 70 per cent over the pre-war level while he received for his products approximately but 18 per cent over the level.

That the farmer cannot hope to compete with his city cousin in the matter of tax-dodging one inferred from the claim of Professor Frad P. Weaver of Pennsylvania State College, who said the farmer pays from 37 to 40 per cent of his net income in taxes, as against the 12 to 14 per cent which the city resident disgorges.

Farm Federation Meets in Chicago, Dec. 6,7,8

The convention of the American Farm Bureau Federation will meet in Chicago Dec. 6, 7 and 8. Sessions will be held at Hotel Sherman.

Speakers at the convention will include Frank O. Lowden, Magnus W. Alexander, Dr. Carl C. Taylor, Fred B. W. Kilgore, Mrs. Charles W. Sewell, Dr. C. H. Lane, Robert F. Pack, J. C. Hedges and Mary Campbell.

A message from Lloyd George, former premier of Great Britain, will be read as a feature of the first day session.

Wm. H. Thompson is president of the federation.

Irish Workers Party Issues Bright Paper

From Dublin there comes to the editorial offices of The DAILY WORKER a bright, four-page paper, called the Workers' Republic, which as its name implies stands for a workers' republican government to supplant the Irish Free State, which it calls "government of estate owners, bankers, capitalists, and the imperialists." The paper is the official organ of the Workers Party of Ireland, which is now in its seventh month of life.

We extend to this paper and its editorial staff our best wishes for

Fifth Co-operative Congress Meets

By GEORGE HALONEN.

When an average American radical hears something about the co-operative movement, the most he does is merely shrug his shoulders contemptuously. A co-operative is to him only some kind of a commercial institution, and what concern is "business" to a radical?

However, in spite of the apathy shown by most of the radicals towards the co-operative movement, it has been growing and is becoming a mass movement. The last co-operative congress is the best proof that it has grown in America become an important, living, working class organization.

The co-operative congress, held in Minneapolis, Nov. 4-6, 1926, was a very representative gathering. Sixty-five regular delegates, representing about 150,000 members, were present. In addition, about 40 fraternal delegates from different labor organizations attended, thereby proving the closeness of the co-operative movement with the general labor movement.

Democratizing the Movement.

The American co-operative movement has for the past years been in a nebulous state of formation. Prior to this, there had been four congresses, which were more or less of the nature of mere formalities initiative on the part of the rank and file co-operators was lacking. Various committees of the congresses were simply appointed by the president of the Co-operative League. In the first three congresses there was practically no discussion from the floor.

This fifth congress was historic in breaking those autocratic traditions. Various committees were nominated by the delegates and elected by ballot. Discussion was not limited to certain appointed speakers.

These first signs of the process of democratizing the league had a very healthy effect on the congress. The interest of the rank and file was aroused. Throughout the session such a strong progressive spirit was prevalent that the conservatives did not dare to bring any meritorious opposition, altho many of their pet ideas were killed outright.

Side by side with the democratizing of the league, its policy is of main importance. The previous congresses had not defined the movement. Every one had his own definition according to his own calibre and knowledge of social affairs. Most of these definitions were for class-collaboration and even ignored the working class, picturing the co-operative movement as an abstract "independent" movement outside the social contradictions which had created this movement.

The fifth congress in a very decided manner declared that the co-operative movement is a part of the general labor movement. The congress adopted unanimously the following resolution.

A Working Class Movement.

"Whereas, the co-operative movement in its nature is primarily a working class movement against the present system based on profit.

"And whereas a change in the present economic system of society can be accomplished only thru the united action of the whole working class.

"Be it Resolved, That this Fifth National Co-operative Congress, in convention assembled at Minneapolis, Minnesota, Nov. 4, 5, 6, 1926, declares the co-operative movement to be a part of the general labor movement, and therefore the co-operative movement should seek the co-operation of all workers' and farmers' movements for the benefit of the exploited toilers."

In adopting a resolution of this kind, the American co-operative movement made a historic decision which is going to give to the movement new life and energy.

The destruction of the co-operative movement in Italy by the fascists, brought very clearly into the minds of the delegates the necessity for freedom of press, speech and assembly as well as the question of political prisoners. Altho the favorite phrase to many has been that the co-operative movement should disconnect itself from everything not "purely co-operative questions," the realities of life had taught the necessity to co-operate with other working class activities. This was already made clear in the above mentioned resolution on relating to the labor movement; and to emphasize this resolution, the congress unanimously adopted a resolution demanding the immediate repeal of all laws which abridge the fundamental right for freedom of speech, press and assembly, and the immediate release of all political prisoners. Also the congress pledged its support to such organizations as the Civil Liberties Union and the international Labor Defense.

Action Against Fascism.

The congress passed unanimously a resolution condemning the fascist government of Italy, because it has completely destroyed the co-operative movement. In addition the congress heartily endorsed the proposal made by the Red International of Labor Unions, that the International Co-operative Alliance take the initiative to call a conference of the Amsterdam International of Trade Unions, the Red International of Labor Unions and the International Co-operative Alliance, to formulate measures to fight International Fascism.

Because the granting of injunctions to the enemies of labor to be used by them against the organized labor movement has been taken recently on an ever increasing rate, and because the injunction has been used to prevent a co-operative society from functioning, the congress protested against their use.

Recently there have been many mining disasters. The co-operative movement is a working class movement and therefore cannot be "neutral" towards such happenings. Therefore, the congress passed a resolution, showing the main cause of many disasters, or be due to criminal negligence on the part of the mining companies, and demanded a federal investigation.

Important Resolutions.

The congress recommended to its constituent societies that they recognize the trade mark and emblems of the organized labor movement to the extent of purchasing such articles as are made by union labor, wherever possible, and that organized labor shall be employed in all construction work undertaken by co-operative enterprises.

Co-operative life insurance was favored and a special committee appointed to study this question.

Children should be interested in the co-operative movement. Steps were taken to organize a junior co-operators' movement.

Compulsory military training in the universities and high schools was condemned. Local co-operative societies were urged to take part in the celebration of International Co-operators' Day.

The Co-operative League has not been on a self-supporting basis. Its activities have depended upon the financial assistance of private persons. Naturally this had such an effect on the rank and file, that they did not consider the league as their own movement, but rather as an organization controlled by those private persons who financed its functions.

The question was considered seriously. Finally a budget was adopted which for the first time puts the league on its own feet, but, however, on the condition that the local societies will give serious consideration not only to the question of paying their dues, but also to give financial assistance.

The solving of the financial question thru this budget makes the league more of a democratically controlled organization than the "one man affair" it has so far been to some respect.

For the first time in the history of the league, the congress elected seven delegates to the International Co-operative Congress, which will be held in Stockholm next year.

International relations are becoming more important, because the International Co-operative Alliance has declared the Co-operative League as the only official co-operative organization in America to be recognized by the Alliance.

Election of the Board.

The policy for the election of the board of directors formerly was to pick men for their prominence in public life, and not from the rank and file who were active in the co-operative movement. This was merely to get an air of "respectability." Time and time again these figureheads have never met or functioned in any manner.

The progressive and active co-operators fought this policy in the fourth congress. All existing terms were filled by active co-operators. The board of directors was again partly renewed. The basis in electing new members was that active co-operative workers should form the board.

The discussion on the floor and resolutions passed showed the American co-operative movement to have entered a new phase of its development. A definite progressive working class character is shown in the every move in the congress. The rank and file certainly will feel that now the league is developing in the right direction.

However, the resolutions and discussions of the congress are of no value if they only remain on paper. It is the duty of local societies to learn from the congress' proceedings and put these lessons in practice.

The congress paved the way to a future great co-operative organization. The foundation has laid soundly. It is the time for other working class organizations to recognize the fact that here is to have in existence a strong beginning of a co-operative mass organization. The building of this organization needs the help of all workers and poor farmers.

Especially the progressive and radical elements in the American labor movement should learn a lesson from the Fifth Co-operative Congress. This lesson brings to them forcefully the demand to come and help the building and strengthening of this movement. It is only thru every-day practical work in the local societies and thru them in the district and national organizations that the progressive element will get its message to the masses.

Big Crowd Attends Gary I. L. D. Bazaar, Bishop Brown Speaks

GARY, Ind., Nov. 28.—More than 500 workers attended the International Labor Defense bazaar on Nov. 25. This was one of the biggest crowds that has attended a working class affair in Gary in recent years.

Bishop William Montgomery Brown the "heretic," was present and spoke before a large audience for the first time. His talk was one of the finest ever heard here, the subject being "Evolution and Revolution." There was much clapping and cheering as Comrade Brown brought out point after point proving how rotten the capitalist system is and the great need of a Communist system in which life would be more abundant for all.

Another mass meeting will be held Dec. 18, at which Albert Weisbord, leader of the Passaic strike, will speak.

ST. LOUIS, Nov. 28. — One half million dollars will be allotted immediately for development of the Missouri River, under the program planned by the engineers in charge of this work, Edgar Jadwin, chief of the United States army engineers, announced today.

WITH THE YOUNG WORKERS

CONDUCTED BY THE YOUNG WORKERS LEAGUE

French Army and Navy Courts Kept Busy by Anti-Militarist Activity

LE HAVRE, France.—(By Mail)—Here the political situation seems to be clearing. The "Bloc des gauches" (left bloc) has come to an end and the socialist party has officially broken it. The break came at a late anuf time to convince all the socialist workers that they have been played both by the laft petty-bourgeoisie and the officials of their party.

Indeed the best part of the workers in the socialist party are leaving the organisation and now it is composed chiefly by petty-bourgeoisie. That is why the socialist leaders have divorced in words from the liberal bourgeoisie—in order to keep the trust of the workers.

The Communist Party has chosen this occasion to carry on a recruiting campaign for a month. The party met with great success—everywhere thousands of workers and even peasants hasten to applaud the party's words

Persecute Youth.

If the strength of the party is growing, the repression is also developing. These last weeks have been marked with several persecutions, especially against the youth who are carrying on anti-militarist propaganda. Eighteen years imprisonment have been stuck on the shoulders of five soldiers and two young Communists, a French comrade and a German, by a military court in Treves, a German town under French occupation. The arrested comrades were charged with distributing anti-militarist papers and tracts. Yesterday we were informed that the trial was to be reviewed—the army heads think the penalty is not severe enuf!

The navy courts are not unemployed in the meantime. Two sailors of the Cruiser "Metiz" have just been sentenced to three and two years imprisonment. Their crime was that they refused, together with the whole crew, to set on a 12-hour day's work when the ship had arrived in port after a very tollsome passage! The whole labor movement is raising its voice against these cruel sentences.

Remember Debs.

We have the reports of Eugene Deb's death and tho he was a reformist leader we are moved. We don't forget his courageous attitude during the war and the several years imprisonment he suffered for it, while most of the socialist leaders became devoted to their governments and acted like wolves on the class of each country, one against the other, in the name of democracy and civilization!

In Germany Democracy—the murder of Karl Liebknecht and Rosa Luxemburg, performed under a socialist government.

In France Civilization—Morocco war approved by the leaders of the socialist party!

So, when a man like Debs who did not give up his faith dies we must pay honor to his memory, even if he remained blind to the new light which the Russian revolution threw all over the world.

Passaic Movie for Children's Aid

NEWARK, N. J.—The working people here will have the opportunity of seeing the "Passaic Textile Strike," before them on the screen on Friday night November 26, at the Newark Labor Lyceum, 208 So 14th Street. All who see the picture receive it with enthusiasm.

The history of the strike is given beginning with the causes that led up to it. Following the general walk out of the strikers they are shown picketing the various mills in endless lines, thousands and thousands of them. The water hose, gas bombs, police clubbings, riot guns, the reading of the riot act and the triumph of the American Civil Liberties Union over the Sheriff Nimo, and so on including the big labor parade and demonstration which celebrated the entrance of the strikers into the A. F. of L.

The proceeds of the showing will go to buy food for the strikers and milk for their children.

With the presentation of the picture there will also be strikers and speakers from Passaic.

Jugoslav Communist Youth Is Sentenced

VIENNA, Oct. 28.—Zatko Shneider, secretary of the Jugo-Slav Communist Youth, has been sentenced by the Belgrade court to one year's imprisonment for distributing Communist propaganda.

Shneider was tried by a Belgrad court in December last for the crime of being secretary of the Communist Youth of Jugo-Slavia. The court at that time, but he was re-arrested shortly afterwards, following a protest by the prosecuting attorney.

HOCHMAN FIGHTS PLANS FOR AID OF CLOAKMAKERS

Boston C. L. U. Is Scene of Heated Battle

By a Worker Correspondent.

BOSTON, Nov. 28.—Boston Central Labor Union has appointed a committee of 10 to study the question of company unions in this jurisdiction, in connection with a national movement started by the A. F. of L. to investigate and collect data and devise ways and means of combatting this menace to labor.

A request for funds from the Passaic textile strikers received favorable action, and affiliated unions which are yet unaware that these workers have been received into the A. F. of L. will be urged to send in their contributions in aid of the strike.

Commends Cloakmakers.

In recommending financial support to the striking cloakmakers of New York, ex-President Kearney of the C. L. U. added to the motion a commendation of the manner in which the strike had been conducted.

A heated discussion arose on the reading of a communication from the capmakers of Boston. They had suggested that the C. L. U. and fraternal bodies organize a conference for collecting funds to aid the striking New York cloakmakers.

Hochman Shows Colors.

This request was vehemently opposed by Julius Hochman, vice-president of the I. L. G. W. U., who had come before the C. L. U. for the purpose of speaking against the proposal.

Hochman's purpose was rather thinly veiled behind a formal request made by the joint board of sanitary control, thru its secretary, to come before the executive committee of the C. L. U. to explain the "Frosanis" label. The joint board of sanitary control is an auxiliary body of the garment workers' union, and when a delegate asked what it was all about Brother Hochman was "Johnny-on-the-spot" to explain. He remained for further business.

Opposes Conferance.

When the question of the capmakers' request came up, Hochman got the floor and gave as his reasons for objecting to such a conference that there were only 7,000 workers now on strike, and that he does not believe in relief conferences. Then he blew off on his favorite theme against "those outside ores" who seek to disrupt the labored trade union movement"—meaning, in this case, the capmakers, the most active and unselfish of all the needle trades unions in Boston.

Miller Answers.

I. Miller, of the capmakers, took the floor to answer what he called Hochman's insinuations and false statements. Some of the delegates present took him off, but others objected to this procedure and demanded that he be allowed to give his side of the story. Miller told how the attempted of the capmakers to organize a committee to make a thoro canvass of Boston unions, in order to secure money for the strikers, had been first postponed and then ignored by Hochman, who then proceeded by his own methods, which were deliberately made inefficient, to bring in as little money as possible for the strikers.

Held Down Contributions.

"Brother Hochman boasts about the money raised in Boston," said Miller, "but it was not nearly enough, nor what it should have been when, due to the New York strike, the Boston cloakmakers were earning $100 and $150 a week, and were working night and day. Not until the 11th week did the Boston union take any steps to help the New York strikers, and then saved itself inadequately, one day's pay. And now, in the 21st week of the strike, there are still 7,000 workers out, and in need of relief."

He said the conference that they expected to organize would have raised many times more than $13,000 turned in by the Boston garment workers. When Miller stated that cash shops had been opened in Hochman's jurisdiction without his preventing it, and challenged him to deny it, Hochman tried to turn Miller's words into a statement that the Boston cloakmakers were scabbing.

Would Have It a Failure.

I do not wish the delegates to leave this meeting with the impression Brother Hochman has tried to create, that the New York cloakmakers' strike has been a failure," Miller continued. "He would have liked to see it a failure, because it was conducted by the left wing leadership. Yes, and he and the Sicilians have done all they could to make it a failure by sabotage and laying down on the job. Hochman accuses the left wing of capitalising failures in strikes for their own purposes. And here he is trying to capitalize the so-called failure of the settlement with inside manufacturers. As a matter of fact, these terms are better than his own right wing wished for."

3—RUSSIA TODAY, the report of the British Trade Union Delegation.

Every worker correspondent should send in a story this week.

Workers in every section of the country are eager to learn of conditions in American industry. The worker knows them. We are counting on you, workers, to tell us about them. Send in that story, today!

Striker Approaches Negro Problem with Intelligent Outlook

By RACHEL WEINSTEIN.
(Worker Correspondent)

NEW YORK.—The question of the Negro as a strikebreaker had become an imminent one. The ranks of the paper box makers were unbroken save for a stray boy or girl who wandered from the line, wavered, but surely came back. Our colored sisters and brothers, however, presented a greater problem.

A solution was sought and, as we thought, found. A committee, composed of two colored girls and two white ones, of which I was one, was selected to visit Harlem and, thru the medium of churches, theaters, dance halls and cabarets, convey the message that was of vital significance in the fight we are waging.

Our success was negative. The churches and similar places of worship were all difficult of access. We were sent away with promises and assurances of further interest in our subjects, etc., but we were not permitted to make our appeals there and then. One church indeed, accepted us and even went so far as to read the message to the congregation.

See Thru Dark Shadows.

However, so far as I was concerned, the days' experiences were of totally different significance. For the first time in my life I came in actual contact with the Negro people. I talked, walked and laughed with them, and was delighted with them. I seemed to have been re-awakened. The people were alive, moving, breathing, not dark shadows on the horizon of my life. We visited one home with a view to obtaining a speaker for an evening performance at a theater. I talked with the lady of the house for a few all-too-short minutes and went away a slave to her charms, her vivid personality. I succumbed completely. Her color, her everything was soon forgotten in the pleasure of her conversation, her presence.

The barrier that formerly loomed so large in my eyes has dwindled away to nothing. It no longer exists.

Harlem is a vast, comparatively unexplored area. The boys and girls, ostracized for no other reason but that of difference in color, are unorganized, untaught in the matter of workers' solidarity. Employed by unscrupulous manufacturers to break the ranks of their white sisters and brothers, they are fed on poisonous propaganda which eats their minds and hearts and antagonizes them to the point of slashing blindly, at the smallest provocation, at those who attempt to show them on their way out of the shops simply to talk to them. These, our sisters and brothers, are the innocent victims of a social system so unspeakably vile, so contemptible, that one stands amazed at the realization of its existance.

Sewing to Wind.

A party of friends, far superior intellectually to many white people were once forced to leave a well-known restaurant because of their color. "These tables are all reserved," was the reply they met with on requesting accommodations. Similar incidents, occurring daily, hourly in the lives of these people, tend toward uniting them still more strongly in their hatred for the color which took it upon itself to lord it over them and which so cruelly manifests the difference which they presume exists.

Is it any wonder that those lower in the social order and of lesser intelligence are only too eager to take advantage of a strike to come back at us? Is it to be wondered at that our strike is a tool for revenge eagerly sought and unhesitatingly invoked upon those of our boys and girls unfortunate enough to be the victims?

Our organization, far from recognizing color barriers, accepts into its ranks everyone, regardless of race or creed. Our colored boxmakers are as active as the white, as tireless in their efforts to finish this bitter struggle victoriously. Our union plans to organize all boxmakers, regardless of color or creed.

WORKERS' SCHOOL LARGEST LABOR COLLEGE IN U. S.

Thousand Students Are Enrolled

By AL SCHAAP.
(Worker Correspondent)

NEW YORK, Nov. 28.—With a fall enrollment of 1,000 students, the Workers' School has become the largest labor college in America. Altho the addition of a new building to school quarters doubled its floor space, enrollment jumped from 300 last year and has severely taxed even the enlarged facilities.

"The workers' response to the school has proved the decisive success of a broad left wing labor college," declared Director Bertram D. Wolfe. "Our enrollment of 1,000 by no means represents the number who want to take courses, more than 100 have already being excluded, due simply to lack of space. Dozens of prospective students are applying daily."

Draws Non Members.

The new policy of the school has drawn in students, instructors and even members of the advisory board who are no party members, in an effort to establish an educational center for all militant left wing memberships. Eighty per cent of the students are members of trade unions.

Emphasis has been placed on American working-class problems declared Wolfe. "Altho we are teaching to different classes," he said, "each one is handled in a manner best suited for the needs of students who work in factories and shops and study by night. We are grappling in every class with the pressing, practical problems confronting the labor movement. Even the important theoretical classes keep the application of their theories to American workers' needs ever foremost in mind."

Unions Interested.

New York's trade unions are taking an active interest in the progress of the workers' school. Many are sending promising students, with tuition paid, to train themselves in the school. These students, Wolfe pointed out, will return to their unions better equipped to take up their problems and to serve effectively.

"The policy of the Workers' School," the director emphasized, "differs from that of other so-called workers' schools. Our school is interested first, last and all the time in educating the workers for effective service to the working class. Other schools diffy fally in promoting general culture."

Correspondence Courses Planned.

Due to the heavy registration and the pressing need for such a school as ours, plans are being formulated to give the school a broader field by initiating correspondence and circuit courses. The circuit courses will bring teachers and lecturers to New Jersey, New England and Connecticut industrial centers.

Interested workers should write to the Workers' School, 108 East 14th street, New York City, for catalog and information.

Milwaukee Railroad Workers to Demand Substanial Raises

By O'ZIM, Worker Correspondent.
(Worker Correspondent)

MILWAUKEE, Nov. 28.—The Machinist Local No. 234 is issuing invitations to a mass meeting next Friday to initiate what they call a "get the money campaign."

The invitations point to the "heap the hat slogans" of unsavory memory during the war, and recall the promises of the bosses for better wages and conditions, which were, of course, not kept.

This is to be a mass meeting of all crafts, to set up a demand for 85 cents an hour instead of 72 cents. Boilermakers are asking 75 to 80 cents an hour and helpers 65 cents an hour.

The carman are reorganising and things are picking up. Tha men will not be satisfied with the 2 or 3-cent raise, as has been tha case on other roads. They are in a fighting mood and mean business.

Why don't you write it up? It may be interesting to other workers.

SCULPTOR IS CONVERT TO PROLETARIAN ART; WORKERS AS MODELS

CLEVELAND, O., Nov. 28.—The new proletarian art has found an ardent supporter in Max Kallah, a local sculptor. Returning from a trip to Europe, he has exhibited his five latest pieces of sculpture, for which working man posed. He admits that he is now finding his inspiration in ovarails. Working man, he says, are as full of grace and beauty as Greek gods.

"In most of my new groups of figures," Kallah says, "I have attempted to carry out by idea that the modern artist, living in an industrial age, must depend on workman for his subjects.

"The old Greek sculptors found themselves living in an age of sports and games. So it was only natural that they took the athlete for their model.

"Today we are living in an industrial age. Consequently I can find more beauty of form in the laborer than the ancient sculptor discovered in the athlete."

ALTON SHOPMEN DEMAND UNION RECOGNITION

Repudiate 'Rump'; May Bring Test Case

(Special to The Daily Worker)

BLOOMINGTON, Ill., Nov 28. Railroad shopmen of the Chicago and Alton railroad company have formally repudiated the "company union" forced on them after the 1922 shopmen's strike and have demanded recognition of their affiliation with the Federated Shop Crafts of the American Federation of Labor.

It is expected that the railroad will deny them recognition, and the shopmen are prepared to file a test case with the new U. S. railroad labor board to take advantage of the provisions of the Watson-Parker act that the railway workers may designate any representatives they agree upon.

Organize System.

A system has been organized with representatives from Chicago, Joliet, Peoria, Bloomington, Springfield, Roundhouse, Venice, Slater, Mo., and Kansas City.

Immediately after the shopmen's strike the C. & A. railroad organized the company union and forced the men to accept officers chosen by the company.

Elect Old Officers.

But when the next election was held the men elected to office all of the former labor union officials. Gradually, then, all of them left the company union and became affiliated with the various bona fide shop crafts.

Their test case will be important, as it may result in a supreme court decision on the constitutionality of the Watson-Parker act.

Employes in Motion Pictures May Strike

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 28.—Unless motion picture producers discontinue the open shop, 3,500 employes of the Hollywood studios, members of the Big Four, are preparing to strike on Dec. 1. The Big Four includes stage employes, electrical workers, carpenters and joiners, and the Brotherhood of Painters, Paperhangers and Decorators.

While the producers assert that the effect of the strike will be negligible, as most of their employes are non-union men, the strikers will rely upon a sympathetic strike of the picture-machine operators thruout the country.

Besides demanding a closed shop, the men are asking an eight-hour day, with time and a half for overtime after 5 p. m.

UNIONS APPEAL INJUNCTION IN BOSTON STRIKE

Court Tells 13 Trades Not to Aid Unskilled

BOSTON, Nov. 28.—Thirteen Boston building trades unions are appealing their right to conduct a sympathetic strike. Suffolk County Superior Court Judge Bishop granted the Selig Construction Co. and their sub-contractors an injunction against the building unions forbidding further continuance of the workers' strike on five jobs. The unions have been on strike since Aug. 26 on the buildings of the Pittsburgh Glass Co., Ginn Publishing Co., National Casket Co., Mack Truck Co. and Packard Motor Co.

Violate Wage Agreement.

The company claimed that the Building Trades Council business agent demanded pay of $96 per week for men in the gravel pits and on the wharves of the firm handling building materials. The company held that it would not be subjected to paying the agreed rate of wages on non construction work, altho it is a member of the Building Trades Employers' Association, which makes the wage contract with the unions council. The unions demand union wage rates thruout the concern's employment.

$500,000 Strike.

The union officials and their members are enjoined from continuing the strike, urging others to continue, interfering with the employment of union men who work whether they be of the defendant unions or others, from pushing or reprimanding such union workers, or from interfering in any way to injure or damage the company's work. Half a million dollars' worth of work is represented in the construction work tied up by the strike.

Hoisting engineers' local No. 4, hod carriers' and building laborers' local 49, and local 71 and local 23 of the same, local 17, sheet metal workers; local 33, roofers; local 7, iron-workers; local 3, bricklayers, local 103, electrical workers; local 12, plumbers, and local 537 also; local 4, elevator constructors, and local 1044, painters, are named in the injunction.

Paper Box Strikers Set Up Restaurant

NEW YORK, Nov. 28.—Every striker paper box worker and his family may eat free of charge at the restaurant established by the Paper Box Makers' Union in the Church of All Nations' building, George Powers, chairman strikers' relief committee, is in charge of the restaurant. Bread will be donated by the bakers' union and the United Councils of Working-class Housewives will raise funds to buy other food.

Fred Caiola, manager of the union, finds that the response to the strikers' appeal for funds from other unions will help the fight for the 44-hour week, collective bargaining and minimum scale of wages. Paper box manufacturers, organized in an association, are endeavoring to establish complete open shop conditions. New York police still co-operate with them in this attempt by riding on each strike-breaking delivery wagon leaving paper box factories.

Autos and Buses Put Electric Line in Junk

MARION, Ill., Nov. 28—Automobiles at midnight brought about the final abandonment of the Coal Belt Electric Railway, which has connected Marion, Herrin and Carterville for 25 years. Passenger receipts have been showing a deficit for four years, but authority for discontinuance was not obtained from the Illinois commerce commission until the first of this month. Concrete highways, individual automobiles and bus lines are given as the cause for the abandonment of the line, which is credited with a great deal of the coal mine development in

A NEW NOVEL

By Upton Sinclair

(Copyright, 1926, by Upton Sinclair)

XII

Besides completing Bunny's political education, this incident was important to him in another way; it was the cause of Vee Tracy's taking over the management of his life. Ross senior got the moving picture lady on the telephone that very evening, and he said, "Look here, Vee, you're laying down on your job!"

"How do you mean, Mr. Ross?"

"My name is Dad," said the voice, "and what I mean is that you're not taking care of my son like I wanted you to do. He's been a-gettin' into trouble with these Bolsheviks again, and it's all because you don't see enough of him."

"But Mr.—Dad—I've been trying to make him study—I thought that was what you wanted."

"Well, you forget about him studying, that's all bunk, it ain't a-goin' to do him no good, and besides, he don't do it; he just goes off to Socialist meetin's, and he'd better be with you."

"Oh, Dad!" There was a little catch in Vee's voice. "There's nothing I'd like better! I'm just crazy about that boy."

"Well, you take him under your wing and keep him there, and if you can get him loose from these reds, I'll remember you in my will."

So after that Bunny found that he could have a date with her beloved at any hour of the day or night. She never told him the reason—no, her idea of truth-telling did not go that far! She let him think it was because of his overwhelming charms, and his male egotism was satisfied with the explanation. She would make feeble pretenses at resistance. "Oh, Bunny, Dad will think I'm wasting your time, he'll call me a vamp!" And Bunny would answer, "You goose, he knows that if I'm not with you, I may be off at some Socialist meeting!"

They were so happy, so happy! The rapture of fresh young souls and fresh young bodies, eager, quivering in every nerve! Their love suffused their whole beings; everything became touched with magic—the sound of their voices, the gestures of their hands, even the clothing they wore, the cars they drove, the houses they lived in. They flew together—the telephone girls were overworked keeping them in touch. Bunny became chat in the slang of the time was known as a "one-arm driver"; also he studied the arts of cajoling professors and cutting lectures. His conscience was easy, for had he not done his duty by the Socialist movement, with that "one graud" of Dad's? Besides the strike was over, and the clothing workers had won a few concessions; the leaders had been released, and the promised "Moscow revelations" forgotten by the newspapers, and therefore by everybody else.

Vee would still not let Bunny come to the studio where she was working. For the next picture, perhaps, but not this one; he and his Bolsheviks wouldn't like it, and he must put off seeing it as long as possible. But all the rest of her time was his—every precious instant. The elderly housekeeper received a five dollar bill now and then, and was deaf, dumb and blind. Vee's room in the bungalow was upstairs, the only second-story room, open on all four sides, and with ivy wreathing its windows; inside it was all white, a bower of loveliness. Here they belonged to each other; and tears of ecstacy would come into Vee's eyes. "Oh, Bunny, Bunny! I swore I'd never do this; and here I am, worse in love than I ever dreamed! Bunny, if you desert me, I shall die!" He would smother her fears in kisses; it was a crime for the application of another old saying, that actions speak louder than words!

There was no cloud in the sky of their happiness; except just one little cloud, no bigger than a man's hand! Bunny did not see it at all, and the woman saw it for an instant or so, and then looked the other way. Oh, surely the rose will bloom, forever.

XIII

The hands of destiny, turning upon the face of the movie clock, had brought Vee's hour of glory again. The great picture was ready, and once more she was on all the billboards of the city: "Schmunsky-Superba presents Viola Tracy in the twelve reel Supersp ecial, The Devil's Deputy, Million Dollar Heart Drama of the Russian Revolution." The scene which ornamented the billboards disclosed Vee, as usual with her lingerie torn, crouching the arms of the ineffably handsome young American secret service agent, and the agent presenting a revolver to a mass of tangled black whiskers, behind which hideous foreign faces lurked.

Also there was publicity in the newspapers, columns and columns about the picture, the authors of the book, the continuity man and the director and the writer of the titles and the artists and the decorators and the costumers and the musicians; but most of all about the star. Was it to be expected that the publicity man should drop no hint to the reporters about the fascinating romance of his prince who had now become Miss Tracy's most intimate friend? It had been expected by Bunny, and maybe by Dad, but assuredly not by anyone else. The reporters sang songs to the young oil prince, and sweet, sentimental soft-sister ladies sought to lure him into revealing how it felt to be the very, very dearest dear friend of such a brilliantly scintillating star of the movie heavens. One day it was rumored they were engaged to be married, and the next day they were not; and if they said nothing, the reporters knew what they ought to have said. And when Bunny would not give his picture, they snapped him on the street and when he turned his face away, they gave it a jolly caption: "Oil Prince Is Shy."

No Time to Lose

There is no time to lose in the fight for the lives of Nicola Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti. This becomes very apparent as the judicial proceedings, that have stretched over the last six and one-half years, now appear to be moving more rapidly. The usual "court's delay" has given way to new energy in pushing these two workers, innocent of the charges against them, into the electric chair and to death.

Three plans of fighting the master class in its determination to commit this murder of workers have been approved as follows:

First: The sending of a mass delegation of trade unionists to visit Governor Fuller, of Massachusetts, and demand his intervention against the perpetration of this frame-up.

Second:—The holding of a National Sacco-Vanzetti Congress in New York City some time in January.

Third:—Urging the demand for a congressional investigation of the activities of the department of justice in the Sacco-Vanzetti case.

All of these proposals are good. Workers everywhere should agitate in support of them.

The necessity for haste, however, is shown especially in the efforts to carry out the demand for the congressional investigation.

The Detroit convention of the American Federation of Labor voted in favor of this proposal. That was as far as the convention would go in the fight for the prisoners. It must be made to go the limit, however, on this proposition.

Congress meets next week for its short term. It will adjourn early for the holidays. It will reassemble in January and then rush thru its work in order to adjourn March 4, when its term expires. There are only a few weeks, or it would seem days, during which to get results.

The American working class does not yet realize the importance and the significance of the Sacco-Vanzetti case. Labor does not feel the threat to its interests involved in this frame-up. An ably presented statement of the case forced upon congress will help warn all labor of the danger. Even the kept press will be compelled to lift its embargo of silence.

The congressional investigation is therefore important. It should be realized, the quicker the better. The time to get to work energetically on this phase of the Sacco-Vanzetti case is today.

Imperialist Assassins in China

British imperialism has taken Chinese students and turned them over to their own privately subsidized hangmen to be murdered.

This news should prove very interesting to United States Senator William E. Borah, who has counselled caution by the profit powers in their dealings with the Chinese situation.

Here is another development proving, contrary to Borah's fond hopes, that the imperialist bandits have no intention of quitting China, allowing the peoples of this great nation to work out their own destiny, as they have shown themselves fully capable of doing, even in the face of every obstruction offered by the invaders. The victories of the Cantonese only drive the imperialists to greater and bloodier excesses.

Young students, members of the Kuomintang, are arrested in the British concession at Tientsin by British police. On instructions of the British embassy at Pekin, that acts on orders from London, these students are turned over to the Chinese militarists, who could not continue their counter revolutionary activities for a day, were it not for the money and arms furnished them, and the military assistance given them by the imperialist powers.

These cold-blooded and deliberate murders must arouse the whole Chinese nation to even greater efforts to drive their enemies into the sea. It must reveal to the workers of Europe and America the real nature of the capitalist class that oppresses labor at home, while it seeks to wield the whip of slavery over nations it would subject to its will. The death cries of the Cantonese students murdered by the imperialist assassins calls for the unity of all workers, thruout the world.

Tested and Found Wanting

Fourteen hundred coal miners on strike in the anthracite field indicate that the conditions promised by President John L. Lewis under the new agreement with the hard coal barons are not satisfactory to the workers. The test of a wage agreement, in its application to working conditions, comes in the day-to-day relations between the workers and the bosses. The anthracite agreement has thus been tested and found wanting. The DAILY WORKER predicted this when Lewis imposed the agreement on the miners in the tri-district conference at Scranton. Its predictions made nearly one year ago have now been verified.

Every reader should not only carelessly glance over but carefully study the edited reports of the discussions at the very important meeting of the enlarged executive committee of the Communist International now being held at Moscow. This is the most significant news event in the world today. The discussions at Moscow help explain the developments in Mexico, China and other centers of struggle against world imperialism. It is necessary that all work ers understand them.

Count Ludwig Salm von Hoogstraeten, former husband of the oil millionairess, Millicent Rogers, desires to become a citizen of the United States. The count, not having worked in the past, should have a bright future in front of him, since he cannot be accused of wishing to overthrow a system that enables him to live without working. Outside of working the matrimonial pitch.

The Mexican Republic will be able to develop considerable strength in its own defense thru its ability to divide the profiteers of the United States and Great Britain.

The Achievements of the Party - -

By C. E. Ruthenberg
General Secretary,
Workers (Communist) Party.

EDITOR'S NOTE: — This is the second of the series of articles on the November meeting of the central committee, announced in The DAILY WORKER last Saturday.

IN the first article on the discussions and resolution of the November meeting of the central committee the question whether there were opportunities for the development of the revolutionary movement of the workers and building the Workers (Communist) Party in the period of great imperialist development of American capitalism and capitalist prosperity, was answered in the affirmative by an analysis of the situation of the American workers. The concrete proof that this analysis is correct is to be found in the achievements of the party in broadening its influence among the workers during the past year.

The collapse of the labor party movement, thru its absorption and betrayal by the LaFollette progressive movement, resulted in the temporary isolation of the Workers (Communist) Party, which was the leader of the class movement for independent political action. The problem which the party faced was the formulation of those policies and tactics which would again enable the party to establish contact with the masses of workers and direct them into common struggles with the Communists. The resolution of the central committee establishes the fact that the party has important achievements to its credit in achieving this end. The resolution declares:

"In spite of the period of capitalist prosperity the Party is breaking its isolation and has succeeded in broadening its influence and increasing its prestige among the masses of workers, its position today in the organized labor movement and among the working masses generally, is far in advance of what it was a year ago."

The Party Leadership in the Workers' Struggles.

In surveying the work of the party during the last year, thru which it has made these advances, its leadership in the struggles of the workers for a higher standard of wages and improved working conditions must be given first place. The outstanding fact of the labor movement during the last year is, that with one exception, every important, mass struggle of the workers during this period has been under Communist leadership.

THE Passaic strike is the most striking example of these struggles. Its importance consists not in the fact of a ten-month struggle of these workers against all the forces which the capitalists could bring to bear against them. The Passaic strike is the first great uprising of unorganized, highly exploited workers in the great machine industry of this country in many years. Since the great industrial struggles of 1912, Lawrence, Patterson, McKees Rock, and similar spontaneous strikes of unorganized workers lead by the I. W. W., there has been no movement of importance among these workers. Passaic is the first new sign of life and readiness to enter into the struggle against the capitalists among these workers, and therefore its importance to the labor movement of this country.

It is no secret that our party initiated the movement among the Passaic workers. The skeleton organization was formed under the leadership of the party. Our party furnished the organizational forces, the program for the struggle and was the dynamic force which supported and lead strike in all its phases.

The Passaic strike has not remained a struggle of the 16,000 workers of Passaic alone. Thru the relief campaign developed thru the support of the party, broad masses of workers were brought to the support of the Passaic strikers. The strikers have fought the strike on the picket lines, but behind them have stood the half million workers who were mobilized in their support thru the relief campaign. Thru this broadening of the struggle Passaic has become a symbol of militant struggle thruout the labor movement of the whole country.

The strike has not remained only an industrial struggle, but thru the party initiative it has been developed as a political issue, which has been raised on a national scale.

THE Furriers' strike, under Communist leadership, is another example of the achievements of the party. The Furriers' strike was won in the face of the efforts at sabotage and betrayal in which the American Federation of Labor participated. It stands out as the first strike involving thousands of workers which has been won in recent years. The I. L. G. W. U. strike in New York City, which has just resulted in a partial settlement and partial victory for the workers belongs to the same category.

What other struggle of a major character, involving thousands of workers has been fought during the last year except these strikes under Communist leadership which have given new hope and courage to the workers because of the militant character of the struggle?

There has been only one such struggle, the anthracite strike, resulting in a debacle for the workers. The party played its part in the anthracite strike, but here it was not yet strong enough to wrest the leadership from the reactionary Lewis machine and secure the adoption of its program for breaking the whole strength of the anthracite miners against the coal barons.

Through its part in the struggles in the province of the party among the workers has increased. There is a growing sentiment, springing out of the record of the party in these struggles, that the only living, virile force in the labor movement today, which dares challenge the great power of the American capitalists, is the Workers (Communist) Party.

The Fight for Protection of the Foreign Born.

IT was one party which first took up the fight against the exception laws thru which it is proposed to register, photograph, fingerprint, and regulate the movements from place to place of the foreign born workers. Since these laws were first proposed in 1922 the party has repeatedly taking the initiative to mobilize the labor movement against them. It is the fact that a mass movement was organized against these laws which has thus far prevented their enactment into law, with the dire consequences resulting therefrom in crippling the efforts of the foreign born workers for organization in unions and participation in struggles of labor against the capitalists.

The movement for the protection of the foreign born developed in a broader form during the last year than previously. The national conference held in Washington in May showed that workers' organizations with a membership of four hundred thousand had been drawn into this struggle fighting with our party against these laws.

The Campaign for a Labor Party

THE party thru out the slogan of "A United Labor Ticket in the 1926 Elections" early in the election campaign this year, making the election campaign part of the struggle to again bring to the fore independent political action by the workers thru the formation of a labor party. While the movement for a labor party has not taken on the volume of 1923-24, the party has definite achievements to its credit in this field.

In Pennsylvania and Ohio local labor parties were formed in a number of places. In Massachusetts the party participated in the labor party conference thru which a committee of trade unionists, representatives of the socialist party and the Workers (Communist) Party was set up to carry forward the work of forming a labor party in that state. In Minnesota the party influence in the farmer-labor party is again increasing, because it came to front as the exponent and defender of independent political action by the workers and farmers against the efforts of the petty bourgeoisie leader within the farmer-labor party to betray the farmer-labor party thru a movement back to the democratic party.

Persistent Work Will Bring Results.

THESE achievements of the party are not spectacular. The influence and leadership of a Communist Party is not build thru spectacular methods, but by steady, persistent work in the labor movement. The gains the party has made show that its policies and tactics are those which are gradually broadening its influence and winning the support of new groups of workers. They show that hard work in support of a correct Communist program will bring results for the party even in a labor movement, which is a period of imperialist development and under its influence is generally moving to the right. They show, that while the official labor movement is developing in the direction of class collaboration, there is at the same time a left development among those workers who are not sharing in the privileges of the aristocracy of labor.

The party achievements in broadening its influence can be made greater by mobilizing more of the strength of the party in support of its campaigns. The central committee resolution correctly declares:

"The party must mobilize for fuller use of its strength in applying the policies and tactics thru which it has made these gains, and in taking up of its immediate program to build the party and extend its influence among the masses. Such a mobilization will bring even greater gains than are to be recorded for the past year.

Great Britain and United States Fight for Supremacy

in Saturday's DAILY WORKER. Ed.) stressed the necessity for struggle against capitalist "rationalization" of industry because it consolidates the stabilization of capitalism and results in the bitterest exploitation of the workers. (Rationalization may be briefly explained by comparing it to the methods of Ford in this country. In Germany especially, the "Fordization" of large industry on a huge scale is a big question before the workers—Ed.)

During Friday evening's session, under the chairmanship of Thaelmann of Germany, Remelle (France) on behalf of the credentials committee, reported that there were present 191 members of the enlarged executive of the Comintern, of which 100 had decisive votes, the other 91 being consultative. These delegates represent about fifty different countries.

Chinese Party on Right Path.

Tan Pin Hsiang (China) pointed out that the national revolution in China indicates the unfirmness of capitalist stabilization. The growing conflicting interests of England and America show the wrongness of the idea that the Anglo-American bloc insures a long period of stabilization.

The Chinese Communist Party, said Tan Tin Hsiang, worked under the most difficult conditions. The anti-imperialist struggle of the revolutionary peasants caused the party to make certain mistakes in this respect, but it is now on the right path and is promoting the peasants' movement, whose prospects in China are enormous. At the same time, the Communist Party is participating in the revolutionary national united front against the imperialists.

The parties of the Communist International, he said, must help the Chinese Communist Party, heeding to it their experience in the revolutionary struggles of the peasants of other countries.

Riese, representative of the Wedding opposition group in Germany, speaking of the internal situation of the German Communist Party, attempted to defend the position of the ultra-lefts and prove what he called the unsatisfactory progress and drift to the right of the party. The speaker was often interrupted with ironical remarks from the German delegates.

Ovation Greets Thaelmann.

Ernest Thaelmann (candidate of the party against Hindenburg in the last elections), speaking at Friday's session, had been greeted with an ovation. He briefly reviewed the most important events in international politics since the last plenum, the Polish coup of Pilsudski, the British general strike and general strife and development of the revolution in China.

He said the British strike proved the huge fighting forces latent in the western proletariat. He declared that the growth of the Soviet Union was the most important revolutionary factor, as the process of socialist construction going on in the U. S. S. R. is the strongest argument against capitalist stabilization and the social-democrats who support this stabilization.

Turning to the situation in the Communist Party of Germany, Thaelmann declared that the victory over the ultra-lefts in the party was the highest achievement of the past year because the ultra-left seeks to destroy the party which is the sole force capable of preventing the utilization of Germany by the western European powers against the Soviet Union.

Strong Leadership in Germany.

The German Communist Party, he said, actually has a strong leadership whose policy corresponds to the views of the Comintern. German capitalism has grown stronger since 1923 and has actually again embarked on an imperialist policy.

Under such conditions, the work of the Communist parties in the trade unions is the most important because there they can best fight the stabilization of capitalism, the social-democracy and the trade union bureaucracy.

Must Win the Masses.

The Communist Party must win the masses, Thaelmann said, thru careful every-day work within the trade unions, at the same time keeping in sight the final aim. The speaker then reviewed the weak points of the German party, pointing out that the party pursued the right line in the struggle against the consequences of capitalist rationalization, achieved big successes in the elections in the metal and other big trade unions and performed excellent work on the questions of unemployment, the compensation of the German princes, and the toilers' congress. The party is actively working in the mass organizations of the workers, in the unions and carries a strict attention to the movements of the "Red Front Soldiers," women and relief.

The Party of the Revolution.

Concluding amid a stormy ovation, Thaelmann adhered to Bukharin's words with which he opened the plenum: "We remain the party of the revolutionary, proletarian dictatorship." In this sense, Thaelmann said, we are the party of the united proletarian front in the mass work, every-day struggle against the bourgeoisie.

Vereeycke, of Belgium, participating in the debate on Bukharin's report, dwelt on the question of capitalist rationalization which is a desperate attempt to adapt industry to postwar conditions of capitalism and to check the processes of disintegration at work on the system. Communists, he said, stand for nationalization in the interests of the working class not in the interests of the bourgeoisie, namely, the nationalization of industry, workers' control of production and higher wages.

Renaudel, of Germany, spoke of the crisis due to the disproportion between industrial production and the possibilities of finding markets, wherefor the bitter struggle now proceeding. The communist parties must fight the social-democrats who support the full stabilization of capitalism and must find practical measures of struggle, especially within the trade unions.

Latin-Americas Heard From.

Codaville, of Latin-America, called the plenum's attention to the great importance of South America as a market. Forty per cent of the capital invested belongs to the United States. Twenty-six per cent of the foreign trade of the United States is with the South American countries. Capitalist exploitation to the south of the U. S. is increasing and the dissatisfaction of the toilers constitutes a favorable ground for a national revolutionary movement against foreign imperialism.

Stern, of Czecho-Slovakia, pointed out that the problem of capitalist stabilization must be considered in a perfect light with regard to each separate country. A substantial part of rationalization, he declared, consisted in the capitalist onslaught upon the working class.

Polish Party Influence Grows.

Prukhniak, of Poland, dwelt on the political situation in that country stating that the short-lived period when the Pilsudski government was actually somewhat successful is nearing its end and that the influence of the Polish Communist Party, growing rapidly, must be consolidated.

The representative of the young Turkish Communist Party, reviewing the economic and political situation in the countries of Asia Minor, pointed out that stock must be taken of the experience of the Turkish nationalist movement by the other countries to the east, especially China.

Given a great ovation, Clara Zetkin, veteran of the German revolutionary movement, also spoke on the question of capitalist stabilization, stressing its temporary and unstable nature. Capitalism is suffering a fatal disease, modern bourgeois civilization is rotten to the core—only the proletarian revolution can save world culture.

Recapitulating the international situation of the German party, Weichey (Germany), refuted Riese's (of the Wedding opposition referred to above) assertion about the weakness of the party and declared that its influence was growing because of the correct leadership of the present central committee.

Stabilization Reveals Contradictions.

Chilhum, of Sweden, remarked that in the Scandinavian countries, the social-democracy was the most reactionary and dangerous enemy, having a strong influence on the labor masses. Stabilization actually reveals, he said, beginning to show class contradictions. The Scandinavian bourgeoisie is preparing for struggle. The Communist parties must counteract this by more intense work among the masses.

Pointing out that capitalist stabilization in the Balkans varied with different countries, Nikolayovitch (Yugo-Slavia) used as an example the Stabilization Loan of Yugo-Slavia, which is coming more and more under their control. Yugo-Slavia is becoming slowly industrialized. The Balkan parties must take stock of these peculiarities of the separate Balkan countries and must carry on their work on this basis.

Capitalist stabilization was also discussed by Brandt of Poland who pointed out the importance of the technical improvements being made in big industry, especially in Germany and France.

Youth Movement Has Grown.

Schueller, of the Communist Youth International, stressing the necessity to give a clear definition to the slogans against rationalization declared that the Communists are not against rationalization as scientific, technical improvement, of industrial organization, but against capitalist rationalization whose consequence, especially on the young workers, is nefarious. He stated that the Communist youth International has grown both politically and organizationally.

Ifferta Sturm (International Women's Secretariat of the Comintern) pointed to the considerable progress below made in the work of organization and the growth of influence of the Communist parties among the women masses. In England, for example, the party mobilized women for active strike help, while in Germany the Union of Red Women, and Red Young Women increased in membership from a few hundred to 20,000 during one year.

More Attention Needed.

The main defects in the leaderships of the various parties of the Comintern is that they fail to realize the great importance of and pay too little adequate attention to the women's movement, said Comrade Sturm. The removal of this defect would make the prospects for organization among the women on a large scale, decidedly favorable, she concluded.

Hilt (Norway) speaking of the Norwegian party, said that some comrades at one time inclined towards "right" tendencies in questions pertaining to a united front with the social-democrats. Such drifts to the right have actually been outlived by the party, he declared, and the party has since been fairly successful in its work in the trade unions.

That the productive forces of capitalism are not surpassing the pre-war levels of production was stressed by Louinadze (Caucasus). Youth interests in coaching in the question of stabilization.

J. T. Murphy of the British Communist party analyzing the internal situation in England portrayed the rapid pace in the differentiation of capital and labor into two opposing camps as illustrated by the decomposition of the liberal party as a political factor.

Podvitsky (Workers' Sport International), speaking on the question of the International workers' sport movement, stated that more attention must be paid to the development of proletarian sports organizations, and recommend that the plenum select a special commission to look into this problem.

Greet Army Representative.

The speech of the representative of the Red Army School "Tyatel" and the training battalion of the Lenin Rifle Committee of the Russian Soviet Federated Soviet Republic, was greeted in the plenum amidst tremendous applause. Replying on behalf of the plenum Thaelmann greeted the representative of the workers' army.

Wlof (Germany) spoke sharply against the opposition declarations of Reise and declared it was the policy of the ultra-lefts which estranged the social-democratic and non-partisan workers. A united front and successful tactics are possible only if an energetic struggle is carried on against all deviations, he concluded.

Y. M. C. A. SECRETARY TELLS YOUTH HOW TO WORK IN WALL STREET AND STILL ESCAPE LAKE OF BRIMSTONE

NEW YORK, Nov. 29.—The temptations, assault and the opportunities that confront the 30,000 boys in their "teens who work in this city's financial district are told by Edward D. Duffield, secretary of the "Wall Street boys' branch of the Y. M. C. A.—that organization with the plaster-of-Paris amilo which aims to mold American youth into the triangular composites of St. Anthony, Apollo, and Andrew Carnegie, all dead ones, by the way.

This small army of youth, according to Gray, make up the force of messengers, clerks, office boys, elevator operators, porters, pages, newsboys, collectors, etc.

That the secretary is not insensitive to the temptations which surround these boys is shown by his reference to "the urge to win success by noble achievement," their contact with "endless vistas studded full of 'filthy lucre,'" their observation of "others who are fast accumulating vast fortunes," their "hearing of money spoken of in large denominations," their listening to talk of "a million dollars as commonly as the such amounts grow on trees."

And then, as tho to appease the men who donate such large sums to the work of making American youth into the Anthony-Apollo-Farnegie triangle, the secretary graciously explains that these 30,000 young fellows do not get any too definite idea of "the economic truths that underlie financial transactions and the business of the Wall Street district. They do not appreciate the great part in industrial advancement and development of human society banks and investment houses accomplish."

The epitome of the secretary's statement is that when these boys dream of easy ways to loot their employers, when they imagine the big business men as casting expensive meals in luxurious clubs, when they have an urge to play the market themselves, they are skirting close to the gates of hell-but, if they realize the sanctity of Wall Street's position in this scheme of things, they will take advantage of the Y's program, "which will help them in their fight for an all-round developed young manhood."

Here's a slogan for Wall Street's army of 30,000 young employes: "Our bosses fight for well-rounded purses we fight for a well-rounded young manhood."

Start the ticker. Let us pray and prey!

WORKERS HAIL SOVIET REVOLUTION

Current Events

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY

DESPITE repeated proof that responsible executives in the capitalist political household never took Calvin Coolidge seriously, a myth was assiduously built around the "silent man in the white house" with the object of developing a legendary character that the public would have confidence in after they saw practically every other member of the old Harding gang getting caught burying the loot. Since Coolidge succeeded the rotund and pleasure-loving, tho dumb, Harding, press the only accomplishments he can boast of is quibbling elected and playing chum to Mellon, multi-millionaire secretary of the treasury and boss of the administration.

THE admin, despite the fact that it was republican, took a devilish delight in dropping Cal's recommendations in the waste basket. During the days of the Teapot Dome hurricane, while there was much hysterical clamor for the heads of the unlucky burglars who got caught, Cal kept his head—shut. Only when it looked as if there might be a march on Washington for the purpose of tarooing Harry Daugherty into the Potomac did the president ask Harry to take himself to Courthouse Square, Ohio.

NEVERTHELESS it was expected that New England would stand by the only tenant that section of the United States contributed to the white house in many moons. But when Coolidge made a personal appeal to the voters of Massachusetts for his friend Butler, the wage-cutting mill magnate of New Bedford, the said voters got out their scalping knives when they were dance and went forth to separate Cal's friend from his political scalp. This scalp is now drying in the democratic wigwam. A strike-breaker had his day.

WILLIAM RANDOLPH HEARST'S papers in Chicago supported Frank L. Smith, republican. In New York they supported Ogden Mills, republican. The day before yesterday Hearst was a white house guest and invited Coolidge to spend his next vacation at the Hearst ranch in California. Hearst is a democrat and a lover of the "peepul." So is his old man, Arthur Brisbane, who supports Mussolini and Aimee McPherson. Perhaps those celebrities are prospects for some of Arthur's real estate. Some chop suey is this Hearst outfit.

GOVERNOR LEN SMALL of Illinois sees no reason why Frank L. Smith should not be seated in the United States senate. This is not surprising. If boodle were a millstone around an illinois politician's neck Small would now be scraping the ground with his nose. Small got

KELLOGG DENIES ADMITTANCE TO SOVIET ENVOY

Visa Refused Minister to Mexico

WASHINGTON, Nov. 5.—Secretary of State Kellogg, again demonstrating his puerile fear and hatred of Communists, has ordered that Mme. Alexandra Kollontai, Soviet government minister to Mexico, be denied admittance to the United States. The reasons he gives are the same that he gave for denial of admittance of Comrades Comrades Kenney and Shapiro, Salsavsin, Communist member of the British parliament.

Visa Refused in Berlin.

Mme Kollantai wished to visit in the United States before going to Mexico where she assumed her duties as Russian minister. When she applied for a visa at the American embassy in Berlin her request was refused, with the terse answer that "the secretary of state didn't want her in the United States."

"She's a Communist."

When asked why the Soviet minister was denied admittance Kellogg assent in Germany said: Mme. Kollantai was one of the outstanding members of the Russian Communist Party, and has been actively associated with the international Communist subversive movement."

The law which Kellogg relies upon to maintain his action, was passed during the heat of the war, and prescribed by President Wilson. Kellogg is using this act against all persons desiring to enter the U. S. who show any in-

Emergency Call

$5,000 Must Be Raised for the Keep the Daily Worker Fund by Tuesday

Celebrate 9th Anniversary of the Russian Revolution by Helping The Daily Worker!

By C. E. RUTHENBERG
General Secretary, Workers (Communist) Party.

The whole membership of our party and those who sympathize with its program of struggle in the workers' interest must demonstrate their loyalty to The DAILY WORKER by raising $5,000 for the Keep The DAILY WORKER fund by next Tuesday.

The DAILY WORKER has notes, pay rolls of its printing plant, and other obligations falling due on Tuesday aggregating $5,000. These must be paid. There is no possibility of postponing these obligations.

The only way The DAILY WORKER can raise this $5,000 is thru a quick mobilization of its supporters to collect this sum thru an intensification of the drive for the Keep The DAILY WORKER fund.

On Saturday, Sunday and Monday the celebrations of the 9th anniversary of the proletarian revolution in Russia will be held. These meetings will bring together thousands of workers who support the revolutionary struggle for the emancipation of the workers.

There is no better way of demonstrating loyalty and support of the achievements of the workers and peasants of the Soviet Union than by supporting the revointionary workers' movement in this country.

At the present moment support of the revointionary workers' movement in this country can best be demonstrated by helping the Workers (Communist) Party KEEP THE DAILY WORKER as the militant daily voice of the revolutionary struggle of the workers.

The questions which the workers and peasants of the Soviet Union ask of the representatives of the Workers (Communist) Party are: How the revolutionary movement growing in the United States? When will you be able to follow in our footsteps?

We ask every member of the party, every friend of the workers' and peasants' government of the Soviet Union, to celebrate the victory of the proletarian revolution in Russia and show their support of the struggles of the workers and peasants of the Soviet Union by HELPING TO KEEP THE DAILY WORKER BY AIDING IT IN THE PRESENT EMERGENCY.

The $5,000 which The DAILY WORKER must raise by Tuesday can be raised if the party members and supporters of The DAILY WORKER take up this task in the spirit which the Russian workers have shown in their struggles.

Every nucleus secretary must immediately visit the members and collect the money which they have raised through selling Keep The DAILY WORKER certificates.

Every leading committee of the party must exhaust every possibility of securing contributions for the Keep The DAILY WORKER fund.

The situation of The DAILY WORKER must be presented at every celebration of the 9th Anniversary of the Russian revolution and appeal for The DAILY WORKER made.

Every member of the party and sympathizer with its work who does not send a contribution through the above ways should send a contribution direct to The DAILY WORKER.

WE MUST KEEP THE DAILY WORKER FOR OUR MOVEMENT. TO ACHIEVE THAT, WE MUST RAISE $5,000 OF THE KEEP THE DAILY WORKER FUND BY TUESDAY.

EVERY MEMBER AND EVERY SYMPATHIZER: TO WORK TO KEEP THE DAILY WORKER!

EVERY LEADING COMMITTEE OF THE PARTY: TO WORK TO KEEP THE DAILY WORKER!

CHARGE FRAUD IN ELECTIONS BY CHICAGOANS

A series of court contests and charges of fraud followed today in the wake of Tuesday's election in Cook county.

Edward J. Glackin, democrat, former member of the state legislature, prepared to contest the reelection to congress of Ellsworth W. Sprout, republican, by 3,179 votes in the third district.

Harding Offers Reward.

With only 247 votes separating him from Martin J. O'Brien, democrat, in the race for county treasurer, George F. Harding, republican, announced he would contest and conduct a campaign to "clean up the ballot box crooks."

Harding charged that 25,000 votes had been stolen from him. He offered rewards totaling $5,000 for information leading to conviction for fraud.

Big Rubber Companies Merge to Develop New Manufacturing Process

AKRON, O., Nov. 5.—The formation of the American Anode, Inc., e combination of subsidiaries of the B. F. Goodrich Rubber Co., the Eastman Kodak Co. and the Anode Rubber Co., Ltd., Toronto, for the purpose of manufacturing rubber goods by a new method, has been announced.

The new company will manufacture rubber articles under processes patented by Dr. P. Klein of Budapest and Drs. S. E. Shepherd and L. W. Eberlin of the Eastman laboratories. The new processes will revolutionize the methods of compounding, milling and vulcanizing rubber. By the new process rubber bands no thicker then a thread can be made and are so strong that they cannot be broken by the bare hands.

For nine-glorious years the star of the Russian Revolution has guided the workers of the world on the road to freedom.

DENY ARREST OF MACIA DISCLOSES ATTEMPT AT DESTROYING MUSSOLINI

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PARIS, Nov. 5.—Italian and Spanish circles today issued vehement denials of reports that the arrest of Colonel Riccotti Garibaldi in Nice and of Colonel Macia in Perpignan have disclosed a plot engineered for the purpose of luring opponents of General de River end Mussolini into their respective countries for the purpose of crushing them.

FOES TO OPEN WAR ON VARE IN U. S. SENATE

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, Nov. 5.—A two-edged sword was being forged today for the opponents of the claim of William S. Vare of Pennsylvania to a seat in the United States senate.

Vare will not only face a bitter attack upon the huge expenditures for him in the primary, but it will be charged that he was fraudulently elected in Tuesday's balloting, it was indicated today.

New Tactics Evolved.

The new tactics being evolved in the battle against the conqueror of George Wharton Pepper and William B Wilson were disclosed in a statement of Senator George W. Norris, Nebraska progressive republican.

Altho Vare came thru the election with a big majority, Norris declared he was repudiated outside of Philadelphia and triumphed there thru manipulation of the ballots.

Bare Majority Sufficient.

The real significance behind Norris' move to challenge the legality of Vare's election lies in the fact that only a majority vote is required to pass upon—and possibly oust—a senator where his right to take the oath is questioned. To expel a member after he has been seated, and where there is no question of the legality of his election requires a two-thirds vote.

WORKERS PARTY VOTE INCREASES IN NEW YORK

Election Officials Fail to Record Vote Correct

NEW YORK, Nov. 5.—The parties' report on the vote for Communist candidates, according to the police records, shows an increase in the vote for governor over 1924 in Bronx end Kings counties. Gitlow received a total vote of 4,668 in the counties of Manhattan, Bronx, Kings, Queens and Richmond, showing in the Bronx an increase of 394 end 170 in Brooklyn as against the Workers Party candidate for governor in 1924. The complete report of the vote is not yet in, as the upstate returns have not been published. The report shows a drop in the vote of the Workers Party in Manhattan.

Felled to Record Vote.

Numerous complaints received from voters for the Workers Party—notably in the 4th assembly district, Manhattan, as well as in other assembly districts—show the same treatment recorded opposition voters as in previous years. The records of the police department show that the election boards in assembly districts failed to record the vote so that in many instances the names of the Communist candidates do not even appear on the tally sheet.

The increase in the vote in Bronx and Brooklyn, both for the candidate for governor, Gitlow, as well as for United State's senator, Dunne, indicate an increase of from 15 to 25 per cent in the vote which the republican and democratic election boards and ward heelers concealed in Manhattan by failing to count the votes registered for the Workers Party in many assembly districts.

Tammenyites Sore.

This treatment was accorded to the Workers Party especially because of the campaign they have made against Smith as a strikebreaker and exposing his responsibility for the treatment accorded to the striking clothmakers of New York. The republicans are equally responsible fur denying to the Three Million for Stadium.

Army and navy authorities are negotiating for a $3,000,000 joint armory on the Northwestern University campus, it was reported today.

WORKERS ADVISED TO COME EARLY TO NOV. 7 CHICAGO CELEBRATION

With the promise from the committee in charge that the gevel opening the meeting will drop sherply at 8 p. m. Chicago workers will start filling up the four thousand seats in Ashland Auditorium at an early hour Sunday to participate in the celebration of the Ninth Year of the Russian workers' revolution.

The program of folk dances from the Czech opera, "The Bertered Bride," performed by the Czecho-Slovek dancers, will be but one of a group of excellent entertainment numbers that are part of the performences accompanying the speaking.

William Z. Foster, William F. Dunne and Sem Dercy will be the orators of the dey with Arne Swabeck, district organizer of District 8 of the Workers (Communist) Party, under whose ausplece the celebretion is staged, in the chelr.

Boston Student Riot Results in Injuries and Property Damage

BOSTON, Nov. 5.—Twenty persons were injured, five were arrested and scores of students are today facing suspension or expulsion following a wild riot of 600 Messachusetts Institute of Technology men thru Cambridge and this city, leaving a wake of destruction.

Six of the students are suffering from the effects of tear bombs used by the police to quell the rioters, battling with reserves in a dance hall.

Store signs were torn down, window broke broken, automobiles wrecked, cars of the Boston elevated halted, trolley cords cut and window grills ripped off, while two cars on a train in the tunnel were put out of commission altogether.

National Grange to Vote on Endorsement of Organized Labor

PORTLAND, Maine, Nov. 5.—When the National Grange meets here next week, an attempt will be made by the progressive element to have organized labor endorsed by the organization, it is reliably announced.

Endorsement of organized labor has been brought up before at the Grange, and after spirited debates, the resolution was defeated each time. A more determined fight in this direction is expected this year.

RUSSIA MORE POWERFUL THAN EVER BEFORE

Tower of Strength for International Labor

From hundreds of platforms thruout the United States, the message of Communism will be given to the American workingclass on the occasion of the ninth anniversary of the overthrow of capitalist rule and the establishment of a workers' and peasants' government in territory that covers one-sixth of the earth's surface.

Not only is the Soviet Union a star of hope for the industrial proletariat, but all oppressed people, regardless of color find in the workers' and peasants' government a powerful friend and supporter.

Helped the Chinese.

While the imperialist powers were crushing the Chinese people under the militaristic heel the Soviet Union was giving aid and encouragement to a people struggling to free themselves from native and foreign oppressors.

The reactionary labor leaders in all countries and particularly in the United States have tried their best to poison the minds of the masses against Russia but the truth is breaking thru the capitalist blockade and the ninth year of proletarian rule finds the Soviet Union stronger than ever internally and rapidly gaining in influence thruout the world.

106 ORPHANS LEFT BY MINE CAVE-IN DEAD

Mining Camp Bereft of Male Workers

(Special to The Daily Worker)

ISHPEMING, Mich., Nov. 5.—The death of 51 workers in the flooded Barnes-Hecker iron mine has already virtually exterminated the male population of the little mining camp of North Lake and left 160 fatherless children. There are only two men residents left. Practically all the men who died in the mine left families.

Water Recedes.

There is no visible sign of water at 495 feet in the Barnes-Hecker mine, rescue workers who reached that level reported.

Finding of the 14 as yet unrecovered bodies of the men trapped at the 1,050 foot level when a hidden lake engulfed the iron mine will be hastened if the water has disappeared, it was said.

No Chance of Life.

Leading mine authorities from all sections of the state declared today after a conference there was only one chance in ten million that the surging flood which engulfed the mine, had not killed the entire 51.

The first of seven funerals for victims whose bodies have already been recovered will be held tomorrow when William Hunt will be buried. He left a wife and seven children.

Large Families.

Equally large families have been left by other victims. That of Edward Chapman mourns not only the husband and father but also Herman, the eldest of ten children.

Only seven bodies have been recovered of the 51 dead so far. Absently men are working to recover the bodies. A memorial service has been arranged by the mayor of Ishpeming for the victims. The community school closed at North Lake today because only six of the forty pupils attended.

'Downtate' Defeats Repeal of Dry Act in California Vote

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov 5.—Efforts to repeal the Wright act, the state prohibition enforcement law in California, had failed today. What was then to be a commanding lead calling for a repeal, was wiped out as ballots from southern California and rural districts were tabulated.

Early today the vote stood 496,782 for repeal and 546,126, about

...Deny Pluto Press Tale About Garibaldi

BULLETIN.

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, Nov. 5.—The capitalist press story that Colonel Ricciotti Garibaldi, ... under arrest in France, is agent provocateur for Mussolini, was branded by his brother here, General Peppino Garibaldi, as the infamous fascist conspiracy with French police to discredit the leader and organizer of anti-fascists in Europe outside Italy.

He said that he and his brother had always opposed Mussolini and that he is convinced this world-wide campaign against his brother is a malicious fascist invention of the black-shirt brigands who could find no other way to eliminate Garibaldi.

ROME, Nov. 5.—Amidst great public tension, the fascist grand council met today to consider action to be taken to prevent further attacks upon the premier and anti-fascist plots.

The tension was increased by a report published in the Popolo di Roma, declaring that Colonel Ricciotti Garibaldi's arrest in Nice may be linked with a plot against Mussolini, discovered ten days ago when two alleged would-be assassins were discovered at Monte Carlo, whose they were making arrangements for entering Italy.

Submit Drastic Proposals.

The fascist grand council will submit its proposals to the parliament next week. It is anticipated that the provisions will include these:

1) Provision of the death penalty not only for all those who in the future make attempts on the life of the premier, but for those already held in custody, charged with such attempts.

2) Orders for the expulsion of all fascists who assume the duties of the police and military and who act as agents provocateur in luring anti-fascists to plot against the government.

3) Reorganization of the police force, with possible action to create a strong national police force.

4) More rigid supervision of the press.

5) A weeding out of the membership of the fascist party, expelling those who are not wholehearted in their support.

Adoption of such a program by the grand council is tantamount to its enactment, since the parliament is certain to give any legislative approval desired.

Fasciati Decide to Stop All Passports

ROME, Nov. 5.—The Italian cabinet today decided to cancel all passports which have been issued, as a part of the drastic program which is being undertaken to check the plots against the premier and the fascist government. This action, it is understood, is taken to prevent anti-fascists from leaving Italy for foreign lands.

Member of Polish Sejm to Speak in Cleveland Sunday

CLEVELAND, O., Nov. 5.—Andrey Pearchuk, member of the Polish sejm, will speak in Cleveland Sunday, Nov. 21, at 2 p. m. at the Koreny Hall, 3349 W. 11th St., Comrade Pearchuk is a Ukrainian and is a member of the sejm from Ukrainian Poland. He will tell of the horrible persecutions from which the Ukrainians in Poland have suffered. Coming, as he does, at a time, when the "socialist" Pilsudski, is plotting a monarchy in Poland, with himself as the king, Comrade Pearchuk's appearance will be widely greeted.

I. Amter, district secretary of the Workers (Communist) Party, will also speak. Admission is free.

Two Trainmen Lose Lives When Pennsy Uses Extra Trains

HARRISBURG, Pa., Nov. 5.—Two trainmen were killed and four others severely injured early today when two extra freight trains on the Pennsylvania railroad collided at Millersburg, 30 miles from here, according to reports to the Pennsylvania officials here.

The men killed were Paul T. Bailey, Lykens, Pa., an engineer, and Wilbur J. Sees, Sunbury, a brakeman.

ANTHRACITE MINERS STRIKE AGAINST TWO COMPANIES

SCRANTON, Pa., Nov. 5. — Nearly 2,000 anthracite mine workers quit work as the result of two strikes called in this section today.

At Archbald, near here 1,000 employes at the Gravity Slope of the Hudson Coal Company, quit work over a dispute involving the company's action in replacing a number of old miners with new men.

A dispute at Old Forge resulted in 900 men striking against the Pennsylvania Coal Company.

POLICE SHOOT DOWN STRIKER WITHOUT CAUSE

Paper Box Worker Is Ruthlessly Attacked

NEW YORK, Nov. 5.—Dick Guadino, a paper box striker, was shot by an officer Tuesday night at 11 o'clock while he was picketing the shop of Albert and Salkowitz, 50 Bond street. Guadino was looking thru the window to see if any scab work was being turned out at night, when a policeman drove up in a taxicab and, without provocation, fired several shots at Guadino. One shot hit Guadon's head and he was taken to Bellevue Hospital where he was said to be recovering from the wound.

Police Action Flayed.

Fred Caiola, manager of the Paper Box Makers' Union, issued a statement from strike headquarters attacking the police for their brutality. He said that the action against Guadino was unprovoked and that it demonstrated that the police operating in the strike district are faithful servants of the bosses.

"This shooting," declared Caiola, "adds to the former record of the police for brutality against our pickets and protecting the property of the bosses by riding on every delivery wagon carrying boxes from the paper box shops."

Urge Negroes to Organize.

Ira D. Reid, industrial secretary of the New York Urban League, addressed a mass meeting of the strikers in the Church of All Nations yesterday on the relation of Negro workers to the strike. He said that he himself had been a member of the molders' union and two railway unions during strikes and that his experience had taught him that union organization is necessary for the protection of the Negro in industry.

Accepted in Union.

"If your union did not accept Negroes as members, I could not come before you and say that I was with you in your fight," declared Mr. Reid. "But your union does have more than 50 colored members, many of whom are active in the strike. For that reason I say: I wish you all success, and hope that any colored workers who are scabbing on you will cease doing so and join your ranks. Union and solidarity of action regardless of race or color are indispensable for the progress of the working class as a whole.

Algernon Lee, director of the Rand School of Social Science, Betram D. Wolfe, director of the Workers School, and Clarence Miller of the Young Workers' League, also spoke.

JUDGE ENGLISH, FACING CHARGES, QUITS HIS POST

Was Notorious for His Anti-Labor Bias

EAST ST. LOUIS, Ill., Nov. 5.—The first public charges of "high crimes and misdemeanors" against Federal Judge George W. English, who resigned his office today, were made about two years ago. C. B. Thomas, referee in bankruptcy, who was appointed by English and who was also named in the charges, which involved the handling of bankruptcy cases, resigned almost immediately.

The charges first received notice in the house of representatives in Washington when Congressman Harry B. Hawes, senator-elect from Missouri, introduced a resolution in the house asking an investigation of the judge's conduct. A sub-committee of the house judiciary committee had previously obtained evidence against the judge and the full committee recommended impeachment.

Held Stock in Banks.

During the hearing of evidence here and in St. Louis it developed the judge held stock in several banks, which he designated as depositaries for bankruptcy funds.

Judge English, 60 years old, is a native of Vienna, Ill., and was educated in the public schools of Ewing, Ill., and at Wesleyan University. He was a schoolteacher in his early days, was admitted to the bar in 1891 and later served as deputy sheriff, county attorney and member of the Illinois legislature for several terms.

Wilson Appointee.

He was appointed to the federal bench in 1918 by President Wilson when he was an attorney in the in some tax division of the internal revenue department at Washington.

English's resignation came as a surprise to house managers.

"We had called a meeting today of house managers and had no idea that English would resign," said Representative Boies, republican of Iowa.

Boies declared he saw no reason for further action in congress against English.

Got Out From Under.

In the history of the country, five federal judges who were impeached by the house have resigned before their trial by the senate. In each case the senate promptly dropped action against them.

Only six federal judges have faced the impeachment court since the constitution was adopted. Three were convicted and three were acquitted. The last impeachment trial of a member of the judiciary was held in the senate 13 years ago.

QUEEN'S 'ANGEL' STAGES BATTLE WITH HER 'AID'

Rail Magnate and Major Scrap at Horse Show

(Special to The Daily Worker)

SEATTLE, Nov. 5.—Queen Marie's little western jaunt has been marred by an embarrassing scrap between two members of her royal party. The man who is paying the bills, the railroad magnate Samuel Hill, has begun a little personal war against Maj. Stanley Washburn, the queen's aid. "Obey me, or I'll crush you," is the unsentimental phrase used by the queen's "angel" to her aid which is said to have started the spat.

Shut Out Governor.

The hostilities began in Portland where the queen officiated at a live stock show. Mr. Hill, while in the queen's private box at the animal fair, charged Maj. Washburn with "shutting the door in the face of the governor of Oregon," anbrute to the exhibition in an entomobile in which the governor failed to find a seat because Maj. Washburn thot he was more entitled to sit near the royal lady.

The Man "in Command."

Col. John Caroll, in command of the special train said, "Her majesty selected Mr. Washburn as her personal aid on this trip because she had made his acquaintance in Roumania during the war." He punctured this remarks with the following assertion of authority, "No one is on this train without the consent of her majesty and I am in command of the train." But since Mr. Hill is footing the bills, this assertion is brot into question.

It does not appear that the Portland outbreak is the first to have occurred in the entourage, but it is the first intimation of it to reach the public. Major Washburn has not yet made a statement, but to all appearences he has so far not been crushed by the aged Mr. Hill.

JAIL SWEDISH WORKERS WHILE ROYALTY WEDS

Communists Protest Regal Display

(Special to The Daily Worker)

STOCKHOLM, Nov. 5.—Police raided Communist headquarters here and arrested many of the comrades in an effort to prevent demonstrations of the workers and unemployed against the ostentatious display of regality at the wedding of Astrid, princess of Sweden, and Leopold, crown prince of Belgium.

Police charged that bomb attacks were planned by the reds against the four kings assembled here for the monarchial ceremony.

News Suppressed.

News of the arrests of the Communists were suppressed by the newspapers, for fear that even greater demonstrations than had been planned would be staged by the aroused workers.

The bourgeoisie here has gone wild over the wedding and the various social events planned. Every manner of obeisance is being resorted to to demonstrate their "love" for royalty. Only the workers here made any attempt to reveal the exploitation and oppression behind the thrones united.

Much Toil in Presents.

Present worth hundreds of thousands of dollars have been heaped on the princess, including a diamond and emerald brooch from her father, a ruby necklace, a diamond necklace from King Gustaf, a diamond tiara from the king and queen of Belgium, and countless other foibles and baubles representing many dollars.

Dig for Bodies of Four Dead in Blast

HERCULES, Cal., Nov. 5.—Workmen were still digging in the ruins today for the bodies of four men who were killed yesterday by an explosion in the building housing the dynamite machine packer at the Hercules Powder plant here.

The dead are: Harry Tilford, 38; Elmer Lebnhart, 53; John Francis, 25, and Frank Peters, 26.

Two other workmen were injured by the blast.

Severe Shock Registered.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 5.—A severe earth shock, 1,800 miles southwest of Washington, was registered on the seismograph at Georgetown University at 3:15 o'clock this morning. The disturbance reached its maximum intensity at 3:15 o'clock, Father Tondorff said.

Capitalism in America Fears Growing Numbers of the Communist Party

. By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

On the Ninth Anniversary of the Union of Soviet Republics, the United States government thru its secretary of state, Frank B. Kellogg, denies Alexandra Kollontay admission to this country.

Thus the political agents of Wall Street in Washington display their fear of the growing power of Workers' and Peasants' Rule. They have cause for their fears.

Yet the ghosts of the czars that are now what stalk thru the state department's building, across the street from the White House in Washington, and tip off the dollar diplomats on the futility of this method of fighting the people. For the czars, especially the last one, Nicholas, learned too well that such measures as Kellogg invokes now against Kollontay will not avail.

The czardom in power exiled Kollontay. She was not permitted to live in czarist Russia. She spent her years before the revolution of 1917 in Germany. But she never for a moment hesitated in her support of the revolutionary cause. Before the war she was a familiar figure, with Clara Zetkin, at the congresses of the Second (socialist) international. Not only in the congress itself, but also in separate gatherings of the women delegates, where the development of the revolutionary struggle among working women received special attention, Kollontay was ever active. Her voice was raised against czars and kaisers everywhere. Kollontay in Berlin, was just as much a threat to the czardom as Kollontay, in Moscow or St Petersburg (now Leningrad). This the czardom found out.

Internal conditions within Russia, the struggle of the workers and peasants against oppressive czarism, did not lessen in intensity because Kollontay along with thousands, tens of thousands, even hundreds of thousands, were exiled, imprisoned or put to death.

So the internal conditions in the United States today, the bitter exploitation of the working men, women and children in mills, mines and factories, do not change for the better, they are not rendered less oppressive and brutal because the Coolidge-Kellogg state department forbids Kollontay the right to enter this country.

Kollontay was among the first of the exiles to re-enter Russia following the March revolution, in 1917, that ended czarism, and she was one of those who struggled valiantly to overcome that revolutionary effort with the Bolshevik triumph that came in the following November. On anniversary that we now celebrate.

On this anniversary of the Soviet Revolution, the workers and farmers of this country may well give some thought to this condition. As they scan the news columns reading of the comical antics of Queen Marie, of Roumania, welcomed to the country by the Coolidge-Kellogg government, let them consider why the queen of Roumania's terror government is permitted entrance to this country, with the whole government grovelling at her feet, while Kollontay, coming from a land where labor for the first time in all human history has finally succeeded in striking off its chains, is barred. If labor considers this problem rightly, it will have made an advance step toward the day when it, too, will rid itself of its czardom, shaking off its kaisers, and make it possible to welcome with open arms as honored guests the spokesmen of the Union of Soviet Republics, and the spokesmen of the workers of other countries who may rid themselves of their capitalist oppressors from time to time until all the world is freed from the profit tyranny.

Kollontay doesn't want to stay in the United States. She merely wanted to pass thru this dollar land on her way to Mexico City, where she will act as the Soviet ambassador to Mexico. She was formerly the Soviet representative to Norway. Kollontay applied for a visa at Berlin to go thru Wall Street's domains, but was denied this by the American consul general at the German capital, "with the full approval of the state department at Washington."

Let the American workingclass stand in humble respect before labor in Norway and Germany, and especially in Mexico, with all other countries where spokesmen of the Soviet Union may come and go because the capitalist ruling class fears to deny them admission.

The news reports state openly that the United States government denied the visa to Kollontay because she is "one of the outstanding members of the Russian (All-Union) Communist Party."

This furnishes an excellent suggestion to revolutionary workers in the United States who are not yet members of the Workers (Communist) Party of America, the American Section of the Communist International.

Dollar bills fears the powerful Communist Party of the Union of Soviet Republics. It will also fear a growing Communist Party in the United States, that will lead American labor to its Bolshevik triumph. Join the Workers (Communist) Party and help give American capitalism something to fear.

GOVERNOR LOSES LIBEL SUIT ON K. C. NEWSPAPER

Davis, Pardon Seller, Gets Beaten

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Nov. 5.—The $5,000,000 libel suit of Jonathen M. Davis, former governor of Kansas, against the Kansas City Journal-Post and its owner, Walter S. Dickey, was ended today by Judge John C. Pollock of the federal court of Kansas City, Kan., who handed a decree in favor of the Journal-Post and assessed the costs of the case against the former governor.

Charged Persecution.

Davis sued the newspaper charging libel and damages on the basis of allegations that the publisher and editors had sought to "persecute" him in a state court.

The Journal-Post sought and obtained a transfer to federal jurisdiction. The newspaper was instrumental in bringing charges against the governor on the last day he was in office that he had sold a pardon.

Davis was acquitted, subsequently brought suit against the publication and ran for governor at the election just past. He was defeated.

Menacing Texas Oil Fire.

PORT ARTHUR, Tex., Nov. 5.—An 18-hour struggle against the most menacing oil well fire in the history of the Spindletop oil field, near here, today was successful when it was announced there was little danger of more damage.

FORM 'JEWISH CONGREGATIONS, TO GET LIQUOR

'Religious' Details Revealed in Case

With the government expected to conclude its case today, details of how wine withdrawal permits were obtained thru supposedly fake Jewish congregations were aired before Federal Judge Carpenter in the trial of State Senator Lowell B. Mason of Oak Park and Major Peroy Owen, former prohibition director here, on charges of conspiracy to violate the dry laws.

Four witnesses told how the machinery of organizing a congregation was put in motion.

Karl Kukuk, janitor, told of renting a hall for religious services to a Charles Koenigsberg.

"The only things resembling religious services I ever saw were small groups around the Jewish holidays."

Koenigsberg, the next witness, said he was a rabbi "for Saturday."

"I got $400 for 400 names for the congregation," he said, "and 40 cents for every gallon of wine withdrawn in the name of the congregation."

Abraham Kessel, junk dealer, testified he received $50 from Koenigsberg for signing his name as president of the congregation.

DANVILLE, Ill., Nov. 5.—John Julius Carr, a child, is dead today of scalds received when he plunged headlong into a pan of scalding water.

Temporary Truce Is Reached in Cleveland Building Trades War

CLEVELAND, Nov. 5.—A truce till November 21 has been signed between the building workers and the six non-union glaziers who have been employed on the Ohio Bell Telephone building. These non-union men have used the union men for interfering with their "freedom" to work when and where they please.

The union leaders have been cited for contempt of court for not ordering the union men back to work when they left their jobs.

The situation is complicated now, for the union men are not in a position to challenge the instructions. The maneuvers that are being made are preparatory to the struggle that must come next May, when the agreements of the building trades workers expire.

Fire Sweeps Alberta Town.

RAYMOND, Alta., Nov. 5.—Fire destroyed five buildings including the Raymond hotel in the business district of this town today, doing damage estimated at $200,000. Several buildings were occupied by sugar concerns, the principal industry of the community. Shortage of water seriously handicapped the fire brigades of this and surrounding towns.

Five Stockman Burned to Death.

COCHRANE, Ont., Nov. 5.—Five stockmen today were burned to death in a collision between a stock train and a freight train which resulted in the burning of the cars near Farlane, Ont. William Moffat of Centralia, Ont., is the only casualty identified.

Improvement Work on Cook County Highways to Start Immediately

Surveying and grading the 685 miles of Cook county highway improvements will be begun at once, it was announced today by Major George A. Quinlan, county highway superintendent, following approval at the election of the $16,000,000 bond issue.

Nineteen Indicted for Rum Running in N. Y.

NEW YORK, Nov. 5—Nineteen men were indicted today by the federal grand jury on charges of piracy on the high seas and conspiracy to violate the prohibition law.

Twelve are charged with attempting to bring liquor from rum row and seven with turning "hijackers" while the liquor was being brought to shore.

School Teachers Killed.

RAPIDS CITY, Ill., Nov. 5.—An investigation was launched today into the accident in which three girls were instantly killed when their automobile was struck by a Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul train at Sycamore Crossing, near here.

The dead: Mildred Schafer, school teacher, Port Byron; Mildred Devinney, 19, teacher, Hampton; Edna Jacobs, 12, Hampton.

Drinking Students Canned.

URBANA, Ill., Nov. 5.—Ten unnamed Illinois University students have been dismissed for the session in the drive of officials to wipe out student drinking, it was officially announced today.

CHICAGO PLUTES PREPARE FOR HER MAJESTY'S PARTY

While Workers Get Ready to Demonstrate

While Chicago plutocrats are making extensive social arrangements to greet Queen Marie of Roumania when she arrives here on Nov. 13, International Labor Defense is preparing to greet the royal party with a demonstration of protest against the persecution of workers and peasants in Roumania.

Gold Coast Committee.

A committee of Gold Coast aristocrats including Arthur Meeker, Howard Gillette, Chauncey Blair, Mrs. Rockefeller McCormick, and Mrs. Joseph G. Coisman, has engaged the avenue of palms and main dining room of the Drake hotel for a ritzy reception to her majesty and a private dinner will be given by Ira Nelson Morris at the Blackstone on Nov. 14.

Workers Protest.

At the same time International Labor Defense is getting resolutions of protest passed in Chicago labor unions preparatory to a protest demonstration against the official welcoming of the queen and will have a delegation on hand at the station when the queen arrives to present her with resolutions in which she will be asked to explain the White Terror raging against the workers of her country.

Queen Marie Finishes Maryhill Job.

SEATTLE, Wash., Nov. 5.—Queen Marie is enroute here after dedicating the Maryhill Museum of Fine Arts at Maryhill, Washington, a hobby of Samuel Hill, retired rail magnate, who is financing her trip of the West in an impromptu speech that had official members of her party on tenterhooks for fear she would say something that might not be liked in Bucharest, the queen attempted to explain her trip to the United States on the basis of her friendship for Hill and her desire to do him a favor by dedicating his museum. After a stay in Seattle, the party will go to Vancouver from where they will begin the return trip to the East.

Workers Party Vote Increased in N. Y. at the Last Election

candidates of the Workers Party a fair count as during the election they committed a forgery of the Workers Party leaflets and propagated for Mills.

Continuation of Injunctions.

The victory of Tammany Hall in New York state means the continuation of injunctions, suppression of workers, denial of the rights of workers to strikes and picket and similar suppressive tactics on the part of the democratic henchmen.

The results of the vote also show that, despite a big protest and opposition sentiment, the socialist party—which has been the chief opposition party—failed substantially to secure the protest vote and strengthen its position.

Socialists Aid Tammany.

The socialist party, by failing to establish a united front of labor political parties on the political field, has aided Tammany Hall and helped to keep the workers tied to capitalist politics. Labor cannot advance in the direction of working class tactics as long as the illusion of "rewarding friends and punishing enemies" remains. The socialist party, by failing to aid in uniting all those opposed to capitalist politics, has contributed to the maintaining of the Smith illusion.

Need For Labor Party.

The results of the election indicate again the necessity for labor to establish a political party of its own, independent of the capitalist parties and, by forging a labor party, to attack the strongholds of the two-party system in which capitalism maintains absolute domination while nominally transferring power from one of its parties to the other.

In the coming two years labor will receive ample proof, by the suppressive action of Tammany Hall, of the seed of breaking with the capitalist parties and establishing a party of labor. The Workers Party will continue its agitation for unity of labor on the political field in a labor party.

Grain and Hay Show.

Entry books of the eight annual International grain and hay show, to be held here as a part of the International Livestock Exposition the week following Thanksgiving will be closed Nov. 10, it was announced today.

PROF. MERRIAM LAUDS PROGRESS MADE IN RUSSIA

Demonstrates Power of Workers, He Says

Great progress has been made by Soviet Russia since the revolution, Prof. Charles E. Merriam, head of the department of political science at the University of Chicago and former president of the American Political Science Association, told members of the City Club here Tuesday.

Merriam's subject was, "Impressions of Russia." In the informal discussion that followed his speech, Merriam declared he was in favor of United States recognition of Russia.

All Have Land.

"The most significant fact in the Russian revolution is that the land is now in the hands of the peasants who constitute 85% of the population," he said. "This democratic change cannot be undone by any government of any color, white or red."

"The democratic spirit in Soviet Russia has come to stay," he declared, stating that "the old caste system and widespread feeling of personal subservience to rulers has been dissolved and cannot be restored."

Stelin at Helm.

"There is no group of leaders now on the horizon, who are likely to displace the present group in power, headed by Stalin. The fate of Russia for the next period seems to be in their hands.

AIMEE ADMITS ORMISTON HAD HER CLOTHING

But She Claims They Were "Stolen"

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 5. — Aimee Semple McPherson has virtually admitted ownership of the beautiful gowns, expensive lingerie and other articles of apparel found in Kenneth G. Ormiston's trunk, seized in New York, it was claimed at the district attorney's office today.

Says Were "Stolen."

The claim made by the prosecution was based on Mrs. McPherson's first official utterance to refute or deny that the clothing in Ormiston's trunk belonged to her and her declarations, over the Angelus Temple radio, in which she intimated that the contents of the trunk had been "stolen."

How Come?

"What does she mean by 'stolen?'" demanded one of the prosecuting attorneys. "She has no right to intimate that the clothing in Ormiston's trunk was stolen from her." Mrs. McPherson has never denied that the clothing in the trunk belonged to her. We interpret this as an admission that the clothing was hers. If it wasn't, why doesn't she say so."

Both chief defense counsel, Gilbert, and Mrs. McPherson herself absolutely refuse to discuss any phases of the case today.

Week Venus Change.

The trial of Mrs. McPherson may be moved to another county it was reported today, as it was considered impossible to find 12 persons here who have not formed an opinion in the case.

S. D. Legislature Is Rebuked as People Vote for Bank Law

SIOUX FALLS, S. D., Nov. 5.—The state bank guaranty law, repealed by the legislature, will be retained, it was indicated in late figures from Tuesday's election. The measure would drastically regulate state banks.

Bankers generally predicted that as many state banks as can do so will probably surrender their charter and operate in future under the national banking laws if the final returns show the law has been approved.

Final Phase in Probe of C. M. & St. P. Road Comes Up in December

WASHINGTON, Nov. 5.—The final phase in the investigation which the interstate commerce commission is making into the financial affairs of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railroad prior to its being thrown into receivership will be taken on Dec. 9 and 10, when the entire commission will hear oral argument on the merits of the case, it was announced today.

Arkansas Legion Now Asks 'Permission' to Investigate College

MENA, Arkansas, Nov. 5.—The Arkansas American Legion has dropped its threat that "regardless of any action taken by the American Civil Liberties Union" it will conduct an investigation of Commonwealth College at Mena, and now respectfully requests" that such an investigation be permitted.

The college was chartered at a recent legion convention with teaching free love, revolutionary doctrines, and receiving support from Soviet Russia.

Duke Frederick, Mena attorney and chairman of this sub-committee, now asks of William E. Zeuch, director of the college, that the legion be furnished with data concerning the teachings and the personnel of the institution. A short life history and the religious affiliations of each faculty member, the course of study prescribed, a list of the text books, past and present sources of income, a list contributors, and permission to spend 30 days inspecting the library, equipment and faculty of the college are asked.

The Department of Justice has officially denied that it issued a statement concerning the college upon which the legion alleges to base its attack.

The Role of the British Miners

Article II.

By JACK BRADON.

THE present British crisis can be justifiably termed a continuation and a form of climax to the unbroken chain of political and industrial unrest since 1911. But it is in the higher and more intense stages of this crisis, 1921-26, that the plan of rebuilding her economy on the backs of her workers was formulated and the attempt made to carry it out. Regular war preparations were made against the working class. While the bourgeoisie was somewhat uncertain as to what the reaction of the working class would be when the miners were attacked, it played safe—it prepared its forces. Directly under the control of its outstanding militarists, it created a volunteer organization for the maintenance of supplies. This organization embraced some 85,000 persons. Two hundred thousand vehicles were registered and subvidized by the government for instant use against the workers. The cabinet was militarized and its members assigned on a war status. The cabinet forces were fully equipped, and were held in readiness in their barracks so as to enable them to take the field against the workers on short notice. With all these preparations the British bourgeoisie and its government were ready to attack the workers to destroy their trade unions, and upon the backs of a beaten and demoralized working class, Britain was again to take her "rightful" place in the sun and play second fiddle to no power.

It is not an accident that the miners were the first to face this general onslaught upon the British working class. Due to the great dependence of British industry upon coal, the principal methods of coal production in use, and the artificially maintained low prices of coal within the country created by the fact that the mine owners, who are also manufacturers, sell coal to themselves very cheaply), the mining industry was the first to feel the full brunt of the cracking of the British empire. Then, again, to smash the British trade unions, which was the hope of the British bourgeoisie and still is, it concentrated upon the miners union, which is the largest, best consolidated and most aggressively and ably led in Britain. Upon the expiration of the governmental subsidy, the bourgeoisie felt itself well enough prepared to attack the very backbone of the trade union movement—the miners' union—feeling that the smaller, weaker and meeker unions could be easily defeated after the burial of the miners' union. It is these circumstances that make the miners face this salvo of the capitalist offensive against the British working class. But the working class will soon come to sense the meaning of this offensive. It knew instinctively that the process of wage cutting concerned not only the miners, but that it would embrace the entire working class. This consciousness is clearingly and irrefutably proven by the fact that the rank and file compelled the calling of the general strike, despite the opposition from the top.

away with a million dollars that rightfully belonged to the state when he was treasurer. The courts have been trying to take it away from him for several years, but it is as hard to get a dollar out of Len's claws as it is to find life on Mars. In this much, however, we agree with Small. "If large corporation contributions were barred, there would be many persons holding public office who would be barred. Right!"

LOWELL B. MASON a day after senator from these parts is on trial for accepting bribes to facilitate the granting of permits for the sale of government wine. The senator does not deny that he received the money, but he claims that the $23,000 that went into his bank account in side of a few months time was legally for services rendered. We are not indignant because a capitalist politician accepted graft. That is quite natural and normal. But why a dry senator should help in the distribution of wine, and how he could be re elected with the aid of the Anti-Saloon League, while his trial is taking place, is a little shock even to us.

HYSTERIA born of fear seems to have taken hold of the Italian fascist party. Leaders of that organization are now bawling for the establishment of a "committee of public safety" in imitation of the dreaded tribunal of the French revolution. The fascists are indeed good imitators, if good for nothing else except murder. All the opposition newspapers in Italy are now silenced. They include socialist, liberal, catholic and syndicalist organs. The Communist press exists illegally, yet has a wide distribution.

FOURTEEN daily newspapers lost their licenses since the latest attempt on the dictator's life, and many magazines. Tho the pope lauds the prestige of his office to Mussolini, the catholic masses are by no means enthusiastic over the fascisti. The black shirts are not religious. They simply use religious organizations as the American K. K. K. uses the stupid protestants to serve its purpose. Despite all the puffing of Mussolini and fascism that is appearing in the American press, the continuous bloodshed in Italy and the repeated attempts to

HAMBURG DOCK STRIKE STOPS COAL SHIPPING

I. P. C. Asks Support to Hamburg Strikers

(Special to The Daily Worker)

MOSCOW, (Oct. 5 via Mail) —The International Propaganda Committee of the Revolutionary Transport Workers has addressed the following appeal to the transport workers of all countries:

"In consequence of the refusal of the employers to raise the miserable wages of the dockers, the latter declared a general strike. The dockers commenced on January 1st. The wages are so small for a workman's family to live on even moderately.

"The strike has developed as an action of solidarity with the fighting British miners. In addition to the strike boycott of coal mining. More than 30,000 port workers, transported daily thru the Hamburg docks. The strike struck a blow at the British unemployed, as it hampered the resistance of the British workers and increased the number of strikers.

"The reformist leaders of the German Trade Union Union are prepared to compromise in agreement with the German shipowners against the striking dockers. The seamen and transport workers as well as all countries must remember that they are responsible for the Hamburg strike. The victory of the seamen and dockers in all countries and that defeat for them is correspondingly a defeat for the seamen and transport workers of the world.

Boycott the transport and the loading of coal for Italy!

Long live the international solidarity of the transport workers!

Workers (Communist) Party

THE LIFE OF THE PARTY

By ROBIN DUNBAR.

YOU say, "No! New members are the life of the party. The old ones are dying off, losing interest, dropping out. The Daily doesn't save them from death or decay. But, the go-getters, who add new members: THEY ARE THE LIFE OF THE PARTY!"

To which I respond somewhat acridly, they would have a hell of a time to get in the new ones, if these already hadn't half made up their minds to join thru reading many copies of the Daily. I know. I've just signed up a few myself; and in every case they were already proselyted by much study of our English-speaking paper. They were fertile ground waiting for the seed to be sown and gathered. All I had to do was to say: "Come join our party!" and the trick was done.

Many knew more about the leading articles than I did myself. They had read with more diligence and appreciation than most comrades the serial features of Bukharin, Dunne, Sinclair and others. One new joiner said he told his wife he would rather stay at home and read the Daily than he would to take her to a movie. And this was in or close to the Hollywood district, where to speak disrespectfully of the movies is high treason, punishable by excommunication from the community with the anathemas of the High Priest of the Studios, Will Hays, Chief Kleagle of the Koo Koos.

Not Hays-Kleesen subscribe to The DAILY WORKER, or avon to the Sunday Magazine. More's the pity. If he did he might concern himself with censoring the drapery, or lack of it, of the stars, and permitting more real rebellion in the pictures.

NEW SOCIETY MEANS INEVITABLE CONFLICTS

Only in a state of society where there are no classes and no class antagonisms will social evolutions cease to be political revolutions. Until then, on the eve of every general new formation of societies, the last word of social science will always be: Fight or death, bloody war or oblivion. This is how the inexorable question is put.

BRENNAN SAYS ANTHRACITE PACT MINERS' DEFEAT

Dwells on Fighting Record of the Union

OLYPHANT, Pa., Nov. 5—The trophy campaign committee is meeting with much success all thru the anthracite fields. A mass meeting was held here a few evenings ago, with 600 miners in attendance. William J. Brennan, candidate for international secretary-treasurer on the opposition ticket, spoke on the issues involved in the present election. Taking considerable time analyzing the anthracite agreement signed in February of this year, Brennan asserted this was the first defeat ever suffered by the anthracite miners' union, a defeat in glaring contradistinction to the fighting history of the U. M. W. A. in this field.

Stanley Dziengiewski, chairman of the Olyphant general grievance committee of the D. & H. Coal Company, spoke briefly in American and Polish on the question of the true interpretation of the anthracite agreement and covered several of the planks of the opposition program.

B. K. Geberi spoke to the Polish languanan on the conditions of the miners of the anthracite field since the termination of the strike and charged that the lives of the eight Manitoeka miners who died in the explosion the day before were victims of the coal company's negligence. The audience was greatly enthused by Brother Gebert's speech.

Pat Touhey, ex-secretary of the Plains local, was introduced as an expelled member and spoke on the question of organization of the unorganized, the labor party, national agreement, and the formation of more local Brophy election committees and stressed the issue of supporting the Labaron paper, The Coal Miner.

Brother John Chaplin, president of Local Union 1672, presided.

FURRIERS UNION PLEDGES AID TO N. Y. BOX MAKERS

Condemns Brutal Acts of Police

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, Nov. 5.—A resolution protesting the brutal tactics used against the striking paper box makers here, and pledging them support in their fight was passed by the Furriers' Union at their last meeting. The resolution follows:

Whereas, the workers in the paper box makers' industry of New York are among the lowest paid and the hardest worked of any workers in the city; the terrible exploitation existing in that industry and the filthy and unsanitary condition of the shops in which workers are forced to work, 4,000 paper box workers finally revolted against this oppression and declared a general strike, and pledged themselves to stay out of the shops until their demands shall be fully met, and

Whereas, during this strike, which has now lasted a month, the bosses are being heartily assisted by the police department who are being unlimited cooperation in fighting the strikers, the thugs evident passed by, who can see as many as ten policemen in front of one shop, many of them actively assisting the scab drivers in loading and unloading, and delivering of the goods of paper boxes, and

Whereas, when pickets protest against the police scabbery, they are brutally set upon and beaten, and in some cases so badly that they were sent to the hospital, therefore, be it further

Resolved, that we, the Council of Shop Chairmen of the Fur Workers' Union of Greater New York, bitterly protest against the brutal attacks being committed by the police on the paper box strikers, and we further protest against the use of police and strikebreakers engaged by the paper box bosses, and be it further Resolve that we pledge our undivided support to assure the victory.

Call Mass Meeting for Photographic Workers in N. Y. C.

NEW YORK, Nov. 5.—All photographic workers of every branch of the trade are urged to attend a mass meeting called by Local 1750 for Monday evening, Nov. 8 at the Labor Temple, 14th St. and 2nd Ave. Speakers of prominence will address the workers. It is of the utmost importance that every worker attend.

Among the speakers will be Robert Dunn of the American Civil Liberties Union, Louis Hyman, editor of the Labor Age, and Abram Lefkowitz of the Photographic Workers and Israel Salzber, representing Local 1750.

The meeting will start at 8 o'clock.

Detroit W. P. Plans Banquet on Sunday to Celebrate Successes

DETROIT, Nov. 5.—Members and sympathizers of the Workers (Communist) Party will have an opportunity of spending an enjoyable evening Sunday, Nov. 7, at 8 p. m. at the Jewish Carpenters' Hall, 938 Algor St. A proletarian banquet with Comrade Gitlow and Rebecca Grecht has been arranged to take place after the greatest demonstration for Soviet Russia ever held in Detroit, namely the celebration of the ninth anniversary of the Russian revolution in the Armory at 2:30 the same day.

The banquet has been arranged on a modest scale with the view of meeting the over-taxed pocket books of party members. It will celebrate the successful election campaign and the successful demonstration for Soviet Russia.

The district committee has passed an iron rule that no collections or money raising of any kind can take place at the banquet outside the minimum charge of 50c which will cover the cost of the refreshments.

Singing, a few short talks and plenty of opportunity to talks things over will be the program of the evening. The banquet was arranged to give the active party comrades an opportunity to spend a pleasant evening after three months of intense activity in the election campaign.

Coffee, cake, fruit and sandwiches will make up the proletarian menu.

Kenosha Will Have Celebration in Honor of Russian Revolution

The workers of Kenosha, Wis., will celebrate the ninth anniversary of the Russian Revolution on Sunday, Nov. 7, at 3 p. m. at the German-American Home, 605 Grand Ave. There will be an interesting program in which the well-known Chicago soprano, Manya Maller, and also the Russian folk dancer, A. Kotoff, the conductor of the Russian Workers' Chorus of Chicago, G. Grigoriev and others will participate. The principal speaker in English will be Alexander Bittelman, member of the C. E. C. of the Workers (Communist) Party. There will also be a Russian speaker. Stereopticon pictures of the revolution will be shown. Dancing will follow the program.

Bittelman Speaks at Milwaukee Celebration of Ninth Soviet Year

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Nov. 5.—Freie Gemeinde Hall on the corner of 5th and Walnut Sts. has been chosen as the scene of the anniversary celebration of the ninth year of the Russian Workers' Republic. The meeting will be held on Sunday, Nov. 7, beginning at 7.30 p. m. Alexander Bittelman, member of the central committee of the Workers (Communist) Party will be the speaker. Admission is 25c.

Celebrate Russian Revolution at Neff, Ohio, With Big Event

NEFF, Ohio, Nov. 5. Workers of Neff will be given an opportunity to learn of the workers' government in Soviet Russia and to celebrate the ninth anniversary of the Russian revolution. A big celebration is planned here for November 7 at the Bernar Hall. All workers are invited.

Russians and Ukrainians Dance November 14

A concert and dance will be given by the Russian and Ukrainian Workers' Clubs on Sunday, Nov. 14, at Walsh's Hall, corner Milwaukee, Emma and Noble Sts., beginning at 4:30 p. m. # Bronx Rebels Nite' Planned by Y. W. L. 'Saturday, Nov. 13

NEW YORK, Nov. 5.—"Bronx Rebels Nite," arranged by the Young Workers League, Section 4, will be held Saturday night, Nov. 13, at 1347 Union Road.

The famous revolutionary play "Rebels," by Michael Gold, will be presented at the affair. Many other interesting features are planned for the program.

All are urged to spend an interesting evening with the league. Admission will be 50 cents.

CLEVELAND WILL HAVE BIG EVENT ON NOVEMBER 7

Weltfish and Amter to Be Speakers

CLEVELAND, O., Nov. 5.—The 10th anniversary of the Russian revolution will be celebrated in a splendid fashion in Cleveland on Sunday, Nov. 7, at Moose Auditorium, 1000 Euclid St. The main feature of the program, outside of the speakers, will be some dramatic readings rendered by the well-known Negro artist, Jester Hairston, and plastic tableaux arranged by Comrade Sadie Ainter.

The titles of the four scenes are "The Volga Boatman", "1916—Bullets instead of Bread", "Siberia—Land of Snow and Exile", and "1917—Revolution."

A large number of comrades participate in this performance, which will be another of the striking things that Cleveland has arranged in the past.

The other features of the program will be the Ukrainian Workers' Chorus, the Russian-Ukrainian Mandolin Orchestra, the Freiheit Singing Society and the Hungarian Chorus. Wm. N. Gross will sing some solos.

The speakers will be Bertram D. Wolfe, director of the Workers' School, New York City; I. Amter, district secretary of the Workers (Communist) Party, and a member of the Young Workers (Communist) League.

The rest of the celebration will be given over to supper and dancing in the evening. No worker should fail to share in this celebration of nine years of the revolution and hear the story of how Soviet Russia has succeeded in building up her forces, despite the entire capitalist world.

The celebration will begin at 3 p. m. sharp.

SHIFT OF BITUMINOUS SUPREMACY FROM PENNSYLVANIA COAL FIELD TO W. VIRGINIA IS WARNING TO UNION

By ART SHIELDS, Federated Press.

PITTSBURGH—(FP)—Shift of coal production from the northern fields to the nonunion mines of West Virginia continues. Latest reports of the U. S. bureau of mines, showing West Virginia's rise and Pennsylvania's decline, are a warning to organized labor.

The great southern producer has now about caught up to its northern neighbor. Pennsylvania, the traditional leader of the bituminous industry, formerly loaded twice as much coal as West Virginia. But the reports for the first 8 months of 1926 show West Virginia with 85,000,000 tons, or only 1,000,000 less than Pennsylvania's 94,000,000.

Figures Tell Tale.

Comparative annual reports for the two states tell the story of the shift of tonnage:

| | West Va. Tons mined. | Penna. Tons mined. |
|---|---|---|
| 1917 | 86,000,000 | 172,000,000 |
| 1920 | 99,000,000 | 176,000,000 |
| 1924 | 101,000,000 | 130,000,000 |
| 1926 (8 mos.) | 85,000,000 | 94,000,000 |

Shift to Non-Union Field.

The big shift followed the breaking of the West Virginia union. In the war years and till after 1920 half the West Virginia tonnage was union and Pennsylvania was still in a fair competitive position. But with the repudiation of contracts in the southern field and the coming of low scab wage scales the shift took place. Some of the biggest West Virginia operators had mines in Pennsylvania and boomed their southern properties at the low rates while their northern employees were unemployed or on part time.

Is Open Shop Key.

Openshop interests of the nation see the key position of West Virginia and hope to use its huge scab production to break the union in the northern districts. In this effort they have the cooperation of the interstate commerce commission, which grants low freight rates to the southern coal that —added to low wages there—give the nonunion fields an undue advantage in the market.

Nead National Drive.

The state and federal courts lend further aid with oppressive injunctions against picketing and all forms of persuasion by the union. The basic West Virginia injunctions are founded on the U. S. supreme court decision forbidding interference with the "yellow dog," individual employment contract.

Local strike movements of the last few years have not stemmed the tide. The powerful West Virginia coal companies either have mines in other districts or outside financial connections. The union's hope is in a sweeping national movement next spring.

DAUGHERTY AND MILLER TO FACE TRIAL AGAIN

Jury Disagreed in the First Count Tussle

NEW YORK, Nov. 5.—Harry M. Daugherty, former attorney general of the United States, and Thomas W. Miller, former alien property custodian, must face trial again on a charge of conspiracy, according to an announcement by United States Attorney Emory R. Buckner. The court will be asked to set the trial for next month.

The recent trial of Daugherty and Miller resulted in a disagreement by the jury. They were indicted for conspiracy to defraud the federal government in connection with the payment of $7,000,000 to a Swiss corporation for the alien property claims. The indictment charges a conspiracy was formed by Daugherty, Miller, the late John T. King, Connecticut politician, and the late Jesse W. Smith, Daugherty's friend.

DEBS MEETING GIVES PORTERS FIGHTING URGE

"Company Union Must Go," Is Slogan

By a Worker Correspondent

NEW YORK, Nov. 5.—"The company union must go!" These words, repeated by every speaker at the Eugene V. Debs Memorial meeting, held by the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters in St. Luke's hall, turned the service into an inspiring meeting of a fighting labor union.—as Gene Debs himself would have wished it.

Tributes to the great friend of the Negro race and the leader of thousands of American workers were mingled with attacks upon the vicious "employee representation plan" of the Pullman Company, and in his name the hundreds of Pullman porters present were urged to refuse to vote in the 'Plan' elections and so abolish it.

Panken Speaks.

"Debs would say to us, 'Don't mourn! Be heartened!" declared Judge Jacob Panken, socialist candidate for governor of New York, in a stirring tribute. "He has gone to meet the souls of the world's greatest thinkers and martyrs—he is with John Brown, with Garrison, with Karl Marx."

Judge Panken denounced the company union is "an agent of the bosses, designed to serve their purposes and to fool the workers."

Randolph Back.

The Brotherhood welcomed its general organizer, A. Philip Randolph, after an absence of several weeks on a speaker tour of the west. It was Organizer Randolph who officially declared war on the Employee Representation Plan. "You can't be a good Brotherhood man and vote for the 'plan,'" he declared. "The ideals of the Brotherhood are opposed absolutely to the ideals of the company union. The Brotherhood is the only refuge of the Pullman Porter. This is a fighting organization, and we must fight to destroy that octopus, the employee representative plan."

Talis A. C. W. Fight.

Joseph Schlossberg, secretary of the amalgamated Clothing Workers, spoke of the fight of that organization for better conditions. He too, condemned the company union and advised the porters to give it a death fight. "The captains if industry have fought and will fight they would arrange a better labor union for you than you could arrange for yourselves, and so they have, except that it is better for the company and worse for you," he said. "Remember that anything that is handed down to you from above can be taken away from you. Your employers respect but one thing and that thing is power. If you show your power you can gain your own union and all your demands."

Get $10,000 in Jewels.

NEW YORK, N. Y., Nov. 5.—Four bandits today looted the jewelry store of Cohen Brothers in Brooklyn and escaped with $10,000 worth of jewelry. Two employes, James O'Neil, manager, and Henry Bailey, clerk, were held up, bound and gagged.

Bishop Brown Gets Ideas Published in Capitalistic Press

By L. P. RINDAL,
(Worker Correspondent)

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 5.—A report to the Los Angeles Evening World from Gallion, Ohio, reads, in part, as follows:

"The prize, if such there be, for mental vigor, energy and courage in pursuit in the face of adverse criticism for men who have passed the three score and ten mark, should be awarded to Bishop Montgomery Brown, gray-haired 'heretic,' who celebrated his 71st birthday this month by announcing that he 'waited to be tried for something.'

Prosecution Lengthens Life.

"'I do not suppose it makes much difference for what I am tried, but I want to be tried for something,' he said. 'I was almost dead when the Protestant Episcopal Church brought me to trial for heresy, and look at me now. I have lived more in the past five years than I did in the previous 65. If I could only manage to be brought to trial for my Communism I think I might live to be as old as Methusalah.'"

Communists Without Knowing It.

The bishop, in his mild-mannered ways, pointed out that Communism is as natural as evolution, sunrise, summer and winter. His views on war, heresy, jails, police and crimes, etc., were all drawn into the discussion, and so was the case with the present system of capitalist government. Brown "liked to do something" to change the "minds of the people and overthrow the obsolete methods now in use." Therefore he wants a "trial for my Communism" in order to prove that Americans are Communists without knowing it.

"Do you suppose that I could get myself tried for pushing the government over?" asked America's foremost "heretic."

Bishop Brown's ideas are not news to readers of The DAILY WORKER, but there is encouragement in finding that reading of this kind gets into the hands of people less informed.

Denver Assembly to Sponsor Showing of "The Passaic Strike"

(By a Worker Correspondent.)

DENVER, Colo., Nov. 5.—At the last meeting of the Denver Trades and Labor Assembly, "Mother" Bloor, representing the textile strikers of Passaic, was given the floor for a short talk.

She gave a short historical sketch of the Passaic strike and said that in order for the struggle to be carried on, the union people thruout the country must furnish the funds.

One of the big things she is doing is arranging to have the film of the Passaic strike shown thruout the country to the trade unionists and their friends. At the conclusion of her remarks the delegates applauded her very enthusiastically and voted to have the film shown under the auspices of the Denver Trades Assembly. A committee of five members was elected to take charge of having the picture shown in the near future. "Mother" Bloor has been speaking here a number of the larger unions of Denver during the past week in the interest of the Passaic strikers and has been received everywhere with great enthusiasm.

San Quentin Prisoner Talks Before Branch of I. L. D. in Angeles

By GRAY STONE.
(Worker Correspondent)

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 5. A number of comrades of the Tom Mooney branch of the International Labor Defense held an enthusiastic meeting last Monday. Decision was reached to reorganize the branch and begin a membership drive to add new blood and spirit to this branch.

An open meeting for sympathizers and all interested in the I. L. D. work will be held Thursday evening, Nov. 11, at the Needle Trades Hall, 240 South Spring street. Fellow Worker P. Mellman, who has just completed his three and a half year term at San Quentin under the criminal syndicalist law, will speak at this meeting on "Conditions in San Quentin." Mellman has also signed his application to this branch of the I. L. D. and is very enthusiastic about the work.

The regular order of business has been worked out by the committee in charge and will be presented for approval at the meeting. Let every English-speaking worker attend this meeting and thereby help our comrades in the jail.

POLICE PROTECT SCABS IN STRIKE OF BOX WORKERS

Pickets Arrested in New York Fight

NEW YORK, Nov. 5.—Three automobiles followed scab paper box delivery wagons up Broadway and Sixth avenue yesterday afternoon, calling the attention of passersby to the cops riding on each wagon protecting the property of the employers.

Signs displayed from the picketing cars read: "Note police protection for property. The box workers demand equal protection for life." "Sau the strikebreaker on the wagon. He breaks standards. He is protected. Striking box workers raise standards. They are beaten!" "Watch the police prevent every effort to unionise the strikebreakers." "The police protect property. How about the workers' standards?"

Pickets Arrested.

A crowd gathered at every crossing where the delivery wagons and picketing automobiles were held up by the traffic. All went well until one of the cars entered the paper box district on Woostar street, when the pickets in the car were promptly arrested by the police and taken to the Mercer street police station, charged with disorderly conduct.

Workers Released.

Four cases were dismissed by Judge George W. Simpson in the first magistrate's court. Josephine Chieves, Lawrence Zito and Fanny Trupin had been arrested on charges of disorderly conduct while picketing on Wooster street. Louis Feliel had been framed up on a burglary charge and released on $5,000 bail. William Karlin, attorney for the union, appeared in their behalf and obtained their unconditional release.

Boss Arrested, Too.

In another case a boss, as well as a worker, was involved. Mr. Stanley of the Maryland Paper Box Co., 146 Avenue D, assaulted Paul Deitch, a striker, early yesterday morning and cut his right hand so badly with a stiletto knife that five stitches had to be taken in it. Both were arrested and taken to the Fifth street police station, the picket being charged with attempted assault and the boss with felonious assault and carrying dangerous weapons, namely the stiletto and a revolver. Because the cop insisted on pressing charges against the boss the judge dismissed both cases.

Girl Fined.

Three girl were arrested in Brooklyn for violating the injunction which the Specialty Paper Box Co. has against the union. The girls were distributing circulars in front of the shop. Two of the cases were dismissed and the third fined $10.

The most influential shop in Brooklyn settled with the union, the Model Paper Box Co., 330 Milrose street. This makes every shop that have settled since the strike began.

I. L. D. DEBS MEET IN LOS ANGELES ON NOVEMBER 12

S. P. Attempts to Hurt Other Groups

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 5.—The International Labor Defense, Local Los Angeles, is arranging a big Debs memorial meeting Friday, November 12, 8 p. m., at the Music Art Hall, 323 South Broadway. Robert G. Whittaker will preside. Prominent labor speakers are scheduled to speak.

Local I. L. D. had originally planned to arrange a Debs memorial meeting together with the socialist party of Los Angeles. For this purpose a committee was appointed to call upon this organization and present the request for joint auspices.

On Monday noon our committee visited the Forward office, where a meeting of the arrangements committee of the socialist party was taking place. There our delegates learned that the Debs memorial meeting was already scheduled, by the socialists, for November 14.

S. P. Would Hurt Ieor.

A delegation from the Ieor had also called on this committee with the plea to postpone the Debs memorial meeting for another date, in view of the fact that their organization has been working for the past three months arranging a concert that will raise money to purchase tractors for the Jewish colonies in Russia. This affair has been long scheduled for November 14, the same date now scheduled by the socialists for the Debs memorial meeting. In spite of the earnest pleas by the Ieor delegates to change the date for the Debs meeting so as not to bring to naught all the efforts and money spent by the Ieor for their concert, the committee has flatly refused, altho admitting that with the exception of paying a deposit on the hall they have not yet begun to advertise their meeting. The chairman of the committee, Mr. Leavitt, had suggested to the Ieor delegates with a cynical sneer that their organization can easily postpone the concert for another date.

I. L. D. Withdraws.

The I. L. D. committee had then issued a statement that it withdraws its request for joint arrangement of the Debs memorial with the socialists, as it will not participate in the crime of consciously injuring a workers' organization that had spent energy and money to arrange a benefit for a worthy cause.

Get Clear Dope.

In the opinion of the committee, it is much easier for the socialists to postpone for another date the Debs memorial meeting than for the Ieor to postpone their concert. The I. L. D. will endeavor to arrange a Debs memorial meeting under a date that will not do injury to any organization and where all the elements that loved Debs and cherish his memory will be able to gather and honor him upon his death.

O'L A NEW NOVEL

(Copyright, 1926, by Upton Sinclair)

"So this is Mr. Ross!" Her "speakie" was a queer little high treble. 'Papa has told me so much about you!" (Papa was Mr. Roscoe.) "I'm so glad to have you here, and do make yourself at home. Do whatever you please, for this is liberty hall." Bunny recalled the caption—but was it from "Hearts of Steel," or from "The Maid of the Manor?"

"And here is Harve," the mistress of the manor was saying. "Oh, Harve, come here, this is Bunny Ross; Harvey Manning. It's the first time Mr. Ross has been here, and please be nice to him so he'll come back. He's going to college and reads a lot and knows everything, and we're to seem so ignorant and frivolous!"

Harvey Manning was coming in through one of the French windows which took the place of the stations of the cross in this pace; he talked slowly also, a dry sort of drawl—having never cathedral. He was walking slowly, and did not increase his had to hurry, because he came of one of the old families of the state. He had a queer, ugly face, with a great many wrinkles, and Bunny never was clear whether he was old or young. "Hello, Ross," he said, "pleased-to-meecher. I got an uncl ethat's spending a hundred thousand dollars to put you in jail."

"Is that so?" said Bunny, a trifle startled.

"Sure thing! He's nuts on this red-hunting business, and the pinks are worse than the reds, he says. I've been worried about you."

"Never mind," said Bunny, perceiving that this was a "josh," such as helps to make life tolerable for idle men, young and old. "Dad will spend two hundred thousand and get me out again."

"Come to think of it, I guess Verne would chip in—wouldn't he, Annabelle?"

"None of my guests ever stay in jail," replied the star, "They phone to Papa and he phones to the chief of police, who lets them out right away."

She said this without smiling; and Harvey Manning remarked, "You see, Ross, Annabelle has a literal mind."

IV

Yes, that was the truth about this bright luminary of the screen, as Bunny came to observe it; she had a literal mind. All the poetry and romance the public imagined about her—that was in the public's eye, so to say. All that Annabelle had to contribute was a youthful figure and a pliable face; the highly paid directors did the rest. She produced pictures as a matter of business, and her talk was of production costs, and percentages on foreign sales, just as if it had been an oil well. That was why she got along with Vernon Roscoe, who also had a literal mind. A primrose by the river's brim a yellow primrose was to him, and to Annabelle it was a decoration for an interior," or a background on "location."

There was a certain grim honesty about this, as Bunny discovered; it was Annabelle's desire to be an actress rather than a mistress. "By Jees," Verne would proclaim to his guests, "it's cost me eight million dollars to make a movie queen out of this baby." And the thrifty year old baby had a right to be; some day she would achieve a masterpiece, that would earn this eight million and vindicate her honor. Meantime, she paid installments by taking care of Verne—so publicly that it was quite touching, and respectable according to the strictest bourgeois standards. If the oil magnate had ever had the idea that in taking to his bosom a movie star he was going to lead a wild and roystering life, he had made a sad mistake, for he was the most hen-pecked of all "butter and egg men."

"Now, Papa," Annabelle would say, "you've had enough to drink. Put that down." She would say it before a company assembled in their gladdest rags for a dinner party; and Verne would protest, "My God, baby, I ain't got started yet!"

"Well, you stop before you start tonight. Remember what Doctor Wilkins says about your liver."

Verne would bluster, "To hell with livers!" and the answer would be, "Now, Papa, you told me to make you obey! Have I got to make you ashamed before all this company?"

"Well, Papa, you know you'll be ashamed if I tell what you said to me the last time you were drunk."

Verne paused, with his glass half way in the air, trying to remember; and the company burst into clamor, "Oh, tell us! Tell us!"

STRIKE STRATEGY

By WILLIAM Z. FOSTER

ARTICLE VIII

ORGANIZING THE UNORGANIZED

THE most fundamental phases of our strike strategy relate to the mass of workers now unorganized. Great battles will be waged by these workers in the future, as a result of and in the process of which they will be mobilized into labor unions. This will have the most profound effects upon the trade union movement. It will proletarianize and revolutionize it. It will shift its leadership radically to the left. It will transfer the center of gravity of the movement from the skilled trades and light industries to the unskilled and semi-skilled in the key and basic industries. Hence the whole question of the organization of the unorganized is of the most vital concern in the development of our strike strategy.

The left wing must consciously and aggressively take up the task of organizing the unorganized, which is the major work now confronting the labor movement. There is no other group in the unions other than the left wing that has the understanding and initiative to do this basic work. The right wing, which represents the interests of the skilled workers, is opposed to the organizing of the unorganized unskilled masses, and the so-called "progressives," although they do lip service to the necessity of organization, are too spineless and wavering to really do anything about it except under the general leadership and stimulus of the militant left wing.

A FORERUNNER OF BATTLE

The left wing must carry on this work in the keenest realisation that organising campaigns are the preliminary phases of strikes. Such campaigns in American industry under present conditions are not only in themselves more or less open fights against the employers, but they are also efforts of the workers to mobilize their forces and to secure advantageous strategic positions for the bigger strike battles that loom certainly ahead.

Employers in the big industries will not permit their workers to peacefully organize and then negotiate trade union agreements. They will and do fight all along the line, against the organization of the unions, and against conceding their demands. Hence, when the left wing embarks on organization campaigns in the big industries, whether under the auspices of the A. F. of L. or independent unions, it must carry on its organization work as part of its strike strategy based on the strikes that are just ahead.

HOW AND WHEN TO STRIKE

Before going into a major organizing campaign, which means, if it is successful, an eventual hard-fought strike, the left wing strategists must first make a careful survey of (1) the state of the industry, (2) the strength and disposition of the enemy's forces, and (3) the general political situation. In short, they have to make a complete Marxian analysis of the whole problem. This is fundamental. It has to do with the vital strategical questions of how to hit the enemy at his weakest point, and at the time when he is least able to stand the blow.

(1) It is of real importance to the success of strikes that they be waged at periods of the greatest industrial activity. This means that we must always know accurately the state of production and the prospects for the immediate future. It is the policy of the employers, when they foresee unavoidable strikes, to force them to take place in the slack seasons. Their policy in this respect is embodied in the agreement in the bituminous coal fields, which the employers have arranged to end in April, when the demand for coal is light and when they can best stand a strike. By the same token, the employers try to force premature strikes in organising campaigns during slack periods by terrorizing and discharging their workers.

The left wing strike strategists must know how to defeat such tactics and to make strikes occur in the busy seasons. They must learn how to speed up their organizing campaigns, by the adoption of drastic measures of stimulation, when this is necessary to catch the busy season; or to slow them down in order to avoid the struggle at an inopportune time. Often the latter policy demands the greatest courage from the leaders and the greatest sacrifices from the workers who are harrassed and victimized by the employers. But the left wing strategists must try to carry it through. They must avoid fighting at the inopportune times. In this they cannot always succeed. Often the employers, in spite of all, will force the workers into untimely struggles.

(2) The workers must know exactly with whom they are fighting. This involves a close study of the employers' organizations, including the degree of institification, of the given industry, the relation of the various companies to each other and to outside combinations, the financial condition of the companies, etc. This study will enable the working class strike strategists to gauge the strength of the enemy, to know where and when is the best place to hit him, and to learn, in the course of a strike, whether he is being seriously weakened or not.

In organizing campaigns and strikes the workers must carry out many flank attacks against the big capitalist combinations of the industry by the organization of the independents, etc., but they must also know when and how to deliver the real thrust at the heart of the opposition. The employers are careful to protect themselves against such deadly thrusts by splitting up the workers' army and making it waste its forces in isolated engagements, a policy in which they are helped by the craft and localist conceptions of the reactionary craft union leaders.

CONSERVING LABOR'S FORCES

In the steel campaign of 1918-19, for example, the Cambria Steel Company, working no doubt in close understanding with the United States Steel Corporation, tried to force a strike in its big Johnstown plants by ruthlessly discharging some 3,000 of its workers for belonging to the unions. The workers, 22,000 strong, under local leadership (which later proved to be permeated with company agents) voted almost unanimously for a strike.

But the national leadership knew that a strike in Johnstown must fail and that it would ruin the whole national campaign. We realised further that the real enemy to be defeated was the United States Steel Corporation and that the battleground had to be in its mills all over the country. Therefore, we refused to take up the gage of battle offered us at Johnstown. We ordered the Johnstown workers to take the company's blow, to hold their ground at all costs for a few months until we could mobilize the steel workers nationally, who were then rapidly organizing.

This they did heroically in a most difficult situation and in the face of the bitterest opposition from the company. Thus we avoided this threatened serious breach in our ranks, and we were enabled, shortly afterward, to throw our whole army in one grand offensive against our real enemy, the United States Steel Corporation.

TIMING THE BLOW

(3) The working class strike strategist must always bear in mind the existing or prospective general and local political situations. They are often decisive in strikes. In general forward movements of the working class, when the workers are in a deep-going state of political ferment and in an expanding opposition to the employers, the left wing must be keen to take advantage of the favorable situation by militantly pushing its organizing campaigns and strike movements.

Often national election periods present favorable opportunities that must not be neglected. At these times the employers are seeking to mobilize the masses of workers, through various types and shades of political misleaders, into voting them full control of the government. Therefore, the slogan being to soft soap the workers, the capitalist politicians seek to slough off the rough edges of the class struggle by slackening somewhat in the state pressure against the workers.

Movements culminating in such periods, if aggressively handled, have relatively favorable fighting chances. On the other hand, after the elections are over when the politicians no longer have the immediate thought of asking the masses for their votes, the capitalists are especially ruthless against striking workers. There are many complex features of the varying political situations that an intelligent strike strategy must take cognizance of and utilize to further the workers' struggles against capitalism. Here I barely indicate the problem.

Happy Labor Misleaders

The officials of the rail labor unions with headquarters in Washington are slapping themselves on the back in their glee over the democrat semi-landslide. As usual, the labor fakers are claiming credit for the G. O. P. defeat.

First of all the influence of the labor leaders in an election is not worth much more to a politician than a ligleaf is to an Esquimaux in lieu of a fur coat. But the labor faker is a clever confidence man and manages to sell his gold brick. A certain labor leader who was also president of a fraternal organization once sold his followers to both parties. The republicans gave him $3,000 for them, but the democrats were a bit skeptical and only forked out "one grand."

But aside from that, what are those boys gloating over? The defeat of William M. Butler in Massachusetts? Well, we shed no tears over Butler's political demise, but what about his victorious opponent David I. Walsh? About the only saving grace David possesses in our eyes is his unquestionable pulchritude. He is an aged-in-the-wood reactionary. He opposed the child labor amendment. He was for the world court until he discovered that the voters were against it. This is the David our labor fakers hail as the hero who will swat the capitalist Goliath.

The labor leaders hail the election of Al Smith of New York as a victory. Now, what about Al? Ask the striking garment workers and they will tell you that hundreds of their members are in jail for exercising their legal right to picket thru the use of injunctions issued by Tammany judges and sanctioned by Al Smith. But what do the rail labor leaders care? Perhaps they were sore on the somewhat aristocratic Mills because he would not drink beer or shoot craps with them!

In Illinois the officials of the State Federation of Labor supported Frank L. Smith, pet of the open shop employer Samuel Insull. And in return Smith is supporting the poor relations of the labor fakers. This is sufficient to show that we agree with the reactionary labor officials inasmuch as we have proven that they support capitalist candidates who are notoriously anti-labor. Their records provide the proof.

It is quite evident that our present crop of labor officials, with few exceptions, are not in the least interested in the trade union movement except in so far as it provides them with a base of operations from which they can sally forth and capture remunerative offices, in addition to what they take from the members of their unions.

The democrat victory suits them down to the ground. They are happy over the result of last Tuesday's election. Why should they favor a Labor Party when the gravy is thicker in the capitalist parties? A Labor Party will come. It must come. But the task of organizing it must be shouldered by the rank and file. Our labor leaders have a stake in the capitalist system and are as enthusiastic about organizing a Labor Party as they would be about committing suicide.

HUGE PROFITS OF INDUSTRIAL CAPITAL LEADING TO A COMING DEPRESSION AND UNEMPLOYMENT

By LELAND OLDS, Federated Press.

Huge industrial profits which are laying the basis for the next business depression are revealed in a Wall Street Journal compilation of the profits of 20 corporations used in the Dow, Jones & Co. stock market averages. The combined 1922-1925 profits of these concerns, totaling over $2,000,000,000, mean an excessive accumulation of industrial capital at the expense of the purchasing power of consumers.

The profits of these 20 corporations, averaging over half a billion dollars a year, would have given 1,000,000 wage earners each an increase of $500 a year in wages.

Prosperity a Depression.

Such an increase would have meant a greater demand for goods with the assurance that the country's enormous productive power would be more consistently employed. Business observers would not now be forecasting a slow recession in business and employment.

Steel Trust Leads.

U. S. Steel ranks first in profits with a 4-year total of $421,848,619. American Telephone & Telegraph follows with $417,711,035, and General Motors comes third with $294,405,180. All 3 are closely affiliated with the House of Morgan.

The profits of the 20 corporations with the amount they have paid in cash dividends and interest to their owners in the 4 years 1922-1925 are:

| Corporation | Net Profits (1922-1925) | Interest & Earnings Dividends |
|---|---|---|
| Allied Chemical | $ 73,700,890 | $ 45,971,748 |
| American Can | 30,105,237 | 22,024,197 |
| Am. Car & Fdy. | 24,742,500 | 22,500,000 |
| Am. Locomotive | 14,111,136 | 12,233,520 |
| Am. Smelting | 42,757,372 | 31,408,368 |
| Am. Sugar | 25,756,400 | 20,162,445 |
| Am. Telephone | 417,711,035 | 215,830,372 |
| Am. Tobacco | 91,984,674 | 61,041,666 |
| Famous Players | 19,435,809 | 10,598,858 |
| General Electric | 147,247,160 | 106,078,014 |
| General Motors | 294,405,180 | 120,466,188 |
| Intl. Harvester | 48,923,781 | 34,454,921 |
| Mack Trucks | 26,629,705 | 19,911,252 |
| Rem. Typewriter | 6,710,574 | 3,963,122 |
| Sears-Roebuck | 54,621,847 | 12,781,625 |
| Texas Co. | 101,291,305 | 60,974,900 |
| U. S. Rubber | 96,125,871 | 43,100,625 |
| U. S. Steel | 421,848,619 | 227,441,871 |
| Western Union | 59,502,826 | 27,448,412 |
| F. W. Woolworth | 30,232,141 | 24,700,000 |

Gat Great Fortunes.

From these 20 corporations the owning class has received cash income in the last 4 years totaling $1,422,845,721, this being the sum of the interest and dividend payments. Common stockholders have received $915,533,614 of this in cash dividends. The $549,771,270 remainder was reinvested in the business.

Reinvestments.

Some of the corporations have reinvested a very large proportion of profits in the business. In the case of Mack Trucks about 61% of the 4-year profits has been retained for this purpose. Woolworth has used 56% of its profits in expanding its business. For General Motors the figure is 39%, for Sears Roebuck 29% and American Can 24%.

A large part of the profits distributed in cash is also invested in expanding the country's productive power. Such figures show the vital necessity of increasing the purchasing power of consumers at the expense of profits if another serious depression is to be avoided.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Nov. 5.—The Interstate Commerce Commission today placed a tentative valuation of $477,000,000, as of June 30, 1917, on the property owned and used by the Chicago and North Western Railroad.

Eugene V. Debs and the Revolutionary Labor Movement

By C. E. RUTHENBERG,
General Secretary,
Workers (Communist) Party.

THE socialist press is very much incensed and alarmed because the Workers (Communist) Party is paying tribute to the work of Eugene V. Debs in the struggle against capitalism by participating in memorial meetings in honor of the passing of Debs.

The socialists do not care to be reminded of the many times that Eugene V. Debs disagreed with the reformist and reactionary position taken by the socialist party. They wish to make the tradition of Debs' work in the revolutionary labor movement part of the background of the utterly bankrupt socialist party and hide it with the mantle of non-class struggle reformism, which is the policy of the socialist party today.

The memory of the work of Eugene V. Debs in the American labor movement is something which every revolutionary worker can cherish. The history of the socialist party in the United States does not begin with 1919. Debs worked in the socialist party for nearly two decades prior to 1919. He supported inside of the socialist party while the struggle was still going on inside of the party between yellow reformism and class conscious revolutionary action, not the Hillquits, Bergers and Oneals, but the "reds," the left wing of the socialist party.

Debs can still speak for himself. His eloquent voice is hushed by his death, but the many flaming words of denunciation he wrote against those who turned the socialist party from a class struggle, revolutionary policy still speaks for him against the Hillquits, Bergers and Oneals.

Debs on Immigration.

It is only possible here to cite a few incidents showing how Debs differed with the right wing, reformist leadership of the socialist party. These, however, will suffice to indicate that Debs did not belong to yellow reformism.

In the 1910 convention of the socialist party a report was made by a committee on immigration which adopted an reactionary A. F. of L. position to bar orientals from the United States. Debs could not accept such a version of internationalism. In the July, 1910, number of the International Socialist Review he wrote about this brand of internationalism, which the official leadership of the socialist party was trying to force upon the party, as follows:

"Have just read the majority report of the committee on immigration. It is utterly unworthy of the revolutionary working-class principles and make our fight openly and uncompromisingly against all our enemies."

The Attempt to Liquidate the Socialist Party.

In 1910 a movement developed with in the socialist party, led by A. M. Simons, for the merging of the socialist party into a labor party. The proposal was not that a united front organization consisting of delegates from various labor unions and workers' organizations should be organized and the socialist party affiliate with such a party, but rather that the socialist party should cease to exist merging itself completely into a labor party (this, of course, was quite a different proposal than the present day movement supported by the Workers (Communist) Party would affiliate, maintaining at the same time its separate organization and its revolutionary program.

The movement of 1910 would have resulted in the liquidation in the United States of the socialist party as a party having its objective the abolition of capitalism, within which there was the left wing, which stood for a revolutionary class struggle.

Debs wrote about this proposal in the January, 1910, issue of the International Socialist Review as follows:

"The revolutionary character of our party and our movement must be preserved in all its integrity at all costs, for if that be compromised it had better cease to exist."

It would be well for the Hillquits, Bergers and Oneals who have stripped the socialist party of any claim that it has a revolutionary character to again read these words of Eugene V. Debs.

The Struggle Between the "Yellows" and "Reds."

In the year 1912 there was a bitter struggle within the socialist party between the right and left wings, termed at that time the "yellows" and the "reds," over the question of how the workers would achieve power. Debs at that time placed himself squarely on record against the idea that the workers could achieve their emancipation by participation in the election campaigns only.

William D. Haywood, together with Frank Bohn, had written a pamphlet in which the following declaration appeared:

"When the worker, either thru experience or study of socialism, comes to know this truth, he acts accordingly. He retains absolutely no respect for the 'property' rights of the profit takers. He will use any weapon which will win his fight."

In the International Socialist Review Debs wrote in regard to this statement:

"I agree with them that in the fight against capitalism the workers have a right to use any weapon that will help them win."

Debs repudiated, as every Marxist must, the idea of the use of sabotage as the means of establishing the workers' power and winning their emancipation, but Debs would not permit himself to be bound by the interpretation of the method of the workers' struggle which the right wing leaders of the socialist party endeavored to make.

The struggle in 1912 had its climax in the national convention of the socialist party of that year, thru which the Hillquits, Bergers, etc., wrote into the constitution of the socialist party a criminal syndicalist law seven years before any of the states thought of putting such a law.

This criminal syndicalist law was in the form of a section of the constitution known as Article 2, Section 6, which sought to define political action as participation in election campaigns and in the work of the capitalist legislative body, and prohibited any person who advocated sabotage or violence as a method of the class struggle from becoming a member of the socialist party.

In March, 1914, Debs wrote to the International Socialist Review in regard to this constitutional provision as follows:

"I want to say that in my opinion Section 6 of Article 2 ought to be stricken from the socialist party constitution.

"I am opposed to restricting free speech under any pretence whatsoever, and quite as decidedly opposed to our party seeking favor in the bourgeois eyes by protesting that it does not countenance violence and is not a criminal organization."

Article 2, Section 2, which Debs also condemned, was aimed at the constitution of the socialist party in the motion of the writer of this article at the St. Louis convention in 1917, where the left wing of the socialist party was in control.

Debs and the War.

The manifesto against the entry of the United States into the World War adopted at the St. Louis convention in 1917 was accepted as the statement of principles of the socialist party under the leadership of the left wing of the party, which dominated the St. Louis convention. Hillquit and Lee represented a center group in the convention which, while it wished to declare against the war, did not wish to make an aggressive struggle such as the left wing insisted upon.

The left wing made the mistake at the St. Louis convention of permitting the formal rule that the national executive committee be elected by referendum to stand to its way in securing a national executive committee which stood on the St. Louis platform. The significance of this error soon became apparent in the fact that it was only where the left wing was in control of the socialist party organizations that the actual struggle to carry the St. Louis program into effect was carried on.

By the spring of 1918 a strong movement had developed in the national executive committee of the socialist party for revision of the St. Louis program and its strong denunciation and program of action against the war and for a policy that the socialist party should accommodate itself to the existing situation and if not becoming pro-war, at least carrying on no struggle against the war.

It was under these conditions that Debs made his speech in Nimasilla Park, Canton, Ohio, opposite the State County Workhouse, in which Alfred Wagenknecht, Charles Baker and the writer were confined for actually giving life to the St. Louis manifesto against the war by an intensive struggle against the war in all its forms, carried out in the city of Cleveland and thruout the state of Ohio. Debs thus made his flaming denunciation of the war at a time when the national executive committee of the socialist party, dominated by the present leaders of the socialist party, were ready to take a step backward and make a compromise in regard to the stand in relation to the war.

Debs and the Russian Revolution.

Debs' reaction to the Russian revolution, as expressed in the year 1919 before he went to prison, was that of enthusiastic support. In the last speech which Debs made before going to Atlanta prison, which was delivered in the West Side Turner Hall, Cleveland, Ohio, under the auspices of the local of the socialist party, which at that time had already declared itself a supporter of the left wing movement which later developed into the Communist Party, Debs declared:

"I am a Bolshevik from the top of my head to the sole of my feet."

In his statement after the supreme court affirmed his conviction for the Canton speech Debs issued a statement in which he said

"The decision just rendered places the United States where old Russia was under the czar's rule. It is good for at least a million Bolshevik recruits in this country."

Debs was not a Bolshevik in understanding and conscious support of Bolshevist principles that is, Communist principles—but his reaction to the Russian revolution was in the same spirit that he showed in regard to all the workers' struggles, support of a militant, class struggle against capitalism.

Debs and the Communists.

Debs was not a Communist. He remained in the socialist party after the split of 1919, when those with whom he had been associated in past struggles within the socialist party were compelled to leave it and form the Communist Party because the socialist party leadership, in spite of the support of the overwhelming membership of the party given to the left wing, betrayed the revolutionary principle which the Russian revolution showed must guide the revolutionary labor movement in the present era.

The issue on which the left wing which formed the Communist Party and Debs parted company was the question of the dictatorship of the proletariat.

Debs was in the Atlanta prison at the time the split took place in the socialist party. Naturally, he was not informed as to the phases of the struggle and could not express himself in relation to the struggle.

In June, 1920, the writer visited Debs in the federal prison at Atlanta to present to him the question of his future affiliation. The point in the program of the Communist Party which Debs did not accept was the declaration that the workers' and farmers' government which would be established as the result of the class struggle must of necessity be a dictatorship of the proletariat.

Debs' conception of the dictatorship of the proletariat was that of a dictatorship exercised by an individual, such a dictatorship as that exercised by the first Napoleon or the czar of Russia during the period of unlimited autocracy or the Mussolini dictatorship in Italy at the present time.

Debs did not understand the dictatorship in the form in which it is supported by the Communists. That is, the dictatorship of a class against class. He did not grasp that in the struggle for power against capitalism the Communist it was necessary that the workers use the governmental power to suppress the capitalists and the remaining vestiges of the capitalist system in the same manner that the capitalists today use the governmental power to suppress the struggles of the workers for a new social order.

Why the Communists Honor the Memory of Debs.

Altho Debs did not clearly grasp the fundamentals underlying the class struggle and their implications, he was a revolutionary fighter who instinctively took his stand on the side of the worker in every battle. In every great struggle in American labor history Debs spoke out his flaming words in support of the workers. When Moyer, Haywood and Pettibone were in danger of being murdered by the Debs who, in flaming words, called upon the workers to rally to their support. In the struggle at Lawrence, Massachusetts; the massacre at Ludlow, Colorado; the I. W. W. struggle in the West Virginia coal fields more than a decade ago, it was Debs who took his stand always for the workers and called upon the whole working class to fight with them. Even after 1919, when the socialist party held itself aloof and even denounced the struggle in support of workers' fights, Debs still maintained the same position and supported every fight for the workers or in defense of the victims of the class struggle. Thus Debs became a member of the Labor Defense Council for the defense of the Communists arrested at Bridgeman, Michigan. He later joined the International Labor Defense and became a member of its national committee. He also raised his voice to call the working class in defense of the lives of Sacco and Vanzetti.

Supporting the principle of industrial unionism which he had advocated for a quarter of a century, he spoke in favor of the Trade Union Educational League and its policy.

The above discussion of the policy supported by Debs shows that he was continually in opposition to the official leadership of the socialist party, made up in the past, as now, of the Hillquits and Bergers. He stood for and supported a militant class struggle policy under all conditions.

The present day leaders of the decrepit socialist party endeavor to claim Debs as their own, in order to capitalize his name and win the workers for the yellow reformism which the socialist party and its leadership stands for today. The present policies of the socialist party and its present leadership are alien to the whole spirit of Debs' part in the labor movement of this country. Debs and the memory of his work are part of the traditions of the left wing of the socialist party which has become the Communist Party.

It is because Debs' work in the American labor movement was part and parcel of the spirit of a militant class struggle, because Debs denounced injustice, stirred hatred of the system of exploitation and ever stood on the side of the workers, that the Workers (Communist) Party and its members honor the memory of Eugene V. Debs. It is because the spirit in which Debs fought the class struggle is in the spirit of the Workers (Communist) Party today, that it will do honor to him and to such a part of the best traditions of revolutionary American labor movement.

The Workers (Communist) Party bases its work on the work of fighting for the every battles in the spirit that Debs fought them, but translates that spirit into action guided by Leninism, which will lead the workers to victory in the struggle against capitalism.

German Working Women Thrilled by Wonderful Spirit They Find Among Russian Workers and Peasants

In this article Anna Louise Strong continues telling how the Russian workers and peasants are so much interested in visits of foreign delegations as the delegates themselves are. She describes the visit of the delegation of German working women to the Sanitarium at Livadia.

By ANNA LOUISE STRONG

LIVADIA, Crimea. After dinner the delegation went upstairs to the room under the cupola, which once was a sanitarium church for officials of the old regime, and is now a workers' club. Cheers again, and a round of the sanitarium orchestra, not much of an orchestra, I admit, being dependent on the transient talent of patients bringing strained instruments, but enthusiastic.

The chairman chosen for the day arose, a woman patient in her kimono sanitarium gown, and in real fine the members of the delegation, ing the political and trade union questions of each. Comrades were named last, and the applause grew louder and stormier. A stranger could have assumed that the audience was composed of Communists. Yet only about 10 per cent were party members, the rest, non-party trade unionists, so should accept delegates, knowing that they represent these Communists, but as friends in a special sense, because for their sort of revolution.

Welcoming Speeches.

THEN—the welcoming speeches. A small, dark woman, cheeks gaunt with disease, fiery, telling how women at last have equal rights in politics, equal pay in industry, equality in all domestic matters before the law. An apparently husky young man of 30 arose, but with a hoarse voice, appealing to them to get onto the band with the men when "1923 comes" to Germany"—an allusion to the hoped-for revolution that failed to come off.

Last of all, a girl, pale, hollow-eyed, shabby under a determined mien. I was she could not speak. She was a youth of the hospitals, told how she herself had worked in capitalist days as a tiny child, without a chance to learn anything, but now she has to work six hours, but we have our representatives on the shop committees, we have the same rights as grown ups, we also get work to study, and universities, and we wish that the German youth may get for themselves the same rights, thru the power of united organized workers." Then suddenly remembering that either because she had finished or forgot the rest, she hurried to her chair and hid her crimsoning face in her hands, while her comrades patted her on the back and told her she had done it all right.

Warned Not to Come.

THE delegation answered. No doubt they had made the same speech in many factories and workers' clubs, but each phrase of their speech gained life and meaning from the tense interest, the applause of the listening workers. They told how they had been warned not to come to Russia, how many lies had been told them, how they had been informed that they would be shown only specially prepared factories, and "show kin villages," alluding to the fake villages especially prepared for the czar's favorite for his majesty's inspection. But they had traveled to hundreds of miles, and seen all sorts of factories, good ones and bad ones, and talked without ingredients to hundreds of Russian workers who knew German from the days of war prisons.

OH MY! GIRLS, HE'S NOT A LORD AFTER ALL—BACK WITH THE WEDDING GIFTS

BELGRADE, Nov. 5.—The latest romance of Miss Mary Landan Baker of Chicago, is all off. It was learned today.

Miss Baker, who figuratively left Alister McCormick waiting at the church, and whose indecision is said to have wrecked several other romances, is reported to have abandoned any plans she may have had to marry M. Pouritch, formerly Sent an consul in Chicago.

The breaking off of the Pouritch-Baker romance is reported to have been due to Miss Baker's recent discovery that M. Pouritch is just M. Pouritch and that he is not a nobleman.

Reports are that Miss Baker is bound back to London, where it has been reported there is a young peer who has long sought her hand.

MME. KOLLONTAI, Soviet envoy to Mexico, a brilliant and useful woman, was denied the privilege of visiting the United States on her way to the southern republic. The government that gave free passage to the bloody queen of Roumania and her retinue of parasites does not think Mme. Kollontai worthy of the privilege of entering this country. The Soviet envoy would not lend herself to the disgusting orgy of flunkeyism that is spiritual fodder to the queen of Roumania, and of course our parasites of both sexes would no more kiss Kollontai's hand than they would embrace a leper.

WE are not surprised that old lady Kellogg instructed his Berlin agent to refuse a visa to the Soviet representative. This same old fossil would not permit the perfectly agreeable Countess Karolyi of Hungary to visit us because she and her husband are enemies of the infamous Horthy and because one of the Vanderbilt girls is married to a Hungarian noble with a name like a head cold who is Hungarian ambassador at Washington. So our indignation at Kellogg's latest proof of subserviency to reaction is somewhat tempered by the thought that an accumulation of such incidents will tend to shorten that gentleman's political life.

JOHN L. LEWIS is dusting off the old reliable red bogey for use in the election campaign in the miners' union. John Brophy, who stands for a progressive policy in the organization, is running for international president against Lewis. There is every reason to believe that Brophy will get a majority of the votes, provided his watchers are on the job. Unless they are Lewis will count himself in, as any wide-awake labor faker would do. The progressives must watch as well as vote if they are seriously in favor of removing the stoolpigeon Lewis from office.

THE word "stoolpigeon" is used advisedly here. Four years ago Lewis and that monocled freak, Elliot Searles, who edits the miners' journal, paid a large sum of money to a detective agency in return for spurious information about the Communists. Hoping to be able to put the Communists in jail, Lewis turned over the "evidence" to the department of justice, but it appears that the fink agency that sold the stuff had stolen the dope from the D. of J., so the latter sorely thanked Lewis. Could any private fink descend lower than this?

BRITISH MINERS REFUSE TO GRANT CONCESSIONS TO OWNERS; WILL FORM ANGLO-SOVIET BLOC TO AID FIGHT

(Special to The Daily Worker)

LONDON, Nov. 7.—The Miners' Federation remained firm on their demands that hours and wages be subject to revision nationally at the conference of the owners and the government to bring about a settlement of the strike. When the owners refused, the unionists withdrew from the conference, declaring they would fight until their demands were acceded to.

The delegates are now on their way to Berlin where they will meet representatives from the Soviet Russia miners' union for the purpose of forming an Anglo-Russian miners' bloc to strengthen the workers' offensive against the employers.

QUEEN MARIE SHAKES DOWN HENRY FORD

Hill Quits When He Is Treated "Coldly"

(Special to The Daily Worker)

SEATTLE, Nov. 7.— Desperate attempts to prevent the public from realizing the hokum that Queen Marie is trying to put over on her "trip of love" thru democratic America have resulted in bodily ejections from her majesty's special train and a series of lying "official" statements that would make Ananias ashamed.

J. A. Ayres, reported to be a representative of Henry Ford, was kicked off the train here on orders of the gentle queen, when Ayres talked too much. The Ford representative made public the announcement that Henry Ford was paying the expenses of Queen Marie in the United States, and that Ford had already put out more than a half a million dollars. When the papers carried the news of how Marie had successfully made Ford a prey of her gold-digging, the Queen was seized by such a rage that she ordered Ayres off the train at once. He was ejected by Col. John H. Carroll, official host to the queen.

Gets a Headache.

The royal party spent all day yesterday denying the reports of Ford's generosity. The situation affected Marie so that she had to retire with a fierce headache, it was reported.

Other events of the day added to the disagreeableness of the queen's trip.

Hill Wants Too Much.

Samuel Hill, millionaire, who is also reported to be paying heavily for the queen's entertainment, withdrew in a huff from the party when his attentions were received coldly. Hill believed, that since he was paying some of the queen's bills, he ought to be considered as one of the family. He publicly declared himself to be the queen's "host." The queen, however, who is accustomed to younger companions in her Roumanian court, spurned his attentions, it is reported, desiring rather the company of some of the young "war correspondents" of the capitalistic newspapers, including Stanley Washburn.

Hill was informed that the queen "couldn't see him at all," and that he didn't mean a thing to her "gracious majesty." The millionaire then left the party, presumably to seek less royal game.

Ford Worried.

At Detroit, Henry Ford is seeking to cover up, and has been busy issuing denials that Queen Marie is trying to put the bite on him for a million dollars.

PEKING, Nov. 7.—(FP)—Because the soldiers of the Manchurian warlord, Chang Tso-lin, fill most of the streetcars and even drive off the passengers who have paid for their rides, the local tramway company has asked the cabinet to buy its stock.

The company is being ruined by free riding.

CHICAGO LABOR PAYS TRIBUTE TO HAYMARKET

Condemns Knee-Bending to Queen Marie

The Chicago Federation of Labor at its meeting on last Sunday, unanimously protested against the official reception of Queen Marie and declared that Chicago labor would take no part in the homage to any reigning sovereign, particularly one representing as Queen Marie does, a country in which the workers and peasant are under ground the iron heel of a dictatorship of the capitalists and where 2,500 political prisoners are held in jail. This was the gist of a resolution that passed with no opposition.

The federation also decided to set aside Nov. 11 as the date upon which to commemorate the Chicago martyrs who were hanged following the Haymarket bomb explosion.

Delegate Wright arose to make a 100 per cent speech, saying that Nov. 11 is Armistice Day and that it would not be right to "the boys who fought in France" to celebrate the Haymarket anniversary on that day. Delegate Koop and other speakers attacked Wright for his speech and declared that the Haymarket tradition is of far more importance to labor than Armistice Day.

The resolution to set aside Nov. 11 was carried by an overwhelming majority with only Wright voting against it.

Explosion in Packing House Injures Twelve When Gas Fumes Burn

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Nov. 7.—Twelve men employed in the fertilizer department of Wilson and Company, packers, were injured, seven seriously, today, when a spark from a motor ignited gas fumes from fertilizers and caused an explosion.

The seriously injured were taken to hospitals.

The Fake Bullets Come Home to Roost

The fatal regularity with which Mussolini has been missed by crack pistol shots and past masters in the art of bombing, while causing some suspicion in the minds of skeptics has only now been revealed as well calculated bogus attempts engineered by the fascisti themselves for the purpose of whipping up national sentiment and enhancing the prestige of the head fascist.

ARREST WORKERS FOR ADVERTISING 9TH ANNIVERSARY

Chicago police Saturday arrested two workers for distributing posters advertising the celebration of the ninth anniversary of the Russian revolution held here Sunday at Ashland Auditorium.

Using Massachusetts and New Jersey police tactics, the local coppers relied on an ordinance that is never enforced, against placing posters on poles, and took the two workers to jail, placing charges of violating city ordinances against them.

The workers were N. Stevens and D. Plasin. They were arrested in the factory district near Twenty-second and Blue Island. On the same poles that they were placing the posters, were countless others advertising political candidates and bourgeois social affairs.

Fifty dollars bail was imposed on the two. The International Labor Defense came to their aid, and furnished the bail, getting the release of the workers.

SOVIET WORKERS SEND ANOTHER LARGE CONTRIBUTION TO MINERS; FORMING ANGLO-RUSSIAN BLOC

By JOHN PEPPER.

(Special Cable to The DAILY WORKER.)

MOSCOW, U. S. S. R., Nov. 7.—The Central Council of the trade unions of the Soviet Union has just transferred another contribution of $290,000 to the striking British miners.

This is a return from the one percent voluntary levy imposed on themselves by the millions of workers that are organized in the Russian trade unions.

M. Schwartz, chairman of the Central Committee of the Soviet miners and M. Akuloff, chairman of the All-Ukrainian Miners' Committee left for Berlin to conduct negotiations with a delegation of British miners with a view to organizing an Anglo-Russian miners' bloc.

The meeting between the British and Soviet miners will take place on November 10.

The Soviet miners were compelled to break off negotiations with the Miners' International in view of the latters' scabbing on the striking miners of Great Britain. The Russian workers have contributed over four million dollars to their brothers in Britain, while the American Federation of Labor has only raised a little over $50,000 to date. Naturally the British miners are grateful to the Russian workers who, under Communist leadership, have proven themselves friends in need.

Russian workers are expressing their indignation over the action of Ramsay MacDonald, socialist leader, in leaving for a trip to Africa while the miners are in a desperate struggle against the bosses.

PLOTS AGAINST MUSSOLINI ARE FASCIST FAKES

Huge Conspiracy Is Unearthed in Paris

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PARIS, Nov. 7. — That plots resulting in curiously unsuccessful attempts to assassinate Premier Mussolini were hatched in France by agents of the fascisti; that Colonel Ricciotti Garibaldi, well known as an anti-fascisti leader was tool of the fascisti themselves; and that the object of these secret fascist maneuvers was the two fold purpose of enhancing the fascist cause at home and delivering a blow to France abroad—these are the charges made by the French press with regard to the police examinations of Ricciotti Garibaldi now going on in Paris.

It is claimed that Garibaldi, arrested last Thursday by French police in Nice, has confessed to being an agent of the fascisti! Specifically it is said he was the paid agent of Signor Federzoni, Italian minister of interior recently resigned and head of the nationalist wing of the fascist party.

Fake Plot.

More specifically, Garibaldi is claimed to have confessed to the engineering of a bomb plot upon Mussolini's life in which Mussolini conveniently escaped since, Garibaldi is quoted as saying, the fascist police knew all along of the activities of the so-called conspirators. The incident referred to is the bomb attack against Mussolini in Piazza Porta Pia in Rome on Sept 11.

Garibaldi, the French press reports, was confronted with Sig Sciroli, well-known anti-fascist leader who, upon seeing Garibaldi, was forcibly restrained from attacking him and openly accused the colonel of complicity with the fascisti Sciroli had been working with Garibaldi in the anti-fascists cause.

Implicated in Spain.

Garibaldi is also charged with a share in the ill fated Catalonian expedition of Col. Francesco Maria, also under arrest. His interest in the Catalon independence movement is actuated, it is charged, by Italy's desire to stir up discord between France and Spain, the Catalan plot having been engineered from French soil.

There is a tendency in some quarters to believe that Garibaldi himself is the victim of a French maneuver to make him a cat's paw in propaganda against Italy, that Garibaldi is a genuine anti-fascist and that he has been roped in by international intrigue.

But it would appear from the press that official France is genuinely wrought up over the revelations and is preparing to dispatch a strong note to Rome demanding assurances and apologies

FRENCH STORY DENIED

Every Party Member Must Work to Keep The DAILY WORKER

A Statement of the Present Situation. By C. E. RUTHENBERG, General Secretary, Workers (Communist) Party.

The members of our party are entitled to a frank statement in regard to the situation of The DAILY WORKER and the possibility of KEEPING THE DAILY WORKER AS A VOICE OF THE COMMUNISTS, interpreting the events of the class struggle and giving leadership in the work of moving the workers of this country forward to a revolutionary class struggle against capitalism.

The task of publishing a daily working class newspaper is a big one. The resources producing a regular income which such a paper has to draw upon are limited, particularly in the field of advertising which makes up a large part of the income of the daily newspapers. In spite of these handicaps and difficulties WE HAVE KEPT THE DAILY WORKER ALIVE FOR NEARLY THREE YEARS.

We have achieved this thru raising a sustaining fund each year thru which the deficit of The DAILY WORKER has been met to a large extent.

The present situation of The DAILY WORKER is, that the accumulated deficit of the year 1926 has to be met. The deficit for the year 1925 amounted to $60,000. This was covered in part by the profits of our printing plant which amounted to $25,000 for the year, leaving $35,000 to be raised thru the sustaining fund campaign.

The situation this year is the same. We have a similar deficit to meet, covered in part by the profits of the printing plant. To meet the balance of the accumulated deficit the campaign for the KEEP THE DAILY WORKER FUND WAS INITIATED. The $50,000 Keep The DAILY WORKER Fund will cover the deficit and leave something over to strengthen our paper and for work in building its support thru subscriptions which will reduce the deficit for the next year.

We have raised approximately $15,000 of the $50,000 Keep The DAILY WORKER Fund. This has improved the financial situation of The DAILY WORKER. We are in a better situation than at the beginning of September. BUT UNLESS WE GO FORWARD WITH THE CAMPAIGN WITH GREATER ENERGY AND RAISE THE BALANCE OF THE $50,000 FUND WE WILL LOSE THE GAINS WE HAVE MADE DURING THE LAST SIX WEEKS.

The financial situation of The DAILY WORKER is still critical. Just at this moment we are facing the worst crisis. What has been done shows that we can overcome this crisis. IF WE MOBILIZE EVERY MEMBER OF THE PARTY IN SUPPORT OF THE KEEP THE DAILY WORKER CAMPAIGN.

We state confidently to the party membership that if we mobilize our whole strength we can Keep The DAILY WORKER. The next $10,000 raised will overcome the crisis and the completion of the $50,000 fund will put The DAILY WORKER in a sound condition to meet the coming year.

WE RAISED $90,000 TO ESTABLISH THE DAILY WORKER IN THE YEAR 1924. WE CAN RAISE $50,000 TO KEEP THE DAILY WORKER IN THE YEAR 1926.

But immediate, energetic and enthusiastic work is necessary to meet the situation. The task of the party members has been made easy. They have been asked to BUY A $5.00 BOOK OF KEEP THE DAILY WORKER CERTIFICATES, OR, IF THEY CANNOT PAY FOR IT IMMEDIATELY TO TAKE A BOOK AND SELL THE 25c, 50c and $1.00 COUPONS AMONG THEIR FRIENDS, SHOPMATES, ETC., UNTIL THEY RAISE THEIR $5.00.

EVERY PARTY MEMBER CAN RAISE $5.00 FOR THE DAILY WORKER FUND IN THREE MONTHS. SUCH A MOBILIZATION AND WORK BY THE PARTY MEMBERS WILL COMPLETE THE $50,000 FUND.

About 3,000 party members have thus far responded. It is now the duty of the other 7,000 to come to the aid of The DAILY WORKER.

THEY MUST ACT QUICKLY TO KEEP THE DAILY WORKER.

The month of November must add at least $15,000 to the Keep The DAILY WORKER FUND. In the next few days The DAILY WORKER must have $5,000.

WE MAKE THIS STATEMENT TO URGE EVERY MEMBER OF THE PARTY TO THROW HIMSELF INTO THE WORK OF DOING HIS PART TO KEEP THE DAILY WORKER IMMEDIATELY. THE MONEY MUST BE RUSHED TO THE DAILY WORKER AS FAST AS COLLECTED.

EVERY PARTY MEMBER MUST WORK TO KEEP THE DAILY WORKER.

IF WE CAN ACHIEVE SUCH AN IMMEDIATE MOBILIZATION OF THE PARTY, THE MEMBERS OF THE PARTY MAY GO FORWARD WITH THEIR WORK CONFIDENT THAT WE WILL KEEP THE DAILY WORKER, THE POWERFUL VOICE OF THE REVOLUTIONARY WORKERS OF THE UNITED STATES.

ompany Negligence Caused Death

Daily Worker Correspondent Gives Facts of Pabst Mine Entombment and Charges Disastrous Cave-In to Company Neglect — The Daily Worker Asks If the Same Is Not the Case In Ishpeming Where 51 Miners Met Their Doom?

The death of 51 miners in the Barnes–Hecker iron mine near Ishpeming, Mich., last Wednesday, following so closely on the heels of the Oliver mine disaster in which three men were killed and 40 miners entombed for 131 hours, raises the question of the fatal regularity with which these catastrophes occur in the iron mines of Minnesota and Michigan, killing miners by the score each year and leaving hundreds of widows and orphans without support.

There is ample reason to think that "natural causes" are not altogether to blame for the frequently recurring cave-ins that entomb miners in the depths of the shafts or drown them in the entries as happened at Ishpeming. The DAILY WORKER here reprints a letter received from a reliable observer of the Oliver mine disaster and subsequent events which proves that the company was responsible for the entombment of the 20 men and the death of the three who did not come out alive.

The proofs submitted in this letter of company negligence in the case of the Oliver mine can, the author of the letter believes, be found to apply to most mines on the iron range. The DAILY WORKER, having reason to put implicit faith in the word of its correspondent, raises this question also in connection with the Ishpeming cave-in—one of the worst in the history of iron mining.

The letter follows:

Already, five years ago, the Oliver Mining company in Ironwood, Mich., made estimates of rebuilding the caved-in shaft of the Pabst mine. They ran from $160,00 to $280,000. When the local officers of the company stated clearly that the shaft was not safe. But in its eagerness for profits, company headquarters did not, until after the disaster, designate any funds to be used for that purpose.

30 Years Old.

This shaft had been constructed some thirty years ago. Its timbers have never been changed. They are rotten to the extent, that as the entombed miners claim, any one could with his bare hand drive a 12-inch spike 10 inches into these timbers.

Minor accidents and cave-ins happened frequently. The railings of the hoisting outfit were frequently out of order on account of being pressed in by the tremendous pressure of the surrounding mass. The skip flew off its railings once in a while and knocked loose timber, bracing and dirt from the walls of the shaft. Such things happened a couple of times just before the disaster. The very same morning the skip was cleared by hewing with axes a few inches off the railings just in the place were the cave-in happened a couple of hours later.

Men Not Warned.

The pressure which had pressed in the railings, making the skip impassable, had made the electric wires grind together. The big rock which a little later on caved in, was moving. The situation was threatening. But then working in the drifts below were not warned about this, the it was known to every one that this shaft was the only way out of the mine. (Law provides there shall be two shafts in each mine.)

The superintendent was down 20 minutes prior to the cave-in. He barely had time to ascend and send down the electric repair crew, when the cave-in occurred, killing instantly this crew of three.

This happened about 11 o'clock a. m. But the company did not give any alarm for help. Cave-ins were so usual, that it was left to the men to clear themselves out. Another and greater cave-in occurred at 2 p. m. Then the first alarm was given. But the Oliver Mining company had practically no rescue equipment. It took hours before any could be brought from near-by Newport Location by borrowing from another mining company. To illustrate how completely the Oliver Mining company was unprepared, it serves to mention that in the company storehouse there were not more than two axes, not to speak of drills, diamond drills, or other more expensive equipment.

Don't Know Mining.

The leadership of the mining operations of the Oliver Mining company is distributed by relationship and not according to capacity and knowledge of mining. The result is, that the officials do not know anything of mining. And in this instance when the Newport Location rescue crew came, they had to drive off the Oliver company officials and the Aurore mining officials took charge of the rescuing work.

One of the drift bosses of the Oliver Mining company was among the entombed ones. He did not know what to do down below. When the men proposed to close the shaft to prevent down-coming dirt and rocks from breaking the shaft down below their level, he tried to prevent it. Instead he tried to telephone up for advice. The wires were cut off by the cave-in. Dirt came down constantly threatening to cut off all possible means of rescue. The entombed miners took it upon themselves to block the shaft. And by doing this they not only saved the road for their rescue, but 800 feet of the shaft from destruction. This meant in the repair work a saving of some $70,000 to the company.

I do not here go into the details of how the rescue was accomplished. It suffices to say that the men were entombed 131 hours. The nerves of many of them were broken. The agony was great, not to speak of being without food five days and nights.

Robbed of Compensation.

According to those who know about mining laws, the identity of which I cannot for the present reveal, the men are, each one of them, entitled to a compensation from $4,000 to $6,000. But there is in Ironwood, Mich., no organization of the workers to press for this. The coroner, who held the post mortem of the killed ones, freed the Oliver Mining company practically from the responsibility. And what else could be expected from the brother-in-law of the superintendent of the company in a surrounding, which is practically run by the dictatorship of the steel trust.

This does not, however, remove the responsibility. The company knows it, but tried to work each entombed miner individually to sign a quitclaim deed. It proposed to each one who was 131 hours entombed, eight hours straight time for each twenty-four hours spent behind the cave-in and twelve hours for the Sunday. This means in cash about $30 to each one concerned.

Some of the miners have been stupid enough to accept this "offer" after being given vague promises of "steady, easy jobs." Every one knows that this does not mean anything. Twenty-seven of those who were entombed have decided to fight for their rights.

Local People Help.

The editor of the Ashland Daily Press, a federal mast inspector, one senator of the state of Michigan, and some other local people have promised assistance to these workers in preparing for a federal grand jury investigation. The affidavits are sworn, but that is not enough pressure to bring the investigation, nor to force the officials to enforce the law. More pressure must be brought to play in circumstances where the almighty steel trust controls the grand jury, the government of the county and to a large extent the government of the state.

To force justice for these workers the voice of the organized workers is necessary and a lot of publicity. And for creating this, the matter should be taken up in central labor assemblies, state federations of labor, and so on. Resolutions should be passed condemning the injustice practiced upon these workers, and the matter should be drawn to the attention of the executive council of the American Federation of Labor with the request of moral support to this demand of investigation and justice and publicity in the cause of these miners of Ironwood, Mich., who are living under the ruthless heel of the steel trust.

Need Organization.

All this is so much more important due to the fact this disaster and its aftermath has driven home to the iron miners of the state of Michigan the lesson of the necessity of organizing. There is an ever-growing sentiment for it, but the ruthlessness of the Oliver Mining company prevents it from coming out in the open.

Sympathy of organized workers from outside would encourage this sentiment into materializing in actual organization work, and should the American Federation of Labor extend its hand for giving at least moral support, that would help the awakening of these workers to the idea and necessity of organization. That would be of great value to the A. F. of L. in creating friendly relations with these elements and strengthening the influence of the A. F. of L.

Will Bring Great Writers Closer to People of Russia

MOSCOW, Nov. 7.—In order to popularize among the people the works of the best masters of the past there was formed at the State Publishing House a special "editorial commission" for the purpose of publishing the Russian and world classics. Among the members of the commission are Lunatcharsky, Prof. Pitsanov and Prof. Grossman.

In an effort to facilitate the study of the classics it was decided by the commission to publish in the first place an edition of the selected works of the classics, accompanied by commentaries and critico-biographical notes.

Among the first works to be published will be those of the following authors: Tolstoy, Dribeydov, Gorky, Garshin, Tchekhov, Hauptmann, Flaubert, Maupassant, Zola, Victor Hugo, Heine, Byron, Shelley, Keats, Whitman, Poe, Longfellow, Lowell, Mark Twain, Bret Harte, Jack London, Upton Sinclair, Dreiser, Sinclair Lewis, Cooper, Irving, Hawthorne, Howells, Thoreau, Emerson, Lincoln, Franklin, Washington, Jefferson, Paine, Thomas Jefferson, Hamilton, Madison, Monroe, Adams, Jackson, Van Buren, Harrison, Tyler, Polk, Taylor, Fillmore, Pierce, Buchanan, Lincoln, Johnson, Grant, Hayes, Garfield, Arthur, Cleveland, Harrison, McKinley, Roosevelt, Taft, Wilson, Harding, Coolidge.

DISCUSS UNITY WITH LABOR AT CO-OP CONGRESS

A Strong Progressive Bloc Is at Work

(Special to The Daily Worker)

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Nov. 7. — Recognition of the fact that the co-operative movement is part of the labor movement and must support labor in both its economic and political movements is the central issue at the congress of the Co-operative League of America in session at the Franklin Co-operative Creamery Auditorium here.

The resolutions committee reported favorably for such action by a vote of six to one. A heated discussion followed the committee report and final action was to have been taken in Saturday's session. There is large support for the resolution recommending union with the labor movement.

Big Progressive Bloc.

A large progressive delegation present in the convention seems to be in the majority. The progressives have a big representation on most committees and is in the majority on the resolutions committee.

The pure and simple co-operators under the leadership of Doctor Warbasse here been completely out-maneuvered so far. The leadership of the progressive wing has been assumed by the delegation of the Co-operative Central Exchange with Hallonen, Hann Nurmi and Carlson leading the discussion for the progressive bloc.

There are about a hundred delegates present at the congress representing the major consumers' co-operatives of the country.

WHY PAYMENT OF TAXES WAS POPULAR SPORT

But There's Many a Slip Twixt Hip and Lip

Increased business in the tax evasion department of County Collector Sweitzer's office that has been reported lately is apparently explained by the visit of federal prohibition agents there Saturday. Wonderment as to what caused the warm popularity of the office, whose geniality seemed to "pervade" the entire atmosphere of the county building with an "aroma" of Hennessy, was laid at rest when it made a call on Sweitzer. A bar room that lacked nothing except free sandwiches was found there in the basement, that presumably houses important government documents.

It is reported that while the agents were listening thru the key-hole before making the raid, the following conversations were heard:

"I want to extend my tax payments two months," said one public spirited taxpayer.

"How'll you have it, straight or mixed?" answered the clerk.

"Can you give me six month's time?" another hundred porcenter (up to the neck).

"Will you take it here or on the hip?"

"Cancel my extension."

"Scotch or rye?"

Typewriter's Tinkle.

Hearing this, and smelling the "friendly air" in the building, coupled with a clinking sound of glasses (that of course, might have been typewriter, or belle), the agents swooped into the office.

After the raid County Clerk Sweitzer declared he "couldn't understand where all the liquor came from." He immediately fired Anthony Mc-Grady, a deputy clerk, to prove his purity.

Drank Too Many Extensions.

Other men taken in the raid were William Decow, clerk in the board of local improvements ,and Fred Haverkamp, recently discharged from the tax extension department. Haverkamp, it is reported, lost his job, because he took it too seriously and imbibed too much "tax extensions."

The county building is now all in an uproar, because their handiest source of booting is now gone, and they will probably have to patronize the bootlegger across the street—which is such a bother!

Trade Commission Kills Rule Against Creamery Unfairness

WASHINGTON, Nov. 7.—Announcement is made by the Humphrey majority in the federal trade commission that it has rescinded the "fair trade" rule of 1919, enacted by that commission, in a conference for dealing with the creamery industry.

That rule declared "unfair" the purchase or offering to purchase dairy products at prices that were discriminatory or higher in the place than in

Masses of Workers in Action Must Be Turned in the Right Direction

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

THE White House spokesman has spoken. That is, "Silent Cal" has found his voice sufficiently to give his views on the recent elections. If Cal Coolidge believes his own words, a doubt raised by the fact that even "strikebreaker" presidents do not always permit themselves to say what they think, but taking it for granted that "The Silent One" is not committing perjury, then we are to take it for granted that he is very much satisfied with last week's results.

In fact, Coolidge is convinced, according to the best Washington reports at hand, that the republican party actually won a big nation-wide victory by again capturing a safe majority of the seats in the house of representatives which, in his opinion, furnished the only national test of party sentiment in Tuesday's elections. It does not seem to matter much with Coolidge that the "safe majority" was very much diminished in the house and completely wiped out in the senate.

There can be only one basis for Coolidge's brave display of optimism. It can only be based on Coolidge's hope that he can continue to line up the democrats in sufficient numbers to assure a majority, even in the senate, for reactionary measures. The question then becomes not a matter of the hegemony of the republican party in congress but the holding of power in congress for the most reactionary elements within both the republican and democratic parties. Coolidge has put his measures thru the United States senate with donkey votes before and he will not be backward about accepting the same assistance again for his somewhat dilapidated elephant in Wall Street's political zoo.

Just as the democratic senator, Claude Swanson, from Virginia, led the fight for the world court in the last congressional session, so the interests of the international financiers will be well taken care of in the days ahead, as long as the working class voters content themselves with displacing republican standpatters with the stone age relics labelled "democrats."

Far above pompous Senator Heflin, democrat, from Alabama, may become apoplectic in his heated denunciation of the huge republican slush funds in Pennsylvania and Illinois, but the Muscle Shoals debate showed Heflin the agent of the power and public utility profiteers at least on a par with Senator-Elect Frank L. Smith. There being less of a struggle within the democratic party in Alabama than there is within the Illinois republican ranks, Heflin can afford to sell himself much cheaper than his counterpart in the north. But that does not make either of them any the less supporters of things as they are.

The mere fact, however, that seven republican senators were defeated, is in itself proof of the repudiation of the Coolidge administration by large masses of voters, mostly workers. The fact that they merely turned to democratic candidates is only proof of the political immaturity of these workers, not yet conscious of their own class interests.

Coolidge claims to be little worried over the defeat of his "personal friend," Senator William Butler, in Massachusetts. That will give the ex-senator more time, says Cal, to devote to his pressing duties as chairman of the republican national committee. Coolidge contends that David I. Walsh won the senatorship in Massachusetts merely as the result of his personal popularity. This merely bears out, of course, the charge of the Workers (Communist) Party that there are no differences between Butler and Walsh, insofar as they concern the working class, that they are both hostile to the interests of labor.

There would have been a different outlook from the White House to be sure if the seven defeated republican senators had been replaced by the elected spokesmen of a powerful Labor Party, with a few Communists among them. Speaker Nicholas Longworth, of the house of representatives, wouldn't join Cal Coolidge in talking so glibly of the election results if the missing republicans in the lower house of congress were being replaced by class conscious spokesmen of labor. The fact that this is not taking place alone gives comfort to both democrats and republicans alike, and especially to their masters, the American buccaneers of big business.

This is being written at Kansas City, Missouri. The local Kansas City Star reports that the latest returns indicate that the next state legislature will consist of a democratic senate (31 to 13) and of a republican house of representatives (77 to 73). The capitalists are not worried. Missouri is safe. There isn't one penny of the capitalist social order in the whole state legislature.

The last election, with its repudiation of Coolidgism, merely shows that the working class masses are in action, that they are moving, aimlessly and ignorantly to be sure, but nevertheless, moving. It is the duty of Labor's Communist vanguard, the Workers (Communist) Party to see that labor moves in the right direction, into the labor party and not into the blind alley of the Jackson democracy.

Communists Repudiate Slander of British Trade Union Leader

The New York Times and the Jewish Daily Forward have recently printed a statement by Joseph Jones, secretary of the Yorkshire Miners' Association, and one of the right wing leaders of the British trade unions, charging the Communists in the United States have collected funds for relief of the British miners and not remitted them to the Miners' Association.

A few days ago, the Workers (Communist) Party received the following cablegram from the secretariat of the Communist Party of Great Britain, dealing with this question:

Workers Party of America,
1113 W. Washington Blvd., Chicago, Illinois.

Jones Secretary Yorkshire Miners and Miners delegation United States during attack on Communists yesterday said hundreds thousands dollars collected America by Communists but only one thousand reached Miners Federation. When we demanded explanation told money used by Communist agents to relieve distress. We issued repudiation reminding workers your efforts for relief and real responsibility of A. F. of L. leaders, but suggest you cable us statement.

Signed: Secretariat Communist Party of Great Britain.

The Workers (Communist) Party sent the following reply to this cablegram:

Secretariat Communist Party, London.

Workers (Communist) Party collected no money directly for miners' strike and statement of Jones is an outrageous slander. We forced the Executive Council of the A. F. of L. to issue appeal thru campaign in unions and then carried on extensive and continuous campaign in unions and aided in securing donations of tens of thousands of dollars all of which was sent thru unions to the Executive Council of the A. F. of L. If money has not reached miners, they should make demands upon Executive Council of A. F. of L. for immediate remittance. Attack seems intended to distract attention from the failure of the A. F. of L. bureaucrats to make real campaign in support of heroic striking miners who have earnest support of our party in their splendid struggle.

C. E. RUTHENBERG, General Secretary.

TWO MONTANA COUNTIES ARE WON BY F.-L. P.

Farmer-Labor Carries Despite Wheeler

By C. E. TAYLOR
(Special to The Daily Worker)

PLENTYWOOD, Mont., Nov. 7. — The Farmer-Labor Party won two Montana counties, Sheridan and Daniels, by substantial majority after one of the fiercest political battles fought in Northeastern Montana in a decade.

Senator Chas. E. Taylor was re-elected to the state upper house and Robert Larson was returned to the state house of representatives for Sheridan county. In Daniels county, Sparling, Farmer-Labor, was elected to the house.

Stoner Wins for Congress.

Clair Stoner, Farmer-Labor candidate for congress carried Sheridan county by a good majority in spite of a personal letter written by Senator Burton K. Wheeler paying a compliment to Stoner but urging the voters to support Mitchell, democrat of Great Falls. The final county result showed that Stoner ran first, Lindbergh second and Mitchell third. Stoner getting a majority.

Defeat for Wheeler.

Sheriff Salisbury was re-elected as the Farmer-Labor chief executive of Sheridan county for the third time by a huge majority. The rest of the Farmer-Labor county ticket also went over with the exception of two school superintendents and county commissioners.

Adams and Wix, Farmer-Labor candidates for state legislature were defeated by small majorities in Roosevelt county.

CLEVELAND S. P. REFUSES TO AID SACCO-VANZETTI

Spurns Conference of Labor Groups

By a Worker Correspondent

CLEVELAND, Nov. 7. — The Ohio State Socialist Party has refused to cooperate with the Cleveland Sacco-Vanzetti Defense conference, which is composed of forty organizations for the purpose of bringing pressure to bear for the freedom of the two Massachusetts frame-up victims.

Communications have been sent to all of the labor organizations in Cleveland, including the Socialist Party. When the S. P. failed to respond to the communications, the secretary of the conference, Carl Haessler, went to the office of the party to inquire the reasons. John G. Willert, the secretary, promptly responded to the inquiry by declaring it was the policy of the "Socialist Party not to affiliate with any organizations for the purpose of carrying on protest work, no matter what the cause was, but that the Socialist Party would rather decide for itself on the particular question and carry on the work, if they think it necessary, in their own way and by themselves without cooperation from any outside forces." Thus the Socialist Party attempts to remain "pure."

In this manner, two men who have virtually given their lives for the workers are being slowly stepped by a movement that claims to be a movement of the working class.

NEGOTIATIONS TOWARD U. S. RECOGNITION OF SOVIET LOOM, REPORT

LONDON, Nov. 7.—The Daily Observer prints a dispatch from Moscow stating that a reopening of relations between the United States and Russia is probable. Confidence prevails in influential quarters regarding the opening of negotiations leading to restoration of normal political and economic relations between the two countries, the dispatch says.

It is believed that internal conditions in the United States, such as over-production of cotton and a surplus of accumulated gold, impel American business to seek an adjustment that would enable the arranging of suitable credit with Russia in order to open the Soviet market.

$25 Fine for Picket 'Talking' with His Handa

NEW YORK —(FP)— Twenty-five dollars fine was imposed on Joseph Murdkowitz for "talking" with his hands to a girl strikebreaker in the paper box workers' fight for union conditions. Murkowitz is a union striker. The judge thought the girl strikebreaker was scared and fined the striker, altho he protested he couldn't help using his hands when he talked.

THE CAPITALIST OPPOSITION VOTE NOT YET COUNTED

The Socialist Candidates Make Poor Showing

By CARL HAESSLER,
Federated Press.

While the republican and democratic parties are speculating entirely on the control of the U. S. senate and in their various localities are busy doling out the patronage that goes with their respective victories, headquarters of the so-called third parties are still without accurate information as to the showing of their candidates Nov. 2 except that they were almost uniformly defeated. But the number of votes attracted to each candidate, the location of party electoral strength or the occurrence of close contests with the old party nominees remains a closed book at present.

Berger Re-elected.

"We have no reliable data on the performance at the polls of the socialist candidates," it was declared at the national headquarters of the socialist party in Chicago. It is known that Victor L. Berger was re-elected representative from Milwaukee north side and that he will again be the only socialist in congress. It is also known that the socialist candidates for U. S. senator from Wisconsin and for governor made unexpectedly poor showings. No figures were available on Illinois socialist candidates. Secretary William Henry was too busy to talk over the situation.

Purity Candidate Ignored.

"The progressive candidates in Illinois drew so few votes that no attempt has been made to tabulate them," was the statement at progressive party headquarters in Chicago. Parley Parker Christensen was the candidate for U. S. senator, running on a purity platform against Frank Smith, republican, and George Brennan, democrat, both of whom financed the greater part of their campaign thru the benevolences of Sam Insull, the public utility king.

"No returns will be available on our candidates for several days," says Secretary C. E. Ruthenberg of the Workers' Party, which also maintains national headquarters in Chicago. "But we have heard of no victories for our ticket." J. Louis Engdahl, Workers' Party candidate for U. S. senator from Illinois, is reported to have been credited with 300 votes in Chicago by the old party election officials.

Headquarters Abandoned.

Farmer-labor national headquarters have been abandoned and Minnesota is the only state where the party functions effectively on a state-wide basis. There unofficial returns indicate the defeat of Wefald, a farmer-labor congressman, and possibly of Carss, another. The candidates for state office on its ticket, led by Magnus Johnson for governor, were defeated by the republican slate.

Control Evenly Divided.

Control of the U. S. senate will be so evenly divided between the democrats, who claim to have 47 senators, and the republicans, who will have 48 by counting in all the insurgents, that the balance of power will rest with Senator Shipstead, farmer-labor from Minnesota, and the so-called LaFollette bloc. In the new senate this bloc is expected to consist of LaFollette and Blaine from Wisconsin, Brookhart from Iowa, Nye from North Dakota and occasionally Norris from Nebraska. Among the more or less progressive democrats elected to the senate Nov. 2 are classed Barkley of Kentucky, Walsh of Massachusetts and Hayden of Arizona.

The balance of power in progressive hands gives the advocates of a national labor party encouragement in their plans to detach the progressive democrats and republicans from their old party ties to join with the labor elements that are ready for a new political alignment.

The Role of the British Miners

By JACK BRADON
ARTICLE III.

The reason for the collapse of the general strike are quite well known, and so will not occupy any space here. It is the desperate struggle of these staunch-hearted miners, who are facing the consolidated attack of British capital and government, that must claim our attention and immediate aid. Let it be understood that thus far we, here in America, have fallen down on the job of aiding the miners most miserably. Very little, next to nothing, has been done by us to aid the miners in their fight, which in fact is our fight. Surely it is not difficult to understand that if the British miners are defeated, the entire British working class will be defeated, which in turn will mean reduced wages and longer hours for them. And it will not be long before the forces of competition, influenced by cheapened British labor, will force down our wages here in America. To help the miners is indeed to help ourselves.

At this writing a report comes that a sum of $6,360,000 has been received by the miners since the beginning of the strike, and that $4,360,000 of this amount was contributed by the Russian workers. The American Federation of Labor is listed as having contributed thus far only $46,535.

The magnitude of the miners' struggle, the disastrous potentialities to the working class, in the event of a miners' defeat, demands that we at least do as well as the Russian workers, who as yet are much poorer than we are.

Since the beginning of the strike, only about $8.75 was received by the average miner and his family for relief. It does not take much speculation to know that this sum stretched over a period of seven months did not go very far. Terrible privation of the miners, their women and children has characterized this strike from the very beginning. For many months before this strike, the miners worked on a short time basis. Their earnings were insufficient to provide even the most pressing necessities of life. The saving of funds for a strike eventually was out of the question. The union fund, not only of the miners, but the other trades, were drained as a result of chronic unemployment. During the general strike the treasuries of those unions were completely depleted; and so, when the miners were left on strike alone, they had no funds in their pockets nor in their union treasury. The other trade union treasuries in Britain were not in a position to render quick and substantial financial assistance. This meant suffering for the miners and their families from the very outset of the strike. Tho this heart-rippling adversity of the miners has lasted seven long months, they have not flinched—they have carried on the battle in a manner that has won the applause and admiration of the intelligent worker the world over. The indications are, as shown by the recent plan to withdraw the safety men from the mines, that the miners mean to carry o nthe struggle until the arrogancy of their exploiters has been broken. But to do this, they must be fed, and the workers of America must not shirk their responsibility.

British capitalism has set out to rehabilitate its empire upon increased exploitation of its workers, by attacking their trade unions and standard of living. We already are even in the midst of the battle irreconcilable breaches, based upon contradictory interests of the various groups of the bourgeoisie, are occurring, threatening their unified front against the workers. Britain cannot hold out against the miners much longer. Already her exports have fallen alarmingly and its imports have risen to a staggering height. It is true that among its imports a great tonnage of coal can be counted, which is aimed to break the strike, but the coal is poor and costly. It cannot be used extensively and profitably by British industry. As a result of the miners' strike, industry is closing down, foreign trade is being undermined, markets are being permanently lost, and instead of rebuilding itself thru the attack upon the miners, British capitalism is actually hastening its own doom.

A mighty effort must be made by the American workers to come to help the British miners. We must make it possible for them to fight on to victory. Let us follow the example of the Russian workers.

Many Tractors for Russia Bought Here

MOSCOW, Nov. 7. — The Gosttrg (State Trade Administration) has finished its task of purchasing agricultural machines abroad for the U. S. S. R. in 1925-26 operative year. More than half of the machines were bought in America. Tractors have been purchased for the sum of over eight million rubles. The conditions of credit abroad were quite acceptable and satisfactory.

THOMAS CALLS ON BALDWIN TO TALK MINE STRIKE SETTLEMENT

(Special to The Daily Worker)

LONDON, Nov. 7.—A delegation from the Trade Union Congress headed by J. H. Thomas called upon the government at Downing Street to discuss the question of the mine strike. No statement was made regarding the results of the conversation. A rumor current in Whitehall has it that Thomas and the right wing leaders of the T. U. C. are working towards a settlement and to accomplish this are bringing pressure to bear on the officials of the British Miners' Federation.

RAISE LEVEL OF WAGES AND TO SOVIET WORKERS

Backward Industries to Be Developed

MOSCOW, Nov. 7.—The People's Commissariat for Labor has submitted to the government a project of normalization of workers' wages. Accordingly, the Council of People's Commissaries has decided to increase the salaries in mining, metallic, chemical and other industries, especially for backward categories of workmen, whose wakes were behind the general level of prices.

In connection with this People's Commissary of Labor, Mr. Schmidt said to a Tass correspondent:

"The decision of the government has a great importance, especially if one takes into consideration that wages were, in fact, increasing all the time. The average level of salaries in all industries increased, beginning from 1922, by 67 per cent. However, qualified workmen received much more than unskilled laborers, owing to the system of piece payment. Until now it was impossible to improve it.

on any mentioned for the office so far. It is no other than the desert pack rat. Brisbane is looking over real estate in the Mojave Desert of California, and got to like the ways of this 100 per cent American rodent. What endeared the rat to Arthur was the little animal's addition to preparedness. "...rattlesnakes, ground owls and gophers are mortal enemies of the pack rat, so he protects his hole with them. (Too bad Arthur does not take the hole in his head with a ball of glue.)

THIS gives Arthur an idea. So he develops it thusly. "So the desert rat prepares and does his little best, with thorns and cactus. If he were president of the United States he would build flying machines, and make this nation independent of the flying rattlesnakes of Europe and Asia." It requires quite a lively imagination, tho, to picture a president whose favorite abode is a hole in the ground going up in the air immediately after his election. But we have known presidents to change their opinions after they hit the white house.

IF Brisbane nominates his pack rat I suggest that a committee of reliable citizens interview a healthy polecat with a view to getting him to run also on a ticket. The polecat could represent the republican party and the pack rat the democratic party. Indeed, the election of the polecat would make a fleet of ballots superfluous. We could organize an army of polecats and have them use the radio against a foreign foe. Loyal Americans could be forewarned to have their gas masks handy and the full force of the polecat attack could be used to repulse the enemy. This idea is hereby released without any rights reserved. Our militarists should take note of it. But, then, perhaps they don't care for competition!

DON'T overeat or over-exercise advises Dr. Carl Meyer of the Cook County Hospital. On the other hand, says. In other words, a person should sleep. In other words, a person should simply eat and exercise when he feels like it. You never can tell. A friend of mine who used to look like a graveyard deserter now has the appearance of a well-to-do janitor. He was recently cautioned against drinking a milk by a lady who is not enamored of dieticians. She felicitated him upon his glowing health. He replied: "No wonder, I am on a milk diet." Not in the slightest degree daunted, she came back: "Oh, well, I do not think that a fat, red face is always a sign of health." So what can you do about it except eat, drink (milk) and be merry?

Russian Grain Much Improved Since Czar Regime Is Overthrown

MOSCOW, Nov. 7.—Representatives of a German firm in Odessa, who are controlling grain exported from the U. S. S. R., declared that the quality of the grain has been greatly improved during the last few years in comparison with what it was before the war, because the peasants now obtain better sorts of seeds.

Lately there was not a single case of grain being rejected on account of bad quality.

Farm Price Level Has Another Sinking Spell

WASHINGTON—(FP) — American farmers are falling lower in the economic scale month by month, according to the latest figures issued by the Department of Agriculture. The general level of farm prices dropped from 134 per cent of pre-war level on Sept. 15 to only 130 per cent on Oct. 15. The level this October was 13 points lower than on Oct. 15 a year ago.

"Cotton is now at about the same relative position when compared with pre-war prices as corn, oats and barley during the past year and apples this fall", says the report. Farm products this year buy only 83 per cent (in September) as much as in the years 1909-14, averaged.

Bergdoll Case Again.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 7.—The District of Columbia supreme court for the sixth time today continued until the January term of court the suit of Grover C. Bergdoll, draft dodger, for recovery of $1,000,000 worth of property from the alien property custodian.

Political Program

1. Relief from the evils of the mortgage and tenantry evil thru the adoption of a land tenure system which will secure the land to the users.

2. The nationalization of the railroads, the meat packing plants, grain elevator combines and the control and management of these marketing organizations by the organizations of workingmen farmers in co-operation with the organizations of city industrial workers who are employed in these industries.

3. The control and operation of the farm credit system by the co-operative banks of the farmers, in place of those now existing, thru the farm credit system, for their enrichment.

4. Relief for the farmers from the excessive burden of taxation thru levying higher income taxes, and inheritance taxes on the swollen fortunes of great capitalist exploiters and higher taxes on the profits of the railroads and great industrial combines.

5. Against the expenditure for a big army and navy, which serve no other purpose than to support the imperialist adventures of the great financial houses of Wall Street in other countries.

6. Fight against Wall Street's Dollar Diplomacy and expenditure of the wealth produced by the farmers and workers to support the imperialist exploiters in their effort to make profitable colonies of the peoples of the South American countries, China and the Philippines. Freedom for the Philippines. Self-determination for Porto Rico, Hawaii. Withdrawal of all American soldiers and marines from the Central and South American countries. No intervention in China.

7. Against the Dawes plan, thru which the American banking houses are securing control of European industries and paving the way for a new war.

8. Close co-operation with the farmers of other countries and particularly the farmers of Russia, who are so important a factor in the world market; for the recognition and establishment of economic relations with the first workers' and farmers' government—the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics.

9. The alliance of the working farmers and industrial workers to establish a workers' and farmers' government of the United States. Only a united struggle of all working farmers, together with the city industrial workers, in support of this program will win relief for the farmers from the conditions under which they now suffer.

Canadian Farmer Pool Sells 190,000,000 Bu

WINNIPEG—(FP)—Canadian wheat pool farmers have closed another banner year, season during which the Central Selling agency disposed of 190,000,000 bushels of wheat. The last dividend on the 1925 crop, which has just been paid, totaled $4,500,000 or 2½c per bushel.

Wheat pool members thus received for the 1925 crop, an initial payment of $1, two additional payments of 50c each per bushel and the final payment making a total for No. 1 wheat of $1.42½ per bushel. This is considered by the farmers an excellent return as the 1925 crop was a large one.

During the 3 years of their existence the wheat pools have handled: 1923 crop, 34,000,000 bushels, (the Alberta pool alone); 1924 crop, 81,500,000 bushels Alberta, Saskatchewan and Manitobai, and 190,000,00 bushels of the 1925 crop for the three provinces, or more than double the quantity handled in the previous year. Membership in the pools has increased from 79,700 in July 1924 to 127,300 members in July 1926.

Last year the pools inaugurated the policy of securing elevators by the simple process of deducting 3c per bushel on all grain handled for elevator purposes. This elevator fund has been used to secure 30 local elevators in Manitoba, 33 elevators in Alberta and 575 in Saskatchewan, or a total of 638 for the three pools. These elevators, like the other property of the grain, is paid for in result, hence there are no bonds or mortgages.

In addition to the local elevators, the pools have terminal elevator facilities for handling 2,750,000 bushels of wheat at a time. With the small enlargement of these terminal facilities and a quick turnover the pools will be able to handle their entire product.

The Farmer Is On His Way

SIXTEEN million people toured the United States in private cars during the summer of 1926. They used more than three million automobiles. They were classed as tourists, home seekers or investors. The machines just went rolling along carrying passengers from somewhere to nowhere. Some returned to their homes. Others found temporary employment. Many are roaming in strange lands. Where the money came from to finance the summer vacation for approximately one-seventh of the people of this nation is an open question. Some families used the savings of years to pay expenses. Others borrowed funds from interest collecting money-changers. Many just fitted up for the occasion, with the least cash possible, and lived off the country. They saw the farmers of the west and were disappointed. Other caravans of mixed vehicles lined the highways of the northwest. It was the procession of the homeless farmers on the way to reputed cities of refuge.

Farming Fails.

The farms ceased to pay interest on investments, taxation for cost of government and the demands of local merchants and transportation agencies. The families were loaded into ancient wagons, dilapidated trucks or carts and taken on a pilgrimage for life's necessities. The highway travelers saw the stories about the rich western farmers rolling in wealth were mythical. They had their eyes opened to the false propaganda carried on by capitalistic politicians. They saw the marks of poverty. They counted the abandoned farms. They read the faces of dying women, observed the starving children. They asked questions and learned why those conditions prevail.

Farmers and their families were running away from their homes. They gathered together a few personal belongings and set out for the cities were they expected to find work. They had set employment in order to keep away the reaper of death.

If the father and mother could not make enough money to meet the daily needs the children would be compelled to be called and put in the harness of slavery. Nature has not deserted the farmers. The soil remains fertile. The sun continues to shine. The rains fall as well as seasons. This old earth is not a failure. The grass grows green. There are some fruits that mature and are plentiful. The fields yield fairly good crops of corn and wheat, and potatoes in abundance. The gardens produce splendid crops of vegetables. The lawns and walks are still ornamented with flowers. What is the matter? "

Middle Men Thrive.

Man is the power that drives the farmers from their homes. He is not one of the farmers. He is one of the many engaged in the work of farming the farmers. He lives and thrives on the profits made by handling the products of the farm. He may be a local merchant, general buyer, money lender, transportation agent or professional man. He may be a town builder or a city booster. He prospers because the farmers produce things on which he collects profits. The western farmers are face to face with real conditions. They are not dealing with theories. They have long ago cast aside the old proverbs about farming. They know that the long worn tales about the law of supply and demand are mere fables. They are not repeating the warning story about the rolling stone that ratches no moss to their children. They know that the farms do not pay for the reason that the non-producers take too much toll. Farmers are rolling away from the cuties of the country. They cannot stand against the injustices of their class-driven incomes. United States in private cars during They are tired of working 12 to 18 hours a day seven days a week, for those who toil not neither do they spin, but depend on the farmers for the necessities and luxuries of life. The present movement of farmers from the land in the cities is merely a beginning.

Future Dark.

What of the future of agriculture in the United States? It is full of shadows. There are dark spots on the sun of prosperity and visible wrinkles on the face of the moon of progress. The farmers cannot exist on the proceeds of the land with everyone attaching a profit to it that which he does not produce. And so will it remain until we produce for use instead of profit. Dr. Sherwood Eddy, international secretary of the Young Men's Christian Association, who spoke before the American Federation of Labor convention in Detroit on October Speaks: "Russia is the only country on earth where a man no more exploits man. I have traveled thru England, France, Germany, Italy and Russia with a fact finding commission consisting of editors, social workers, bankers, doctors and business men and I can say don't you go to Russia and find out for yourselves." Great Labor Topics.

Find Rare Pearl.

MOSCOW Nov. 7. On the lakes and rivers of the Karelia and Murmansk region there has been discovered a rare kind of blue pearl which is very highly appraised on the foreign markets.

STRIKE STRATEGY

By WILLIAM Z. FOSTER

ARTICLE IX

THE QUESTION OF DEMANDS

Organization campaigns and strikes must center around basic demands of the workers. Only the more advanced elements of the workers fully appreciate the value of organization as such. As for the great unorganized mass, they are interested in unions primarily for what they can get out of them immediately in the shape of real gains from the employers. They want to strike immediately they organize. Conservative labor organizations fail to accept this fact. There is too much light involved in it to suit them. Hence their organizing campaigns are mostly abstract and lifeless because they oversitress mere organization and understress the thing that labor organization is built for, the fight to defend the workers' interests. To quote from my pamphlet, "Organize the Unorganized:"

The future trade unions of the great unorganized industries will be born in the heat of the struggle against the employers over the demands of the workers. The organization campaign which does not voice the demands of the workers, the degree of their ideological development, etc. In time of industrial activity the workers ordinarily go into a more or less general offensive, demanding more wages, shorter hours, better working conditions, and the right of organization. But in slack periods they usually have to face an employers' offensive, and their chief fight is to preserve existing standards: to defeat wage cuts, to prevent lengthening the working day, and to maintain their unions.

Under present conditions in the United States, with the final capitalist crisis still far off, the workers make their hardest fights when they are defending standards that are already in existence. The most desperate strikes in American labor history have been against sweeping wage cuts and other attacks upon the workers' standards. Strikes for higher standards are ordinarily much less militant in character.

DEMANDS UPON THE BUREAUCRACY

In organizing campaigns and strikes the workers should make demands not only upon the employers but also upon the reactionary bureaucrats where these control the unions. This is a very important consideration for the strike strategist to bear in mind. When unions are about to plunge into a great struggle or are already in the midst of it, their Programs of demands for organization campaigns and strikes must be concise, expressed in simple, understandable slogans, and must touch the burning grievances and necessities of the workers' life in the industries. There is enormous organizational and inspirational power, for example, in such graphic and vital slogans as the 8-hour day and the 5-day week. As stated above in our discussion of the general strike, the workers, especially the backward American working class, will not fight militantly for far-fetched demands that they do not understand or do not consider practical.

REALIZABLE DEMANDS

The workers have a sense of realism which must always be taken into consideration. While they must be taught the necessity for the eventual complete expropriation of the capitalists, and although they will accept this idea readily, it is no sign of good leadership to put forth as immediate demands propositious outside of the realms of possible achievement under existing conditions. The workers will give no serious support to a group, whether it be in control of the union or a minority fighting for control, which makes its appeal for their backing on the basis of immediate demands that are manifestly unrealizable under the given conditions.

For example, just on the eve of the great national strike of the railroad shop mechanics in 1922, the T. U. E. L. raised the demand for amalgamation of all 16 railroad unions. The need for such a consolidation of forces in the face of the bitter attack from the companies was manifest. The rank and file understood it at once. The sentiment for amalgamation swept the ranks of the railroad workers like a prairie fire and it also became a great living issue in the whole labor movement. Only the autocratic control of the unions by the bureaucrats defeated the movement.

Another example, when the 21 unions were embarking upon the big campaign to organize the steel workers in 1918, it was easy to get them to join hands in a gigantic federation and to adopt many measures undoubtedly leading in the direction of an industrial union of metal workers. In such cases the demand for the strengthening of the unions is linked up so closely with the actual struggle that it becomes very powerful. The present struggles in the needle trades, for example, should be utilized to bring about the amalgamation of those unions.

In times of great struggle the real strike strategist will not fail to press home demands upon the bureaucrats

WORKER, HELD IN PRISON, HAD NO MONEY, BUT HE FINDS A WAY TO HELP KEEP THE DAILY WORKER

Comrades Leonard Farnell, miner, held in the state penitentiary of Montana, had no money.

But that did not keep him from wanting to aid The DAILY WORKER in its present campaign to raise enough funds to maintain its existence.

Leonard made a horse hair belt in prison and is sending it to The DAILY WORKER with the hope that it will be raffled off in Chicago and enough gotten from the raffle to bring a good sum to the campaign.

Leonard sent the belt thru Luke Pasalich of Kilen, Montana. Pasalich writes:

Must be Kept.

"Realizing that our DAILY WORKER must be kept by workers and sympathizers, because it is the best weapon we have against our enemies and if the workers lose it we will lose our fighting strength. Comrade Leonard Farnell, while at the state penitentiary made one horse hair belt, and instructed me to send it to The DAILY WORKER. He asked that it be raffled off by the comrades in Chicago for the interest of the paper. I notice that the comrades are holding a ball or dance in Chicago, and this would come in handy for that.

International Branch Aids.

Another letter from S. R. Pearlman of Washington, D. C., asks that it be stated that the $300 raised by the comrades there, and sent in by Comrade Zaliman, was raised not by the Jewish section of the city alone, but by all of the members of the international branch. "In fact," writes Pearlman, "those who are interested in the Jewish section gave very little." The members pledged $300 and sent the money in immediately, by making a loan, and are now paying off the loan in weekly payments.

Italian Comrades Help.

Proceeds from an affair held by section 1, Philadelphia, for the benefit of The DAILY WORKER amounted to $53.48. "Full credit for the successful affair is due to the sincere and untiring efforts of our Italian comrades," writes I. Spivak, agent there.

New Branch of I. L. D. Organized at Sacco and Vanzetti Meeting

CLEVELAND, Nov. 7 — A Sacco-Vanzetti protest meeting held by a group of Hungarian workers at the Hungarian National Home, 8811 Buckeye "Road, was addressed by Carl Hacker, local secretary of the I. L. D.

The meeting was attended by a group of about 40 who listened attentively to the story of the latest developments in the case of Sacco and Vanzetti, and a general outline of the work which is being carried on by International Labor Defense.

A number of copies of the November issue of the Labor Defender were sold, a collection of $20.65 was taken, and as a fitting climax, an expression of approval on the part of those at the meeting of the work being conducted by the L. D. branch was organized with twenty members.

This is only a beginning in the direction toward a branch of 100 members which these comrades have pledged themselves to organize.

Members of the I. L. D. are reminded that the place and date of the Bazaar have been changed to Grdina Hall, 6021 St. Clair Ave., Dec. 18 and 19. Material for this bazaar is now being received at the local office, 911 West Superior Ave., Room 606.

Daily Worker Builder Group to Have Booth for Passaic Relief

NEW YORK, Nov. 7 — DAILY WORKER builders of New York will conduct a booth at the bazaar arranged for the Passaic textile strikers by the Polish relief committee November 18, 19 and 20 in the Polish National Home, 261 Driggs avenue, Greenpoint, Brooklyn.

Every reader of The DAILY WORKER is urged to help make this bazaar a great success for the Passaic strikers. Donations and articles will be received by The DAILY WORKER ... agency, 108 East 14th street. Ask L. E. Katterfeld for credentials with which to collect goods.

Fascism Cracking

ROME, Nov. 7. — The further strengthening of the iron laws and decrees for the "safety of the state" and the assumption by Mussolini of another portfolio, that of Minister of Interior abandoned by Sig. Federzoni, is further indication of the weakening position of fascism in Italy. The fascist party is not only confronted with an ever-growing opposition that, operating illegally has become all the more dangerous, but is in opposition in the party itself discord that can easily develop into a real crisis.

Unprecedented power has been given the police to use their discretion in deporting persons for political offenses, either, as in Czarist Russia, to exile in isolated localities or imprisonment in one of the half dozen Italian penal colonies.

Oparate Abread.

The laws not only operate against persons in Italy but include both Italians and foreigners known to be guilty of political acts against fascism. These, the law provides can be prosecuted when they set foot on Italian soil. Foreigners residing in Italy are not exempt and the new regulations make newspaper correspondents subject to five to fifteen years imprisonment for the sending out of reports in which fascism is attacked.

ing denials of Ayre's statements, fearing perhaps domestic troubles of his own. Ford claims that he doesn't even know Ayres, but he has failed to explain how Ayres has the authority to arrange for Ford automobiles in which to transport her majesty in every town the queen stops.

With Ayres and Hill gone, Marie prepared to settle down again and proceed with the revelry on the train, but the word received from California that Governor Richardson didn't give a darn who she was, sent her off in hed, gnashing her teeth. After the queen sent her "beautiful," but illiterate message to California, she felt certain that the governor there would bow down to her like the others and join the happy party.

Engdahl Urges St. Louis Workers to Build for American Revolution

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Nov. 7.—Workers of the St. Louis district were urged by J. Louis Engdahl, editor of The DAILY WORKER, to commemorate the Ninth Anniversary of the Bolshevik Revolution of 1917 by building their own powar thru the Workers (Communist) Party and thru the trade unions.

It was not enuf, declared Engdahl, to celebrate the victory of our comrades in the Union of Soviet Republics. We must struggle harder in the United States, he said, to accomplish our Bolshevik Revolution here in America.

There were speakers for the Young Workers League and the Pioneers. The celebration opened with the singing of the International and closed with the Red Flag.

ANNIE [illegible] CAPT. ESCAPE FROM PRISON, BUT ANNIE [illegible] WALKS OUT

NEW YORK, Nov. 7.—Three men, heavily armed, [illegible] this morning in an unsuccessful attempt to escape from Tombs prison, but today one woman, unarmed, succeeded with ease.

"Light-Fingered Annie" Brown, who has been arrested ten times and served at least two prison terms, used the simplest method of escape yet devised. She simply walked out.

Annie was being taken thru the building with several other prisoners by a guard. She started to run, and the guard dared not follow for fear the others would escape.

Just how Annie reached the street has not yet been discovered.

Hungarian Workers Pass Resolution on Sacco and Vanzetti

CLEVELAND, O., Nov. 7. — Hungarian workers have passed the following resolution demanding that the state of Massachusetts give justice to Sacco and Vanzetti:

Whereas, Nicola Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti, two champions of labor, have had their appeal for a new trial from an unjust mass of conviction denied by the trial judge and the men will automatically be sentenced to the electric chair unless this action is reversed, and

Whereas, the attorneys for Sacco and Vanzetti have asked the supreme court for a rehearing on the basis of still further proof of a frame-up in the murder conviction, and

Whereas, the American Federation of Labor at the Cincinnati, El Paso and Detroit conventions has gone on record demanding a new trial and has branded their conviction as a "ghastly miscarriage of justice," therefore be it

Resolved, that this meeting of Hungarian workers, assembled in the Hungarian National Home, 8811 Buckeye road, Cleveland, Ohio, on October 31, demand that the state of Massachusetts give justice to our two persecuted fellow-workers, Sacco and Vanzetti, who have dedicated their lives to this cause, and grant them the new trial common justice demands, and be it further

Resolved, that copies of this resolution be sent to Governor Alvan T. Fuller, State House, Boston, Mass., and to the press.

N. Y. Fur Workers Pass Resolution on Sacco-Vanzetti

NEW YORK, Nov. 7.—The following resolution protesting the denial of a new trial to Sacco and Vanzetti by Judge Thayer of Massachusetts was passed at a recent meeting of the Furriers' Union here:

Whereas, Sacco and Vanzetti have been kept in jail for over five years on a charge of which all evidence prove they have not committed, and

Whereas, the superior court of the state of Massachusetts has refused to grant a new trial to these two workers in spite of the fact that evidence has been submitted which proved beyond a shadow of doubt that Sacco and Vanzetti have been framed up by the department of justice and the state authorities because they are radicals, and

Whereas, the sole crime of Sacco and Vanzetti is their loyalty and unselfish service to the working class, be it therefore

Resolved, that we vehemently protest against any further imprisonment of Sacco and Vanzetti and against the decision of the Superior Court of Massachusetts, and be it further

Resolved that we pledge our wholehearted support to the defense of Sacco and Vanzetti, and urge the entire labor movement of the United States to protest against the injustice done to these two workers, and demand the immediate release of Sacco and Vanzetti.

Drive for Organizing of an Anti-Imperialist League Branch in N. Y.

By SYLVAN A. POLLACK.
(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, Nov. 7.—A campaign to organize an active functioning unit of the All-American Anti-Imperialist League in New York is being started by those who are in charge of the work of that organization here.

With the question of the freedom of the Philippines from the rule of American imperialism, an issue which will come before the next session of congress, together with the coming report of the Thompson mission to President Coolidge, an energetic campaign of all forces who desire to work for Philippine independence, as well as against all manifestations of imperialism by the American government, is of utmost importance at the present time.

All individuals, as well as organizations, who realize the importance of this work should affiliate with the New York branch of the All-American Anti-Imperialist League and make it possible for this important work to be done at once.

SACCO, VANZETTI CASE IS ONE OF "CLASS JUSTICE"

Workers Must Watch Judge Thayer

By EUGENE LYONS.
Federated Press.

(Federated Press offers here the first of several articles on the development of the Sacco-Vanzetti case, written by a newspaper man formerly intimately connected with the case.

Judge Webster Thayer's denial of the latest of many motions for a new trial of Sacco and Vanzetti will probably be sustained by the Massachusetts supreme court, as it upheld Thayer in the past. The last motion was on a certain amount of support for the case in so-called "respectable" circles. These circles are shocked by Thayer's long-winded refusal of the new trial motion. They are shocked by his prejudicial attack on Attorney Thompsen. They are altogether unflustered as tho this were happening for the first time.

Tries to Justify Self.

But those who have been closest to the case and have therefore watched Thayer's behavior most persistently are neither shocked nor surprised. They refused to give Sacco and Vanzetti the benefit of any doubt in a six-year-old story. His "opinions" are just nervous attempts to justify his conduct during the trial. His conduct of the original trial was criticized all over the world Thayer has behaved like a man anxious at all costs to prove his own fairness. To grant a new trial might throw doubt on his part in the judicial farce which ended in Sacco's and Vanzetti's conviction.

It seems to me that the labor movement, which has given generously of its energy and resources in the last six years, ought to bear several things in mind as the fight for justice continues and intensifies.

First. That the persecution of Sacco and Vanzetti is a class persecution. Their case is not an exception to the rule of justice, but an example of capitalist justice. The defense must therefore be conducted as a class defense.

Evidence in Old Cast.

Second. That the evidence on which working class demands a new trial not limited to the affidavits just armed down by Thayer. It is in the record of the first trial itself, and the atmosphere of prejudice and hatred in which it took place. It includes the proofs of prejudice on Thayer's part, obvious in his insinuations to the jury and his statements to ...dey of the Boston Globe and othe... newspaper men.

It includes above all, the mass of ...idence brought to light by Former Defense Counsel Fred H. Moore and ...ade the basis of previous motions for a new trial — evidence which carries important government witnesses, ...poses of other witnesses as thieves ...d persons of bad character, testimony ...t eye witnesses found by the defense since the trial, admissions that ...e gun claimed as Sacco's could not ...ave fired the death bullets, etc. The attention paid to the last motion has ...ecured the previous motions, which are just as important.

Massachusetts "Justice."

Third. That the whole machinery of Massachusetts "justice" is absurd when it leaves it to Thayer—himself accused of responsibility in bringing about the verdict—to prevent a new trial. The fact that his action can be appealed to no protection because the higher courts rule on law and not on fact; but it is on facts, on new evidence, that the new trial is demanded.

The common sense of the thing matters I mentioned is Thayer. His attacks on defense attorneys—at the trial and in each of his decisions since—must not be overlooked. Nor the manner in which his own reputation would be damaged by a new trial for the two men. I believe it essential for the working class of the whole world to pay special attention to this phase—and to call it to the attention of the governor of Massachusetts.

There is ample ground on which the governor can take whatever steps are necessary to remove Thayer from his judicial office, so that this judge at least will not continue to be a menace to all workers, particularly foreign born and those with opinions contrary to his, when they come before him for judgment.

Result of Auto Slump Is Felt in Cleveland

CLEVELAND, Nov. 7.—The decrease in the output of autos is the cause of a serious cut in employment in this city. The payroll cut in the automotive field alone amounted to 16.8 per cent. The lumber, soap, paint, metals, woodworking and electrical plants also had a cut, with iron and steel about balancing. The total labor reduction in Cleveland amounted to 4.4 per cent during October.

By Upton Sinclair

(Copyright, 1926, by Upton Sinclair)

"What I tell them, Papa?" It was bluff, for Annabelle was very prim, and never indulged in vulgarity. But the bluff went, and the great man set down his glass. "I surrender! Take the stuff away." Whereat everybody applauded, and it gave the party a merry start.

Strange as it might seem, Annabelle was a pious Catholic. Just how she managed to fix things up with her priests Bunny never knew, but she gave freely to charity, and you would find her featured at benefits for Catholic orphan asylums and things of that sort. At the same time her little head was as full of superstitions as an old Negro mammy. She would not have started a picture on a Friday for the whole of Vernon's eight million dollar endowment. When you spilled the salt, she not merely advised you to throw some of it over your shoulder, she did it for you, if necessary. Once, at luncheon, she made a girl friend eat at a side table, because otherwise there would have been thirteen, and this girl, being the youngest, would have fallen the victim.

At the same time she was very good. She really liked you, and liked to have you around, and when she begged you to come back, she meant it. Nor would she make unkind remarks about you after you were gone. Along with the ecstacies of the artistic temperament, she had escaped its gnawing jealousies; she was one of the few lady-stars before whom it was safe to praise the work of other lady-stars, Bunny found. Also, she had an abiding respect for him, because he had read books, and had ideas about front pages of the newspapers as a dangerous "pink," served to lend him that same halo of mystery and romance, which the public assigned to Annabelle as a luminary of the screen world, and the mistress of a monastery!

"Harve," said Annabelle, "there's time for you to show Mr. Ross over the place before dinner." And so Bunny got to see what a country place could be like, so that he could make his father give him one. But Harvey Manning did not make a very good escort. To show off a show-place you need some one of an admiring disposition, whereas "Harve" had seen too many places and was inclined to patronize them all.

There were almost as many buildings on this estate as there were tanks at the Paradise refinery; only these were Gothic tanks with miniature towers and steeples and crenellations and machicolations. There was no chapel or place of worship, nor tombs of ancient abbots; but there was a gymnasium, with a swimming pool of green marble, and a bowling alley, and squash courts and tennis courts, and a nine hole golf course, and a pole field—everything you would find at the most elaborate country club. There was a stable with saddle horses ridden mostly by grooms, and a library real only by motion picture directors looking up local color—or at any rate that was Harvey's take about it.

Also there was a regular menagerie of local creatures. The hired men and their youngsters had discovered that such gifts pleased the master, so they brought in everything they could capture. There was an enclosed park with deer and mountain sheep, and heavily barred dens with grizzly bears shambling over the rocks, and wild cats and coyotes and mountain lions dozing in the shade. There was a giant dome covered with netting, with a big dead tree inside, and eagles seated thereon. An eagle in his native state, sailing with supreme dominion through the azure deep of air, has been a thrilling theme for poets; but sitting in a cage he is a melancholy object. "Some of your red friends in jail!" Harvey Manning remarked in passing.

But even the most blase man of the world has something in which he is interested, so Bunny found. Presently his guide took out his watch and remarked that it was nearly six-thirty, and they must get back to the house. He was "on the water wagon" until that hour of each day, and when it drew near, he was about ready to jump out of his skin. So they strolled back, and a Chinese boy clad in white duck had evidently learned to expect him, and was on hand with a tray. Harvey took two drinks, to make up for last time, and then he sighed contentedly, and revealed that he could talk without a drawl.

When Bunny came down for dinner there was quite a company assembled—some in evening dress and some in golf clothes and some in plain business suits like the host. It was "liberty hall," according to the caption. Roscoe was talking politics to Fred Orpan—the drubbing they were going to give the Democratic party. Roscoe did the talking, for the other was a queer silent creature, tall and lean, with a tall, lean face, like a horse and the strangest grey-green eyes, that somehow looked absolutely empty; you would decide that his head was empty too, when he would listen and say nothing for an hour—but this would be a mistake, for he was the directing head of a great chain of oil enterprises, and Dad said he was sharp as a steel trap.

Also there was Bessie Barrie, because good form required that she be invited wherever Orpan went. He had backed her in several pictures, and she was "paying the price," as the current phrase ran; but it wasn't quite the same respectable arrangement as in the case of Roscoe and his Annabelle, because Bessie had been in love with her director, and he was still in love with her, and the attitude of the two men was far from cordial. This was explained to Bunny by Harvey Manning, gossip-in-chief, who had now had several more drinks, and got his tongue entirely loosened. Bunny noted that the hostess had tactfully placed the rival males at opposite ends of the table.

They were in a smaller cathedral now, known as the "refectory"; and Bunny was in the seat of honor, at the right of the charming Annabelle, transformed from a lemon-colored shepherdess to a duchess in white satin. On her left sat Perry Duchane, her director, telling about the cuts in the first two reels, which he had brought along for a showing. Next to him was a vacant seat; some lady was late, and Bunny was too young in the ways of the world to know that this is how great personages secure importance to themselves. It was his first meeting with actresses, and how should he know that they sometimes act off-stage?

SEASONAL BUSINESS CONDITIONS ADD TO NUMBER OF WORKERS IN ILLINOIS AND NEW YORK PLANTS

By LELAND OLDS, Federated Press.

Factory employment in Illinois rose 3.3 per cent during September and reached the highest point since May, 1924, according to the monthly report of the state department of labor. With the winter just a little way off, says the report, 17,000 more persons are drawing pay at the factories than at this time in 1925.

The employment level in Illinois factories is now about 3 per cent above the average of the year 1922, which is used as a base in computing the index numbers. It is between 5 per cent and 6 per cent above the September figure in either 1924 or 1925, but is still 5½ per cent below September, 1923.

The free employment offices placed more applicants in September than in any other month since the service was inaugurated. In spite of this there were still more workers looking for jobs than jobs available. The official ration for the month was 123 applicants for each 100 jobs.

Big Gains Seasonal.

Changes in a majority of the industries were small, the big gains being seasonal. Among these the canneries increased their forces by 28.1 per cent, candy factories by 43.7 per cent, firms making miscellaneous leather goods by 137.5 and manufacturers of fur goods by 46.5 per cent.

The iron and steel industry added 1.3 per cent to the number of its employes, but car building plants laid off 4.9 per cent and automobile factories 2 per cent of their workers. The textile industry showed a gain of 1.3 per cent.

Garment Trades Lower.

The garment trades alone of the nine major industrial groups show employment below the level of September, 1925. Altogether there are about 6¼% fewer workers with jobs than a year ago. During September, men's clothing firms laid off 5.2 per cent of their employes but the decline in employment in woman's clothing halted with a gain of 8.3 per cent over August.

Reports from the coal mines indicate continued improvement. According to the statement: "Announcements came to the department of 11 mines to resume operations within a short time. Current reports of the U. S. bureau of mines show that during the weeks of August 28 and September 4, Illinois ranked third in the production of soft coal and lost this place to Kentucky in the week of September 11 by a bare 4,000 tons. Mines reporting regularly to the department showed an increase of 2 per cent in the number of men employed. While this increase is not as great as in August when 12.7 per cent more men were taken on, it yet denotes an increasing activity at the mines that were opened some time ago. Corroboration of this fact is seen in the increase of 12.8 per cent in wage payments to miners during the month."

New York Employment Gains.

Factories in New York state added 2½ per cent to the number of employes on their payrolls in September, according to the monthly report of the state industrial commissioner. Employment is now at the same level as in September, 1925. Between March and the low point of the year New York factories laid off approximately 43,000 workers. Since July about 40,000 have resigned their jobs.

The September report features the unusually large gain in the clothing industry, in part seasonal and in part due to settlements by individual shops involved in the strike of the ladies' clothing workers. Altogether the needle trades added about 10 per cent to the number of workers employed. Other important changes were gains of 4 per cent in the steel mills and 2 per cent in automobile factories, and an 8 per cent layoff by railroad equipment shops.

COAL BARONS DO NOT WANT INVESTIGATION

The Less Interference the Better, They Say

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON—Protest against a proposal that the federal government investigate the facts as to investment, operating costs, marketing efficiency and profits of the coal industry is made in a long editorial in the American Mining Congress Journal, published by the American Mining Congress in Washington.

The investigation is suggested in the Journal's own pages in an article by Samuel A. Taylor, president of the American Institute of Mining and Metallurgical Engineers. He asks that a governmental fact-finding agency be set up under the direction of the Department of Commerce, "clothed with authority to secure coal information."

Denies Coal Monopoly.

In substance, the Journal denies that there is a coal monopoly, and urges that the coal industry be given "the same privilege now given in agriculture and labor—such an exemption from the Sherman anti-trust laws as will permit them to regulate and stabilize their own business."

Postal Workers Want Five-Day Week Put in Effect on U. S. Mails

BOSTON, Nov. 7—(FP)—Since the five-day week is proving a success in private industry, Massachusetts postal clerks want it tried in postal service, the state branch of the National Federation of Pnatoffice Clerks meeting in convention passed a resolution to that effect.

Weekly pay is asked instead of twice-monthly payment.

The letter carriers want to retain their seniority ranking when transferred to clerical duty in postoffices. They will be too many lame ducks in the next session of congress for postal workers to expect any wage increases or improvements in their working conditions, national secretary-treasurer Thomas F. Flaherty told the convention. He said he expected more lame ducks than for many years in this congress and that they would be so busy asking favors for themselves that they would have no time to look after the interests of anybody else.

Navy Yard Machinists Demand Dollar Rate

WASHINGTON, Nov. 7. — (FP)— Navy yard machinists, 5,000 in all, are asking that $1 an hour be established this year as the uniform minimum rate for their work. At the Washington, Boston and Portsmouth yards the commandants have recommended that the existing rate of 84c be raised to 86c. At Philadelphia a raise from 84c to 88c has been recommended. At New York the recommendation of the commandant is that the rate of 90c be raised to 93c, while at Mare Island and Bremerton on the Pacific coast the proposed rate is that the 91c rate be increased to 92c an hour.

Negotiations of a new agreement for the coming year will follow hearings which will open within two weeks. The total navy yard force is about 25,000, divided into more than sixty trades and occupations.

Milk Producers' Co-Ops to Meet in Conference

WASHINGTON— (FP)— Announcement that over 700 delegates representing 300,000 dairy farmers belonging to dairy co-operative associations in 30 states are to meet in convention in Cleveland, Nov. 10-11, is made by the Natl Co-operative Milk Producers' Federation, in the capital.

This federation is now 10 years old. It has secured legislation in nearly all of the states, based on the California act of 1909 and the Wisconsin law of 1911, exempting co-operatives from the provisions of state anti-trust laws and giving assistance to the movement. Milk producers now claim to be the most secure of any class of agricultural producers in the power of bargaining in the market.

New Bedford Mill Workers Still Strike.

NEW BEDFORD, Mass.—(FP)— Dartmouth Mill workers are still striking under direction of the American Federation of Textile Operatives, independent union. Workers who did not join the strike have now been laid off indefinitely, except weavers who are finishing up work left on the looms. The workers dis-

International Co-operation

By JOHN HAMILTON

CO-OPERATION has not developed on exactly similar lines abroad as in Britain. There are three general classes of Co-operative Association:

(1) Societies of consumption, where Britain stands at the head.

(2) Societies of production, where France is pre-eminent.

(3) Societies of credit or banking, which have developed most successfully in Germany.

The most prominent fact abroad has been the tremendous growth of agricultural co-operation, notably in Denmark. We must note that this form is supplementary to individual cultivation, and seeks chiefly to give the farmer a better profit. Also it tends to give the peasant proprietor some of the advantages of large-scale production.

Irish co-operation is mainly agricultural and has shown a steady advance, to receive a temporary set-back by the British government's terrorist tactics by the "black and tans," and the subsequent Civil War.

Russia.

In Russia the modern movement dates from about 1870, and had the usual burden to bear of bureaucratic obstruction and police espionage. Centralization was inaugurated in 1898 by about 300 societies being formed into the Moscow Union of Consumers' Societies, later known as the Central Union of Co-operative Consumers' Societies (Centrosoyus). There was a rapid growth up to the beginning of the war, the societies numbering 13,500 with a membership of 1,500,000 in 1914. During the war the national economic organization completely broke down, and this resulted in a rapid growth of the co-operative movement, expressing a revolt against profiteering and the inability of private trading interests to solve the problem of supplying the necessities of existence. Up to the time of the Revolution in 1917, the numbers of societies had increased to 35,000 with a membership of 11,500,000. The turnover was increased 50-fold.

In the Soviet struggle to "preserve the revolution" the co-operative movement was taken over in order to give a liberal interpretation of "each according to his need" and also on account of counter-revolutionary tendencies in the leadership of the movement. When the acute rationing period of military communism was over, the government (1922) restored the movement to its previous voluntary basis. Encouragement is given by substantial reduction in taxation, and the State Bank gives credit at low interest rates.

The C. W. S. has given considerable financial assistance in the restoration of the Russian co-operatives, this year taking half of the co-operative produced Siberian butter (see below.)

In Russia they do not pay dividends on purchases. Goods are sold at prices usually below the current market prices, with a percentage added to cover expenses of organization. Any surplus is used to extend the movement. There is a close contact between the Trade Union and the Co-operative Society, dual membership securing important advantages to the worker in obtaining his necessaries. Any friction is dealt with by the "Economic Board," or by the Council of Labor and Defense.

Italy.

The co-operative movement in Italy has suffered a severe setback by fascist violence. The International Co-operative Alliance reports that fascist outrages, with the complicity of the police, had meant "brutality, violence and devastation against co-operative institutions and also against co-operators." A strong resolution of protest was sent to the Italian government but so far no reply was received. Dr. A Suter (Switzerland) reported: "It is impossible to form any idea of the systematic destruction of the Italian co-operative societies by the fascists unless it has been actually witnessed. I could have spent many weeks and even months in Italy paying visits to societies which had either been pillaged or set on fire . . . Approximately one-third of the societies belonging to the league have been destroyed."

La Co-operazione Italiana gives a damning report of fascist administration of the great Milan co-operative movement which had been seized on the pretext of carrying out reforms. The whole of the staff were discharged and replaced by black-shirts. The fascist directorate has increased its fees from £120 per month, drawn by the preceding directore, to £300. Creditors have been forced to accept a composition of 10 shillings in the pound. Property and securities have been mortgaged up to the hilt, and to cover the ruin of the society a cooked balance sheet has been issued.

A similar persecution of the Bulgarian co-operative organization has been carried out by the hirelings of, and directly by, the reactionary government. The disastrous earthquake in Japan has given a tremendous blow to the developing movement there. At the end of 1923 there were 14,259 co-operative societies with 2,070,000 members.

Germany.

German co-operation which operates through many forms, some of which are unfamiliar to British co-operators, has suffered by the terrific fall in German currency, accelerated by the military occupation of the Ruhr. Credit balances, reserves, and members' deposits were now practically worthless as the result of the depreciated currency. Of course, "real" properties are still secure. Hundreds of small societies have gone out of existence. A notable feature is that rural societies are much more stable than urban ones.

There is generally a closer coordination on the spirit between the three sections of the labor movement (industrial, political and co-operative) than is the case in Britain. Especially is this so in Belgium, the movement is very weak in the United States.

The I. C. A.

The International Co-operative Alliance works for intercourse between co-operators in different countries, and for knowledge of their movements, but, as in the educational side of the movement, the preponderating distributive stores' influence is a retarding one.

The C W S has done a considerable amount of international trading and transactions in pre-war days, and an interesting possibility is that of an international C W S. A recent development of interest is that of the formation of the Anglo - Russian Wheat Exporting Company composed on the Russian side of the Soviet government, Arcos, limited, and Centrosoyus, and on the English side of the C W S, and two independent brokers. Arrangements have been made with the C. W. S. Bank and various leading London banks for financial facilities, viz., credits up to £1,000,000. The nominal capital of the company, £100,000, is being deposited in London and will not leave the country, the deal, confined in the first instance to the purchase of wheat, being in the nature of barter wheat against the manufactured articles of the C W S

British Unions Urge Worker Co-operation

A resolution urging all trade unionists to become active and purchasing members of their local co-operative societies was enthusiastically adopted by the recent British Trade Union Congress at Bournemouth, the aim being to bring about a fuller development of working-class organization of industry and effective unity of purpose and action between the co-operative and trade union movements. It was pointed out by speakers that industrial disputes have to be fought on the workers' stomachs, and that the co-operatives should be used more and more to feed people during such disputes.

The new machinery for settling disputes between the co-operatives and their employes, which had been approved by the co-operative congress at Belfast this year, was accepted by the Trades Union Congress. All co-operative stores and enterprises, incidentally, demand that their employes belong to their respective trade unions.—Co-op. Pyramid Builder.

Michigan Has Million Dollar Farmer Co-op

DETROIT, Nov. 7.—The Farmers' Co-operative Grain Company of Kinde, Michigan, has won its place in the ranks of million-dollar farmers' co-operative societies, according to the 1926 annual Co-operative Commission, by virtue of its sales record for the past year.

This flourishing farmers' marketing co-operative, organized in 1911 on a modest basis, now has 425 active members who market their crops of beans, wheat, rye, oats and barley thru their co-operative grain company. The company in turn is linked up closely with the Michigan Elevator Exchange. While the original capital of the company is but $26,000, a net earning of $16,580, or approximately 65 per cent, was made on last year's million-dollar business. One-third this amount was refunded to the members in a co-operative dividend and the balance kept in the company's treasury as additional working capital.

HELP BRITISH STRIKERS SAY CO-OPERATORS

Central Exchange in Appeal to Members

The Co-operative Central Exchange, an organization of midwestern consumers' co-operatives with headquarters at Superior, Wis., has sent the following appeal to its units to aid the brave miners' struggle in Great Britain:

The British coal miners are fighting against a 10 per cent wage reduction and a one-hour increase in the working day. Since May 1 they have fought with courage and self-sacrifice.

This struggle is of great importance to the workers of all countries. A defeat would mean an increase of exploitation in every capitalist country. The profiteer would use this defeat as a club against the workers and farmers in their respective countries. This struggle must therefore call forth the aid and solidarity of the workers of all countries.

In England, Germany, Soviet Russia and other European countries the labor and co-operative organizations are already giving aid. Organized labor in America has taken steps to help the British miners. American co-operatives should follow the example of the co-operatives in other countries and translate the great idea of co-operative solidarity into action and hasten to the financial and moral aid of their British class brothers.

Co-operators! Organize immediately a relief campaign in your co-operatives. Jlave a collection box in your stores. Circulate collection lists. Arrange dances and entertainments for this purpose. Ask your membership meetings and board of directors to donate.

These heroic miners with their families are facing starvation. The co-operative movement should stand with the miners.

You may send your donations thru the Co-operative Central Exchange, or thru the International Workers' Aid, 1553 West Madison street, Chicago, Ill. Yours for co-operation,

Co-operative Central Exchange.

Waukegan Co-op Plans Educational Program

WAUKEGAN, Ill., Nov. 7 — The Co-operative Trading Co. of Waukegan, Ill., has launched a great educational drive. The work is being carried on by a special department of education and research which has been created with Oliver Carlson well-known editor and lecturer, in charge.

The plan of work, which is already put into operation, embraces all phases from mass meeting and debates to study classes.

The children are not to be neglected either. A Junior Co-operative League is to be organized, embracing all children between the ages of 8 and 13 years.

FIVE HUNDRED MINERS ATTEND BROPHY MEETING

Vote to Support the Opposition Slate

LUZERNE, Pa., Nov. 7.—Five hundred miners of Old Forge were in attendance at the meeting of the Brophy election campaign committee here a few days ago. As many more would have been present if the weather were not as bad as it was. The meeting was spirited thruout, and for once the U. M. W. A. field workers failed to break up an opposition meeting. Tony Panne, district organizer of the U. M. W. A. with several others benchmen of Cappellini conferred with the Burgess and sought to have the meeting stopped.

The burgess, on the other hand, remembered that Panne did everything he possibly could to defeat him (the burgess) at the last election and so did not seem very receptive to Mr. Panne's proposals and refused to interfere with the meeting. Failing to have the burgess stop the meeting, Mr. Panne thought he would do it himself by taking into the meeting a group of paid sluggers.

The speakers were Patrick Toohey, A. Orzanti (in Italian), a Polish speaker, and Alex Campbell, ex-International board member of District No. 1, who was reelected at the last election, but counted out by the Cappellini tellers in favor of Brislin, the machine man.

Toohey Chief Speaker.

Toohey spoke in detail on the program of the opposition, being the principal speaker of the meeting. Reviewing the tremendous loss of membership, the rise in the averages of the non-union production over the union production, he stated it was necessary that every coal miner in America be organized before the salaries of the United Mine Workers of America could be assured. Speaking in detail, the program of the opposition, organization of the unorganized, nationalization of mines, a labor party, reinstatement of all expelled members, national agreements covering the anthracite and soft coal regions in order to eliminate the scabbery now prevalent, the election of all organizers, field workers and other employes of the union which would eliminate the present machine building and political gumshoeing in the organization, were some of the important points covered.

Where is Checkoff?

The speaker took up the anthracite situation, the demands of the tri-district convention, and the results of the six-months' strike. The question was raised where is the checkoff which the administration assured the miners was won? Where was the 10 per cent increase for contract miners and the $100 day increase for all day men employed in and around the mines? Where was the two-year contract with the recognition of the union, the tonnage issue, the question of increase in prices for rock and deadwork, and many other things the miners fought for?

Quoting from the anthracite agreement it was shown explicitly where the anthracite mine workers, thru their leaders, are working under a contract saturated and reeking with arbitration, despite the many and emphatic assertions of the administration that no arbitration would be tolerated.

It was brought out that the only thing which will save the miners' union from complete extinction is the repudiation of the Lewis leadership and the election of the opposition slate who are pledged to the program which will solve the ills of the industry and of the organization.

Threatened Violence.

Mr. Panne, who was present, appeared to resent the remarks of the speaker. He was given the floor to chew the rag as long as he wanted and he did it to perfection. The longer he spoke the more of an ass he made of himself. Stating openly to the audience that he would stand for no criticism, he turned to Toohey and said, "If you criticize me, and I am an organizer, I'll riddle you." Upon being invited by Toohey to start "riddling," Mr. Panne changed his mind and thereupon proceeded to make a fool of himself by attempting to defend Cappellini and Lewis. Under discussion, Panne was "panned" by the rank and filers for his conduct in the Pennsylvania final strike, the Pittsburgh strike, and his accepting a job as organizer from Cappellini after he had fought Cappellini as a "betrayer" for months. A motion was adopted and unanimously carried to support the opposition ticket, Mr. Panne voting "No" alone, but we don't consider him.

ACCIDENTS TO CHILDREN SPUR INVESTIGATION

Compensation Laws Do Not Deter Injuries

NEW YORK—(FP) — A national survey of accidents to child workers has been started by the National Consumers league in the belief that this is one of the most important pieces of work the organization has undertaken.

The Eastern Pennsylvania league studied accidents to working children in 1924-25, with co-operation of the Pennsylvania state labor department. It was found that in one year 8,746 children were disabled in industrial accidents; 56 of these children were killed; 152 injuries resulted in amputation.

Many injuries, technically called temporary disabilities, did in fact, the league declares, weaken the child permanently, on his very entrance in to industry.

From a preliminary survey of recent publications of the federal Children's bureau, New York Bureau of Women and Children in Industry, and official reports of Wisconsin and Illinois, it is all too evident, says the league, that children in industry are not really compensated and that the cost of compensation is not assuring such greatly increased safety for them as generally assumed.

Lack Information.

There is a dearth of information of accidents to working children, the league finds. It is the purpose of the league's national survey to dig out the facts. Pennsylvania's labor department revised its record keeping methods after the 1924-25 study. Now the nature and cause of all accidents, especially those to minors will be accessible.

The Ohio Consumers League, co-operating with the State Industrial Commission, is working on a similar study to the one done in Pennsylvania.

TEACHERS HELD FROM PROMOTION ACCOUNT IDEAS

Committee of 100 Faces New York Board

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, Nov. 7.—To fight action of the board of superintendents of the public schools in denying promotion to three members of the teachers' union because of their ideas, a "citizens' committee of 100 has been formed. The teachers who are discriminated against are Dr. Abraham Lefkowitz, teacher in history in the High School of Commerce; Dr. Jesse Wallace Hughan, teacher of English in Textile High School, and Ruth Gillette Hardy, head of the department of cosmetics in the Girls' High School, Brooklyn.

Called Reds.

All had qualifications for promotion, but this was denied them. It is charged that Dr. Lefkowitz was kept from promotion because he was to be a Communist. Dr. Hughan was prevented from being promoted formally to head of the department and receiving proportionate pay, altho she was acting head, because she was identified with the socialist party, it is said.

Miss Hardy, it was revealed, was held back because of a letter she wrote to a newspaper which did not meet with the "approval" of the board.

Included on the committee are: Dr. George A. Coe, director of religious education, Teachers' College; Prof. G. Bonser, Prof. John Dewey, Dr. John Elliot, Prof. Franklin H. Giddings, Dr. S. S. Goldwater, Rev. Percey Stickney Grant, Arthur Garfield Hays, Rev. John H. Holmes, Christopher Morley, Joseph P. Ryan, president Central Trades and Labor Council; John Sullivan, president New York Federation of Labor; Mrs. Maud Swartz, vice-president Women's Trade Union Label League; Rabbi Stephen S. Wise and L. Hollingsworth Wood.

Fascism in a Barrel

The French secret police have unearthed a plot that is typical of the theatrical Mussolini and the bizzare efforts of the fascisti to maintain precarious existence by pulling off stunts that are calculated to keep the population in a state of constant excitement.

It appears from the information at our service that the recent alleged attempt on the dictator's life was sponsored by Mussolini and that the assassination of a young Italian worker was by way of providing the necessary realism. What of it if a young lad must be strangled in order to provide the ego-maniac Mussolini with an Italian holiday?

What the French police have turned loose on the public puts fascism in a perforated barrel, provided the French are not pulling the world's leg. We believe they are not, for good and sufficient reason that will be elucidated later on in THE DAILY WORKER. For the present we shall confine ourselves to stating that Italy and France are at loggerheads because the Italian imperialists want what the French imperialists have already succeeded in stealing from the natives of northern Africa.

An Italian with the honored name of Garibaldi is charged by the French with being an agent provocateur in the pay of Mussolini, whose chief business it was to foment plots against the fascist dictatorship, to engage men to carry out his schemes and then to turn those men over to the fascist police. Press dispatches from Europe state that Garibaldi's brother has confessed all this, but a brother of Garibaldi who lives in New York denies the accusation and declares that his brother and himself have always been bitter enemies of fascism. We do not want to do anybody an injustice, tho we confess that things look black for Garibaldi.

The political aim of Mussolini, it seems, was to create the impression in Italy that France was conspiring to overthrow the Italian government. In order to strengthen the Spanish dictator understanding recently contracted by Mussolini and Primo de Rivera, and with the object of increasing the bitterness between France and Spain, Mussolini, then Garibaldi—so runs the tale—organized a plot to wrench the rebellious province of Catalonia from Spain, thru insurrection. Half of those participating in the alleged conspiracy are said to be fascist spies. The head of an honest Catalanian revolutionist is said to be hanging by a hair, as a result of Mussolini's plot. But as the hair is held by the French police it is likely that the Spanish rebel will keep his head for the time being.

Mussolini wanted to get the Italian populace excited against France and when the excitement was at fever heat to start a war, probably against Turkey to ward off a revolt against the tyranny of fascism at home.

The latest exposure of fascist intrigue shows up this spurious Mussolini as a political lunatic. It proves that the fascist dictatorship in Italy is sitting on a volcano. It proves that the eulogistic puffs of the Mussolini regime written by wandering scribblers are entirely composed of hokum and that the Italian workers and peasants, yes, even the middle and intellectual classes, are just about ready to dynamite this political monstrosity into eternity.

UNITING OF CHINESE FARMERS AND PEASANTS WITH WORKERS WILL MEAN CERTAIN VICTORY FOR REVOLUTION

BERLIN, Nov. 7.—Underestimation of the farmers-peasants in the struggle for power, particularly in agrarian countries, is one of the greatest mistakes, the Presidium of the Farmers-Peasants International declared in an open letter to the Peasants' and Farmers' International to the peasants' section of the Kuomintang party in China, the liberation movement there.

"An active participation of the Chinese farmers and peasants in the struggle for freedom and the land with the workers, petty and middle strata, and the advanced intellectuals is a guarantee of the success of the revolutionary movement," the letter says.

Task is to Exploit.

"Your task is to exploit to the farmers-peasants masses the connection between the cumpradore, the local exploiter, the local military cliques and foreign imperialism. The explanation of this radical evil of Chinese life, the organization of the farmers-peasants and increase of work for the formation of mass farmers-peasants organizations in all provinces of China on the basis of a platform comprehensible for the farmers-peasants masses, including all the basic demands put forward by the farmers-peasants themselves—that is what we consider the immediate and most important task of the national revolutionary party, Kuomintang, in its struggle for the emancipation of the Chinese people.

"Support of the farmers-peasants demands on the part of the working class, intellectuals, petty and middle strata of the urban population, will lead to a rapid rising of the activity of the wide farmers-peasants masses and the formation of a united front of the toilers of all China for the struggle against military cliques and imperialists."

Cites Russia.

The letter urged the Kuomintang to take a lesson from the experience of the Russian revolution. The Red Army, it pointed out, won the support of the peasants and farmers by defending their right for land and by fighting for them. In the same way the Chinese revolutionists can win the support of the peasants and farmers by defending their right to land.

Must Win Confidence.

"The primary task of the Chinese revolutionaries of the working class and of the Kuomintang party is to win the confidence of the farmers-peasants, to form farmers-peasants organizations thruout the whole country, to defend the every-day interests of the farmers-peasants and to direct their invincible stream into the channel of the national revolutionary movement. At the same time it is necessary to explain to the farmer and peasant masses that just as it is impossible to liberate China without the participation of the farmers-peasants, so it is impossible to obtain satisfaction of their vital demands without a true ally in the towns.

Victory Sure.

"If you really unite the widest farmer-peasant masses of all China under your banners, if you are able to lead the farmers and peasants into the struggle in alliance with the working class and national revolutionary elements of Chinese society, the Kuomintang party will not only ward off the blows of the imperialists and counter-revolutionary forces directed against China, but will also be able to attach a powerful mass to the movement, which, like a whirlwind, will sweep away the enemies of the Chinese people that are beginning now to show their heads."

Transportation Means in Soviet Russia Are Developed with Speed

MOSCOW, Nov. 7.—The total number of lines of interurban, suburban and city motor transport within the borders of the U. S. S. R. amounts to 183, of a total distance of 7,096 kilometers, the work of Moscow motor busses amounting to 75 per-cent of all regular motor connections in the U. S. S. R. The next place in motor transport is occupied by Transcaucasia, where 36 lines are working.

The Rights of the Trade Unions in the U. S. S. R.

Trade Unions a Real Power in the Soviet Union—Sole Lawful Representatives of the Workers, They Play An Important Part in Production—Code of Labor Laws Recognized Trade Union Power—Participate In All Phases of Social Activity

By V. YAROTSKY.

THE history of the working class thruout the whole world has demonstrated that the workers have secured the right of organization only as the result of the most fierce and stubborn struggle. There is no need to recall that the first quarter of the 19th century was an epoch of the struggle of the British workers for the right to combine. Up to the '80s the French workers had to suffer the most intense persecutions for the slightest attempt to unite against their masters, nor need we recall the well-known fact of the complete prohibition of any workers' organizations whatsoever in former Russia prior to the first revolution of 1905. The subsequent law on societies (March 4, 1906), however, had for its object the stemming of the stormy growth of the trade unions, which, as it fulfilled successfully.

All these historic facts are now well-known to every educated worker. More important, however, is the fact that after the formal recognition on the part of the bourgeoisie of the rights of the workers to form their own organizations, the working class was compelled by bitter experience to admit the truth of Lassalle's conception that every "constitution" (including the law on trade unions) is nothing more nor less than an "expression of the real correlation of forces." The offensive of capitalism against labor in present-day England quite definitely confirms this conception, in view of the power of the conservative government of Great Britain, which is most definitely based on restricting the rights of the trade unions. And since under bourgeois rule the real correlation of forces always has the sharp end of the wedge directed against the working class, the precariousness of the entire system of legal norms which determine the framework of activity and the rights of the trade unions in capitalist countries becomes evident.

U. S. S. R. Presents Different Case.

WE find quite a different state of affairs under the conditions of the proletarian dictatorship established in the U. S. S. R. after the October revolution. The result of the revolution was a radical shifting in the entire system of correlation of social forces. The rule of the bourgeoisie was replaced by the rule of the working class. This, in the first place, was bound to be reflected by a change in the very nature of the legislation on trade unions. Instead of the laws and legal standards which regulate the rights of trade unions being "scraps of paper" scrapped at every step by the organs of the bourgeois state and the employers, these standards in the U. S. S. R. are a part of the fundamental laws of the workers' and peasants' country in which the government is constructed on the basis of working class rule. Article 49 of the Constitution of the U. S. S. R establishes on the one hand the social and not state legal status of the trade unions, as it presupposes the support of state organs to the trade unions as workers' organizations constructed on the basis of independent activity. On the other hand, this article definitely brings the trade unions into the system of social relations, enjoying particular privileges in the workers' state. It implies the grant of premises as "labor palaces," "workers' houses," etc., rent free, reduction in fees for utilizing the post, telegraph, telephone, railway and water transport, etc.

Already from the mere fact of the inclusion of support of the trade unions being amongst the fundamental tasks of the state it arises that the rights and position of the trade unions in the U. S. S. R. must be regarded as something quite different from those in bourgeois countries. Under conditions of proletarian dictatorship these rights are a system of social relations which strengthen the proletarian dictatorship itself.

This is the reason why the legislation on trade unions in the U. S. S. R. has a very broad structure and grants these unions rights unknown in the legislation of western Europe or America.

Sole Lawful Body of Workers.

FIRST of all, according to the labor legislation of the U. S. S. R., the trade unions are the only lawful representatives of the workers in social, political and economic life. This conception is formulated in the "code of labor laws" in the following manner: The trade unions, which comprise citizens working for wages in state, social and private enterprises, institutions and businesses have the right to approach various organs on behalf of the wage earners as a party concluding collective agreements and also act as representatives on their behalf on all labor and social questions (article 153).

In the system of the state structure this representative nature of the unions finds it expression in two factors; in the factor of elections to the Soviets, and in the factor of representation on the Soviets. In the elections to the Soviet from the factories the participation of the trade unions in which the workers are given enterprises are organized is obligatory. At the same time for those categories of workers for whom voting cannot be conducted in enterprises (commercial workers, Soviet employes, educational and art workers) the electors' meetings are summoned by electoral commissions in agreement with the unions and must take place under the chairmanship of a representative of the trade unions. Besides this, irrespective of this participation of the union in the election, there is a representation on the Soviets themselves, not only of the trade union masses, but also of the trade union apparatus in each electoral district (town, province, uyezd); two from every union and a definite number from the inter-union organizations.

Trade Unions Always Represented.

IN the supreme state organs (C. E. C. of the U. S. S. R., C. E. C. of the R. S. F. S. R. and other republics) we find a definite representation of the trade unions, altho the elections are conducted by the congress of Soviets, personally, and not according to representation of the separate organizations. The significance and role of the unions is so considerable that in all lists of candidates adopted by congresses there is included a definite number of trade union workers in order that the opinion of the workers may also be expressed thru the apparatus of the unions in the supreme organs of the state and economic structure (such, for instance, as the Council of Labor and Defense) there is a representative of the All-Union Trade Union Center (the A. U. C. T. U.) with full voting powers, in appointing members of the supreme economic council of the U. S. S. R. the representative nature of the trade unions is also taken into account and a definite number of members appointed from amongst trade union workers, whose appointment constitutes working in the trade union movement.

Active Part in Production.

IN the economic field the trade unions are invested with no less, if not more, rights than in connection with the state structure. We have already pointed out that among the members of the Supreme Economic Council the trade union movement is well represented. Generally speaking, representation of the unions in the organ regulating economic life and establishing economic policy constitutes a substantial part of the work of the trade unions in the U. S. S. R. While interfering in the direct administration of production, the trade unions take active part in the work of the administrative organs of administration and construction in the national economic system. There is not a single union in the U. S. S. R. which does not devote a considerable amount of this time and energy to working out and testing the plans and projects of economic construction in the respective branch of national economy. One may cite as an example the metal workers' union, which takes active part in elaborating plans for the entire metal industry of the U. S. S. R.

Labor Code.

THEREFORE the code of labor laws establishes for the lower organs of the trade union movement extremely wide powers for participation in the construction of national economy. Article 131 of the code formulates these rights in this field in the following manner:

"The object or activity of the committee (factory or local committee) is, in accordance with the law and the defense of the interests of the workers and employers which it comprises, before the administration of the enterprise or institution and all labor and social questions concerning the workers.

"(b) Representation before governmental and social organizations.

"(c) Supervision of the accurate fulfillment by the administration of the enterprise or institution of the established laws on labor protection. Social insurance, wages, rules of organization and technical safeguards, etc., also co-operation with the state labor protection organs.

"(d) Measures for improving the cultural and material life of the workers and employes.

"(e) Help in the normal process of production in state enterprises and participation thru the respective trade unions in the regulation and organization of the national economy."

Important in Other Fields.

IN the various forms of economic organizations of a social nature (consumers' societies, housing co-operatives) in the insurance offices created on the basis of social legislation—the trade unions have no less important rights. In the field of consumers' co-operation, for instance, organized within the U. S. S. R. by the cooperatives, the leadership of the unions in the inter-union organizations, and not by state organs, and finally exists such trade union (article 154 of the code) with the rights of "acquiring property and owning same; including all kinds of agreements, transactions, etc., on the basis of the existing legislation".

Thus in the labor legislation of the U. S. S. R. the nature of trade unions as social organizations is emphasized.

Organs of a Class.

THE investment of extensive rights to such a free social independent organization, absolutely outside the control of state organs and, on the contrary, controlling the work of the said apparatus arises from the fact that the legislation understands the nature of the trade unions as organs upon which the social opinion of the working class, i. e., that social opinion on the support of which the entire state order of the U. S. S. R. is based. The workers' state based upon proletarian dictatorship cannot fail to see in the system of extensive rights of the trade unions a guarantee of its mass stability and subsequent endurance. As we have pointed out above, the real correlation of social forces in the U. S. S. R. makes the trade unions a powerful social-political and economic factor and therefore pre-determines the wide scale and many-sided nature of the norms regulating the activities of the trade unions in this country.

[illegible] is also need to state here that [illegible] a so-called "reservoir" [illegible] of economic and state work. What is more, the overwhelming majority of posts in the U. S. S. R. are occupied by those who have passed thru the school of the trade union movement.

WHERE will the A. F. of L. strike first? This is the question asked by labor managers and personnel experts of certain corporations as news comes of the stiff resolution against company unionism at the Detroit convention backed up by an assessment on nearly a million workers, to finance the fight against this menace to genuine trade unionism.

The Passaic.

PASSAIC—this word comes first to mind. Company unionism is the issue there. As "Law and Labor," organ of the militant Labor League for Industrial Rights, put it in a recent headline on the textile strike: "Its Major Aspect is Now That of a War on Employes Representation." The mill owners, generally speaking, regard the policy of Forstmann, who, in defending his bankrupt company association, says: "No outside agency can interfere in a bona fide way in the conduct of the Forstmann & Huffmann Co. I am absolutely convinced that the type of employe representation I propose is superior to any organization controlled by outsiders," meaning the A. F. of L.

The Botany Mills echo the Forstmann slogan, and the textile strike becomes in the main a fight around

FASCISTI MOB AND MURDER OPPOSITION

Current Events

By Y. J. O'FLAHERTY

FOR those who like light reading I recommend the reports of the queen of Roumania's triumphal tour over the continent. Anybody with a little bit of experience can easily read between the lines and safely conclude that a gentleman by the name of Volstead is being hooted on the royal train. And when wine is in, even the most respectable of babbits part company with discretion. Read the story on the front page of the next Saturday issue dealing with an incident in Roumania during the war, in which the queen figured. You may not be surprised that confusion should reign on the royal train.

THE flunkeyism displayed by the American parasitic class towards this bawdy queen is the butt of facetious comment in the London papers. Over there, the bourgeoisie treat their royalties as fetish catholics treat their priests. They like to see them fat. But it must be solidified that they get something for their money. It is not a head show to watch the king review the guards regiments. And consider table bettins indulged in, on the quiet, as to whether the king is sober or not. The he never is, the possibility that his majesty may not have his whiskey is good for a mild thrill.

BUT the queen of Roumania! What is in the name of heaven can this lady provide in the way of thrills? She is on the wrong side of fifty and the country on which she lives would not make the state of Rhode Island blush for size. And yet we suppose that Sam Hill, the great road builder of Stanley Washburn the famous war correspondent might like to be able to tell their grand children that they had been guests to a queen's boudoir. In rich country like this tastes are apt to be anything but puritanical.

IN the meantime the indignation of the American masses is beginning to register against the kowtowing of the government to this parasite queen while foreigners who have devoted their lives to useful pursuits are barred from the country. Women of the type of Countess Karolyi of Hungary, a liberal but an intelligent woman and Mme Kollontai, the noted Soviet educator and diplomat are barred by the Coolidge administration, while a fewd queen who has not the intelligence of a middle grade moron is feted and honored. This shows how plenty republicanism sits on the shoulders of our rulers. And it also shows what little difference there is.

German Cabinet Crash Looms as Nationalists Join with the Socialists

BERLIN, Nov. 8.—The German cabinet is in a precarious state as the result of several defeats which have been administered to the government in the reichstag.

The nationalists have joined with the socialists in voting against several government measures.

In many quarters it is believed that the cabinet is tottering.

MAGNUS JOHNSON SAYS THE FIGHT MUST CONTINUE

Problems Before Party Still Unsolved

(Special to The Daily Worker)

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Nov. 8. — Capitalist politicians are circulating rumore that Senator Shipstead, farmer-laborite may return to the republican fold in view of the defeat of Magnus Johnson and the majority of the farmer-labor candidates in the recent elections.

Staunch members of the Farmer Labor Association, those who believe in the class struggle, do not think that the recent defeat was anything but a temporary setback which can be remedied by a return to the militancy of the early days of the farmer-labor movement and the defeat within the movement of the reactionaries like McEwen of Duluth who have done everything possible to destroy the movement while pretending to support it.

Magnus Not Disheartened.

Magnus Johnson, defeated senatorial candidate on the farmer-labor ticket, is disappointed but not disheartened he says and declares that he will continue in the fight for the workers and farmers. If Magnus depended more on the support of the workers and poor farmers and less on the "bankers and merchants," his chances of making Washington again would be rosier. This is what Johnson had to say after the votes were counted.

Causes Still With Us.

"The result of the election, while disappointing, is not disheartening. The causes which led to the formation of the farmer labor party are still with us. The problems before the people eight years ago, when the party was launched, are still unsolved.

"Our program is economic. It provides a solution of the problems of the farmer, wage earner and small business man. The existence of the farmer-labor party can be justified only on the ground that it is fundamentally different from the old parties.

Common Phenomena.

"A defeat at the polls such as we just suffered is common to liberal political organizations. We expect it

Gangsters Accused in Latest Williamson Co. Killings Deny Charge

MARION, Ill., Nov. 8.—Gangsters, upon whom suspicion was directed in the killing of Mayor Joe Stone, 51, and J. Milroy, 27, of Colp, in the latest outbreak of gun warfare in Williamson county, today set forth stout denials as a coroner's investigation was settling under way.

Charles Birger, gang leader, denied any knowledge of the affair or that he had known Stone. Allegations had been made that Birger had planned vengeance upon Stone because the town of Colp had failed to support Oren Coleman, republican sheriff-elect,

Where Mine Flood Killed 51

View of fatal sixth level of Barnes-Hecker iron mine, Ishpeming, Mich., where 53 men were entombed. Photo was taken after water and quicksand had receded. Around this dump car seven bodies were found. The disaster was unusual. A hidden pocket of quicksand broke thru the mine shaft wall, pouring down on the workers on the third level 1,600 feet below the surface. Tons of sand and water engulfed the men, snuffing out their lives. Halted by stub ends, the flood rose to within 175 feet of the surface.

MANN TELLS OF MINERS' SOLID BATTLE FRONT

Veteran English Rebel Writes About Strike

By TOM MANN, London.

LONDON, Oct. 23 (By Mail)—The 1,160,000 miners locked out on the 1st of May, 25 weeks ago, have exhibited unexampled pluck and loyalty to principle, and now, at the beginning of the 26th week, are showing more militancy and general determination to carry on the fight than ever.

Two per cent showed signs of wavering till their comrades of the rank and file and of the executive of the Miners' Federation made unmistakable clear the spirit of comradeship and militant solidarity. To understand why the miners' executive did not take full charge and direct affairs over the entire coal fields of the country it must be realized that the federation consists of county associations, and when a national delegate conference arrives at a decision it goes to the members of each county association to be considered and voted on. This takes considerable time and necessarily delays developments.

Call Out Safety Men.

Trade union organization is far from perfect or we should not be troubled with mechanics and engine drivers in the mines belonging to separate unions not amenable to decisions of the Miners' Federation of Great Britain, but showing a willingness to act in response to the mine owners instead of showing solidarity with their fellow-workers, the miners.

As is well known to the readers of The DAILY WORKER who are watching events in connection with this struggle, the Miners' Federation at the outset gave authorization to such of its members as were needed for safety

Ohio State Prisoners Shoot Way to Liberty; Five Reported Hurt

COLUMBUS, O., Nov. 8.—Eleven prisoners in the Ohio state penitentiary shot their way to liberty through a corridor wounding at least five guards and causing a crowd of 2,000 visitors who were just entering the prison for a tour of the institution.

Harold Bennett, chieftain and fourteen were either shot or clubbed. Thomas Payne, secretary to Warden Thomas, was also reported as having been shot.

Harold Nierergarten, of Lima, a prisoner, was shot thru the head by Warden Thomas as he fled.

BALDWIN STILL PLAYS OWNERS' GAME IN STRIKE

Seeks to Divide Miners on District Basis

LONDON, Nov. 8.—The British government today awaits replies from the striking coal miners and the operators on proposals which it has drawn as a possible basis for settling the coal strike which has been dragging out since May 1.

The Baldwin cabinet drew up its proposals and presented them to both sides in the dispute late Saturday night. The mining association, comprising the operators, being powerless to act as a negotiating body, telegraphed the proposals to the districts to determine the attitude of the local associations of operators.

The executive of the miners' federation met this morning to consider the proposal, prior to going to ten Downing Street this afternoon to resume conversations.

The principles laid down by the government provide for a division of net proceeds from the mines between profits and wages, the ratio between profits and wages to be fixed according to the economic position of each district. The government plan does not mention working hours which would have to be adjusted later by district negotiations.

N. Y. WORKERS DEMAND A NEW SACCO TRIAL

Labor Editors Send a Protest to Fuller

NEW YORK, Nov. 8.—Already a battery of prominent speakers has accepted the invitation of the Sacco-Vanzetti-Emergency Committee to address the great protest mass meeting to be held in Madison Square Garden on Wednesday, Nov. 17, at 8 p. m.

The committee announced that Elizabeth Gurley Flynn will be chairman of the meeting, and the speakers will include Arthur Garfield Hays, Elsa Sorrenti, Carlo Tresca, Leonard Abbott, Frank Bellanca, Richard Brosier, Pietro Allegra, Ben Gold, and Norman Thomas. Several important speakers are still to be heard from.

Unions Visited.

At the meeting of the Emergency Committee, held on Thursday night, each delegate took a quantity of tickets to sell among his union members and plans were laid for reaching each local by mail and by individual speakers in order to rouse their interest and gain their enthusiastic support for the mass meeting.

The Emergency Committee also decided at its meeting that plans should be laid for a nation wide Sacco-Vanzetti Conference and a proposal that such a conference be held in New York city in the near future will be introduced to the workers at Madison Square Garden on November 17.

No Stone Left Unturned.

No stone is to be left unturned in the continued effort to get a new trial for Sacco and Vanzetti. Their friends are determined that they shall not suffer the fate of Tom Mooney and be doomed to a life in jail because a state refuses the justice of a retrial.

Governor Will Consider Labor Editors' Request.

NEW YORK, Nov. 8. The request of New York labor paper editors that Governor Alvan T. Fuller of Massachusetts take steps to remove Judge Webster Thayer of the superior court from the Sacco-Vanzetti case and from the bench of the bay state was given an almost immediate reply by the governor. Just before sailing on the Berengar France with his family for a rest in Europe, Fuller wrote the acting secretary of the labor editors' group.

Bakery Workers May Extend Charter to Negro Date Strikers

The announcement made by Mr Fannie Ward, president of the profiteering Bakery Workers in Chicago Sunday that the Bakery Workers who have now been out for nearly a charter installed great enthusiasm into the Negro women strikers who have now been out for nearly 10 weeks against the Maras and company.

Mrs. Ward addressed the Bakery Workers Sunday and received a pledge that the invitation would be extended. The union also donated $100 to the striking women.

Militant picket activity has again started, following the collapse of settlement negotiations. Monday morning saw many of the new workers at the factory joining the ranks of the strikers.

A meeting will be held by the strikers at 3355 South Michigan, Tuesday night.

JUDGE DAVID REFUSES TO TAKE PART IN KOW TOWING TO QUEEN MARIE

Superior court Judge Joseph B. David today refused to participate in welcoming ceremonies for Queen Marie of Roumania, due to arrive here Nov. 14, because of what he termed the "intolerance and persecution" with which Jews are treated by her government.

Judge David had been asked to be a member of the reception committee of the United Roumanian Jews of Illinois.

"As an American citizen," said Judge David, "I pay no deference to a crowned head of any country. In accord with the resolution recently passed by the Chicago Federation of Labor regarding the visit of this royal person and the obeisance and kowtowing of alleged Americans, I refuse to accept any invitation to receive any royal lady."

LABOR BOARD HEARING PLEA FOR R. R. WAGE

Evidence Is Piling Up for Workers

By ESTHER LOWELL,
Federated Press.

NEW YORK, Nov. 8.—Conductors and trainmen on eastern railroads are keenly interested in arbitration board hearings on their demands for higher wages.

Local and division officials of the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen and the Order of Railway Conductors pack the hall. Rank and file workers from runs out of New York come in with uniforms on to listen between work periods.

Many of the rail workers have been called to the witness stand to tell in detail of working conditions and pay on their respective roads and divisions. All of them listen intently and comment on the effectiveness of their fellow workers' replies.

Evidence Piles Up.

From the many witnesses the evidence develops for the main contentions given by the unions in support of their demands for average 20 per cent wage increases. The workers tell how the work has increased in the last few years, while the number of workers has decreased, how parcel post has grown, filling baggage cars where formerly such matter went express, how tonnage handled and cars per train have increased, how they often have to put in long hours overtime sometimes to earn enough for

TERROR KILLS 100 IN ITALY, HERALD CLAIMS

London Labor Daily Makes Charge

LONDON, Nov. 8. — Sensational charges that a reign of terror existed in Italy following the attack upon Premier Mussolini a week ago, were made today in The Daily Harald in special dispatches from Lugano, Switzerland.

The Daily Herald correspondent charges that nearly 100 persons were killed and 1,000 or more injured in raids on anti-fascist quarters and attacks on persons suspected of not being in sympathy with the fascist movement.

Homes of anti-fascists were entered and sacked and families were driven into the streets, according to the Herald Dispatch.

The Daily Herald is the organ of the British party and is bitterly anti-fascist.

The Rome correspondent of The Daily Herald was expelled from Italy many months ago, and since that time the Daily Herald has published many dispatches from along the Swiss Italian border concerning the state of affairs in Italy.

George Slocombe, Paris correspondent of The Daily Herald, now enroute to the United States, attracted international attention when he entered into a personal exchange of barbed words with Premier Mussolini during one of the international conferences in Switzerland.

Sensational Disclosure Promised.

PARIS, Nov. 8.—With Italy promising an explanation of the alleged activities of Ricciotti Garibaldi as an alleged fascist agent provocateur in France and with Santos Garibaldi declaring that his brother will have a sensational announcement to make later, the French government was today still digging deeper into the charges that Garibaldi has been engaged in building up anti-fascist and anti-Spanish plots in France in an effort to embroil France with both of these nations.

From evidence thus far secured, it is generally believed that Garibaldi was subsidized by some person in Italy to create plots which were always disclosed to the fascist officials before they could be brought to fruition.

Defends Ricciotti

Santos Garibaldi, after a dramatic meeting with his brother yesterday, stated that a sensational statement would be made later and intimated that it might disclose that Ricciotti had not been as unfaithful to the anti-fascist cause as it would now seem.

Santos declared that Ricciotti is not under arrest but is being detained by the French police for his own protection.

Peppino Safe

Santos further announced that he has received a cable from his brother Peppino Garibaldi in South Africa.

SCAB COAL COMPANY SERVES EVICTION NOTICES ON MINERS

(Special to The Daily Worker)

MONESSEN, Pa., Nov. 8.—Eviction notices were issued on union miners and their families of Arnold City and in the vicinity of Pricedale last week by the Pittsburgh Coal Co. This same open shop company is importing scabs for the mine which it is trying to open on a non-union scale and wants the houses for them.

Nearly thirty families were notified that they must give up their shelter, and they have only 10 days to do it in. These families are up against a hard winter unless the union gets busy and supplies them with a roof and necessaries.

Five Thousand a Week for the Next Six Weeks to Keep The DAILY WORKER

By C. E. RUTHENBERG
General Secretary, Workers (Communist) Party.

The contributions for the Keep The DAILY WORKER Fund by weeks for the past eight weeks have been as follows:

|---|---|
| September 18 | $ 339.50 |
| September 25 | 512.10 |
| October 2 | 1,021.03 |
| October 9 | 1,967.30 |
| October 16 | 3,830.29 |
| October 23 | 3,460.37 |
| October 30 | 2,514.64 |
| November 6 | 1,348.43 |
| Total | $14,992.70 |

The above figures tell a graphic story of the activities of the party and the sympathizers of our movement in support of the Keep The DAILY WORKER campaign.

During the first six weeks of the campaign the funds raised rose from week to week. The party members and sympathizers intensified their work and the campaign was going forward at a pace which would have quickly put The DAILY WORKER out of danger and completed the total of the $50,000 fund, which would have guaranteed the appearance of The DAILY WORKER for another year.

During the past two weeks there has been a let-down in the work to Keep The DAILY WORKER, with a consequent recurrence of a sharp financial crisis for our paper.

In order to put The DAILY WORKER out of danger and to successfully carry thru the campaign for the $50,000 fund, as well as to meet the immediate crisis, the spirit of enthusiastic support which marked the weeks of October 16 and 23 must be renewed and intensified. The work done during these weeks shows that our party has the strength to triumphantly pull The DAILY WORKER thru its difficulties and to keep this most important weapon in the class struggle for our movement.

Every party member and every committee of the party must immediately take up the work of securing contributions to the Keep The DAILY WORKER Fund in the spirit which will enable us to win the struggle we are making to keep our paper.

With the help of the contributions raised at the celebrations of the anniversary of the Russian Revolution this week's quota of the $50,000 fund should be raised to $5,000.

WE MUST KEEP THIS PACE FOR THE NEXT SIX WEEKS AND THUS BRING THE TOTAL CLOSE TO THE $50,000 GOAL.

Our party with its sympathizers has the strength to raise $5,000 weekly if we mobilize our strength for this work.

To do that is the task before the party.

Every member, every resource must be thrown into the campaign.

$5,000 WEEKLY FOR SIX WEEKS IS THE GOAL.

RUSH THE FUNDS COLLECTED TO THE DAILY WORKER AS FAST AS THEY COME IN.

MAKE THE SLOGAN, "KEEP THE DAILY WORKER" RESOUND AT EVERY PARTY MEETING, AT EVERY GATHERING OF WORKERS.

LET US SHOW OUR STRENGTH AND ABILITY TO ACHIEVE A VICTORY FOR OUR MOVEMENT.

KOLLONTAI BAN BY KELLOGG IS SLAP AT MEXICO

Taken as "Warning" to Calles Government

WASHINGTON, Nov. 8. — (F.P.)—Mexico's progressive government, which is gaining much influence in Central and South America, is the real target of the order from Sec'y. Kellogg that Mme. Kollontai, the new Soviet minister to Mexico, shall not be permitted to land in the United States on her wey to Mexico City.

That is the conclusion drawn by diplomats in tha capital from the statement issued 'at the department, which reads:

"Mexico. — Mme Kollontai, who it is understood has been appointed Soviet minister to Mexico, has been denied, by the consul general at Berlin with tha approval of the department of state, a visa to enable her to enter the United States in transit to her post of duty in Mexico. The action has been taken because Mme. Kollontai is deemed inadmissable into the United States under the law since, as one of the outstanding members of the Russian Communist Party, a member of the third congress of the Communist international and a member of the Soviet diplomatic service, she has been actively associated with the International Communist subversive movement."

Against Mexico.

This is looked upon as a suggestion to the Latin-American republics that Mexico is receiving with opeh arms a dangerous "subversive" Communist leader, and that the state department looks upon any diplomatic relations between Mexico and the Soviet Union as being hostile to American interests. It is so worded as to drive, if possible, a wedge between the Mexican government and the American Federation of Labor, and to brand as Bolshevistic all pro-Mexican developments in Nicaragua, Guatemala and Honduras, where struggles between reactionaries backed by Wall Street and liberals encouraged by the Mexican revolutionists are now in progress.

Civil Liberties Union Kicks.

NEW YORK, Nov 8 — (FP) — The repeal of the passport control law under which Mme. Alexandra Kollontai, Soviet minister to Mexico, has been denied permission to pass thru the United States, is demanded by the American Civil Liberties Union in a telegram sent to Senator William E. Borah, chairman foreign relations committee, and in a statement issued by Morris L. Ernst, union attorney. Ernst aided the fight against the exclusion last year of count and countess Karolyi of Hungary and Soburji Shativala, British parliament member. Ernst charges Secretary of State Kellogg with partiality in the application of the law.

"The issue raised by the barring of Mme. Kollantai is whether the secretary of state should have the right to pass arbitrarily on who shall or shall not enter the United States. His decision in four cases proved that he applies the law with prejudice. The American Civil Liberties Union fought the law in the last session of congress and will fight it harder this year to prevent more Karolyi, Sahlatvala and Kollontai cases."

discretion to apply the levy according to their particular procedure.

This announcement followed a speech by Julius Hochman, vice-president of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, of New York, in which he delivered a stirring plea for assistance.

Tells of Importance.

Hochman told the delegates that the outcome of the strike would determine the possibility of the return of sweat-shop conditions in the needle trades. Tha jobber system which is now in vogue in the industry is attempting to bring back the conditions that existed before 1910. Thru this system the manufacturers are seeking to evade responsibility for wages and conditions. Tha strike is to force the jobbers to assume this responsibility, he pointed out. Labor must not permit the mean, contemptible bosses of New York to crush one of its strongest organizations, he declared.

Federation Co-operates.

Fitzpatrick declared that the federation was co-operating with the Conference for Relief here and would do everything in its power to give assistance. Credentials from the A. F. of L. and from the C. F. of L. would be furnished solicitors for funds, he said.

Resolutions Passed.

Two significant resolutions were passed at the meeting. One protested against the knee-bending of American officials to Queen Marie of Roumania and the other called on labor to set aside November 11 as a day of memory and respect to the workers who were murdered in the Haymarket massacre of 1887.

Calls it "Insult."

The first resolution was passed unanimously. The resolution on Haymarket was passed by all the delegates with the exception of Delegate Wright from the Brick and Clay Makers, who declared that setting aside Nov. 11 to honor Haymarket martyrs was an "insult to our boys who fought in the great war to make the world safe for democracy." Wright declared that the Haymarket episode should be commemorated on November 12. Wright's motion was completely overwhelmed.

Haymarket.

The resolution on Haymarket, which was introduced by Mat Berner, of the Machinists, said in part: "Whereas, on Nov. 11, 1887, the state of Illinois murdered four men who had for some time been leaders in the ranks of organized labor, and whose crime had been to lead the workers in their bitter struggle for the 8-hour day, that the Chicago Federation of Labor recognizes the services of these men, our brothers in the labor movement, and on this thirty-ninth anniversary of their death, pay tribute to them in recognition of their valiant services in the struggle for the 8-hour day for labor."

Queen Marie.

The resolution on Queen Marie, introduced by Mat Berner and Emil Arnold, of Painters' Local 275, declared: "That the Chicago Federation of Labor protests against the subservience of American officials to Queen Marie, the "royal" symbol of oppression and terrorism of workers, peasants, and racial minorities within the borders of that country; and that we declare that organized labor will do no homage to any potentate, particularly when in this case the potentate represents a government which persecutes and imprisons workers for belonging to a trade union and for their struggles for better conditions of living. The sympathy of our labor movement is with those who now suffer under the iron heel of Roumanian capitalism."

Aid Data Workers.

A plea for more assistance to the Negro women date workers who are on strike against the Mcrss and Company date-stuffing factory was made by Anton Johannesen. Johannsen reprimanded unions, who not only had not given aid to the women when they were called on by committees, but had not even received them in their union meetings.

Distributs Appeals.

Cards were distributed at the meeting, signed by the Chicago Federation of Labor, and which will be distributed to all members of organized labor, asking for support of the strike. The cards read:

"The strike against the Maras Importing company was caused by an arbitrary wage reduction. All the employes are called on by committees, supporting children, earned from eight to fourteen dollars per week.

"This company handles figs and dates in a most unsanitary manner; one lavatory for one hundred women, and one small sink to wash their hands and work rags.

"The tables upon which figs and dates are handled are always in a filthy condition.

"The public and friends of organized labor are urged to refuse to use Maras importing company's products, on account of the above unfair and unsanitary conditions."

B. T. C. Member Speaks.

Ernest Bevins, a member of the British Industrial Mission to the United States, who was the fraternal delegate from the British Trade Union Congress to the A. F. of L. in 1915, was at the meeting and spoke on conditions in Great Britain and Europe. Bevins declared that the world's problems would not be solved until the workers united into one bond, and caused the world to rise above nationalism and racial hatreds. Bevins declared that the British labor party was growing in strength and would continue to grow. The British labor movement is now moving toward solidarity of all factions he said, and was not going to split, as some predict.

nouncing that he is sailing for France on the Mauretania this week and asking that all possible be done to stay the situation until he can arrive.

Thus far, it is learned, Riccitotti has admitted that he advised the fascist government of plots organized in France, but he has not admitted that he himself organized these plots.

Inquiry is also proceeding into the Spanish separatist plot frustrated at Perpignan, which may be connected with the plots allegedly organized by Garibaldi.

Colonel Macia, who is to be held as the leader of the Perpignan plot, may confront Garibaldi. Float New Loan.

ROME, Nov. 8.—A hint of Italy's severe economic crisis is seen in the fact that financial is the means being mobilised today to aid in the funding of approximately $375,500,000 of the nation's floating debt, one of the greatest financial operations ever undertaken by any government.

The king has signed a decree, effective on Thursday, whereby a new loan of 10,500,000,000 lire will be issued bearing interest at 5 per cent, which holders of the ordinary treasury bonds, maturing in five or seven years, will be obliged to take in exchange for their bonds. The exchange will be made on the basis of 116 lire 50 centisimi of the new loan for every 100 lire of ordinary treasury bonds; 113 lire of the new loan for every 100 lire of the five year treasury bonds; 112 lire of the new loan for every 100 lire of the seven year treasury bonds.

Serious Tidal Wave.

ROME, Nov. 8. — Thirty persons were drowned and 7,000 are homeless in Bari as a result of the tidal wave which on Friday flooded the entire city to a depth of seven feet within a few minutes.

A serious food shortage has resulted from the flooding of all bakery ovens. All the wells of the city were flooded with sea water, rendering the water unfit for drinking. Relief trains rushed toward the flooded area have been held up by wash-outs.

Dozens of other towns on the Adriatic coast were flooded to a lesser degree by the big wave.

PEKING TEACHERS STRIKE WHEN IMPERIALIST ARMY TAKES SCHOOL FINANCES

PEKING, China, Nov. 8.—Several hundred teachers in the government primary and secondary schools have gone on strike to force the government to pay them back wages due. Wages of all the teachers are many months in arrears, and in some cases are two years behind.

The teachers demonstrated in front of the ministry until they received assurance that the government would make a drastic attempt to raise funds.

Imperialist military projects have drained the treasury, it is reported.

POLICE FAIL IN ATTEMPT TO BAN WEISBORD TALK

Mayor Forced to Leave Hall in Derby, Conn.

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Nov. 8. — At a meeting in Derby, Conn., on Saturday addressed by Albert Weisbord, well known for his leadership of the Passaic strike, the mayor of the city invaded the hall with police and demanded that the meeting be closed because of Weisbord's alleged, "seditious utterances."

Forced Out of Hall.

Weisbord remonstrated with the official making it clear to them that he was speaking on the Passaic strike and had a perfect right to do so. The large audience assembled shouted their derision of the mayor's action and let it be loudly known that they were with the speaker in his demand for the rights of free speech.

The mayor and the coppers were eventually forced to leave the hall an Weisbord continued speaking. The workers applauded the leadership of the Workers' (Communist) Party in fighting the battles of the workers for the first time in Derby where big brass mills and silk factories are the controlling influences of the city and every official in it, including the mayor who had to make an embarrassed withdrawal from the hall.

4,000 WORKERS ATTEND NINTH ANNIVERSARY

Four thousand workers crowded in to the main hall of Ashland Auditorium Sunday, Nov. 7, to celebrate the Ninth Anniversary of the Russian revolution and the establishment of the workers' and peasants' government of the Soviet Union.

In addition to the speeches of William Z. Foster, William F. Dunne, Sam Darcy and Max Schachtman, the Young Workers League with Anne Sedwick as chairman, there were beautifully rendered folk dances by a troupe of Czecho-Slovakian workers, an impressive pageant representing the oppressed workers of the world looking towards Soviet Russia, and a drill by the Young Pioneers which was the hit of the evening.

The Proletarian Singing Society gave its services and sang with more than its usual revolutionary fire and melody.

A collection of $342 dollars was taken for The DAILY WORKER and the meeting ended with the enthusiastic singing of the International.

Altho smaller in numbers than the other Ninth Anniversary meetings, was exceptionally well organized and full of spirit.

Detroit Workers Hold Memorable Celebration

DETROIT, Mich., Nov. 8 — Workers Party members and sympathizers filled the floor and balcony of the Armory to hear Ben Gitlow, member of the party central executive committee, speak at the celebration of the ninth anniversary of the Russian Revolution today.

It was the most spirited meeting held in Detroit in the last few years. The collection ammunted to more than $500. The ticket sale netted more than that.

Rebecca Grecht, of New York relief organizer for the Passaic textile strikers, R. Baker, district organizer of the party, Ruth Reynolds, of Detroit, speaking for the Young Workers (Communist) League, and A. Borlsoff, of Chicago, speaking in Russian, also talked. All speakers emphasized the stability of the Russian government and the preparedness and ealization of Russian industry and agriculture.

Celebrate in Kansas City, Mo.

KANSAS CITY, Mo.—Showing that the world imperialists are planning new attacks against the Union of Soviet Republics, plans that include the financial support of American capitalism, J. Louis Engdahl, editor of The DAILY WORKER, speaking here at the celebration of the Ninth Anniversary of the Bolshevik Revolution, declared that the American workers and farmers must organize and build their power to help combat, jointly with workers of other lands, these sinister designs against the First Workers' Republic.

Engdahl exposed the real purpose of the visit to this country of Queen Marie, of Roumania, telling of the loan of $10,000,000 that is being extended to the Roumanian reaction by Wall Street's international bankers. Queen Marie is coming to Kansas City this week and the local parasites are falling over each other paying $100 a seat for the doings at the "Liberty Auditorium" that will be dedicated to American militarism on armistice day with President Calvin Coolidge, himself, as the main attraction.

The anniversary celebration was held here under the direction of the Workers (Communist) Party at Musicians' Hall. William Browde, acted as

Republicans Aim to Win Over Hendrik Shipsted, Farmer-Labor Senator

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

THE struggle of the workers and farmers toward independent political action is uphill and difficult. Eternal vigilance is but a small part of the price that must be paid in order to achieve every advance, no matter how small.

Thus labor in Minnesota, for instance, must be on guard now more than ever if it would hold the advantages already gained by its Farmer-Labor Party.

The betrayal led by Quigley and other traitor elements of the defunct Non-Partisan League before the election will find its replica among other deserters, now that the election is over, and especially since it did not terminate as happily as one could wish.

Already the danger signals has flared. No less an organ of the great plunder interests than the New York Herald Tribune, announces that "It is expected Senator Shipstead, Farmer-Labor member, will vote with the republicans on organization." This may be only a rumor, but even rumors usually have some basis of truth. In fact the hope of the republicans that Shipstead's support is advanced by the New York capitalist daily sounds too plausible to permit of any comfort for the valiant labor fighters shouldering the responsibility for the maintenance and the building of the Farmer-Labor movement.

The Quigley theory, supported by some non-partisan leaguers, was that all farmer-laborites should retreat to the democratic party, also elect in Minnesota, recently it, and then promote the policies and ambitions of these adventurers who seek only immediate election success and not the building of a political and ever-growing class power of the exploited on the land and in the cities. The primary was to be thus an open road for the capture of the democratic party.

In North Dakota the non-partisan leaders claimed that they had successfully captured the republican party thru the use of the primaries. But the final proof of the pudding is the eating. And the North Dakota non-partisan league senators, Frazier and Nye, are now planning to help the republican bosses organize the anti-senate bloc all the other republican office boys of Wall Street. Nye is said to be true of La Follette and Blaine, the "progressives" in Wisconsin. Brookhart in Iowa and Norris and Howell in Nebraska. The republican bosses may have to pay a price to get the support of these so-called "insurgents." But they will pay it and gladly because they need the votes with the senate membership score standing at 47 republicans, 47 democrats and one farmer-laborite, with a special election yet to be held in Maine that may go G. O. P.

Labor has no control over the republican insurgents, but it has some power over the farmer-labor senator, Hendrik Shipsted. It must use that influence to prevent steps that Shipsted might take to consummate an unholy alliance between the farmer-labor power he represents in the United States senate and the republican party of the worst enemies of the producing masses.

The republicans expect to win the seat in Maine, giving them 48 in all. But the democrats may refuse to allow Vare and Smith, the slush fund twins from Pennsylvania and Illinois, to be sworn in immediately and take their seats. This means the republican total will be cut by two to 46. This is where the vote of the farmer-laborite, Shipsted, comes in. He can lift the G. O. P. total to 47, making a tie with the democrats, that can be broken in favor of the republicans by Vice-President Dawes, republican, who is president of the senate. What a picture! The farmer-labor senator, Shipsted, standing side by side with the Chicago banker, of Lorimer infamy, the author of the Morgan-Dawes plan, to make it possible for Wall Street's party to hold onto the senate and control all the committee appointments. Thus Shipsted becomes the Paul Revere who must ride the elephant in order to save the republican party

The danger of this black betrayal on the part of Shipsted is imminent. Wherever possible Shipsted has been flirting with the republican party forces and not with Quigley's democratic friends. Shipsted came to Chicago not long ago to speak at an affair that promoted the mayoralty aspirations of the republican, William Hale Thompson. During the campaign just over, William McKean, the Farmer-Labor campaign manager, invited Thompson to come to Minnesota for a "few meetings." And Thompson responded. Shipsted is also close to Frazier, Nye, LaFollette, Blaine and Brookhart, in fact, finds himself one of them, in spite of the fact that they are all still within the republican party that wars vicious-ly upon the farmer-labor party in Minnesota. Shipsted would neverless find it easy going to trail along with this political group that refuses to break with Wall Street.

It is not too early for the farmer-labor forces to prepare against a desertion. The demand must be made upon Shipsted that he organize with the Farmer-Labor members of the house of representatives against both the old parties and for the unity of labor in support of independent political action. "Forewarned is forearmed."

JAILED PASSAIC STRIKER ELECTED PEACE OFFICER

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PASSAIC, N. J., Nov. 8 — Textile striker who has been held prisoner for more than a month in the Bergen county jail was elected a justice of the peace in Garfield, N. J. this week Adolph Wisnefski, a member of the local union of the United Textile Workers, arrested September 25 on charges arising out of the textile strike, was elected to office from the fourth ward, Garfield, on the democratic ticket.

Won't Let Press in.

The strangeness of a man in prison being elected a police official appealed to the taste of the New York tabloid press and attempts were made by them to get a picture of Wisnafski in his cell. Sheriff Nimmo of Bergen county refused permission, however, saying openly that he was afraid the picture might be used against him. A reporter from the New York Daily News called his attention that such permission was often granted the papers by the New York police authorities. But Nimmo persisted in his refusal.

Framed Up.

Wisnefski and four other men have been held prisoners in the Bergen county jail at Hackensack for nearly six weeks, on suspicion of being implicated in bomb fire of Globe bomb-ings. They are held under $50,000 bail. In the Passaic county jail at Paterson are six more strikers held on similar charges, under $216,000 bail. Nobody was hurt in the alleged bombings.

Gustave Deak, president of local 1603 of the United Textile Workers, who ran for congress on the labor party ticket, polled 516 votes in the city of Garfield.

FOSTER SPEAKS AT HAYMARKET MEMORIAL MEET

William Z. Foster, secretary of the Trade Union Educational League, has been added to the list of speakers who will address the thirty-ninth anniversary meeting for the Haymarket martyrs of 1887. The meeting will take place at the Social Turner Hall, Paulina and Belmont, on Thursday, Nov. 11, 8 p. m.

Federation Assists.

The last meeting of the Chicago Federation of Labor, by an overwhelming majority, adopted a resolution to set aside November 11, as the day to commemorate the Haymarket martyrs. Delegates from the floor pointed out that the Haymarket tradition is a working class tradition, that the labor leaders who were hanged two score years ago were the pioneers of the eight-hour day which must still be achieved by millions of workers.

The meeting on the eleventh is being held under the auspices of the International Labor Defense and the Pioneer Aid and Support society which has kept up the memory of the Haymarket martyrs for numerous years up to now and has kept fresh and clean the grave of the workers at Waldheim cemetery.

Other Speakers.

In addition to Foster, James P. Cannon, secretary of International Labor Defense, Emil Arnold, president of Painters' Local Union No. 275; Mathilda Kalousek, secretary of the Czecho-Slovak section of the I. L. D. who will speak in her native tongue, will address the meeting.

All workers are urged to attend and pay tribute to the memory of the brave fighters of the last century. Admission is 10 cents.

WORKERS HERE TO "WELCOME" BLOODY QUEEN

"Reception" Is Planned for November 13

When Queen Marie of Roumania steps out of the railroad station in Chicago on Nov. 13 she will be greeted with a reception unlike that with which she has been met in any other city. The queen of the bloody anti-labor monarchy of Roumania will be confronted by a large delegation of Chicago workers, organized by the local International Labor Defense, who will hear banners demanding the cessation of the regime of terrorism against workers and peasants that exists today under the queen's rule.

Arrives Next Saturday.

The date of her arrival, Saturday, Nov. 13, International Labor Defense will hold a protest mass meeting at 8:30 p. m. at Redder Hall, 30 North Wells street. At the meeting in Redder Hall William F. Dunne, editor of the DAILY WORKER; Max Shachtman, editor of the Labor Defender; George Maurer, secretary of Chicago I. L. D.; George Neder, well known Roumanian labor organizer, and others will speak on the real mission of the queen in America and the conditions of the workers and peasants in Roumania.

From the mass meeting a delegation of workers will proceed to the station where the queen's train is to arrive, the Illinois Central station. She is slated to arrive between 4:30 p. m. and 5:30 p. m. and an unusual welcome will await her there.

Goes to Consulate.

If, as has been the case in other cities where the queen has stopped, she proceeds from the station to the consulate of the Roumanian government, at 360 North Michigan, the delegation will follow her there to demonstrate their protest against the frightful conditions existing in her country. The queen is slated to dine that evening at the Drake Hotel, Michigan and Oak street beach, and she will be followed there as a reminder of the demand of American workers in solidarity with the demand of the oppressed toilers of Roumania. Workers are urged to be at Redder Hall at 3:30 p. m. on Saturday, Nov. 13, in large numbers.

Mine Workers Protest Control of Railroads by New York Central

WASHINGTON, Nov. 8.—The plan of the New York Central Railroad to acquire control under lease of the Big Four, Michigan Central and Chicago, Kalamazoo and Saginaw railroads will be vigorously protested before the interstate commerce commission. It was indicated when the commission permitted various organizations to intervene in the case.

Those authorized to intervene include the Ohio Farm Bureau Federation, Ohio Farm Bureau Service Company, Ohio public utilities commission, the stockholders' protective committee of the Big Four, Athens, Ohio, Chamber of Commerce and District No. 6 of the United Mine Workers.

BRAZIL REVOLUTIONARIES GAIN IN STRENGTH; LARGE FORCES OF REBELS JOIN

LONDON, Nov. 8.—A reported Brazilian revolutionary movement is now assuming serious proportions and large forces of rebels are reported moving against the town of Bella Vista, according to a Central News dispatch from Buenos Ayres.

IMPERIALIST POWERS AID SUN TO CAPTURE KUKIANG; U. S. MARINES GIVE HELP

PEKIN, Nov. 8.—Troops at Marshal Sun Chuan Fank were again in possession of Kukiang today after a detachment of Cantonese soldiers had made a surprise attack and occupied the city for a short time, according to reports received here.

A number of marines from American, French, British and Japanese vessels landed during the engagement and their presence encouraged the Sun forces.

ILEANA PLEADS FOR 'SWEETIE' MARIE CHASED

Princess Royal Fights for Ford Fast Worker

ABOARD QUEEN MARIE'S SPECIAL TRAIN—(In Montana)—Nov. 8.—Princess Ileana of Roumania today pleaded the cause of an exiled friend, a youthful American automobile salesman, "Hunny" Ayres, known as J. B. Ayres of the Ford Automobile company payroll, who wears a raccoon coat and has a breezy way.

Fired For Talking.

He was fired from the royal train for "making statements," but the princess believes it was because he took her out motoring and to the Washington-California football game in Seattle.

"It is a shame," declared her highness today, "He was a nice boy and it was I who asked him to go out driving with me."

The princess has taken the matter to Col. H. Carroll, acting for the railroads as host to her majesty, and there is every reason to believe that Ayres will rejoin the party at Denver.

Ayres, who is not bewared about putting forward the merits of the make of car he is supplying the royal party along their transcontinental route, told newspaper men it was costing Henry Ford $250,000. A press association quoted Ayres as saying Ford was paying the incidental expenses of Queen Marie's trip to the extent of $500,000.

This all happened Saturday, the same day "Hunny" Ayres with Princess Ileana at the wheel, had a mile a minute ride over 100 miles of the scenic lunch at the side of the road.

Circulation of Soviet Press Three Times the Pre-War Figure

WASHINGTON—(FP)—Newspapers in the Soviet Union had a total circulation of 8,281,820 on Feb. 1, 1926, as compared with a total newspaper circulation in the same territory before the war of only 2,760,000 copies. These figures are published by the Russian Information Bureau in Washington in the current Russian Review.

Circulation of all papers on Jan. 1, 1925, was 6,956,098. The gain in 12 months from that date was 1,325,722. The number of paper increased during the same period from 579 to 598.

Last February's press census showed 131 peasant papers with 1,913,000 circulation; 58 workers' papers with 1,276,810 circulation; 8 "leading" papers with 1,209,223 circulation; 17 trade union papers with 870,500 circulation; 190 non-Russian papers with 928,843 circulation; 53 Communist youth papers with 471,453 circulation; 15 army papers with 85,880 circulation; 21 economic papers with 189,400 circulation, and 106 "other" papers, including co-operative, departmental and mixed worker and peasant papers, with 1,226,502 circulation.

work and to the members of other unions who were pump men, mechanics or specialists in any way to continue work to keep the mines in order ready for a start when a settlement should be arrived at, but as the fight grew in intensity the South Wales men at the delegate conference urged that all safety men should be drawn out, and all outcrop work stopped, too. They called also for an embargo on the handling of coal, and a special conference of all unions to give a national decision in favor of this.

Conference Called.

The new General Council of the Trade Union Congress, which is very little different from the old council, has been approached by the miners' executive asking them to take definite action, and they have agreed to call a national conference of union executives on Nov. 3 (about the time this should appear). The DAILY WORKER). It is not too late even now to take action against touching coal, to obtain a levy from all at work equal to £150,000 a week, to resort to effective picketing, to clear the mines of safety men and conduct the fight with the necessary militancy.

Minority Movement.

We of the minority movement are putting every available man in the field to help the miners, well knowing that government as well as the mine owners and capitalists generally are intending to make an one-sided on other sections of workers should they drive the miners to submission. If they did, they expect to find the leaders after six months' fight to be as finally resolved to continue, full of confidence that they can last out and come out on top at the finish.

The Miners' International Federation has made a paltry show and with the ex-secretary of the British miners as ex-secretary of the Miners' International we have the pitiable spectacle of this same person leading the international in hostility to the British miners, himself using arguments entirely favorable to the case of the owners. Not withstanding all this, plus very little financial help coming from the United States, the miners and their wives are fighting powerfully and splendidly. There is very little meaning even where there is serious poverty.

Miners Enter Elections.

In some districts the miners have shown the good sense to get returned to the public bodies, such as the county councils, the boards of guardians, the education committees, and as members of parliament, and so they not only check the mischievous behavior of the boss class but effectively control the public institutions in the workers' interests.

This struggle will serve and is now serving to educate millions of workers economically and politically, the latter especially in the sense that, as in this fight is, it is only one in connection with the great class war, and any settlement made cannot be of a permanent character, it must be made with a consciousness that every country is going thru similar struggles and must continue so to do until we have finally wiped out capitalism and established communal ownership and control of all industry. May that day come quickly for the workers of all lands!

The "Bloody Queen" of Roumania knows what "COTZOFANESTI" means. Read The DAILY WORKER on Saturday, November 13!

FIRING POWER OF PRESIDENT TO BE FOUGHT

Constitutional Change Will Be Attempted

Los Angeles Nov. 8 Asserting that the present supreme court decision giving the president power to dismiss such federal office holders was not in harmony with the principles of representational government, Senator William H. King of Utah declared here today that a constitutional amendment curtailing this decision will be submitted at the next session of congress.

Parties Allied

King, who is here to conduct the Calvin Coolidge "front porch" campaign, declared that in a nonpartisan campaign, democrat and progressive republican and democratic members of the senate will support the proposed amendment.

"I feel that the majority opinion of the supreme court is erroneous and should be overruled," King explained.

"The president needs no such unlimited power and the constitution does not confer it upon him. The ruling gives the chief executive the arbitrary right to get rid of federal office holders, and it is absolutely at variance with the fundamental principles of our government."

Cook of Miners Sees Long Struggle Ahead

By BILL ROSS, Federated Press.

GLASGOW — (FP) — Though exhausted by his almost superhuman efforts during the 6 months of the miners' lockout, Secy. A. J. Cook found time to spend a day in the Clyde district to address three Keir Hardie memorial meetings. Only two days previous he was attending the Miners' International in Brussels. He returned to England by airplane, spent a busy day in London and made the long journey to Scotland to keep his engagements.

Such incessant agitation to hold the battle lines have worn him out. His voice almost gone, he tortures himself to make his huge audience hear him. He ignores his doctor's advice to give up speaking and goes on with the oil heal and enthusiasm.

Lines formed before the halls hours before he was due. The crowds which had not got in crowded them seeing by greeting Cook on his arrival. Only the determined efforts of the ushers kept Cook from addressing these meetings.

In the overwhelmingly rose handkerchiefs and red flags were waved as Cook got a chance to speak through the hours-long roles. Like one of the thousands murmured, surprised and sympathetic, but soon subsided into a dead silence.

Reminding that we have been in the front line trenches described by those who should have stood with us," he said, "If the labor movement could catch with the miners it will create the heart of the most valiant resistance the movement ever had."

He explained that while the miners will accept wage reductions they will stick to the principle of the 7-hour day and national agreements. Legislating the hall for the taxi which was to take him to another meetings, Cook found a crowd waiting to give him an ovation.

"We have a lot of fight left in us," Cook assured The Federated Press in the taxi. "They still have a long way to go to beat the miners."

MOVEMENT TO BRING ABOUT PEACE IN WORKMEN'S CIRCLE DEMANDS TOLERATION OF ALL TENDENCIES

NEW YORK, Nov. 8.—On Sunday, Oct. 31, over 240 delegates, representing 156 Workmen's Circle branches gathered at the peace conference called by the National Initiative Committee for Peace in the Workmen's Circle here in New York.

Besides the regular 241 delegates representing 156 branches there were also delegates from four dissolved branches and communications of greetings from about 40 branches that could not send in delegates on account of technical reasons, but which were whole-heartedly with the peace movement started recently in the W. C.

Panetrates Membership.

The conference proved that the peace movement has penetrated the broad membership of the W. C. branches. About one third of the entire W. C. was actually represented at the conference either thru delegates or communications.

The delegates represented at the conference were of various political tendencies. There were many of the non-partisan elements, many of the left wing and even many of the right wing elements who are interested in peace in the W. C. At the beginning of the conference, the right wing delegates, who were influenced by the various insinuations and statements of the "Forward," that the conference is only a scheme of the left wing elements in the W. C., were actually afraid that the left wing elements would capture the conference. But after a while they convinced themselves that the left wing elements are not interested in splitting or breaking the W. C., as the Forward often insinuated, but on the contrary, are interested in building up the W. C. and turning it into a strong working class organization.

At the conference was also present the committee of the left wing, that appeared before the National Executive Committee of the W. C. on July 11, and demanded that peace be created in the W. C. and that all the tendencies in the working class movement be tolerated in the W. C. They were invited to the conference by the National Initiative committee for peace in the W. C.

The National Peace committee has also sent an invitation to the N. E. C. of the W. C. but it failed to come to the conference.

Zaltzman Explains

Comrade Zaltzman of the left wing committee explained the entire struggle between the right and left wing in the W. C. He pointed out that the left wing does not want to split or break the W. C. but on the contrary, wants to build it stronger and make it a more powerful red cross auxiliary of the class struggle. But it was the right wing machine, that was determined to wipe out the left wing by all means and went as far as dissolving over sixty branches and driving away from the W. C. ranks thousands of members. He also pointed out that the policy of the N. E. C. has led to a weakening of the organization, and that it is necessary to create peace in order to strengthen and enliven the W. C. Only in this peace must not be a Versailles treaty, but a peace in which all the tendencies in the working class be tolerated and recognized.

Radi Talks.

Radi, an active worker of the non-partisan Workmen's Circle schools also spoke. In a brilliant speech he pointed out, that the fight of the schools against the N. E. C. of the W. C. was not a result of the feud between the left wing and the right wing in the W. C. but a result of the attitude of the N. E. C. of the W. C. towards the Workmen's Circle schools.

He pointed out that in spite of all the attacks of the N. E. C. upon the schools, the active school members tried to avoid a split. But all their efforts were in vain.

The Charges.

The N. E. C. has been maneuvering to expel the school workers. All kinds of hardships and restrictions were placed on the active school members. They were often not even allowed to express their opinion. But they have been keeping quite, because they did not want to have a split in the W. C. schools. The national office went further and further with its attacks. Till it attempted to remove all active schools workers and replace them by others, not capable to do the work. This brought about a resistance, and the national office expelled 6 schools.

"But in spite of the fact," he pointed out, "that at present the schools are functioning much better than under the previous supervision of the N. E. C. educational committee, we are willing to drive the schools back if there will only be a guarantee for actual peace in the W. C. because we are also interested in peace."

The conference has adopted the following resolution and elected a committee of 15 to carry out the plans of the conference and the resolution adopted.

1. The conference expressed the desire and demands of the W. C. non-partisan schools, that they should pledge themselves to re-unite with the official W. C. schools. The conference is also of the opinion that during the process of performing unity, The Harlem House and Camp Kinderland be taken in.

2. The peace committee pledges itself to bring a promise from the N. E. C. and from the National Board of Directors, that the Workmen's Circle School will be managed upon the strictly non-partisan basis on which they were organized.

3. The National Executive Committee must give all school workers and parents of the children in the schools a proper opportunity to proceed with their work for the schools.

4. Reinstate all branches that were dissolved in the U. S. and Canada without any discriminations.

5. Reinstate all members at large and allow them to join those branches of their desire.

6. To reinstate all expelled members of branch 24 and Jacob Levin Branch 306.

7. All groups and members that were separated from their branches by force be allowed to come back.

8. All tendencies existing from the right to the extremely left be tolerated within the W. C. provided they recognize the class struggle and are for the abolition of private property.

New York to Seize Funds of Insurance Companies of Czs

NEW YORK, Nov. 8.—Attorney General Ottinger has filed a claim with the superintendent of insurance to have surplus funds of five liquidated Russian insurance companies surrendered to the state of New York. The companies are the N. E. C. of the Czar's realms and eight of the state holders came to Seattle as they fled Russia.

Ottinger claims that according to Russian and Baltic common law [illegible] and funds cannot be found the funds become property of the state. Ottinger says Ottinger, "the companies represent a wealth to the people of the state." Three million dollars is involved.

The companies are: [illegible] Russian Insurance company, [illegible] Insurance company, Moscow Fire Insurance Society, Second Russian Insurance Company, Northern [illegible] Moscow.

STRIKE STRATEGY

By WILLIAM Z. FOSTER

ARTICLE X.

PRELIMINARY ORGANIZATION

An important question of strike strategy is that relating to the matter of preliminary organization of the workers in the now unorganized industries before the precipitation of strikes. This raises the problems of how far we can depend upon the spontaneity of the workers and how far we can and must stimulate and organize them before they can go effectively into action against the employers.

Less and less can the strike strategist depend upon the spontaneity of the masses to bring them into revolt against their exploiters, more and more he has to figure on substantial preliminary organization, conceived planfully and carried through almost like a military strategy. Within the past 15 years American employers have become very able and skillful in checking spontaneous mass revolts amongst their workers. To this end they have developed a whole arsenal of means which may be summed up under the general concessions of duplicity, and terrorism.

Today the powerful employers, when they see a threatening discontent among their workers, which manifests itself by a spreading spontaneous strike or an active organising campaign, commonly seek to check the agitation by granting concessions to their workers in wage increases, welfare systems, etc. This they are able to do because of the enormous super-profits of imperialism which they are employers were financially unable to bribe such movements into stillness and they usually developed into big struggles.

How Employers Fight Strikes

The way the Steel Trust combatted the big campaign of 1918-19 was typical of the new tendency. This gigantic corporation, seeing that the organizing work was succeeding, granted four large increases in wages and the basic 8-hour day to its workers in the course of the campaign in order to block it. The "independents" followed suit. This materially made the work of organizing incomparably more difficult. The spontaneity of the workers was weakened.

When the strike came it followed closely the lines where intense organization work had been done. In those mills, such as the Duluth plant of the U. S. Steel and the Aliquipa plant of the Jones & Laughlin Co., where it had been impossible to carry on any agitation or organization, no strike whatever took place in spite of the gigantic character of the national movement.

Duplicity and terrorism. In the old days when an employer proceeded to cut labor costs radically he did it openly and brusquely, usually in the form of a sweeping wage cut to go into effect on a certain date. Result, always a universal protest and indignation on the part of the workers and often a bitter strike. But now the employers cut their labor costs in much more and subtle ways. Often they accomplish the same ends as a wage cut by speeding up their workers, which is easy for them to do in present-day industry. And where they actually do put a money wage cut into effect they commonly do it piecemeal, instead of sweepingly as before. They cut department after department, spreading the wage cutting campaign over months. Or else they discharge a steady stream of workers and then

Such methods dissolve the opposition of the workers. They prevent the sudden outbursts of discontent and the rapid intensification of working class solidarity that used to be caused by the sweeping wage cuts of pre-war times. And in addition to these methods of duplicity and concessions the employers carry on a stark terrorism against all workers who dare to make a protest, discharging and blacklisting them in a way unknown in previous times.

Using All Advantages

This policy of concessions, duplicity, and terrorism, coupled with the fact that the industries in general have been active for the past few years and have provided at least a medium of work for the workers, weakens the factor of spontaneity. Determined, organized effort becomes increasingly more necessary, altho an occasional spontaneous strike still occurs. Hence our strike strategy must contemplate the carrying on of militant and aggressive organizing campaigns, carefully planned and skillfully executed.

In my pamphlet "Organize the Unorganized" I have described in detail the manner of conducting these campaigns by "open" methods in those industries where it is possible for the unions to function publicly; and in "closed" industries (by utilization of workers' clubs, shop committees, Workers Party shop nuclei, company unions, etc.) where the militant "open shop" attitude of the employers prohibits preliminary open union organization.

Advantage must be taken of the company unions. The employers have established these organizations to increase the workers' efficiency and to check the growth of class consciousness and trade unionism among them. Nevertheless the workers' impulse to organize and struggle often must be to stimulate these trade unions to participating the demands of the workers in the company union committees by putting up in the company union elections lists of candidates who are committed to the formation of trade unions, etc.

Our ultimate aim must be to set movements on foot both inside and outside of the company unions, which will shatter these organizations and result in the establishment of trade unions. A skilled leadership will often be able to utilize the company unions for the launching of effective strikes.

How Much Organization

The question of how to secure preliminary organization of the workers in the great unorganized industries and to determine just how much organization is necessary in a given situation before the strike should begin constitutes one of the real problems of strike strategy.

In impending strikes of unorganized workers, conservative labor leaders habitually overestimate the importance of organization and underestimate the spontaneity of the workers. They smother the fighting spirit of the workers by a dry-as-dust campaign for excessive organization. On the other hand, a common tendency of left wing leaders is to underestimate the necessity for a certain degree of preliminary organization and to depend too much upon the spontaneity of the workers. The result is abortive strikes. The history of the L. W. W. is full of such mistakes.

Our problem is to know just how to combine the two—spontaneity and organization; to learn to strike the blow when the workers' spirits are at their highest and when they have enough organization to at least mobilize them into the strike.

Workers (Communist) Party

PITTSBURGH DISTRICT PUTS INTO MOTION PLAN FOR RECRUITING OF NEW MEMBERS AND MORE ACTIVITY

By ABRAM JAKIRA.

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Nov. 8.—The Workers (Communist) Party is at present, as admitted even by its enemies, the only militant, live working class organization in the country. It is the motive power that pushes the entire labor movement of this country into action, that directs the labor movement along progressive lines. It has a large number of sympathizers without the country as evidenced, for example, by the number of workers who read its press and by its influence in the numerous trade unions and other workers' organizations. Yet the membership of the party is limited. In fact, in proportion to its influence in the labor movement and to the work it generally plays in this country, the party membership must be considered abnormally low.

One can easily find an explanation for this condition in the objective economic and political situation in this country. But we must not close our eyes to the fact that we ourselves are to a large extent responsible for the small membership of the party. Communists are like busy bees engaged for in and year out in various combinations of a political nature and taking active part in various labor organizations. This applies to both the leading party committees and to the rank and file.

Busy in Other Fields.

The result is that we fail to pay sufficient attention to the organizational side of the party work, fail to utilize the various favorable situations for bringing the party membership and to pay sufficient attention to the numerous workers who are in agreement with the Communist movement in order to take them in as members.

Pittsburgh Makes Plans.

The party in Pittsburgh has realized this fact and decided to immediately take steps to remedy the situation. A special small organization committee was appointed, which meets regularly and quite frequently to consider nothing but problems dealing with activization of the party units and with recruiting of new members.

Conference Held.

For the purpose of considering these problems a city conference was held in Pittsburgh, at which delegates of every nucleus of the city were present and which took up a number of problems dealing with organization, agitprop and trade union work. After a detailed analysis of the results of the party reorganization the conference adopted a number of motions which could help to place each and every nucleus on a functioning basis. These motions follow:

Motions Passed.

1. That special meetings of the nuclei be called where the election of officers and committees shall take place and where the new form of organization shall be explained by a representative of the district organization committee.

2. Each department head and functionary of the nuclei shall be requested to submit a report of activities at each nucleus meeting.

3. Minutes of all nuclei meetings be submitted to the district office.

4. An organization campaign for new members and for getting back the old members be started in cooperation with the district organization committee and that a communication be sent to all nuclei explaining how to proceed with this organization campaign.

5. Each nucleus is to take steps to establish more discipline and order in the organization.

6. That at the special meetings which will be called a new registration of membership be taken in all units.

7. That city conferences be held regularly at least once each three months and that functionaries of the nuclei be invited to attend the conferences in addition to the regularly elected delegates.

Work in Unions.

Considerable time was devoted by the conference to the trade union work which is so closely linked up with the success of all the party activities. The nuclei stand instructed to take a roll call at their meetings with a view of getting the nonunion members into unions. The district trade union committee is preparing detailed instruction on how one can join the union and on work of the trade union fractions.

Agitprop Development.

Several important measures are to be taken by the Agitprop department which would help to improve the organization machinery for the agitprop work and for providing training for both the old and the new party members. These decisions are:

1. That in the immediate future steps be taken to establish a live Agitprop committee in every unit.

2 That a committee be set up to arrange the affairs and meetings, the committee to consist of one delegate from every unit in Pittsburgh. The committee to elect its own secretary.

3. All party members must assist in the building of a live Daily Worker Builders Club, same to draw in as many non-party members as possible.

4. Development of the class line in real Workers school. Attendance at the class on the part of comrades selected to be made compulsory.

5. Agitprop department to work out a program for discussion in the nuclei on the important questions of the day.

6 Special organization course of 3 lectures to be given by D. G.

7. Special training for new members entering the party. Course of 3 lectures to be given.

The conference turned a new leaf in the history of the party in this city and every party member is called upon to co-operate with the organization department in putting the decisions of the conference into effect.

POLITICAL DEBATE BECOMES COMEDY IN NEW YORK AS COMMUNIST GIVES WORKERS FACTS ON OTHER PARTIES

NEW YORK, Nov. 8. — The fur-cornered debate arranged for the night before election in Hopkinson Mansion, Brooklyn, between the republican, democratic, socialist and Workers Party candidates for the Brownsville district proved to be an uproarious farce comedy in which the audience changed from one-third Communist to 98 per cent Communist before the debate was over. Judging from the early applause and the final response in a request to show their colors by raising their hands, Senator Hastings represented the democratic cause; Mr. Mandel, a republican attorney, the republican cause; Shiplakoff, the socialist candidate, failed to put in an appearance, and Bert Wolfe, the Workers' Party candidate for congress in the 10th district, defended the Communist point of view.

Wolfe Speaks First.

The Communist speaker was the first to take the platform and painted a picture of our present government with a strikebreaker as president, a crooked banker as vice-president, a multi-millionaire looting the treasury department in his care and a governmental machinery in which the courts, the army and the police were used to smash strikes and destroy the workers' organizations. Up to this point, the democratic party representatives present, and conspicuous by their big election worker badges, applauded along with the rest of the audience because the whole attack was on the republican administration. But when Wolfe pointed out that while both old parties might be as black as Wolfe had painted them, yet there were some good men in them, and among these good men was himself, Senator Hastings and Al Smith. He also attempted to discuss the differences between evolution and revolution and invited the workers present to come in mass into the ranks of the democratic party and capture it for peaceful evolution towards a new social order. But by this time the audience was in no mood to listen to him, and the evening ended with a prolonged demonstration for the Workers (Communist) Party. For The DAILY WORKER, for the Program for Gitlow and for Wolfe.

The meeting was held under the auspices of the Non Partisan Workers' Club, one of the many working class organizations affiliated with the Brownsville Workers' Center which meets at 61 Liberty avenue, Brooklyn.

Comedy Begins.

Then the comedy element of the evening began. Mr. Mandel, republican speaker, declared: "These things that Mr. Wolfe has been telling you, I do not know whether they are true or not. I do not know anything about such things. I only know that Mr. Rubin is a good man and loves the people, and whether you like it or not, I ask you to vote for Mr. Rubin. If you cannot find it in your heart to vote for Mr Rubin, then please vote for Mr Shiplakoff." By this time the audience was in an uproar. Mr Mandel went from one stupidity to another until the walls of the jammed hall rocked with the laughter of the audience.

" Democrat is Wiser.

The democratic candidate, Senator Hastings, was a little less stupid and put up a good fighting argument as to Al Smith having pardoned Gitlow and restored civil liberty to the state of New York (he discreetly forgot the injunctions and wholesale arrests) and he argued that while both old parties might be as black as Wolfe had painted them, yet there were some good men in them, and among these good men was himself. Senator Hastings and Al Smith. He also attempted to discuss the differences between evolution and revolution and invited the workers present to come in mass into the ranks of the democratic party and capture it for peaceful evolution towards a new social order. But by this time the audience was in no mood to listen to him, and the evening ended with a prolonged demonstration for the Workers (Communist) Party, for The DAILY WORKER, for the Program for Gitlow and for Wolfe.

The meeting was held under the auspices of the Non Partisan Workers' Club, one of the many working class organizations affiliated with the Brownsville Workers' Center which meets at 61 Liberty avenue, Brooklyn.

New York Workers Demand New Trial for Sacco, Vanzetti

sured this matter is to have my careful consideration

"Very truly yours,
"Alvan T. Fuller.

"P. S. I shall be back in Boston about Dec. 20."

The reply was written in his own hand by the governor, answering the plea of the labor editors that he "take such steps as are within your power to remove Judge Thayer from the Sacco-Vanzetti case and from the judiciary establishment—the bench—of Massachusetts." Gov. Fuller was also asked "to use the powers of your high office to secure an impersonal and judicial consideration of all the evidence, old and new, in this case," thru an investigating commission of experts as suggested by a conservative Boston newspaper, if there be no other recourse.

Thayer Attacked.

Judge Thayer's denial of the last new trial motion made for Sacco and Vanzetti, Italian workers convicted of murder on trumped up evidence, was attacked in the letter to Fuller. The labor editors—about 30 signing, including those of several international union organs—say that they consider Thayer's decision "especial pleading and nervous self-justification" and "of a piece with his previous conduct of this case."

The judge is scored for his heligerent attitude toward defense attorneys, the present one William G. Thompson and the first one, Fred H. Moore, who built up the case. Governor Fuller is asked to remove Thayer as a "menace and danger" to other workers, especially if foreigners and holding opinions disagreeable to Thayer, who may be brought before him.

American Federation of Labor and the Massachusetts State Fodaration of Labor resolutions for Sacco and Vanzetti are recalled to Fuller by the labor editors.

Judge Thayer Has "Nothing to Say."

WORCESTER, Mass., Nov. 8. — Judge Webster Thayer, who, by his decision against a new trial for Nicola Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti, showed that he was willing to pronounce sentence of death on these workers had "nothing to say" when told of the letter New York labor paper editors had given Gov. Fuller calling for Thayers' removal from the bench. Judge Thayer's opinions in the Sacco-Vanzetti case have been severely attacked, particularly the last one. All his decisions have been verbose and contentious, showing strong personal feelings against the defense.

Magnus Johnson Says the Struggle Must Be Continued

and are prepared for it. We will not lie down. We will carry on. We are in the movement to educate, build and ultimately win. Our purpose is to redeem Minnesota for the people.

"We don't say we are a third party. We have been the second party in Minnesota from the beginning. We are morally certain the great mass of the people will swing into our fold when they understand better the principles of our party and what we are trying to do for the people. Between now and the next election we shall carry our message to them. We shall begin at once to organize in every county in the state. We shall aim to establish public confidence in the things we stand for.

Sees Need for Party.

"There will be need for a farmer-labor party so long as the farmers, wage earners and small business men have economic-political questions to solve. Experience has shown that they can get no relief from either of the old parties.

"The bankers and merchants in the small towns and villages of the state, who are suffering great business losses from the unfortunate condition of the farmers, must sooner or later learn that hope for their future success and prosperity is in the farmer-labor party. Time will remove the prejudices that have been built up around our movement and when that is done and the truth prevails, we expect to triumph over all our enemies.

Can Abide Time.

"We can afford to abide our time. We appeal to all men and women who have common cause with us to remain firm in their devotion to the farmer-labor party and its principles. We urge them to begin now to prepare for the next election. We ask them to join with us in building up a strong and militant organization everywhere thruout the state.

"Speaking for myself, let me say I have no political ambitions. I am grateful to the voters of Minnesota for what they have done for me, and to show my appreciation I shall be content to work with the rank and file to aid in completing the great work we have begun under such trying auspices."

A NEW NOVEL
By Upton Sinclair
(Copyright, 1926, by Upton Sinclair)

VI

You remember in that colossal production, "The Emperor of Etruria," the Scythian slave girl who is brought in from the wilds to serve the pleasures of a pampered sybarite and the scene where the fat eunuchs lay hands upon her? With what splendid fury she claws them and knucks their heads together! Her clothing is torn to shreds in the struggle, and you have glimpses of a lithe sinewy body—the extent of the glimpses depending upon the censorship laws of the state in which you see the picture. The scene made a hit with the public, and many producers competed for Viola Tracy's presence. If Vee-old, please, with the accent on the first syllable. She displayed her magnificent fighting qualities next in "The Virgin Vamp," and thereafter escaped dishonor by a hair's breadth in many palpitating scenes. Of late she had acquired dignity, and was now regal on all the bill-boards of Angel City in "The Bride of Tulankhamen," an alluring figure, with deep-set mysterious black eyes and a smile fathomless as four thousand years of history.

Well, here she was, stepping out of the billboards and into the refectory of the monastery; her Egyptian costume changed for a daring one of black velvet, fresh from Paris, and with black pearls to match. The footman drew out her chair, and she rested one hand upon it, but did not take her seat, her hostess said. "Miss Tracy, Mr. Ross"—and still she paused, smiling at Bunny, and he smiling at her. It was a striking pose, and Tommy Paley, her director, who had taught her the stunt and watched it now from the other end of the table, suddenly called "shoot!" Everybody laughed, and "Vee" most gaily of all, revealing two rows of white pearls, more regular than the black ones, and worth many times as much to a movie star.

Annabelle Ames got along in the world without ever saying anything unkind about anybody, but that was not "Vee" Tracy's style; she had a fighting tongue, as well as fighting fists, and her conversation gave Bunny the shock of his innocent young life. They happened first to be discussing a lady vamp recently imported from abroad with much clashing of advertising cymbals, "She dresses in very good taste," said Annabelle mildly, "Oh, perfect!" said Vee. "Absolutely perfect! She selected her dog to match her face!" And then presently they were talking about that million dollar production, "The Old Oaken Bucket," which was just then waking home memories and wringing tears from the eyes of millions of hardened sinners. Holly Deane, who played the innocent country maiden seduced by a travelling salesman, was so charmingly simple, said Annabelle. "Oh, yes!" replied Vee. "For the chance to be that simple, she slept with her producers, and two angels and the director and a scenario and all five of them told her how an innocent virgin says her prayers!"

Bunny, who was a rebel in his own line sat up and took notice of this conversation; and you may be sure that Vee did not fail to take notice of the young oil prince flashing him mischief with her sparkling black eyes. The footmen brought her a plate of soup in a golden bowl, and she took one glance and cried, "Oh, my Dad, take it away, it's got starch in it!" Annabelle, are you trying to drive me out of the profession?" Then to Bunny, "They say that nobody can eat a spud a day for thirty days; but Mr. Ross, what would you say of I told you I have eaten two lamb chops and three slices of pineapple every day for seven years?"

"I would ask, is that an Egyptian rite or maybe Scythian?"

"It is the prescription of a Hollywood doctor who specializes in reducing actresses. We public idols are supposed to be rioting in luxury, but really we have only one dream: to buy enough Hollywood real estate so that we can retire and eat a square meal."

"Don't you really ever steal one?" asked Bunny, sympathetically.

She answered, "Ours are the kind of figures that never lie. You can ask Tommy Paley what would happen if they were to see any fat on me when the gentleman heavy tears my clothes off. They would put me into the comics, and I'd earn my living being rolled down hill in a barrel!"

VII

Conversation at this dinner-party, as at most dinner-parties in America at that time, resembled a walk along the edge of a slippery ditch. Sooner or later you were bound to slip in and after that you could not get out, but finished your walk in the ditch. "Mr. Ross," said Annabelle, in her capacity as hostess, "I notice you aren't drinking your wine. You can trust what we have — it's all pre-war stuff." And so they were in the ditch, and talking about Prohibition.

The law was two years and a half old, and the boot-leggers were just realizing the full extent of the indignity which had been inflicted upon them. It wasn't the high prices. They were all of them seeking ways to spend money rapidly; but it was inconvenience, and the difficulties of being sure what you were getting. People escaped the trouble by joining clubs to fight to some particular bootlegger; Bunny noticed it as an outside but universal phenomenon that persons otherwise the most cynical, who made it the rule of their lives to trust nobody, would repeat the wildest stories which men of the underworld had told them, about how this particular "case of Scotch" had just been smuggled in from Mexico, or maybe stolen from the personal stock of a visiting duke in Canada.

KEEP THE DAILY WORKER!

THE history of the DAILY WORKER is such as should convince every one of its readers of the importance of such a paper. In spite of all the financial difficulties of the past, the DAILY WORKER has stood in the forefront of the class struggle, fighting for the interests of the workers against their masters.

The capitalist class would be only too glad to see the end of the DAILY WORKER. The readers of the DAILY WORKER are called upon to give everything they can and encourage their fellowworkers to do likewise.

In the trade unions it is the DAILY WORKER that is holding high the banner of solidarity and educating the membership to a militant fighting spirit for the purpose of developing the American trade unions into fighting organizations against the capitalist class. Therefore, comrades, it is necessary that we take up the slogan KEEP THE DAILY WORKER in our trade unions, work out ways and means whereby we can get the members in the union interested and convince them to KEEP THE DAILY WORKER.

Also in the campaign for a labor party, it is the DAILY WORKER more than anything else that is our organizer and which educates the workers and farmers for independent political action, and finally for a workers' and farmers' government.

Comrades, let's ask every worker and farmer with whom we come in contact, whether organized or unorganized, to help us along in this campaign for the fifty thousand dollar KEEP THE DAILY WORKER fund.

Again, it is the DAILY WORKER, our organizer, our educator, that so militantly assists the foreign-born worker in the fight against capitalist exploitation. Here too, we have all who reason in the world to go before these foreign-speaking workers and their organizations and ask them to help us along in our KEEP THE DAILY WORKER campaign.

The DAILY WORKER is the only revolutionary English daily in America. The campaign to raise fifty thousand dollars will insure the revolutionary working class movement its daily fighting organ to voice its program of class struggle. Comrades let us make this campaign a real one now which will insure the DAILY WORKER for a long time to come.

JEWELRY BOSSES ENDEAVORING TO BREAK UNION

Eleven Shops Settle with the Union

NEW YORK, Nov. 8.—The Novelty Jewelry Employers Association is endeavoring to break the union and drive the small manufacturers out of business by prolonging the present strike, according to Anthony Capraro, manager of Local 17 which has been conducting a strike for union recognition since October 25th.

Small Fellows Doomed.

"This association is not being built to serve the interests of the industry," Capraro declares. "The leaders of the association know that the small fellows cannot last long. If they can prolong the strike three or four weeks more, they think they can break both the small manufacturers and the union. By that time all of the trade will have gone to the big shops and the little fellows will be left out in the cold.

"Mr. Fishel, of Fishel Nessler Company, 184 Fifth avenue, is one of the moving spirits in the association. He has been paying the initiation fees for small manufacturers who have joined and has advanced them money to carry on. He has not told them, however, that his real intention is to double-cross them.

Changing Tactics.

"We have learned that Mr. Fishel is changing his tactics. Last Monday when his workers went to get their back pay, they were told that if they did not return to work they must come and take their tools away. When one worker went after his tools to take them and get a job in one of the settled shops, Fishel said to him: 'Well, leave them here a few days more.' He is evidently not so sure that he has the situation in hand. He sees that the union means business and he is weakening."

Eleven Shops Settle.

The union announces that H. Munger, Inc., 32 West 33rd street, has settled with the union, making a total of 11 shops settled in ten days. In addition, H. Smith, 34 West 36th St., has just broken away from the association, the union having pulled out his most skilled mechanic on Wednesday.

The employers have been hiring thugs to intimidate and beat up pickets and the police department has rendered assistance in the same work, but the union has continued its daily picketing and has the situation well in hand.

AVELLA MINERS CHEER BROPHY AT BIG MEETING; HISS LEWIS POLICY

By PHILIP DI GIANBITTISTI.

AVELLA, Pa., Nov. 8.—A big Brophy victory was won in Avella, Pa., by Powers Hapgood of District No. 2, U. M. W. of A.

During the time since John Brophy, president of District No. 2, U. M. W. of A., came out with his open letter for the "Save the Union Policy," the Avella locals, which consist of about 2,500 members, having strolled Brophy's "Save the Union Policy," wanted to hear more because it sounded good to them. They concluded that here was a man who was going to show the miners the right road. An invitation was extended to Powers Hapgood and also to P. T. Fagan, president of District No. 5, U. M. W. of A. to address the Avella miners.

Fagan's Opposition.

The meeting was called to order and a chairman was elected. Fred Siders, president of Local Union 2881, U. M. W. of A., of Avella, Pa., running against Fagan for the president of District No. 5, U. M. W. of A., and who stands 100 per cent for the "Save the Union Policy," was elected chairman of the meeting. Introducing Powers Hapgood as the first speaker, he also stated that Pat Fagan had been invited to speak in order to give him a chance to defend the Lewis policy.

At this moment Fagan arose to his feet waving a telegram and yelling that he had only received the invitation the day before and did not know know he was to debate with Powers Hapgood, and that he did not know that Hapgood would be there. Fagan read the telegram twice and tried to prove that he was the only speaker invited. At this moment a point of order was raised, and after the chairman asked what the point of order was, the delegate stating that his point of order was that Powers Hapgood had been invited first and should have the floor first. The point of order was well taken and Hapgood took the floor.

Hapgood explained that he had come to Avella with no malice and that he was fighting policy and not personality. Hapgood pointed out the necessity of organizing and showed where we had lost 200,000 of our membership in the last few years, and that we had lost whole districts that were organized 100 per cent before, and all because our leaders do not show the people why it is necessary that we should have a 100 per cent organization. The speaker pointed out that the miners wanted a godi to look forward to, and that goal could only be reached by nationalization.

Labor Party Question.

Hapgood took up the question of a labor party, stating that our present leader, John L. Lewis, was supposed to be fighting for a labor party, he helped put Straubreaker Hardiger in office. Hapgood mentioned many other points which would take up too much time and paper, but nevertheless the meeting was cheering for Brophy at the end of his talk.

Fagan Takes Floor.

The chairman introduced P. T. Fagan, president District No. 5, U. M. W. of A. Fagan, on taking the floor, sarcastically referred to my good friend Hapgood, "a graduate from college," coming away over here from District No. 2, U. M. W. of A., to talk on organization and nationalization. He asked Hapgood which college he graduated from and Hapgood told him Yale. Then Fagan yelled that he (Fagan) got his education in the coal mines, but he did not state whether in union or scab mines. Fagan then went back to his weak point by saying "I am your president, I have been fighting night and day for you brothers. There is not a moment that I am not thinking of some way to better the conditions of your district, and our great leader, John L. Lewis, has been doing the same."

At this moment there was an uproar in the hall—the men were hissing Fagan, calling him liar and faschist, friend of Benito Mussolini, and some of them left the hall. Fagan tried to talk on, but could get no order. At last a little order was gotten, after Fagan stopped talking, and someone proposed that the chairman appoint a sergeant at arms to keep order, the motion carried by the majority and the chairman appointed Philip Di Gianbattista, Frank Marino and Martin Kavelch in he sergeants at arms, with instructions that in case anyone became unruly they were to put him out.

Fagan started his talk again by saying he guessed that the story would be in The DAILY WORKER about the chairman having to give him protection so he could present his side of the present policy of the U. M. W. of A.

Hapgood took the floor again to reply to Fagan's attack on his college training, "I want to say that I worked in the mines before I got my education, and I am working in the mine now after I have gotten it," said Hapgood. "My education is at the service of the workers. I am not like some of our brothers, who gained their education thru the U. M. W. of A. and then used it against the workers." Hapgood told about his trip to Russia and stated that our present leaders were against a delegation in the Soviet Union to find out the true facts about the Soviet government.

After some more questions and answers, the meeting adjourned.

A collection was taken to pay Hapgood's expenses.

WORKERS WILL FIGHT FOR NEW TRIAL—FLYNN

Sacco and Vanzetti Are Guiltless

NEW YORK, Nov. 8.—Announcing a giant mass meeting of protest for Sacco and Vanzetti, Elizabeth Gurley Flynn, secretary of the emargency committee which is arranging the meeting, said:

"We never expected anything but a denial of a new trial from Judge Thayer, whose prejudice has been apparent for five years. We know that anyone who had conducted such a trial as he did when Sacco and Vanzetti were convicted would never consider that anything warranted a retrial.

"But workers all over the world stand united in their determination that these two persecuted workers shall have a new trial. The recently published evidence shows, without a doubt, that they are innocent.

Will Fight.

"We will fight with all our power against any possible attempt of the State of Massachusetts to salve its conscience by commuting the sentence of Sacco and Vanzetti to life imprisonment. They must be freed. They are guiltless of the crime for which they were convicted, and we are certain they would be acquitted by a new jury not under the influence of anti-red hysteria.

"Sacco and Vanzetti must have a new trial."

Scott Nearing Gives Economics Lectures in Los Angeles Soon

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 8.—Scott Nearing is giving two courses of lectures of great interest to the workers. His subjects will be "Whither Europe?" and "Post-War Economics." The series will be given during the week of Nov. 22 at the Lincoln Hall Theater Auditorium, 726 South Grand avenue.

Nearing will give lectures in the evening on the first subject and in the afternoon on the second. Course tickets for the evening are $2 and for the afternoon $1.

The lectures are given under the auspices of the American Civil Liberties Union, southern California branch.

Another 'Forward' Bluff Is Called

The Jewish Daily Forward, in its issue of October 4th, carried a scurrilous attack on the activities of International Labor Defense, a non-partisan workers' organization formed for the defense of all victims of the class war. The Forward charged that I. L. D. used funds it had collected for propaganda purposes, campaigns and speaking tours instead of spending its entire proceeds for the relief of class-war prisoners. The Forward was not interested enough in the organization to look into the mandates given by two annual conventions of the members of I. L. D. to carry on campaigns and propaganda work for the defense and release of class-war prisoners both at home and abroad. The Forward was interested in the financial statement of International Labor Defense only for the purpose of fixing the basis for an attack upon the activity of a genuine working class organization with which the yellow socialist adltors of the Forward have time and again found themselves out of sympathy with. The Forward charged "Communist control" of I. L. D. and that the I. L. D. campaigns were in the interests of purely Communist propaganda. Below is a letter written by three individuals well-known to the labor movement who are not Communists and are members and supporters of International Labor Defense. Elizabeth Gurley Flynn, chairman of I. L. D., Robert W. Dunn, well-known labor author and investigator and A. W. L. Dana, for years prominent in worker education, have sent the following letter to the Forward with regard to its attack on I. L. D.

Editors
Jewish Daily Forward,
175 East Broadway,
New York City.
Dear Sirs:

WE note that in your issue of October 4th, you severely criticise the International Labor Defense at which occasion the undersigned are members of the national committee, hasing your attack on the financial statement for the first fiscal year ended June 30, 1926.

YOU point out that the International Labor Defense collected $50,672.63 during that period, and after expenditures for publicity, organization and administrative expenses ("expenses in connection with collecting the money" as you interpret it) there was left for the political prisoners $22,120.50. From which statement you conclude "In other words, out of every dollar the Communists collected to help political prisoners, they squandered on salaries for their people, on trips, and on other aimless expenses, more than 55 cents."

As persons who went on some of these trips and shared in some of these "aimless expenses" particularly in connection with the mass meetings and conferences held on behalf of Sacco and Vanzetti, we feel compelled to call the attention of the Forward to certain errors in your bookkeeping reasoning. Suppose you apply the same test to another well known defense and free speech organization, the American Civil Liberties Union, with which we are also connected, what would you find upon examination of the receipts and expenditures for the fiscal year ending January 31, 1926? Possibly the Forward is not as critical of Liberals as it appears to be of "Communists." But your analysis of the balance sheet of the A. C. L. U. would have to run as follows:

THE following is the substance of the receipts and disbursements of the Liberal organization

|---|---|
| Collected | $34,106.44 |
| Expenses in connection with collecting the money | 15,769.18 |
| Amount left for political prisoners | 15,337.26 |

"In other words out of every dollar the Liberals collected to help the political prisoners, they squandered on salaries for their people, on trips, and on other aimless expenses, more than 53 cents".

Now it is sufficient that the public knows that when a Liberal collects a dollar to help an unfortunate political prisoner, only 47 cents reaches him, and the rest remains in the Liberal's pocket."

WE are not suggesting that the Forward engage in any such attack on the American Civil Liberties Union, of which we are active members. Mr. Fred Marvin of the New York Commercial and other superpatriotic papers have radicals, communists, liberals and other subversive movements and movers, (including no doubt the Daily Forward!) can tend to that. But we do consider such an attack no more and no less justifiable than the attack you are now directing at the International Labor Defense. Indeed, the Forward might find even more alarming facts in the report of the American Civil Liberties Union. For with a total gross income of $34,106.44 (including $2,000.02 from the American Fund for Public Service for special cases) it expended for executive and office salaries $10,648.61 while the International Labor Defense spent only $12,231.61 for the same item. Again, the A. C. L. U. had office rent and care for the year amounting to $1,714.46 while the I. L. D. raising larger amounts of money, had only $1,664.81 for expenditure for the same item. This, in our opinion, is no reflection on the A. C. L. U. but it certainly lays this organization open to the same type of "charges" you have launched against the I. L. D.

Certain facts, perhaps will clear up the essential aim and purpose of the I. L. D. as well as its relation to the A. C. L. U.

1. NEITHER organization is a relief organization devoted primarily to raising money for the care of the families of political prisoners or the prisoners. The I. L. D. has, however, devoted a considerable portion of its funds to this task—some $6,000 last year, a very creditable showing indeed. It was administered on a non-partisan basis to all prisoners, regardless of their political views. But the main item of the defense work of I. L. D. is agitation for the release of class war prisoners, publicity, speaking trips, organization of branches, are a necessary and legitimate part of its activity and its expenditures, especially during the first year of its existence.

2. THE publicity work of the I. L. D. has been a very important item particularly in connection with the Sacco and Vanzetti case. Thousands of the Debs' appeal were distributed. Hundreds of posters placed in labor halls, Hundreds of petitions were circulated, resolutions and telegrams sent to Massachusetts, etc.

3. THE relations between the I. L. D. and the A. C. L. U. are entirely harmonious. The two organizations co-operate on many cases. They have worked side by side as in the fields in which each can serve best. Many persons serve on both organizations.

4. THE agitation work of the I. L. D. deals not only with class war cases in this country but in many foreign countries as in Hungary, Roumania and Poland. The work done in this field has been expensive but fruitful. It has helped to save the lives of many workers abroad.

5. THE main purposes of the I. L. D. is well described in the language of Secretary Cannon writing on the Second Annual Conference in the October "Labor Defender":

"We must not get the idea that we are merely 'defense workers' collecting money for lawyers. That is only a part of what we are doing. We are organizing workers on issues which are directly related to the class struggle. The workers who take part in the work of the I. L. D. are drawn on a step into the main stream of the class struggle."

THE International Labor Defense is a non-partisan, non-political body for the defense of workingclass victims of capitalist injustice and frame-up. It is made up of workers of all shades of political opinion. Its National Committee includes trades unionists, Socialists, Communists, I. W. W.'s and non-party women of no affiliation, the majority of whom are non-Communists. One of the signers of this letter is now the National Chairman of the I. L. D. It concerns itself with all workers arrested because of their activity on behalf of the workingclass. It handles individual cases as well as group cases, such as Passaic.

THE need of such an organization is self-evident and will increase with the militancy of the class struggle in America. We feel that you have done a great injustice to an efficient organization carrying on an essential work in a splendid manner for the cause of labor and ask you therefore to print this letter in full.

Sincerely yours,
H. W. L. Dana.

Pullman Company Is Attempting to Force Unionists to Ballot

NEW YORK, Nov. 8.—Protests are voiced by members of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters that they are being forced to vote in the company union elections by threats and attempts to withhold their pay checks. The brotherhood plans an official protest. Its counsel, Donald Richberg, advises the porters' union that its members are "justified legally as well as morally" in refusing to vote in the Pullman Co. "employe representation plan."

The brotherhood claims over 6,000 of the 10,000 porters in its ranks and is appealing to the rail mediation board set up by the Watson-Parker act for recognition in place of the company union and for aid in securing a conference with Pullman Co. officials toward a new wage and working condition agreement.

Congress Won't Give States Power to Set Dry Standard—Lenroot

WASHINGTON, Nov. 8.—Congress will never delegate to the states the right to define the alcoholic content of beverages, as proposed by the prohibition referendums overwhelmingly approved in New York and Illinois, Senator Lenroot, of Wisconsin, declared today.

"Congress itself has the right, if it desires, to raise the alcoholic content to 2.75 per cent, but I am sure it never would pass that power over to the states," he said.

LEGAL RED-TAPE IS REFUGE FOR TEAPOT DOMERS

Stave Off Justice by Court "Appeals"

WASHINGTON, Nov. 8.—After a week of skirmishing by lawyers, the end of the famous oil scandal cases appeared today to be far off.

The intention of the principals to fight virtually every move of the government to the last technical refuge in the supreme court was indicated by their legal maneuvers.

Harry F. Sinclair, millionaire oil magnate, who was indicted with Former Secretary of the Interior Albert B. Fall on charges of conspiring to defraud the government in the Teapot Dome deal, has taken the second of three cases involving him to the supreme court.

Squirm Out.

Despite the fact that Fall and Edward B. Doheny, head of the Pan-American Petroleum Company, are scheduled to face trial in the criminal court here on November 22 on another conspiracy charge growing out of the Elk Hills reserve lease, there also was a possibility that this case will be delayed by a new move.

Attorneys for Fall may seek delay thru a challenge to the authority of congress to name special prosecutors.

Civil Cases Now Up.

The supreme court now has before it a civil suit involving the legality of Doheny's lease on the Elk Hills reserve. A similar suit to cancel the lease of Harry F. Sinclair's Mammoth Oil Company on Teapot Dome has just reached the high court on a petition for review.

Another case which the oil magnate is fighting is a citation for contempt in refusing to answer questions of a senate committee. This case has been virtually in suspension for many months awaiting a high court ruling in the Mal S. Daugherty case.

The civil suits have already run the gauntlet of the federal district courts and circuit courts of appeals.

Trouble Ahead for Coolidge

From now on we can expect troubles to pile up thick and fast for the Coolidge administration. The threats of Senator Borah in connection with the seating of Vare from Pennsylvania and Smith from Illinois constitute in reality an announcement of intention of Borah to begin his campaign for the presidential nomination in 1928.

And he has plenty of issues.

The denial of the right of transit across American territory to Alexandra Kollontai, Soviet Union ambassador to Mexico, by Secretary of State Kellogg, has not been taken with good grace by large sections of the American press and in his pose of the defender of the principles of capitalist democracy, Senator Borah has been able to strike a responsive chord among millions of people who are weary of the grotesque caperings of the Coolidge official household.

An officialdom which not only allows a royal debauchee like the Rumanian queen to enter the country but goes to unheard of lengths to extend a welcome to her, and then bars the representative of a workers' and peasants' government on an official mission to a friendly nation, while at the same time condoning the most outrageous and flagrant violations of the capitalist moral code in the elections, cannot appeal successfully forever to prejudices which it has fostered carefully, but which the iron march of history are liquidating.

The Coolidge myth is being wiped out. Not so much by Borah but by a constant succession of stupidities which have brought great disgust and disappointment to his capitalist masters.

The next few months will witness many interesting encounters in Washington and unless we are entirely mistaken Coolidge will be on the losing end of all of them.

As yet the issues are more of a popular than of a fundamental character, but as the struggle progresses the cleavage between the finance and industrial capital upper and lower sections of the middle class and the big banking interests will become clearer.

In the meantime, the fight for advantage in the preliminary heats for the republican nomination, will be of a guerilla nature, but in some ways will be all the more deadly.

In the next two years, as the struggle between conflicting sections of the capitalist class sharpens, every effort must be made to point out to the working and farming masses the class issues which the rulers raise a smoke screen to hide.

Governor Moore's Aid to Passaic Strikers

Governor Moore of New Jersey has completed his tour of the Passaic strike region. He is back at his desk. In a statement issued from the executive offices, it is pointed out that the governor found that the employers "did not object to their employes joining the union, but that they would not subscribe to the principle of the closed shop"; that, further, the textile barons do not intend, in the event of the settlement of the strike, to re-employ all the workers that were formerly employed; thirdly, that they "had never refused to treat with their own employes and were still willing to do so."

The Passaic workers have had sufficient experience with the officials of the cities and state of New Jersey not to put very much reliance upon the "good offices" of Governor Moore. In the bitterest days of the strike, when the reign of police bestiality against the Passaic workers, their wives and children, was at its height, Moore did not lift his little finger to call a halt to the conditions which were arousing the mild protest even of conservative capitalist sheets. When men and children were being brutally clubbed by the police, when the fire hose was turned on pickets and sympathizers in zero weather, Moore and his tribe were conspicuously and blithely unaware that anything was wrong.

Moore's efforts to "settle the strike" are not being made in the interests of the strikers whose unswerving courage has brought them the admiration and solidarity of the international labor movement. The desperate condition of the mill bosses, whose profits have been sadly cut into by the long months of the struggle, dictates the sudden interest that is being taken in the strike by the governor. His solicitude is inspired not by the sufferings of workers but by the sufferings of his masters, the textile capitalists.

The assurance of a successful outcome of the strike is the continued and unbroken solidarity of the strikers, and the determination of the whole American labor movement to keep up their support to Passaic. The Moores offer the strikers no guarantee of an honorable settlement.

EVEN the capitalists are beginning to protest against the outrage perpetrated against Sacco and Vanzetti, who have already spent six years behind prison bars for a crime they have not committed. Those two workers would be now feeding the worms but for the protests of the international labor movement. The slogan of the working class was, "Sacco and Vanzetti shall not die." This is still the slogan of labor. At this late date the capitalist press, realizing that the state of Massachusetts blundered, and that this blunder tends to sharpen the class antagonisms comes out in support of so-called "friends of labor." In Montana, this fake labor paper came out for a democratic candidate for congress against a Farmer-Labor party candidate. But the farmer-laborite won despite the treachery of Labor.

IN a recent issue of Labor there appeared on article on the British empire conference that is now taking place in London. The article would do justice to King George's head potboy. It boasts of the power of the British empire and declares that the main business of the empire is peace. It is hard to use restrained language in dealing with this flunkeyism. It helps to prove that our labor leaders have hit the bottom of reaction and that the most reactionary of reactionaries are those who had been considered "radical."

THERE is a labor paper published in Washington D. C. called "Labor." It is the official organ of the standard railroad labor organizations. It is edited by a democrat named Edward Keating. There is very little in the paper to justify its name. During the recent election campaign it boosted capitalist candidates and spent thousands of dollars putting out special editions in the various states in support of so-called "friends of labor." In Montana, this fake labor paper came out for a democratic candidate for congress against a Farmer-Labor party candidate. But the farmer-laborite won despite the treachery of Labor.

Two Supreme Court Decisions

By C. E. RUTHENBERG.

The role of the capitalist government in the class struggle is to strengthen the position of the capitalist class economically and politically and to weaken the exploited workers and suppress their struggles.

Congress and the president during the last session, gave striking proof of this use of the governmental powers. In the revision of the income tax law and the funding of the war debts, the power of the government was used to strengthen the capitalists economically, and thru the adoption of the Watson-Parker bill, which for all practical purposes takes from the railroad workers the right to strike, the workers lost a powerful weapon in the class struggle.

On October 25th, the supreme court of the United States handed down two decisions which are equally striking examples proving that the judicial power of the government is used in the same manner. One of these decisions strengthens the capitalist government and the other is another step to wrest from the workers the right to strike.

New Powers for the President.

The first decision referred to deals with the right of the president to remove federal appointees from office.

During the more than a century and a quarter of the existence of the U. S. government, congress has repeatedly passed laws limiting the power of the president in removing appointees of the government from office. All these limitations of the president's power are swept away by the supreme court decision. Altho under the constitution the president can make appointments to certain offices only, "by and with the advice and consent of the senate," the supreme court gives the president the right to remove any appointed federal office holder irrespective of the opinion of the senate and without correction of the action of the senate.

Until the decision of the supreme court the great army of appointed office holders of the federal government is under the complete control of the president so far as their continuance in office is concerned. Also the President has not only the right to hire but it will in fact have the right under this supreme court decision to "fire" any federal appointee as he may deem fit.

The supreme court has established an autocracy so far as the tenure in office of federal appointees is concerned. The president of the United States will hereafter wield a power so far as the federal appointees are concerned which even the Czar during his darkest days of Russia might have envied.

The effect of this decision is to carry further the centralization of the governmental powers, which has been developing at a rapid pace in the U. S. in recent years and which gained new impetus during the period of the war. Congress cannot always be depended upon to quickly do the will of the capitalist class. There are numerous instances in congress representing groups within the capitalist class which sometimes obstruct the will of the big capitalists of this country. There are also the so-called progressives largely representing the middle-to-do but dissatisfied farmer of the West.

The dominant great capitalists of this country chafe under the obstruction which these groups sometimes put in their way. The centralization of the governmental power, with greater power in the hands of the president whom they are certain of, means more expedition in carrying out of their program. The supreme court decision is a step in this direction. It is another blow at the much-boasted "American democracy" which has received so many blows so that little of it remains as a result of most congressional and supreme court actions during recent years.

Limiting the Right to Strike.

The dominant capitalist oligarchy in the country is determined to rob the workers of their most powerful weapon in the day to day struggle for higher wages and better working conditions. American capitalism today is the ruler of the world. The only fly in the ointment so far as its program of unlimited exploitation and the amassing of greater and greater fortunes for the favorite few is concerned, is the danger that labor may become dissatisfied and begin to fight for a larger share in the enormous product of American industry.

The strikes of the workers interfere with the smooth development of the capitalist program. Just as the vestiges of democracy which still remain so far as the government is concerned are being step by step whittled away, so the workers' right to strike is to be first limited and then abolished completely.

The attack on the right to strike and thus to carry on a struggle for higher wages and better working conditions is being made in three forms. First thru the development of the company unions and employees' representation plan thru which the capitalists are trying to befuddle the workers and make them believe that there is no necessity of their being organized on a class basis to fight for their interests. Second, thru legislative action limiting and practically abolishing the right to strike, as in the case of the Watson-Parker bill, controlling the railroad workers under which these workers must first submit their demands to the railroad owners thru a board of mediation, then to a board of arbitration and finally to a board of conciliation before they can take steps to enforce them thru a strike. After the workers have mediated, arbitrated and "conciliated" such a period will have elapsed that they still have to make new demands in order to fight for anything worth while.

The third form of attack is thru the supreme court decision which has now made it the highest law of the land that under certain conditions the workers do not have the right to strike at all.

The case decided by the supreme court rests under the anti-trust laws of the State of Kansas. The United Mine Workers of America made an agreement which provides for increase in the wages of apprentices at certain periods and at certain ages of the workers. The owners of a mine in Kansas refused to abide by the decision of the union in reference to the wages entitled by one of the miners under their agreement and rules. The United Mine Workers local called a strike to enforce its agreement with the mine owners and the rule of the union.

The supreme court decided that the strike to collect back wages which the mine owners refused to pay to the miner involved, altho it was proven that he was entitled to a higher rate of wages for a period before it was granted by the mine owners, was illegal.

The basis of the decision was in the words of Justice Brandeis, that "the right to carry on business—he it called liberty of property—has value. To interfere with this right without just cause is unlawful. The fact that the injury was inflicted by a strike becomes a justification, but a strike may be illegal because of its purpose, however orderly the manner in which it is conducted. To collect a stale claim due to a penitentiary member of the union who was formerly employed in the business is not a permissible purpose."

This decision of the supreme court is bound to have a far reaching effect on the organized labor movement. Since it now has been established that strikes may be illegal under certain circumstances, it will be easy for the capitalists to establish many kinds of circumstances which make strikes illegal. Just as the use of the injunction against strikers has been gradually extended to decrease more and more the rights of the workers to use their organized power during strikes, so we will have this decision of the supreme court as a club to be used to establish more and more limitations in which strikes are "legal."

The Government Against the Workers.

These decisions of the supreme court show more and more clearly how the whole power of the government is mobilized against the workers. Congress makes law against the workers. The courts interpret these laws and issue injunctions against the workers when they dare to go on strike.

The supreme court decisions above discussed are another warning to the American labor movement that it must organize its political power for its independent political action and carry on a political struggle on its own account as a class. It will find that the class interpretation of laws which weaken and limit the workers' right to strike. The executive power, the police power and the soldiers can be used by the workers when they dare go on strike.

These supreme court decisions are another urgent reason for the organization of a labor party based upon the political rule of the capitalists and carry on a fight for the government power for the workers of this country.

The Class Issue in the Case of Sacco and Vanzetti

(The following letter has been sent to the Nation, New York liberal weekly. Eugene Lyons, writer and publicist, states that the earlier stages of the Sacco-Vanzetti defense were handled by the writer in a manner of importance to warrant the publication of the letter in full. Particularly since the denial of a new trial by Judge Thayer in spite of the proof of the innocence of Sacco and Vanzetti brought forward by the defense, leaves sharply open the issues involved.—Editors Note.)

WHY THE DELAY?

To The DAILY WORKER: G. Bromley Oxnam's audience at the Los Angeles open forum was one of the largest and most enthusiastic of recent months there. When he spoke of the determination of the Bolsheviks to counteract religious superstition, while at the same time guaranteeing all communistic full religious liberty as distinguished from anti-government activities, he was drowned in applause. His impression of Russia agree regularly with those of other delegations and even with reports in Communist papers and of returned Communist visitors. But he put the average production of industries 50 to 75 per cent of pre-war, while Russian official reports say many industries are above and the average approximately equal to pre-war. Many questions were asked and answered, but as raised hands grew more numerous he asked if the meeting was to last till midnight, which put an end to it, after which he was surrounded on the stage by additional questioners. Among them, I wanted to know if it was fair to say that requisitioning farmers' products is an inherent part of Communism. "May be I am wrong," he replied. I suggested that Communism is voluntary exchange of commodities thru store houses conveniently located. "Yes, if you speak of the future," was the substance of his reply.

But Why Delay?

In his speech he estimated that America would not be ready for Communism for fifty years, which is not unlike Edward Bellamy's estimate. But why delay? It is beginning to be quite generally admitted that the Communists at the head of the Soviet government, despite all the difficulties left them by Tsarism, despite the savage attempts of capitalist governments to defeat them and despite the famine are performing a service to the workers and peasants of Russia that is marvelous.

On taking possession of their country—assuming responsibilities and asks requiring almost superhuman ath, courage and intelligence—they hoped the workers of the world would follow their example and make the "final conflict" brief, but their revolution startled the capitalist governments and parasites, and those immediately deluged their dominions with lies about Russia and killed and arrested Reds, and thereby, aided by reformatory labor officials, Thomases, MacDonalds, Scheidemanns, etc., succeeded in preventing the world revolution and prolonging the agony. If the proletarian revolution can succeed in Russia, why could it not have succeeded everywhere at the same time? Why so many liberal people aiding the parasites in prolonging the agony of the birth of the new society? Why delay?

Drop Capitalistic Papers.

To The DAILY WORKER:

Please find $1 to help keep The DAILY WORKER. Now, the way I look at things, it would be very easy to keep The DAILY WORKER if the workers would drop their masters' papers and put the money into their own paper.

But I have lost all respect for the average slave. He will not do anything for himself. Look back over past history; go back to Christ's time. Buck White writes in his book, "The Trail of the Carpenter," that Christ was an industrial worker of his day. I can name only a few. We read of Spartacus leading the slaves. They got him. Rosa Luxemburg, Nehmek Liebknecht, Frank Little and many others that are behind bars, like Mooney. I wonder at times that I am not with him, as I was helping him. Hand out strike leaflets at the Union Iron works at the time of the car strike, and the police took him and his wife, and they told me that they had a notion to take me. But I did not try to run away.

There was one more fellow-worker with us, and he skipped and did not come back for months.

Well, I will state again, as long as we have a money system we will have slavery. Money has to be made valueless and place all value on labor and reckon by labor's time hours and minutes, in place of dollars and cents. Then everyone would have to have a time check or everything would have a time stamped on it, and everyone would have to be a useful member of society. Then crime would disappear and the great workers would again have had a good plan. They did not handle any money. Everyone had a brass check showing he was a member of the state.

Now, hoping the workers will keep up The DAILY WORKER, as it is the only way to keep posted. I have not touch a capitalist paper for years.

With my best thoughts for the party members, I remain, a worker.

W. H. Flood,
Jannsville.

On Kellogg.

The Editor: Enclosed is a check for $5.00 being a contribution to keep The DAILY WORKER fund. Assure you of some more in the near future. I like your DAILY WORKER and fully believe it strives to live up to the principles it is fighting for.

Specially do I want to thank you for the editorial appearing in last Thursday's issue entitled: "We Stand By Our Guns." It is sharp and to the point and I bet the capitalist servant Secretary of State Kellogg has not had the epistle read to him any plainer than that; it is worthy of being put in frame and hung up in his private office.

There are few of Kellogg's type who hate the Communists any more than he. Personally did I hear him last summer at the Norwegian-American centennial demounce the radicals and tell us, if we did not like this country and his "institutions" to get out and go where they had such government that would suit better.

Kellogg may, for some time, suppress radical "organ," but he will never be able to suppress the cause and the principles for which it is fighting.

How to Complete the $50,000 Keep The Daily Worker Fund

By C. E. RUTHENBERG.
General Secretary, Workers (Communist) Party.

THE Party Nucleus 10-3 at Kansas City has shown the whole Party how to raise $5,000 weekly for the next six weeks and complete the $50,000 Keep the DAILY WORKER Fund.

This nucleus has eleven members. Its quota for the Keep The DAILY WORKER Fund was $55.00.

THE NUCLEUS HAS RAISED $82.00 AND REMITTED THIS AMOUNT TO THE DAILY WORKER. THIS IS AN AVERAGE OF $7.50 FOR EACH MEMBER IN PLACE OF THE QUOTA OF $6.00 PER MEMBER WHICH THE NUCLEUS WAS ASKED TO RAISE.

Every nucleus of the party must follow the example of the Kansas City Nucleus 10-3. What the eleven comrades of this nucleus have done to Keep The DAILY WORKER can be done by every other nucleus of the party.

The Keep The DAILY WORKER certificates can be sold. Those members who can pay the $5.00 for a book of Keep The DAILY WORKER certificates must do so. The other members much each take a book of certificates and sell them among their friends and shopmates. The 25c, 50c and $1.00 coupons can be sold if the work of The DAILY WORKER in the labor movement in the interest of the workers is explained.

A unified campaign of the whole party membership in support of The DAILY WORKER, carried on in the spirit in which the Kansas City nucleus has done its work will quickly raise the contributions to the Keep The DAILY WORKER Fund to $5,000 per week.

The work of the ten thousand members of the party, united to achieve the goal of Keeping The DAILY WORKER for our movement is a powerful force which can achieve even greater things than raising $5,000.

The whole party machinery must be set to work to arouse the party members to action. The whole organization strength of the party must be centered on the work of placing The DAILY WORKER beyond the reach of the forces which are trying to destroy it.

WE MUST BE ABLE TO COUNT A VICTORY FOR OUR PARTY IN THE KEEP THE DAILY WORKER CAMPAIGN.

To work for The DAILY WORKER.

TO WORK TO KEEP THE DAILY WORKER FOR THE REVOLUTIONARY CLASS STRUGGLE IN THE UNITED STATES.

BOOST THE KEEP THE DAILY WORKER FUND TO THE $50,000 MARK!

Current Events

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY

HAVING gotten a black eye at the polls last week Calvin Coolidge is looking around for some ointment that will heal his damaged reputation. So he pulled down from the shelf the old reliable remedy, labelled, "tax reduction." We wish to state that this reduction will chiefly benefit the big fellow and not the little lad, little, not physically but financially. It is not right however to ignore the exigencies of Coolidge's political existence. This is a factor that the politician never ignores. Only a dogmatist will leave it out of his calculations.

IT might not be out of place here to call attention to a tip offered by Lenin to dogmatic radicals shortly after the Russian revolution. They were British radicals and are now outside the Communist movement. They were more radical than Lenin if phrasemongering and frothing at the mouth were the only criterion of radicalism. Lloyd George was at this time on the top of the heap, much to the discomfort of the British bourgeoisie who looked on the wily Welshman as a sort of human polecat who was useful as long as the enemy was around but made a disagreeable guest at a garden party where the ladies were delicate raiment.

PEOPLE like Sylvia Pankhurst held that all capitalist politicians at all times were the servants of the capitalists. But Lenin hit this theory with a well directed shot of logic and proved that at times a good demagogue may have the capitalists by the small of the back, and tho this demagogue is undoubtedly loyal to the system on which he bottens, nevertheless he is research of all he surveys for the moment. Since he has the necessary mass following, he formulates policies that have as their first consideration his own political fortunes. The capitalists do not like to have such a person fastened on them permanently and they take the first opportunity that presents itself to get rid of him. That's just what they did to Lloyd George.

CALVIN COOLIDGE is no Lloyd George, but he's nobody's sap. Calvin has no ambition to bike back to Vermont and collect bills on a 25% commission as he did in the old days before he became a famous strike-breaker. So after he gets slammed at the polls he dusts up the old tax reduction headgear and throws it into the ring. Those who pay much taxes, and even those who pay only little, translate the Coolidge gesture into a ticket to the movies or a chicken dinner. And it works, tho perhaps not enough to compensate for the lack of an eloquent tongue or a face that would decorate a banqueting board. But, in this country there are people who take their fun rough as it is—in

CHICAGO LABOR GETS READY TO "GREET" QUEEN

Big Demonstration the Day Marie Arrives

Preparations are now being completed for a working class greeting to Queen Marie of Roumania when she arrives in Chicago on Saturday, November 13, 1926. The demonstration being planned by the local International Labor Defense in behalf of the oppressed workers and peasants in the bloody country of Roumania has just received added impetus from the resolution of the last meeting of the Chicago Federation of Labor which roundly condemned the capitalist dictatorship in Roumania and the kow-towing to the queen which is being practiced by local governmental officials.

Big Demonstration.

The I. L. D. will carry this resolution further by its protest demonstration at the Illinois Central station, where the queen will arrive at 5:30 p. m. on Saturday, November 13.

Previous to the protest at the train station, a mass meeting is being held on the same day at Redfern's Hall, 30 N. Wells, at which William F. Dunne, editor of The DAILY WORKER, Max Shachtman, editor of the Labor Defender, George Maurer, local secretary of I. L. D., George Neder, well known Roumanian labor organizer, and other well known speakers will describe the conditions of the workers of Roumania and expose the real purpose of the visit of Roumania's bloody queen.

Send Delegation.

From this meeting it is intended to send a delegation of protest to the station when the train arrives. It is possible that the delegation will proceed to the city hall, where, according to schedule, it is intended to give the queen an official welcome from the mayor and his official staff.

The I. L. D. is urging all labor organizations, unions and other bodies, to send letters of protest against the presecution of Roumanian workers and peasants to Mayor Dever of Chicago, Governor Small of Illinois, the C. S. State Department at Washington and the Roumanian legation at the same city.

ENGLISH QUITS RATHER THAN MAKE DEFENSE

Anti-Labor Judge Thus Cheats Justice

By LAURENCE TODD,
Federated Press.

WASHINGTON — (FP) — Federal District Judge George W. English, of East St. Louis, Ill., has resigned from the bench rather than face trial under impeachment charges before the senate. Trial was set for Nov. 10, and senators were enroute to the capital from all parts of the country to hear the evidence when English announced that he would make no defense and would leave his judicial post.

While the senate in its capacity as a court could try the accused, in order to fix upon him the penalty of being barred henceforth from holding any federal office, sentiment among leaders in that body was all against such action. It is likely that the senate will meet, hear the announcement of the resignation and possibly the reading of the articles of impeachment, and then take a recess until the date of the opening of the regular session of congress in December. At that time, unless the house offers objection, the senate will probably vote to adjourn as a court, thereby putting an end to the case.

Wilson Appointee.

English was appointed to the federal bench by President Wilson, and at that time claimed to be a friend of organized labor. (Wilson appointed English on the recommendation of Samuel Gompers.—Ed.) When the railroad shopmen's strike began in the summer of 1922 he became very active in seeking to assist Harry Daugherty, then federal attorney general, in breaking the strike. He summoned into his court, in violation of law, the sheriffs and prosecuting attorneys of two counties of Illinois in which were located o big terminal railroad yard, and threatened them with martial law unless they should suppress "disorder" among strikers and their sympathizers.

With violent and vulgar language he discussed the possibility that "some wives will be widows" unless his orders were obeyed.

Osborne Worker Attorney.

When one of the lawyers for the federated shop crafts demanded a jury trial in English's court for a striker accused of violating one of the injunctions, English flew into a rage and drove him from the courtroom. He then called him back and told the lawyer that he was barred from practicing in that court. He disbarred another lawyer in similar irregular fashion.

During the long hearings and argument before the house judiciary committee and before the house, leading to the formal impeachment of Judge English, the fact that the judge had intervened against strikers was borne emphasized, but the fact that he robbed lawyers of their ordinary rights was pointed out with much eloquence

ANGLO-RUSSIAN MINERS' CONFERENCE POSTPONED BECAUSE OF STRIKE CRISIS

By JOHN PEPPER.
(Special Cable to The DAILY WORKER.)

MOSCOW, U. S. S. R., Nov. 9.—Representatives of the Miners' Union of Soviet Republics have postponed their departure for Berlin where they were to have met the executive of the British Miners' Federation on the basis of last minute information reaching here that the acute stage of the coal crisis in Great Britain now transpiring will not permit them to leave England.

Accordingly the conference that was to have effected Anglo-Russian unity between the two miners' unions is postponed to a date to be chosen by agreement later. The meeting of the two executives was planned to thwart the sabotaging tactics followed by the Amsterdam Miners' International in its attitude towards the British mine strike.

POLICE BREAK UP MEETING OF LABOR DEFENSE

Organizer Is Fined for Lack of Flag

SHARON, Pa., Nov. 9.—Local police today broke up a meeting held under auspices of the International Labor Defense of this city and arrested Martin Krsaic, secretary of the South Slav section of the I. L. D., who is on a tour to organize the South Slavic workers into the labor defense movement. Comrade Krsaic was held under a $100 cash bond. At the hearing he was fined the $100 on the pretense that the meeting he had addressed did not display an American flag.

Sentiment Strong.

The sentiment of the local workers is very strongly in favor of the I. L. D. This is not the first time working class meetings have been brazenly broken up and labor men arrested by Pennsylvania's corrupt police, and the appeal of I. L. D. has been finding a good response from the workers of Pennsylvania who are realizing the need for concerted action on this field to struggle for the rights they are being deprived of.

Will Forget Case.

The international Labor Defense does not intend to permit this outrageous arrest, break up of the meeting, and unheard of fine to go unchallenged. Further action will shortly be taken to establish the right of the I. L. D. or any other working class organization to hold a public meeting in Sharon.

SOVIET THRONGS HAIL 9TH YEAR OF REVOLUTION

One Million Take Part in Moscow Parade

By JOHN PEPPER.
(Special Cable to The Daily Worker.)

MOSCOW, U. S. S. R., Nov. 8.—With the early hours of the morning great crowds of workers began filling Moscow streets in preparation for the celebration of the ninth anniversary of the Russian Revolution of Nov. 7, 1917. At nine o'clock in the morning the troops of the Moscow garrison took up their positions in Red Square for the huge parade.

Near the Revolutionaries' Tomb innumerable workers' delegations stood with red flags flying, members of the government, the Central Committee of the Communist Party and representatives of the Communist International took their places on the tribunes along the line of march.

After the review of the troops by Voroshiloff, peoples commissar for war and navy, endless columns of manifestants marched until dusk in the evening, labor quarters, mills and barracks were the scenes of festive gatherings and speeches.

Over one million participated in the celebrations in Moscow alone. In Leningrad, five hundred thousand workers, peasants and soldiers participated in the celebration there. Thousands gathered in the square before the Finland railroad station and solemnly inaugurated a new monument to Lenin.

Thruout the entire Soviet Union, similar demonstrations took place with unprecedented enthusiasm. A feature of the day in the province was the inauguration of new works, electric power stations and wireless plants.

From the top of Lenin's tomb in Moscow, orators spoke to the workers assembled in the vast Red Square. Voroshilov said that the present red

(Federated Press Staff Correspondent)

WAUKEGAN, Ill., Nov. 9.—Indications of an attempt to railroad two members of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America to the penitentiary, for the alleged crime of conspiracy to commit burglary, larceny and malicious mischief against the Goldstein Clothing Co. of Waukegan in August 1925 was the feature last Friday in the case of the "People of Illinois" against Oscar Novak and Louis Cece which opened in circuit court here on that day after 110 men had been examined in the selection of the jury. Novak and Cece are charged with having destroyed $18,000 worth of cloth with acid.

William Kessle, star witness for the prosecution, in his testimony positively identifying Novak as the man who entered the cutting room where the damage was done, swore that he saw not only Novak's back as he went by him, but also the right side of his face. This was 14 months after the crime was committed. In September, 1926, five weeks after the date of the crime, Kessle testified that he was ex-

ANDY AND CAL SPLIT ON TAX REBATE PLAN

Divisions Occur Over Treasury Surplus

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, Nov. 9. — There were increasing signs today of republican differences over President Coolidge's proposal for a 10 to 12½ per cent tax rebate on 1925 incomes, made possible thru the large treasury surplus.

On the heels of Secretary of the Treasury Mellon's statement last night suggesting that instead of a rebate on 1925 incomes the most feasible plan would be to allow a "credit" on 1926 incomes, the presidential spokesman told callers at the White House today that Mr. Coolidge still considered the rebate plan as offering the best solution of what to do with the treasury surplus. Thus the difference of opinion between Mr. Coolidge and Mr. Mellon became apparent.

G. O. P. Split on Issue.

Presidential Coolidge's proposal for a 10 or 12½ per cent rebate of the year's federal income taxes faces a stiffer fight to enactment today because opposition has developed within the administration's own ranks in congress as well as from the republican insurgent group.

The White House plan was attacked by Senator George W. Norris, R., of Nebraska, leader of the senate progressives, who declared it would be "poor business management" to refund taxes already paid while the nation was deep in debt. A similar view was expressed by Senator Charles L. McNary, R., of Oregon, a western administration leader.

Debt Retirement Plan.

Norris, who will head the little band of insurgents who hold a "balance of power" in the senate of the seventeenth congress, proposed that the $250,000,000 surplus, expected in the treasury by the end of the year, should be used to retire the public debt.

The republican organization meanwhile took steps to initiate action on a new tax bill, whether the legislation ultimately conforms to the president's rebate proposal or to the democratic demands for a downward slash of all federal taxes. The house ways and means committee will meet here next Monday and reports have it that tax legislation will be the first consideration.

Play Politics.

Altho democratic leaders continued to declare in favor of attaining wholesale reductions in federal taxes at the December session, little came out against such a move. His opposition to the minority proposals came as a surprise to the democrats as they had rather counted on extensive republican support for their tax program. If the views of Norris are supported by other progressives it was pointed out, the democratic plan may be defeated even if the minority is able to block enactment of Coolidge's rebate.

Both the republicans and democrats are trying to fool the people on a proposition that ought to be handled on a business basis. Norris said. Leaders on both sides are playing politics. The surplus ought to be used to retire some of our government bonds because the people already have spared the money and such a course would reduce future taxation. Let's see what is in the treasury at the end of the fiscal year next June. If there is a surplus then well and good. we can reduce taxes at the following session of congress.

We will send sample copies of The DAILY WORKER to your friends—send us name and address.

Stalin Upholds Views of Central Committee of the Soviet Union Communist Party Against the Opposition Bloc

Summary of Speeches by Stalin, Trotsky, Kamenev and Zinoviev

By JOHN PEPPER
(Special Cable to The Daily Worker)

MOSCOW, U. S. S. R., Nov. 9.—The special conference of the Communist Party of the Soviet Union has been concluded with the Central Committee of the party unanimously endorsed by the delegates in its position against the views of the opposition bloc led by Trotsky, Zinoviev and Kamenev.

Following are digests of the speeches made by Stalin, for the central committee, and Trotsky, Kamenev and Zinoviev for the opposition bloc:

Stalin's Speech

Reporting on the question of the opposition and the situation within the party, Stalin laid bare the history of the formation of the opposition bloc. The underlying ideas of that bloc were brought forth for the first time by Zinoviev at the 14th Party Congress and carried into effect in the July Plenum. The first attempts at preparatory underground work were blocked, whereupon the opposition started its activities at the end of September and the beginning of October in the factory groups in Leningrad and Moscow.

Having suffered a decisive defeat, the opposition then on the 16th of October presented the Central Committee with the well-known statement admitting errors. The Central Committee agreed to accept this statement altho it did not believe in the sincerity of the signers. The refusal of the opposition to recognize the incorrectness of their views forced the Central Committee to call upon the party to continue the ideological struggle against the opposition.

Lack of Principle.

Stalin pointed out the utter lack of principles of the opposition bloc, whose participants, Zinoviev and Kamenev, only very recently looked upon Trotskyism as a variety of menshevism, while Trotsky, on the other hand, looked upon his present allies as opportunist. Stalin emphasized that such lack of principles must inevitably lead to the decomposition and the final break-up of the opposition bloc.

The statement of Medvedev and Shlapnikov, wherein they recognize their mistakes, is evidence of further differences within the bloc and adds another factor for its eventual decomposition.

The opposition is now merely awaiting a favorable moment to again act against the party. The main question of difference between the party and the opposition bloc is the question of the possibility of a victory of socialism in the U. S. S. R. Stalin quoted Lenin's works proving that there existed for a long time a divergence of concepts between Leninism and Trotskyism.

Leninism vs. Trotskyism.

Unlike Trotskyism, Leninism believes in the possibility of the victory of socialism in one country. It is convinced that the proletariat in Russia, having seized power, cannot only hold it, but can use it to organize socialist economy. On the question of the possibility of the victory of socialism in the U. S. S. R., Trotskyism is approaching the views of social democracy. For this reason, Trotsky's and the opposition bloc's views are characterized in the theses of the Central Committee as a drift toward social democratic views.

Leninism also rejects the theory of Trotskyism which maintains that there exists an inevitability of conflict between the workers and the peasantry. Leninism, on the contrary, admits the possibility of socialist construction in alliance with the peasantry, and under direction of the working class. Stalin emphasizes the possibility of a victory of socialist construction in the U. S. S. R., but pointed to the dangers of military interference of the capitalist countries with a view to liquidate by force the internal socialist progress of the country.

Weakens Determination.

Trotskyism weakens the revolutionary determination of the proletariat. Without confidence in the possibility of the construction of socialism, the workers cannot consciously take part in this construction. Any slowing up of revolutionary construction in the U. S. S. R. by the loss of revolutionary confidence of the workers will also retard the development of international revolution.

[illegible] stabilization.

The opposition also denies the partial stabilization of capitalism, and puts forth the slogan that the Communists in the western countries must ignore or even quit the trade unions. They demand the dissolution of the Anglo-Russian committee. They also demand the industrialization of the U. S. S. R. within six months. From this originates the adventurous policy of the opposition bloc.

Wage Ideological Struggle.

Stalin drew a clear picture of the difference between the socialist method of industrialization of the U. S. S. R., which is pursued by the party, and the methods proposed by the opposition, which are not socialist, but capitalist methods, because they proceed on the basis of opposition of industrial toward rural economy.

The thesis of the Central Committee on the opposition do not aim at the exclusion of the leaders of the opposition from the party as Trotsky declared in the last plenum of the Central Committee and the Central Control Committee, but rather aim at an ideological struggle which is absolutely necessary in the interests of full party unity.

Trotsky's Speech

Trotsky declared that the opposition considers the tempo of industrialization as insufficient. He maintained that a different tax policy from the one pursued by the party toward the peasantry is necessary, which is undergoing rapid differentiation. He insisted that the raising of wages must precede the raising of the productivity of labor. On the question of the stabilization of capital, the opposition disagrees with what it alleges to be an underestimation by the party, and therefore demands the dissolution of the Anglo-Russian committee, not desiring to solidarize itself with Purcell because stabilization hinges upon the Parcells and not on the Baldwins and Thomases.

Defended Old Theory.

Trotsky defended his old theory of the impossibility of victory of socialism in one country and declared that he has neither a theoretical nor a political reason to believe that it would be easier for the Russian proletariat together with the Russian peasantry, to build up socialism, than it is for the rest of the European proletariat to take power.

Considering these fundamental points of difference, Trotsky maintains that one cannot come to the conclusion of a drift towards social-democratic ideas. Trotsky declared that the adoption of the resolution maintaining that a drift towards social-democratic ideas is contained in the opposition program, will undo the work of the declaration of the opposition made on the 16th of October.

The opposition does not renounce its views, but at the same time does not intend to aggravate the differences so that a recurrence of the factional strife may become possible.

Kamenev's Speech

Kamenev agreed with the possibility of victory of socialism in the U. S. S. R. but declared that besides thru military intervention this victory can also be prevented or wrecked by an insufficiently rapid progress in industrialization and by the backwardness of the economic development of the U. S. S. R. as against capitalist states. The fundamental difference between the party and the opposition consists in the different estimation of the correlation of classes within the country. The opposition points out the rapid growth of private capitalistic accumulation in the towns and villages and demands the extraction of these sums thru a whole series of measures which would help to speed up the industrialization.

Zinoviev's Speech

Zinoviev stated that the declaration of the opposition on the 16th of October was called forth by the mass and sentiment of the rank and file proletarian members of the party who demanded above all security of the party's unity. Socialism in the U. S. S. R. can be built only with the help of the international proletariat and in alliance with the majority of the mass of soviet peasantry.

COLD WAVE HITS CENTRAL STATES, CHICAGO FREEZES

Coal Barons Announce Price Increases

Chicago's Indian summer weather gave way to the grip of icy winter Tuesday, when the central states were visited by snowstorms and biting cold. With the temperature taking a sudden drop, from 50 degrees above to freezing, Chicago was in the midst of a howling snow storm. Prediction of a temperature of about 25 degrees above zero by nightfall is made by the weather bureau.

Indiana Is Hit Hard.

Indiana is directly in the path of the storm that is swooping down on the district from the Medicine Hat region in the far frozen northwest. The coldest weather in 47 years for this time of the year is predicted for the state. Temperature around Indianapolis was falling rapidly this morning. Snow began falling about noon.

St. Louis and Omaha were also in the wintry path. It was St. Louis' first taste of winter, when the thermometer crashed down to 32 degrees.

Raise Coal Prices.

Reports are already coming in that the coal barons are taking advantage of the cold snap and are preparing to announce an increase in the price of coal. It is reported that an increase of 50 cents a ton in the standard district will be made. All Illinois coal will go higher, it is predicted. The coal barons are taking advantage of two situations to gouge the public—the increased market caused by the British strike, and the cold wave.

One Dead in Omaha.

OMAHA, Nov. 9.—One dead and several slightly injured is the toll here today from the season's first touch of winter.

Mrs. Leslie Arlington, 48, was killed when she slipped on the ice and fell off a porch at her home.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 9.—A disturbance of wide extent over central Indiana is moving northeastward with increasing intensity and will be attended by strong southeast and south winds, probably reaching gale force, and shifting to west and northwest tonight or Wednesday morning, the weather bureau announced today.

Seiberling Fights Reorganization of Goodyear Rubber Co.

AKRON, Nov. 9.—Frank A. Seiberling, once president of the Goodyear Rubber Company, which he developed from a $12,000 to a $100,000,000 concern, is now fighting for the control of the concern.

In 1921, the Goodyear Rubber company was reorganized, 10,000 shares of stock in the hands of Dillon, Read Co., Wall Street bankers, controlling the company. It is alleged by Seiberling that the reorganization was illegal and that it must be invalidated.

There are said to be two plans of settling litigation: (1) for the court to declare the reorganization illegal, or (2) for Seiberling to accept the reorganization plan readily proposed, whereby $64,000,000 worth of preferred securities would be issued to take the place of the 8 per cent securities issued in the reorganization. Combined with this latter proposal is the elimination of the voting trusts controlling the common and preferred stock and the management stock, and return of control to common stockholders. This will be a big fight and will be fought out to the end.

Government Refuses Insurance to Common Law Wife of Veteran

Mrs. Corinne Hanna today lost her fight to recover $8,000 war risk insurance from the government for the death of Major Mark Hanna overseas.

A jury before Judge Cliffe in Chicago federal court returned a verdict in favor of Major Hanna's father, Thomas M. Hanna of Ruthven, Ia.

The verdict contained two findings of fact.

1. That Mrs. Hallie Schroeder of San Antonio, Tex., is Major Hanna's lawful widow and that Mrs. Corinne Hanna was therefore never legally his wife.

2. That the government's charges linking the name of Mrs. Hanna with that of "Joe" Wagner, a reputed notorious Kansas City gangster, are unfounded.

Mrs. Hanna, who claimed to be the widow of the late officer, collected $2,000 of an $10,000 policy before the government stepped in and asserted she had no right to the money because o ffer personal right.

Mr. Hanna is to receive $1,552 back insurance and $57.50 a month.

Because Mrs. Schroeder later obtained a divorce, she is not entitled to the insurance money, which, the court found, should go to the elder Hanna as the next kin.

Anti-Communists Are Real Destroyers of the Fighting Spirit of Labor

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

ELECTION figures from Minnesota, as well as other sections of the country, show that there was a heavy falling off of the total vote cast in working class districts. The percentage of votes cast in non-labor territory, on the other hand, held up well or showed actual increase.

The straddling labor officialdom, that plays in both the old parties, comes to the front attacking the workers for this lack of interest. They never point the finger of blame at themselves, as they should. In Ohio, the American Federation of Labor called for the election of Pomerene to the United States senate. The railroad brotherhoods damanded that Willis be elected. In the resultant confusion it was only natural that workers should become disgusted and remain at home.

In Illinois the condition was somewhat similar. Hordes of labor officials flocked to the dollar standards of Frank L. Smith and stuck close even after the disclosure of wholesale subsidies from the Insull public utility interests. But George Brennan, the democrat, also boasted "labor" support, and was likewise able to display a host of "names" of "labor" officials endorsing his senate candidacy.

It was John H. Walker, president of the Illinois Federation of Labor, who declared at the Detroit convention of the A. F. of L. that, "We are going to continue to follow the nonpartisan policy of the American Federation of Labor. We are going to give it a tryout."

That means that Walker is going to continue dividing, dissipating and discouraging the labor vote according to the bitter Ohio and Illinois experiences thru which the workers in these two typical states have just passed. And Walker is merely an example of the whole breed of "nonpartisan" labor politicians to be found crawling about the republican and democratic political tents.

It is this breed also that periodically works itself into an hysterical frenzy denouncing the Communists as destroyers of the organized labor movement. Such are Walker, Balander, Fitzpatrick and Nockels, yes, and Farrington, in Illinois, some of these having actively participated in the local, state and national leadership of the farmer-labor movement. The elections thru which the nation has just passed, however, reveal the labor officialdom, clinging to the political organizations of the master class, as the real destroyers of the unity of the labor, and the actual opponents of its development. They cry "wolf!" to drive the blame from their own doors.

This situation presents itself in another form even in those states where we have the farmer-labor party. Thus the Minnesota Union Advocate, in its issue of Nov. 4, giving some of the results of the recent election in that state, declares:

"There are more than 100,000 voters registered in St. Paul. Less than one fifth of them voted Tuesday. About 5,000 less votes were cast then in the city election.

"An analysis of the vote shows that the greatest decline occurred in the so-called labor wards, while in the non-labor wards there was an increase."

This is regrettable condition. It must be remedied. But how? This can only be done by developing the Minnesota Farmer-Labor Party, and all other labor party movements into unified, aggressive, fighting class organizations of the workers. This can only be accomplished by accepting the Workers (Communist) Party as an active, integral part of the movement, and accepting the re-

[illegible] recognizing that the Communists are a vital factor in building the class power of labor.

Those officials who denounce the rank and file the severest for their so-called lack of interest, are the same officials who have been so loud in the past, in Minnesota, in denouncing the Communists both as obstructionists and destructionists. Yet this same anti-Communist element is the same crowd that now stands revealed as the would-be destroyers of the Farmer-Labor movement. Take a look at Van Lear, Townley, Gilbert, Quigley and others of their ilk. They have have completely deserted the farmer-labor cause and sold out, body and soul, to the enemy. When they were attacking the Communists, they were doing loyal service to the capitalist oppressors of the city and land workers. The same holds for the whole strata of the petty trade union officialdom in Minnesota, that jumped to obey the orders of the late Sam Gompers to drive the Communists out of the trade unions in that state.

It was inevitable in Minnesota, as elsewhere, that the war waged against the Communists should have a paralyzing influence upon the Farmer-Labor Party as well as the trade unions movement. When the so-called "leaders" spend more time fighting the Communists, the militant vanguard of the labor movement, than they do in organizing and developing the struggle against the exploiters' interests, then it is inevitable that the aggressive spirit of the rank and file workers should be seriously chilled. This is exactly what has happened.

The workers and farmers must be won for a spirited forward march against their class foes. This will not be brought about thru a continued attack on the Communists and a winking at the continued surrender of those lamenting these attacks, to the ranks of the capitalist parties.

Hendrik Shipsted, the farmer-labor senator, exposed himself as an enemy of labor's cause when he did not enter actively into the recent farmer-labor campaign on behalf of the whole farmer-labor ticket. Instead he sulked. Reports say he addressed but one campaign meeting.

He became a burden and an obstacle to the movement when he refused to make it known clearly and decisively that he would continue to fight as a farmer-laborite in 1928, when his present term expires. Instead of desert to the republican camp, as is rumored. Even now Shipsted does not deny that he will give his support to the republican bosses in congress during the two remaining years of his senate term. Thus Shipsted acts in the role of destructionists like Van Lear, Townley, Gilbert, Quigley and the others who have gone before him.

The greatest safeguard insuring the growth of the Minnesota Farmer-Labor Party, and of the labor party movement generally, is the admission of Communists to full rights in the Farmer-Labor Party, and the affiliation of the Workers (Communist) Party as an integral part of the Farmer-Labor Party.

It is the duty of the rank and file of labor in Minnesota to secure this action as part of the struggle to build the national labor party movement. Around this issue, uniting all labor for an aggressive fight against capitalism and its lapdogs, the republican and democratic parties.

as being a blow at the foundations of government.

Formed Graft Ring.

Other charges against English were that he conducted a bankruptcy receivership ring in this court, and receivership ring in his court, and that he manipulated the deposit of funds held by his court in order to secure employment in a bank for his son.

The last previous impeachment of a federal judge was that of Judge Archibald in Eastern Pennsylvania, in 1912. He was convicted of having accepted bribes from coal companies that had litigation in his court. Shortly before that, a federal judge at Seattle was forced to resign to escape impeachment in connection with the Alaska coal land scandals of the Taft administration.

Why don't you write it up? It may be interesting to other workers.

UNEMPLOYED COAL MINERS NOW AT WORK

British Strike Booms Bituminous Field

By ART SHIELDS
(Federated Press)

PITTSBURGH, Nov. 8—The miners' action in three hard-pressed bituminous districts is getting a breathing spell at the expense of the British strikers. In Ohio, western and central Pennsylvania, it is estimated that more than 50,000 unemployed union men are back in the pits in answer to the demand of the former customers of the British mine owners.

In fairness to the local miners it should be said that they have no control over the coal after it is loaded on the "railroad flats."

Some Stays Here.

And not all of this coal goes to Hoboken to be shipped as "black" coal to the British isles and colonies, the good part of it does. Some of the coal remains in north-state American markets that West Virginia and Kentucky captured two and three years ago. Now that the southern coal is finding higher prices at Hampton Roads the northern mines are getting back their old trade for the duration of the strike.

Second Strike Boom.

This is the second strike boom of the year. Last winter the anthracite strike caused part-time bituminous mines to go on full and idle mines to open to take advantage of the high prices for anthracite substitutes. Next winter there may be another short-time boom when industrialists and coal operators begin stocking up for the bituminous strike generally expected here in April when the Jacksonville contract expires.

Nothing worse could be said of the bituminous industry than this: that it booms only at the expense of strikers. Otherwise "too many mines and too many miners" for more than half time work on the basis of an eight-hour day.

WAX FIGURE OF MRS. MILLS TO 'TEST NERVES'

Evidence Tightens on Willie Stevens

COURT HOUSE, SOMERVILLE, N. J., Nov. 8—A wax effigy of the late Mrs. Eleanor Mills will be dragged into the courtroom in the Hall-Mills murder trial before the eyes of the complacent defendants, Mrs. Frances Stevens Hall and her two brothers, Henry and Willie Stevens, it was learned today as the defense lawyers were centering a savage cross-examination on two fingerprint experts.

It is to be the ever-spectacular Prosecutor Alexander Simpson's newest "surprise move."

To Show Wound.

The effigy purports to show how the choir singer's throat was cut.

In a glass case the throat of the dead woman will be exhibited to the jury in wax form.

It will be one of the strangest exhibits ever shown at a murder trial.

Will Test Nerves.

It is expected to afford a severe test to the nerves of the defendants, particularly Mrs. Hall, whose view was blocked by her lawyers the other day when they brought in the effects of her slain husband and his quaramour.

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 9—Process servers will meet Aimee Sample McPherson as she steps from the platform at Angelus Temple tonight to serve her with legal papers in the million dollar damage suit filed against her by Mrs. Myra Kimball, attorney S. S. Hahn announced today.

Hahn said process servers had thus far been unable to reach the evangelist and her mother, Mrs. Minnie Kennedy.

Mrs. Kimball, sister of Mrs. Lorraine Wiseman-Salisff, confessed perpetrator of the alleged "Miss X" hoax, filed the suit against the pastor, because of Mrs. McPherson's alleged efforts to have her identified as the woman who spent ten days with Kenneth Ormiston in the Benedict cottage at Carmel.

THINGS are serious in Italy for the Fascist regime. Mussolini made a serious mistake in tickling the French military soul. Italy wants the French colonies in north Africa and Benito was going about it nicely, developing an excuse for inciting the Italian people against France so that he could grab some colonies, and kill off a few hundred thousand superfluous Italians. Sometimes it is not well to be too clever. Mussolini read Machiavelli but the French intelligence service also had a copy. So Mussolini was caught with the goods, organizing plots against his ally Spain on French soil, in order to embroil Spain with France and secure the former's assistance such as it is worth—in a war with France

Struggle to Free Political Prisoners in Poland

By EMIL STAWSKI.

WARSAW.—Poland responds with the call for the liberation of the political prisoners. For a long time there had been no mass demonstration of love and solidarity for the best fighters of the class struggle who suffer in chains in the prisons.

When in parliament the land owners and bourgeois representatives elected their president, from those benches, from where the struggle for the Polish workers and peasants is led, sounded the call: "Lazuzkis!"

Moscicki Interrupted.

When under the clumsy pillars of the royal palace in Warsaw the new clown of the Polish bourgeoisie, President Moscicki, gave his oath of allegiance to the people, his words were interrupted by the calls for amnesty. The representatives of the workers were attacked, were dragged from the hall, among them also Comrade Varski, but their voices became awakening call for tens of thousands of people in the country.

TODAY there is not a single village in Poland where one does not hear the slogans of the amnesty campaign. Recently not a single meeting of the workers of Warsaw, Lods, Dombrowa and Lublin was held without an approval of the amnesty campaign.

We participated in a social democratic meeting in the country. The usual agenda of the social-democratic party. The local party bureaucracy repeated again and again its program. This was done with the typical "precaution" and "reserve," and in a way as if nothing had happened, as if everything was in the best order in the Poland of the capitalists and landowners, as if no blood had been shed in the streets of Kalish, Strij and Warsaw. But suddenly, to the greatest surprise of the chairman and the secretary, voices made themselves heard:

"We demand the liberation of the prisoners!"

HANDS were lifted, hundreds of voices called. It was a surprise also for the "Robitnik," the organ of the P. P. S., which published not a word about the resolution for amnesty which was adopted.

"Amnesty!" in Slupca.

In Upper Silesia—in all large shops the same picture, even in the meetings of the so-called National Workers' Party, whose leader organized in 1926 the notorious murders against the Warsaw and Lods workers, the slogan of amnesty is raised. From a bench in the background somewhere the magic word sounds:

"Amnesty!"

And immediately life comes into the meeting. The leaders would like to disappear, they would like to establish silence again. Perhaps they succeed for a moment. But after an hour the call sounds again, and the question is raised from all parts of the hall:

"And what about the amnesty?" The resolution is adopted: "We demand the release of the political prisoners." But the yellow leaders are in a hurry with their new resolution "Long live Pilsudsky!" Also their resolution is adopted.

The masses are already conscious of the powerful idea of class solidarity, but they are not yet ripe for revolutionary thinking and action against the party bureaucracy.

Police Perjury.

THE police have lost their heads. They arrest right and left. They imprison popular trade union officials (among them the famous leader of the building workers, Sypula), disband workers' organizations, undertake searches during the night in the suburbs of the towns in the houses of the workers, and—despite all the bones and doorways are covered with innumerable posters and appeals, one here and one there—and on the telegraph poles red flags and posters are fastened.

One morning Warsaw awoke and found that all governmental and "patriotic" posters in the town were covered by the following little slip of paper:

"Freedom for the political prisoners!"

"Unknown persons" had the insolence to cover with this damned slogan all publications of the ministry of the interior on the extension of the work of the court martials.

Warsaw was followed by the provinces.

AND the governmental decrees in the whole country, in hundreds of thousands of copies in all villages and towns received the "visum" of the Polish working class: Appeal "for the struggle to liberate the prisoners of capital.

Some days ago the police were again surprised. The relations of the political prisoners formed a special committee and addressed themselves in a long appeal to the workers. In the appeal they described the situation of the prisoners. The committee was a perfectly legal undertaking, but hardly had the first news about its organization been published in the press when the police searched the house of the five organizers of the committee, all wives of political prisoners. A gang of brutal policemen forced their way into the houses and insulted the defenseless women and children.

Holds Good Meeting.

IN this spirit, Siedlenki, M. P., held a magnificent meeting for amnesty in Poland.

This is the answer of Polagal, the Poland of the workers and peasants, to the conquest of power by Pilsudsky and his clique. The illusions on "democracy" in Poland, which gained ground among the masses during the overthrow, was gradually followed by deep depression. They began to realize the true situation. Behind the back of Pilsudsky they begin to see the grimace of capitalist and agrarian dictatorship. Instead of bread, freedom and work the masses receive bullets, as this was the case in Stanislau, Ivanowitze and other towns.

The economic crises intensifies daily, and the sad truth, the fact, convince the masses that everything remains as before or that it even gets worse.

The masses challenge the bloody rulers of reactionary Poland, and the first steps the first sound of this struggle is destined to the bravest of the brave fighters of the Polish working class, the imprisoned fighters for the Polish Soviet Republic.

Omaha Has Big Celebration.

OMAHA, Neb.—Strengthen the Workers (Communist) Party, keep The DAILY WORKER, build the power of the workers and farmers against the forces of capitalism, was the message that J. Louis Engdahl, editor of The DAILY WORKER, brought to Omaha to the spirited gathering of labor that turned out to celebrate the Ninth Anniversary of the Bolshevik Revolution in Russia.

"The Bolshevik Revolution is the revolution of the workers and farmers of Omaha and Nebraska, just as much as it is the revolution of the workers and farmers of the Union of Soviet Republics," said Engdahl. "It is your revolution, part of the world-wide struggle in the transition from capitalism to Communism. You must study it, learn its lessons, profit by its experiences, so that you, in common with all oppressed labor in the United States, may achieve the American Bolshevik Revolution."

Engdahl explained the role of the Communist Party in the Russian revolution and showed the necessity of building the American section of the Communist International and its press.

How Easy It Is to Forget!

It is only eight short years since the last shot was fired in the great "war for democracy." Here we see U. S. Vice Admiral Wells, reviewing German sailors in the battleship "Elsass" in Kiel harbor. The sudden friendly spirit shown by the naval machinery and personal of the two former enemies is explained in a large part by the Dawes Plan—the fact that Wall Street bankers have so much money invested and have loaned so much gold to Germany that friendship is the better part of discretion for both, for the time being, at least.

STRIKE STRATEGY

By WILLIAM Z. FOSTER

ARTICLE XI

THE STRIKE STRUGGLE

UNDER present conditions in the United States strikes are the very heart of the class struggle. They are brutal and open fights between exploiters and exploited. It is in strikes that the conflicting interests of the two classes are most manifest. The employer in his limitless greed and desire to exploit the workers even more intensely than the present unexampled rate, seeks to break their spirit and to force them to work upon his terms. To this end he employs a formidable array of weapons: hunger, terrorism, duplicity, illusory concessions.

On their side, the workers have as their great weapon the cutting off of the employer's supply of labor power. They seek to keep his plants shut down until his greed for profits, or the pressure from other capitalists who need his products, compels him to come to terms. But in order to do this they must be able to maintain an unbroken solidarity in the face of all the employer's many attacks, open and insidious. This is the chief objective of strike strategy during the heat of the open struggle.

THE QUESTION OF MORALE

In all situations where the fighting qualities of human beings are called into play the question of morale assumes great importance. Military leaders understand this thoroly. They know that the strength of an army is not to be measured simply by numbers or arms, by its favorable strategic position, but that among the troops, their morale, is a factor of decisive weight. Hence, during wars, strategists devote the closest attention to this matter.

Never was this better illustrated than during the world war when, not to mention the oceans of propaganda that were poured out, whole military campaigns were carried through with the special plan of improving the morale of the respective armies and home populations and of weakening that of the enemy. The leaders knew that if the fighting morale was gone the war would be lost.

Strike strategy, no less than military strategy, must give close concern to the question of morale. This is because strikes, like military campaigns though in a lesser degree, are tests of the courage and endurance of their participants. The tenacity, durability, discipline, and general effectiveness of a strike largely depend upon the morale of the workers involved. The power of resistance of a body of strikers, like that of an army in the field, can be measured pretty much by the state of their morale.

The question of morale is especially important among inexperienced, unorganized workers where the discipline bred of trade union experience is weak. "Soulless" strikes such as conservative leaders conduct among the organized crafts, when morale is at a low ebb and chiefly the organization sense of the workers holds them together, would be absolutely fatal among the great masses of unskilled now unorganized.

The question of morale is, therefore, a fundamental one in strike strategy. Our problem is how to create and maintain it. This determines the whole character of our strike strategy. Propaganda is not enough. True it is a understanding. But more is necessary. The whole strike strategy must be so calculated as to infuse the strikers with courage and an indomitable fighting spirit. Everything that tends to make the strike effective tends also to raise the spirits of the strikers. A good morale is not a thing by itself; it is the product of a generally successful strike strategy.

FIGHTING ON THE DEFENSIVE

For the building of a strong strike morale we must base our strike strategy upon the theory of fighting upon the offensive. We must attack always, or at the worst be preparing to attack. This theory is just as applicable to the class war in industry as it is to military war on the battlefield. The workers, like soldiers, (and they are the same human beings and subject to the same psychological laws) fight best on the offensive. They are then fired with a sense of power and victory; defensive fighting demoralizes them and fills them with defeatism. Every good general and strike leader must take this basic fact into consideration.

This contention that workers fight best on the offensive is no contradiction to the statement previously made that most of the desperate strikes in American labor history have been to ward off attacks of the employers. The aim of the war or strike as a whole may be defensive, such as a defense of the homeland or against a wage reduction (when soldiers and workers both fight the best) but the tactics in the struggle itself must be based upon the theory of the offensive.

Conservative labor leaders habitually follow the wrong of backing up before their attacks. They fight on the defensive. Their cowardly retreat in the British general strike was a classical example of this false strategy. A real strike strategy must pursue the policy of the offensive. When the employers take the initiative from us we must take it back with a counter-offensive. If they force a lockout upon us we must turn it into a strike, placing counter-demands and involving more workers.

TEMPO OF COUNTER-ATTACK

The offensive does not mean a reckless attack, but a calculated increase in our fighting tempo and a sharp assault upon the enemy's weakest point. It may take many forms, such as a strike of additional workers, and intensification of picketing, a greater stimulation of support from the labor movement at large, aggressive publicity maneuvers, calling out of maintenance men in coal strikes, etc., based upon whatever means are in hand and what opportunities are present.

The nature of the offensive will change with the varying conditions in the strike. An offensive by the workers in Passaic now, after nine months of bitter struggle and when they are so much weakened, is a very different thing than it was in the opening months of the historic struggle when they had their full resources in hand. But the theory of the offensive is just as valid now in Passaic as it ever was.

From time to time our forces will be so defeated that we will be confronted with little Brest Litovsks. But we must understand them as Lenin did his, as offering breathing spells during which we shall rally our shattered battalions for the next offensive.

PULLMAN CZARS CHANGE FRONT IN FAKE UNION

Militant Porters' Union Forces Fight

NEW YORK, Nov. 5.—The Pullman company officials, czars in their tactics, have been forced to back down in their campaigns to intimidate porters into voting in the Employee Representation Plan, according to reports received in the national headquarters of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters.

Change Tactics.

Superintendent Mitchell of the Pennsylvania district, and Superintendent Burr of the St. Louis district noted for brow-beating and threatening porters who have refused to vote in the company union elections, have been forced to change their tactics by the militant campaign of the Brotherhood, exposing their Simon Legree methods.

At the beginning of the elections now in progress many porters were sent to the offices of Superintendent Mitchell with a notice "See Mitchell in regard to refusing to vote." The Brotherhood is in possession of several of these notices.

Fake Elections.

The Pullman company has made the forcing of the vote a definite policy, both in the Employee Representation Plan and in its cousin, the Pullman Porters' Benefit Association. Elections for the latter were held in October, and were marked by all varieties of coercion and intimidation. Pay checks were held up and men held off their runs, in an attempt to force the men, who were disgusted by an open company steal of the primary, to register a vote.

Only the fighting spirit displayed by the Brotherhood and the power of honest workers banded together for their own protection check many similar abuses in the plan elections. There is ample proof that check withholding has been practiced in previous elections.

An Example.

An example of this kind of illegal pressure is in the offices of the Brotherhood, in the shape of a notation from the Second Assistant District Superintendent of the Pennsylvania Terminal District to F. R. McGuire, the receiving clasher. It is as follows: "The following P. T. (Penn Terminal) porters have not as yet voted. In order to secure every possible vote, please withhold their pay checks until O. K.'d by the chairman of the election committee, R. Lancaster."

Company Union Must Go.

Against tactics like these, Brotherhood instituted its successful campaign. "The company union must go" is its slogan, and it will continue to defend the rights of the men who wish to join an honest labor union that will protect their interests, against the Pullman officials who wish to force them to remain in powerless, non-representative, company controlled "plan."

Will Erect Hospital for Negroes.

NEW ORLEANS.—(FP)—Negro citizens will erect a hospital devoted exclusively to their race at an estimated cost of $300,000 to serve 120,000 Negroes in New Orleans and 400,000 in Louisiana. It is said that the various state hospitals for which the Negroes are taxed for upkeep, discriminate against all but white patients.

Attempt to Railroad Two Workers

related to Goldstein by marriage to the latter's wife's sister.

Defense Plea.

In his opening statement to the jury, Defense Counsel J. A. Miller, Wankelman, declared the defense would prove not only the innocence of the defendants with proof of their activities miles away from the scene of the crime, but also would present evidence indicating that Goldstein himself might have had the crime committed with the intention of profiting from it financially.

"We will show that just 60 days before the commission of the crime Mr. Goldstein took out an insurance policy for $20,000 covering possible damage to his property and is now suing the insurance company to recover on that policy," Miller said. He pointed out to the jury that there was a chain of circumstances there that warranted consideration on their part. Goldstein is scheduled to go on the witness stand Monday, when he will be questioned regarding the insurance policy for only $2,000 over the amount of damage he claims was done by the alleged acid throwing crime.

New Witness.

When the case was adjourned on Friday to permit the cleaning up of other cases in Judge Claire C. Edward's court, State's Attorney A. V. Smith announced to the press that Goldstein would be the only other witness called by the state. The counsel for defense immediately had a subpoena issued for Frank Cawwarsinski, an employe of the Goldstein Co., whose name was on the list of witnesses for the state and who was expected to corroborate the testimony of Kessele in identification of Cece and Novak. He will be put upon the stand by the defense, and it is rumored he will refil of attempts by Kessle to force him to back up the latter's testimony.

Chamber of Commerce's Hand.

Waukegonites who have been following the efforts of Frank T. Fowler, secretary of the Waukegan-North Chicago Chamber of Commerce, during the past few weeks to discount the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America were amazed when on Friday Fowler "blew up" as an important witness for the prosecution. For weeks Fowler had been preparing for his part in the case, when he was to tell, as he has thru the press on several occasions, of being in a Chicago court a year ago when 62 officers and members of the union were brought in from a raid on their headquarters during a strike in that city and of their being bound over under heavy bail, and also of brass knuckles, iron bars and other weapons of warfare that he says were found in the union headquarters. (At no time has Fowler been honest enough to inform the public that in cases against all of the 62 union members arrested at that time were later dismissed for lack of prosecution.)

Fowler's name was published in the list of witnesses to be called in the case now on trial here. He should have followed the examination of jurors and was seen by the Federated Press correspondent conferring with the sheriff when the latter was starting out after new prospective jurors when the regular panel was exhausted.

He was quoted in the press as saying that "the Amalgamated Clothing Workers' Union is on trial in this case." All of this, linked up with his repeated press statements during the strike at the Grauert-Rothschild clothing shop recently, which resulted in recognition of the Amalgamated by the firm, that the Amalgamated was an "un-American organization and a menace to any community," created unusual interest in his part in the trial. Great was our disappointment, however, when his testimony was limited by objections by defense counsel, sustained by the court, to his knowledge of the alleged crime as it affected the defendants. This meant that, instead of boasting again of arousing the community against the Amalgamated and having a reward of $1,000 offered for the arrest and conviction of the offenders by the local chamber of commerce, his testimony dealt merely with having seen several bolts of cloth ruined by acid burns. The fact of the damage had been previously proved by testimony of police officers, and so Fowler's testimony failed to create the sensation for which he had prepared the community.

Toy Balloon.

To the writer, the picture of Fowler preening himself for a grandstand play on the witness stand and his deflation when, after only a few sentences, the state's attorney turned him over for cross-examination and Defense Attorney Short released him without a question, as too unimportant to bother with, reminded her of a toy balloon blown up tight, from which one expects to hear a loud and shrill whistle as the air is released, and then, because of some defect, the balloon flattens with merely a little squeak. Frank Fowler's day in court "has came and went" and his promises to "settle the Amalgamated in the eyes of Waukegans" fivvered—as did his efforts to frustrate the organization of the Grauert-Rothschild clothing shop by this union.

State's Attorney Smith is assisted by Assistant State's Attorney Block in the trial. Attorney George Field is the third lawyer in the brilliant counsel.

REVERE MEMORY OF CHICAGO'S 5 LABOR MARTYRS

Observe the Memorable Day: Nov. 11, 1886.

Albert R. Parsons, one of the most active spirits in the labor movement of the '80s of the last century, was a leader in the eight-hour day campaign of that period. An excellent speaker, agitator and organizer, he was one of the most popular working class figures in Chicago.

Framed-Up.

After the famous Haymarket riot, when a number of his comrades were arrested and charged with having thrown a bomb at the meeting, he voluntarily surrendered himself in court to be tried with his colleagues. He was sentenced together with Louis Lingg, Engel, Spies and Adolph Fisher to be hung, after a thoroughly shameful trial, with a prejudiced jury, and a judge whose reactionary class instincte were shown at every stage of the proceedings. Lingg was either murdered, or committed suicide on the eve of his proposed execution. The other martyrs went bravely and unflinchingly to their death.

Just as the trap was sprung Spies called out from beneath the hood which enveloped his head:

Last Words.

"There will come a time when our silence will be more powerful than the voices you are throttling today!"

Parsons' last words: "Let the voice of the people be heard," were choked at the signal of the executioner when the noose tightened about his throat and strangled him.

At Turner Hall.

Since that day, November 11, 1887, workers everywhere have gathered every year to commemorate the Haymarket martyrs. The Pioneer Aid Association, an organization which has kept alive their memory for two score years, and has maintained their graves and monument in Waldheim Cemetery, together with the International Labor Defense, will hold a Haymarket memorial meeting at Social Turner Hall, Paulina and Belmont, on Thursday, November 11th, with Emil Arnold, president of Painters' Union, Local 275, James P. Cannon, national secretary of International Labor Defense, and Matilda Kalousek who will speak in Czecho-Slovak. All workers are urged to attend. Admission is free.

State Insurance Cut May Choke Exploiters

SYDNEY—(FP)—So successful has been the state insurance office in New South Wales that the labor government has ordered a reduction of one-third in the premium rates for worker compensation. The private insurance companies are fighting the government's action, since they will have to reduce their rates also. Many are going out of the worker compensation business.

The government is about to launch out on a home-building scheme for the workers. The government will follow the Queensland example of advancing to the workers nearly the full pur chase money, repayable by instalments, and hold no security a life in surnsoe policy of the worker.

Bosses Seek Child Workers.

NEW YORK.—(FP)—More child workers are wanted by the Natl. Assn. of Manufacturers. The association is charged by the Natl. Child Labor committee with pushing a drive to campaign with its committee report advocating that children be allowed to quit school and go to work at 14. The manufacturers claim that modern educational research sanctions such a move.

The Natl. Child Labor committee, fighting for a quarter century for child protection, says on the contrary that recent scientific investigation justifies their stand that children should remain in school at least until 16.

High School Teachers' Strike

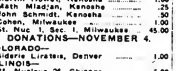
WILLOWS, Cal.—(FP)—All high school teachers in Glenn County have gone on strike because the county treasurer has refused to make a transfer of funds to pay their overdue warrants. More than 40 teachers in Willows, Orland and Hamilton City, and 500 grammar students, have voted an "extended vacation" until the depleted school treasury is supplied with county money to pay the teachers. The strike has the approval of the boards of education and the county superintendent of schools.



WILL APPEAR IN DECEMBER.

WITH THE YOUNG WORKERS

CONDUCTED BY THE YOUNG WORKERS LEAGUE

Young Upholsterers Enter Fourth Strike Week in Hartford

HARTFORD, Conn.—Faced with two injunctions, with eight strikers arrested and with the union being fined for $20,000.00 the strike of the Upholsterers Local Union No. 35 enters in its fourth week of bitter struggle.

One of the firms, Goldman Bros has already signed an agreement with the union, but two largest manufacturers, the Acme Upholstering Co. and B. Dworkin & Co. have secured injunctions forbidding picketing and suing the union for $10,000.00 apiece. The union's request to dissolve the injunction will be heard by the superior court on Wednesday, November 3, 1926. The case of several strikers charged with contempt of court will also be tried at that time.

Entire Industry Tied Up.

For two years the Upholsterers of Hartford have been trying to build a union. Active union men were fired and the bosses tried to force yellow dog contracts upon the workers. These attempt however all failed and now the entire industry in Hartford is tied up. The other shop of the B. Dworkin Co. in Springfield, Mass has also been pulled out and this concern that has been fighting the union for years is crippled.

The Upholsterers International Union is giving a great deal of organizational and financial aid to these strikers in fact all the local unions in this industry are taking a great interest in this strike, as because thru long hours, low wages and brutal exploitation of young workers, the Hartford manufacturers were able to compete with the organized centers.

C. L. U. Promise Aid.

The Central Labor Union of Hartford has also promised financial aid and help in securing a favorable settlement. With all these things in their favor the strikers expect a speedy victory.

In organized centers the union permits only one apprentice to five journeymen, but in Hartford and other non union centers the manufacturers have forced down their manufacturing costs thru the intense exploitation of four or five apprentices to one journeyman. They thought that thru the use of young workers they would be safe from the union. In fact the bosses raise the wages of the journeymen in an effort to separate them from the apprentices who due to low wages and unhealthy conditions were beginning to think of organizing a union. But all this proved useless for the young upholsterers of Hartford learned the value of the union and when they went on strike they were able to take the majority of the adult workers with them on strike.

The young upholsterers of Hartford as the young textile workers of Passaic have proven themselves good strikers as well as local union men.

Anti-Militarist Conference to Hold Meet

LOS ANGELES, Cal.—Following upon a successful mass meeting held several months ago, at which three student speakers of the University of California delivered anti-militaristic speeches, and an anti-militarist resolution was unanimously adopted by over 300 who were present in the Music-Arts Hall, the provisional committee to launch the "Anti-Militarist Conference of Southern California" was formed, with labor and student representatives.

The broad form of the movement is indicated by the committee sponsoring the conference. Reverend Robert Whitaker is a member of the national committee of the International Labor Defense; Fanny Bixby Spencer, of Costa Mesa, Cal., is a prominent pacifist leader in the state, well known thru her anti-war activities in 1917 and after; Judge J. H. Ryckman is editor of the Open Forum, weekly paper. Kate Crane-Gartz, of Pasadena, well-known pacifist and anti-militarist leader, and Rev. Clinton J. Taft, Southern California director of the American Civil Liberties Union and chairman of the Los Angeles Open Forum weekly meetings.

The secretary of the students' committee is J. Nelson Frank of the League for Industrial Democracy. The secretary of the labor committee is Sam Adel, business agent of the Painters' Union. The purpose of the conference to be called is "to conduct a campaign against military training for young workers and students." Although the student and liberal youth will participate an effort will be made to make the chief appeal to the labor organizations of southern California to take up the fight against the militarization of the American youth.

Youth Won in Philly Membership Drive

PHILADELPHIA, Pa.—Our league is awakening. The period of inactivity inevitable thru it was after the reorganization is past. We may well say that our comrades realize their tasks now, and with real revolutionary fervor have thrown themselves into our various activities.

It is understood that our main task at the present are the membership drive and the Young Worker sub campaign.

We started the membership drive officially on International Youth Day. Altho we did not take in any new members then, but we succeeded in lining up our membership on the drive, and with some sympathizers.

The campaign is conducted with a view of reaching the real American working class youth, and the heavy industries are concentrated on mostly. Special leaflets are distributed at the shops and factories, and affairs in which the young workers are invited, are being arranged. Individual recruiting is carried a great deal, as well as mass meetings.

Win Negro Youth.

Our comrades seem to have fully understood the significance of the campaign, for already we have good results. First we have succeeded in winning back a number of old league members who fell out during the reorganization and we get them busy in all our activities. We have also taken in some new members, for whom the most important are 6 Negro Young Workers. Thru them we hope to reach many more young Negro workers, and get them into our movement. The campaign has just started, and we have outlined full details of work for the entire campaign of great importance is a mass meeting of Oct. 26, with Trumbull and Bentall as the principal speakers.

The meeting will be closed with a grand ball, which in itself will serve as recruiting means. We expect to have a much greater membership by the end of the campaign, but what is more important, we will have an active membership.

Push Sub Drive.

Not less important in our work is the Young Worker sub drive. To begin with we expect to exceed our quota of 300 subs. Already a number of renewals and new subs have been sent in to the N. O. just at the outset of the drive.

The first step taken by the D. E. C. to insure a successful drive, was to organize a special Young Worker committee including in it all Y. W. agents, and that committee is now functioning immediately. Roosters clubs are being organized thruout the district. A general affair for financial aid is arranged for the near future. The slogan is "The Young Worker must exist!"

Although we concentrate mostly on those two campaigns, other activities are not neglected. We are doing good organizational work in the anthracite. We carry on anti-militaristic activity, sports and other work.

Our aim is to make the league bigger and stronger, and therefore we must make every campaign a success. We are doing it! Yes we are doing it!

PENNA. MINERS REPUDIATE THE LEWIS POLICY

Strike in Defiance of Slavery Pact

By A Worker Correspondent

WILKES BARRE, Pa., Nov. 9.—The miners here are beginning to take their affairs into their own hands. The five-year contract signed by the Lewis machine, deprives the miners of the right to strike for the period of five years. The bosses took advantage of this contract and did everything possible to exploit the miners and discharge those that did not obey their orders. But soon the bosses found out that altho Lewis might sign a contract not to strike for five years, the miners are going to strike.

Miners Discharged.

The miners of the Peach Orchard Colliery of Glen Alden Coal Co. of Parsons, Pa., went on strike when four miners were unjustly discharged. Capellini did everything to force the miners to go back to work. The miners went, under protest, and served notice that if the discharged men would not get their jobs, the miners would go on strike again. This did the trick. The discharged miners were taken back to work, with pay for the days they lost because of being discharged. The bosses learned that it does not pay to discharge men. The miners learned that solidarity is the secret of their success and found out that the strike is a mighty power, which the officials of the union have sold out to the operators for five years.

The miners in Peach Orchard are not the only ones that are fighting. At present the miners of Randolf Colliery of South Penn Colliery Coal Co., in Port Carbon, near Pottsville, Pa., are also on strike. One of the men was discharged because he refused to work after quitting time. The next day the miners did not work but gathered in the hall and decided not to go to work until the discharged brother got his job back.

Bosses' Man Was Fined.

At this meeting, one of the men, who was under the influence of the bosses, made a motion to go back to work. But the matter of the discharged man laid aside, to go to the grievance committee which would settle with the bosses. No one seconded the motion. However, a collection was made to fine the man who made the previous motion $100. He was fined $25 only on account of his family.

The miners of the Randolph Colliery are under the leadership of Thomas Powell, the well-known militant leader, and the bosses, thru saloon keepers and other agencies, are spreading news to discredit him. The bosses call Howell a Bolshevik, a Communist, a Red. But the miners do not listen to them because they know that Howell is one of them and fighting with them, and if he is a "RED" so much the better.

Three very splendid prizes will be given for stories sent in by worker correspondents between now and next Thursday that are considered the best examples of worker correspondence of the week. Send in these stories, workers! Here are the prizes:

First, "Left Wing Unionism" by D. J. Saposs. A new book that William Z. Foster advises every trade union rebel to read for its valuable information.

Second, "Flying Oslo," short stories by nine of Russia's leading new writers.

Third, The Workers Monthly, a six-months' subscription to the best workers' magazine.

WORKERS WHO WANT TO LEARN HOW TO WRITE NEWS STORIES SHOULD ATTEND CLASS ON FRIDAY NIGHT

Every worker in Chicago who wants to get a grasp of the fundamentals of news writing in order that he can contribute to the workers' press should attend the class in worker correspondence to be held Friday in the editorial offices of The DAILY WORKER, 1113 West Washington Blvd.

Friday's meeting of the class is the actual beginning of the season's course in training workers in the rudiments of writing stories, gathering news, and preparing news for publication.

The class is in charge of J. Louis Engdahl, editor of The DAILY WORKER, who will be assisted by Harry Kletsky, supervisor of the worker correspondence of The DAILY WORKER.

Will Develop Writers.

Work in the class will be directed along one line: to develop news writers out of the workers, in order that they can more effectively "write as they fight." Practical work will be given the class, and the question and answer method of discussion will be followed in order that as much as possible can be gotten out of the work.

It is not necessary for members of the class to have had much experience in writing or to be masters of a "literary style." The class is not for the purpose of developing great authors, but to aid workers to express their ideas on paper in plain, ordinary working class English, according to newspaper style.

A full and interesting program is being outlined for the course, so that each class night will be crammed full of information and interest.

The class will meet each Friday night at 8 o'clock. Members are urged to come on time as that no time will be wasted.

CLEANERS-DYERS OF LONG BEACH OUT ON STRIKE

Cops Break Up Parade of Workers

By L. P. RINDAL.
(Worker Correspondent)

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 9.—Dyers and cleaners of Long Beach are on strike on election day, Nov. 2, the owners declared for the open shop and refused to meet the wage increase demanded by the workers. A shorter week is also one of the strike demands.

Riot calls and some violence are reported. A truck belonging to the Campbell cleaners, 1325 West First street, was overturned. Windows were reported broken in the Globe Dye House, 1154 West Broadway. Garments are said to have been trampled on at the latter establishment. Women strikers are reported to be the most active.

Fourteen cleaning houses are affected.

The police did not break up a parade of protest in which 200 strike sympathizers participated. No arrests were made.

The cleaners and dyers of Los Angeles won their strike a few months ago, a victory labeled the "greatest" in many years in this community. Help is expected from Los Angeles.

WORKERS EAGER TO OBTAIN AUTO SHOP BULLETINS

Ford and Dodge Worker Sold Rapidly

(By Workar Correspondent)

DETROIT, Nov. 9.—The Ford shop nucleus of the Workers (Communist) Party has just issued No. 5 of the Ford Worker, which deals with the problems of the workers employed by the Ford plant in Detroit. The organizer in Detroit reports that an edition of 12,000 copies of the Ford Worker was painted and that 6,000 of these were sold at 1 cent each during the first three days after the paper was issued.

Deals with 40-Hour Week.

The leading article in the Ford Worker deals with the new 40-hour week and Ford's declaration that the wages of the workers would only be raised on merit; that is, only those who would show greater productivity would receive the same pay for the 40-hour week as heretofore.

In addition to many items dealing with the Ford plant, the Ford Worker contains an announcement of the celebration of the ninth anniversary of the Russian revolution and a call to the foreign workers to support the Workers (Communist) Party ticket in the election campaign.

Dodge Worker Out.

At the same time the Dodge Workers (Communist) Party shop nucleus issued No. 4 of the Dodge Worker, of which 3,000 were printed and 1,000 sold at 1 cent each during the first two days of distribution.

The bulletins of the Workers (Communist) Party nuclei in the Dodge and Ford plants are winning a broad influence among the workers in these plants by dealing with the concrete problems of the industry. At the same time they translate these problems into propaganda in relation to the broader struggles of the workers, by relating them to the political and industrial campaigns.

Denver Workers Plan Anniversary Affair on Sunday, Nov. 14

By OTIS MURPHY.
(Worker Correspondent)

DENVER, Col., Nov. 9.—Denver comrades and sympathisers will celebrate the Russian revolution on Sunday, November 14. The lagging behind of one week, was caused on account of the Debs memorial meeting, which was held Sunday, Nov. 7, called by the International Labor Defense.

The program will be chock full of good speakers, including the "would-be" governor, William Distich, in the last election, and he'll explain why he lost the election by one vote—almost.

The young workers will be represented, as well as the Pioneers. Music we'll have galore, and Russian music at that.

The celebration will be held at the New Labor Lyceum, Julian and Conejos streets, at 3 p. m. At least come and see the beautiful new building that the Denver workers built for worker celebrations, and a good time is assured for all, not to mention the "Russia tea," which will be served, and the admission will be a proletarian admission—only 10 cents.

"The pen is mightier than the sword," provided you know how to use it. Come down and learn how in the worker correspondent's classes.

DISCRIMINATION AGAINST NEGRO WORKERS MUST BE STOPPED

IT is stupid as well as disgraceful conduct on the part of organized labor to show discrimination to fellow unionists of the Negro race. If the following editorial taken from the Pittsburgh Courier is based on authentic information it is the duty of the American Federation of Musicians to look into the matter:

Music Hath Charms

MUSIC hath charms to soothe the savage breast, it is said, but evidently this does not apply to the members of the American Federation of Musicians. These union workers constitute one of the strongest and richest groups within the American Federation of Labor. They live by making music but are reluctant to see Negro musicians have the same privilege. The music dispensed by the Negro union members hath no charms for the white members when dollars are involved. The breast of the white savage refuses to be soothed by the seductive means of jazz orchestras when Negroes are producing the music.

AT least that is what we gather from recent news reports. It seems that white union musicians playing in theaters on the Columbia burlesque circuit have refused to play with colored musicians who are members of colored shows on the circuit. Both white and black musicians belong to the union but the growing number of Negro musicians with Negro shows has alarmed the white musicians. Already there are sixty Negro musicians on the circuit. Consequently, the Federation of Musicians recently passed a ruling that a local union must give its consent before a band with a show can play both in the pit and on the stage. And since the white members do not care to play with the black members, this means that the black unionists will ultimately be eliminated if the ruling continues in force and race prejudice does not abate.

ONLY a few weeks ago high officials of the American Federation of Labor were denouncing the prejudiced attitude of the Detroit Chamber of Commerce, the Detroit Y. M. C. A. and some of the Detroit churches toward them. Yet, here is a great organization belonging to the American Federation of Labor discriminating against its own members! Of course the other unions in the A. F. of L. cannot be blamed for the action of the Musicians' Federation, but they can be blamed if they keep silent in the face of this rank exhibition of colorphobia, which is even worse than the case of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers hiring non-union miners in its coal mines. The American Federation of Labor, with its steadily declining membership, cannot afford to allow such discrimination within its ranks. It offers their enemies an excellent bit of propaganda to use against them at a time when their position in American life is none too secure.

THE Pittsburgh Courier believes firmly in the organization of all working people, especially Negro workers, in trade union unions. In a society so organized as the present one, it is criminal negligence of one's interests NOT to be organized with those of similar interests. In no other way can the worker hope to get proper pay and humane working conditions. Thousands of Negro workers have recognized this truth and hold membership cards in various trade and industrial unions affiliated with the the American Federation of Labor. Curiously enough, however, it is in the unions presumably composed of workers possessing higher intelligence that the Negro unionist encounters discrimination and prejudice. We warn organized American labor that this discrimination because of color must cease within its ranks. Otherwise it will become a means for destroying the organizations they have so laboriously built up. Some of the most loyal and militant workers in organized labor are Negroes. They have walked the picket lines and starved in order that the right to bargain collectively with the employers might be established and maintained. The Negro worker demands the right to join every union, and having joined, he demands equal treatment with all other union workers regardless of race, creed, color or nationality. Otherwise organized labor cannot hope to retain his allegiance.

CHICAGO STAGES SACCO PROTEST NOVEMBER 26TH

Fitzpatrick, Johannsen, Flynn to Speak

Chicago labor will express its protest against the decision of Judge Webster Thayer in refusing to grant Sacco and Vanzetti a new trial, at a mass meeting which will be held at Ashland Auditorium, Ashland and Van Buren, on Friday, Nov. 26th, at 8 p. m.

Fitzpatrick to Speak.

John Fitzpatrick, president of the Chicago Federation of Labor, a staunch supporter of the cause of the two Italian workers, Anton Johannsen, prominent in Chicago labor circles; Elizabeth Gurley Flynn, national chairman of International Labor Defense, and other noted labor speakers will address the meeting. Special efforts are being made to secure a well-known Italian labor leader to speak at the meeting also.

The meeting is being held under the auspices of the Chicago Sacco-Vanzetti conference, which is composed of some 80 labor unions and other workers' organizations. Prominent among the leaders of the conference are J. J. Uhlmann, of the district council of the International Association of Machinists, who is chairman of the conference; Anton Johannsen of the Carpenters' union, Albert Wechsler, of Local 144 of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of Chicago, vice-chairman conference secretary, George Maurer, local secretary of International Labor Defense, Hyman Schnaid, of Local 39, A. C. W. of Chicago; John Wherfet, of the South Chicago Trades and Labor Assembly, the Reverend Rhys Williams, Deane Swift of the Chicago Liberal Club and numerous others.

Theyar Decision a Menace.

The Chicago Sacco-Vanzetti conference, which expects an overflow demonstration at Ashland Auditorium, points out that the decision of Judge Thayer presents a great menace to the two Italian labor fighters who have been in the shadow of the electrocution chair for the last six years. The demand of workers everywhere for a new and fair trial and for freedom for Sacco and Vanzetti. The conference has appealed to all labor organizations to send a demand to Governor Alvan T. Fuller, state house, Boston, Mass., urging a new trial and the appointment of a state investigation commission, and demanding justice and freedom for Sacco and Vanzetti.

The Chicago conference will hold a delegate meeting on Monday, November 15th, at Redifer's Hall, 30 N. Wells street, Room 301, at 8 p. m., where new affiliations are expected and plans for the November 26th meeting will be completed. Attendance by the meeting at Ashland

GOVERNOR MOORE VISITS PASSAIC TEXTILE OWNERS

PASSAIC, N. J., Nov. 9.—Governor A. Harry Moore of New Jersey made a visit, which he attempted to keep secret, to Passaic wool textile mill owners to learn more about their position in the nine months' strike of 16,000 textile workers. Moore avoided headquarters of Local 1603, United Textile Workers' Union, into which the strikers are now organized.

He consulted with Robert M. Reinhardt of Forstmann & Huffmann Co., Col. Charles F. H. Johnson and Henry W. R. Scheel of Botany Worsted Mills and Garfield Woolen Mills; Theodore Boettger and Joseph Probst of United Piece Dye Works, Lodi; Henry Halterman of Gera Mills and New Jersey Worsted Mills, and William Gaunt of Passaic Worsted Spinning Co.

Stand as Before.

It is understood that the mill managers reiterated to Governor Moore their previously asserted stand that they would deal only with their own employes" and with no union, whether affiliated with the American Federation of Labor or not. When Col. Johnson of Botany Mills was earlier in the strike, shouted as saying that the mill owners would not deal with Albert Weisbord, then leader of the strike, but would with the United Textile Workers. The beginning of the U. T. W. local was made. Johnson has since attempted to retract his statement.

Citizens Busy.

The committee of five appointed by the citizens' meeting called by Mayor John McGuire is at work trying to bring the mill managements into conference with the local union officials toward settlement of the long strike.

Buffalo Sees Picture on Passaic, Nov. 29-30

BUFFALO, Nov. 9.—The organized labor movement of this city has completed plans for two showing of the seven-reel labor thriller, "The Passaic Strike," on November 29 and 30, at Eagles' Hall, Tupper and Pearl streets.

A third showing is contemplated for December 1 in another location of the city in order to meet the tremendous demand of Buffalo's toilers to see the splendid struggle of the heroic Passaic textile strikers as it is depicted on the screen.

Tickets for the two November showings are already moving rapidly and success of these showings can confidently be predicted.

THE SUNDAY WORKER

A NEW NOVEL
By Upton Sinclair
(Copyright, 1926, by Upton Sinclair)

They discussed the latest developments in the tragedy which had befallen Koski, one of the emperors of their screen-world, who had had a priceless stock in the cellar of his country place, and had taken the precaution to have it walled in with two feet of brick, and guarded by doors such as you would find on a bank vault; but thieves had come during the owner's absence, and bound and gagged the caretaker and cut through the floor of the drawing room, above the cellar, and hauled out everything with rope and tackle, and carted it away in trucks. Since then Koski had been raising a row with the authorities; he charged that they were standing in with the thieves, and he had brought in an outside detective agency, and threatened a scandal that would shake the pants off the police department. By this means he had got back the greater part of his casks and bottles; but alas, the real stuff was gone, they had all been emptied and refilled with synthetic. And so, after that, there was a convincing story of your bootlegger to tell you; this was some of the original Koski stuff! Millions of gallons of original Koski stuff were being drunk in California, and even in adjoining states.

Suddenly Vee Tracy clapped her hands. "Oh, listen! I have one on Koski! Him and some others! Has anybody heard The Movie's Prayer?"

There was a silence. No one had.

"This is something for all of us to teach our children to recite every night and morning. It is serious, and you mustn't joke."

"Let us pray," said the voice of Bessie Barrie.

"Fold your hands, like good little children," ordered Vee, "and bow your heads." And then with slow and solemn intonation she began:

"Our Movie, which art Heaven, Hollywood be Thy Name. Let Koski come. His will be done, in studio as in bed."

There was a gasp, and then a roar of laughter swept the table; no explanations were needed, they all knew their emperor, master of the destiny of hundreds of screen actresses. "Go on!" shouted voices; and the girl continued to intone an invocation, which echoed in outline and rythm the Lord's prayer, and brought in the names of other rulers of their shadow world, always with an obscene implication. It was a kind of Black Mass, and performed the magic feat of lifting the conversation out of the ditch of Prohibition. They talked for a while about the sexual habits of their rulers; who was living with whom, and what scandals were threatened, and what shootings and attempted poisonings had resulted. There were thrilling crime mysteries, which would provide a topic of conversation for hours in any Hollywood gathering; you might hear half a dozen different solutions, each one positive and no two alike.

VIII

They adjourned to the larger cathedral, where the lights were dim, and there appeared, very appropriately in place of the altar, a large white screen. At the far end of the room was a projecting machine, and the guests distributed themselves in lounging chairs, prepared to pay for their entertainment by watching the first two reels of Annabelle's new picture, and giving their professional judgements on the "cutting." "Pangs of Passion," you may recall as a soul-shaking story about a society bud whose handsome young husband is led astray by a divorcee, and who in order to make him jealous, begins a flirtation with a bootlegger, and is carried off in a rum-running vessel, and made the victim of the customary pulling and hauling and tearing of feminine costumes. "My God," said Vee Tracy, in an aside to Bunny, "Annabelle has been playing these society flappers since before they were born, and in all that time she's never had a story above the intelligence of a twelve year old child! You'll think it's a joke, but I know it for a fact that Perry Duchane gets a bunch of school children together and tells them the scenario, and if there's anything they don't like, he cuts it out."

And then to Annabelle she said, "It's up to standard, my dear; it will sell alright." And to Bunny, "That's one good thing about Annabelle, you can say that and she's satisfied she doesn't ask you if it's a work of art. But others do, and I've made mortal enemies because I won't lie to them. I say, 'Leave art out of it, dearie; we all know our stuff is trash.'"

There was technical discussion, and Bunny had an opportunity to learn about the tricks of "cutting." Also he learned what had been the gross business on a number of Annabelle Ames' pictures, and the inside figures on other successes. Tommy Paley had recently indulged in the luxury of making an artistic and beautiful picture which the papers had called a "classic"; he and a group of friends had come out something over a hundred thousand in the hole, and he had charged it up to education, and said, "Let the Germans do the art stuff after this!"

All this time there had been a silent spectral figure flitting about the cathedral, clad in white duck coat and trousers and padded purple slippers; the Chinese boy, bearing a tray with little glasses full of pink and yellow and purple and green liquid. He would move from guest to guest, offering his tray, and they would put down empty glasses and take up full ones, and during the entire course of the evening the spectre never made no sound, nor did anyone make a sound to it. Some three hundred years ago an English poet, long since forgotten by the movie world, had asked the question why a man should put an enemy into his mouth to steal away his brains; but here at the Monastery, the anxiety appeared to be that some one might forget to put the enemy into his mouth—hence this Chinese spectre to save the need of recollecting.

The Critical Situation in the British Coal Strike

The struggle of the British miners has entered a critical phase. So critical is the situation that the miners' executive has had to postpone the scheduled meeting of the Anglo-Russian miners' union meeting in Berlin and remain in Britain to take up the negotiations with the mine owners and their government.

The struggle now, in the light of the basis for the negotiations laid down by the government, appears directly as a fight for life of the miners' union.

The government is pressing for district settlement thinly camouflaged as a national settlement with provisions for district agreements. Acceptance of these proposals by the miners' officials means practically complete surrender and a terrible blow to the whole labor movement.

Time and again the striking miners, in spite of more than six months of semi-starvation and the intimidation practiced by all government agencies, in spite of the desertion of the miners by the leadership of the Trades Union Congress, the failure of the labor movement to support the strike by an embargo on coal and the scanty relief coming from all quarters except the trade unions of Soviet Russia whose generous donations have alleviated the misery in the coal fields, have voted against district settlements.

Will the miners' executive disregard the emphatic mandate from the membership and yield to the government proposals?

Will the leadership of the Miners' Federation of Great Britain pay more attention to the pressure for an immediate settlement on almost any terms from the officialdom of the Trades Union Congress than they will to the splendidly indomitable spirit of the rank and file of the strikers?

These are the questions which every militant worker will be asking as the negotiations proceed.

We have the greatest hope that the miners' leaders, now that British industry is at a standstill as a result of the great fight of the miners, will not take the backward step of district settlements no matter in what smooth guise they are put forward.

One thing is certain: It is that British labor as a whole faces a most drastic test. The leaders have failed already, but from below is coming a great movement which will be steeled in the new struggles of which the settlement of the miners' strike marks the beginning and not the end.

Victory for the miners, the victory which is possible if there is no further defection from above, will give a great impetus to the new labor movement which is in the making in Great Britain.

The Intellectuals and the Soviet Union

AT FIRST OPPOSED THE REVOLUTION—THE LENIN COMMISSION TO CARE FOR INTELLECTUALS —THEIR MATERIAL CONDITIONS IMPROVED—THE MOBILIZATION OF SCIENTIFIC RESOURCES

By N. SEMASHKO, Commissar of Health in the Soviet Union.

THE intellectuals in the U. S. S. R. did not at once come over to the side of the Soviet regime after the October revolution. Those groups of intellectuals whose work was more closely bound up with the working and peasant masses, specially the village intelligentsia, adhered more to the new order; those groups, however, who stood nearer the old czarist regime or the order established by the Kerensky provisional government, resisted the Soviet regime during almost a whole year, either actively (by means of boycott and sabotage), or passively (striking on the job). The particularly irreconcilable section of the intellectuals—the active workers of the anti-Soviet parties—emigrated abroad.

Now Support Socialist State.

It can now be quite definitely asserted that not a single intellectual profession has remained, the workers of which have not recognized the Soviet regime, exception being extremely rare. Not a single congress of professional workers takes place (teachers, doctors, engineers, agronomists, etc.) at which there are not resolutions in which the participants express their readiness to devote all their strength and knowledge to the cause of the new socialist construction.

The difficult years experienced by our country during the period of war, blockade and famine was naturally reflected in the position of the intellectuals. During those times the life of the rural intelligentsia was relatively easier, as the village workers (doctors, teachers, agronomists) were nearer to the food stocks than the town workers. Therefore on those days the task of the Soviet regime was to give main support to the town workers and specially the most highly qualified scientific forces. In the towns special rations were instituted, a little more nutritive than those of the ordinary population, for doctors, engineers and technicians and for those serving in Soviet institutions. But particular care was taken to improve the position of scientific workers.

Intellectual Commission.

IN 1921, on the initiative of V. I. Lenin, a commission was formed for improving the life of scientists. The members of this commission were: M. Gorkyi, Khalatov (Food Commissariat), Semashko (Commissar of health), Pokrovsky (education commissariat) and the late Prof. Karpov (supreme economic council). At the time of formation the tasks of this commission included: alleviating the material position of scientists (supply of clothing, footwear, and also increased rations, fairly high for those days), as well as improving the living conditions of the scientists (defense of their housing rights, reductions and privileges in accommodation, supply of articles for scientific work, etc.). Besides this the central commission for improving the life of scientists gave every scientist a supplementary monetary grant in addition to his salary, the dimensions of this monetary grant depended upon the qualifications of the scientists.

It is remarkably recognized that this commission rendered invaluable services to the scientists during those difficult years. It will remain a historic fact that the workers' and peasants' regime, at a moment when the population was starving, displayed exceptional solicitude in respect to the scientists, the workers and peasants, who themselves starving, paid special attention to the material and spiritual needs of scientific workers.

After Civil War.

WHEN the civil war came to an end and the economic and cultural life of the country began to revive, the central commission for improving the position of scientists was not dissolved. It still functions to this very day, having changed, of course, the methods of its work in accordance with the changed conditions.

The direct supply of food and clothing materials stopped, but actively in operation the material and monetary needs of the scientists were brought to the forefront.

Mobilize Mental Resources.

FOR this purpose the commission had, above all, to commence investigating the existing scientific forces in the U. S. S. R. A special qualification commission was formed from among the most prominent specialists in various branches of learning, which examined the personal qualifications of every scientific worker and distributed them according to categories: first two categories, scientific beginners, third category, professors and teachers of the usual kind, fourth category, scientific specialists and teachers who have already formed their own school and become prominent by their scientific work, and finally, the fifth category, scientists having world fame. The central commission has performed tremendous services in that it has made known and established an accurate list of the qualifications of all scientific forces of which the U. S. S. R. disposes. In accordance with the qualification, scientists continued to receive supplementary monetary grants. The commission also grants relief for illnesses, accidents, etc., both to the scientists themselves and to the members of their families.

Pass Helpful Laws.

THE commission has got a number of laws passed tending to improve the position of scientists in respect to accommodation (right to supplementary floor space, reductions in rent, prohibition of evictions, etc.). The commission has a free legal consultation for scientists.

The central commission has paid special attention to the position of invalid and aged scientists. For invalids, beside the usual institutions, special rest homes have been organised near Moscow, Leningrad and to certain other places, and also sanatoria in the Crimea (the former Gaspra) and in the Caucasus. A total number of 5,000 scientists undergo cures every year in the rest homes and sanatoria of the commission. Two hostels have been instituted for aged scientists—one in Moscow and the other in Leningrad.

For scientists arriving in Moscow on scientific missions a special hostel has been organised where they may get complete board for a modest price.

Scientists' Houses.

OF extreme interest are the "scientists' houses" in Moscow, Leningrad, Kharkoff and many other university towns. In these houses clubs are organised and there are extensive libraries and reading rooms. At the yearly meetings reports are given on various scientific themes, and concerts, readings of compositions, evenings, etc., given. The scientists' houses are centers where the scientific workers of various specialties come into contact with those of other professions and thus diminish the uncivilizedness of their own specialty. These scientists' houses conduct extensive cultural-educational work amongst the toiling population the scientists give lectures in workers' clubs, and broadcast lectures by radio, etc.

Thus up to the present the Soviet regime is continuing to display special care towards the scientific workers in the U. S. S. R., alleviating their material and spiritual position.

Wages Rise.

ALONG with the economic and cultural revival of the country an improvement in the position of the intellectuals is also to be noticed. Wages in all professions, without exception, are rising. There is a rapid growth in the cultural demands of the population and consequently also in the demand for intellectual labor. There are very few countries anywhere else in the world where scientific work is developed so extensively as in the U. S. S. R.

Letters From Our Readers

On Venezuela.

Editor, The DAILY WORKER

Dear Comrade: In an interview secured recently by the New York Evening Enquirer, W. P. Bruce, a geologist of Boston, spills the beans. Mr. Bruce has been seeing the world, or rather that part of it which is permitted to be located in Venezuela, and what he has seen puts Mr. Bruce fearfully in the dumps. What do you suppose brings the brine to his dear eyes? Is it the sight of a martyred proletariat? Has his heart been touched by some revolutionary cry from the shambles of liberty, where ghosts rattle their chains? Has he been moved by the sardonic mischief-making of those who put up immortelles monuments to Simon Bolivar and put down with iron heels the consequences of Bolivar's passion? Was he stirred by the realization that Venezuela, thru all the days of Gomez's dictatorship, has been suffering an unending Santa Maria?

No, not at all. Those things somehow, didn't occur to Mr. Bruce. What then? Well it is all that afflicts Mr. Bruce so profoundly—oil and the bad state of health of that humanitarian, Juan Vicente Gomez. Incredible! But here are Mr. Bruce's own words for it:

"As general Gomez is failing in health, and I fear is failing fast. It is said that he has Bright's disease, or nephritis, and you know what that means. However, the credit must be given to him for the way he has developed Venezuela's natural resources, especially her oil fields. What will happen down there if he should happen to pass out the future only knows. I rather dread to think about it, because there is no one qualified at the present time to step into his shoes. Just how capital views the situation I am really at a loss to understand, because all the oil concessions have been granted to the chief executive himself, and therefore are illegal under the laws of Venezuela and will necessarily be subject to future revision. Here is a real problem confronting not only American capital invested there, but British as well. I really see nothing but chaos ahead."

It is perhaps bad manners on our part, but what makes Mr. Bruce sad gives us uncommon joy. The clouds of high finance and the oil bogs are disdressed, their putrid play is under the spotlight, and they squirm and squeal at the unwonted interruption. "Why can't those damned scoundrels mind their own business?" they want to know. Well, we simply can't. The stench of their gluttony is too powerful in our nostrils.

Imperialistic capital in Venezuela is coming to an impasse, and it is aware of the fact. It is confused, and brought to confession. "All the oil concessions have been granted by the chief executive, and therefore are illegal under the laws of Venezuela, and will necessarily be subject to future revision." Indeed, they will be, Mr. Bruce. And other things will be subject to revision, so drastic a change that afterwards as to logs and no mess will remain. And on that purgative day Simon Bolivar will return to Caracas to a new birth!

Fraternally,
Martin Feinstein,
English Secretary.

For The Children.

To the Editor:—There is no doubt that money is essential to The DAILY WORKER at the present time. But there is another essential which The DAILY WORKER and all other revolutionist newspapers need, and that is a children's column.

Those who will fight in the coming American workers' revolution are probably the present stock of children. It is this growing generation which must be taught. If they do not take the lead in the struggle against capitalism, it will be the fault of the present adult workers and Communists.

The best way to teach the children of the workers is thru a medium with which they will come into contact every day, and which will serve as a reaction to the rotten capitalistic teachings that are handed out to the children in the first few grades. The present media for this work is inadequate. Allow me to suggest for The DAILY WORKER a children's column in which stories that stress worker's conditions and the coming revolution will be written in such a vein as to be understood by the child ten or twelve years of age. It would not be a bad idea to have the children themselves contribute to this column. Hoping that you react to this suggestion favorably, I remain,

William Albertano, Pittsburgh

A Comic Strip?

Dear Editor: We read The DAILY WORKER and find it very interesting, but we think that it would be more interesting to us and others if there would be a weekly comic in The DAILY WORKER. For example a poor little girl whose father is a worker, in a factory and how he strikes, etc.

We hope you publish this with success and without fail.

New Translation of 18th Brumaire

By ALEXANDER TRACHTENBERG

A new translation of the great classic The Eighteenth Brumaire of Louis Bonaparte, which will hearten all English speaking Marxists, has just been issued by the International Publishers, New York. There has long been wanted a new and careful translation of this famous book which saw first light in the United States in 1852.

Joseph Weydemeyer, a personal friend of Karl Marx, who participated in the German revolution of 1848 and emigrated to America three years later, published this great piece of historical writing in his monthly magazine "Die Revolution." It wasn't until 1869 that the book was republished in Germany, and since then it has gone through several editions in the original language and has been translated in many other languages. All the translations, including previously available English translations, were made from the published German editions. The present translation, made by the well-known translators, Eden and Cedar Paul, has been compared with the original text of the 1852 American edition of The Eighteenth Brumaire, which is available at the Marx-Engels Institute. In fact, the Institute is in possession of photostats of a copy of the manuscript of "The Eighteenth Brumaire," which is now in the Sorge collection at the New York library, and from which Weydemeyer published the original edition of the book in German.

Introduction by Marx.

Besides the text of "The Eighteenth Brumaire," the edition just brought out by the International Publishers contains Karl Marx's introduction to the first German edition of 1869 and Engels' preface to the Third German edition in 1885. Following the text Eden and Cedar Paul have appended a chronological table of events of the important periods of the French revolutionary history from the great French Revolution of 1789 down to the Paris Commune of 1871. A tremendously valuable addition is a Glossary of terms, events, etc., used by Marx in his book. Eden and Cedar Paul explain every important item which is not generally known thereby helping the reader to thoroughly appreciate Marx's argument. The Glossary also includes biographical and other notes about important characters mentioned by Marx.

He Ravished It.

The appendix to the book gives several paragraphs which were omitted by Marx from the first European edition of the book. Marx re-read the book as it was published in America before the Hamburg publishers put it into print, and found that some of the statements made were not applicable any longer. The present edition has therefore these portions of a book which are not available in any of the later editions of the book. The book also contains an index.

"The Eighteenth Brumaire," considered one of the most brilliant monographs penned by Marx, and which Engels declared to be "the work of a genius," should be in the library of every Marxian student. The written seventy-five years ago, the observations and deductions contained in the book are as true today as they were then. Only after reading Marx's analysis of the coup d'etat of Napoleon the Little one can understand the early background and the meaning of revolutions and counter-revolutions.

How it Came.

Eden and Cedar Paul give the following account of how "The Eighteenth Brumaire" came to be published in America:

"This magnificent work was composed under the most amazing conditions. The feast of Marx's troubles was that Weydemeyer's scheme for a weekly issue of 'Revolution' fell thru for lack of funds. A more serious matter was that Marx was far from well. Worst of all, he was suffering from the direst poverty. Writing on February 27, 1852, he said:

"'For a week I have been unable to leave the house because my coat is in pawn; and we can no longer get any meat, for the butcher has refused further credit.' Nevertheless, he was able to send off the last pages of the MS. on March 25. But even now, there seemed little likelihood that 'The Eighteenth Brumaire' would even be published and news to this effect reached Marx when one of his children had just died, and when he was extremely anxious about his wife's health, black, indeed, was the horizon.' A few days later, however, better news was to come from Weydemeyer, who had been able to write from New York, under date of April 9, 1852. 'The expected aid has at length removed the obstacles in the way of printing your booklet. Just after I last wrote to you, I chanced to meet one of our Frankfort workers, a tailor by trade, who, like myself, crossed the Atlantic last summer. When I told him of my pirates, he promptly pieced all his savings, a sum of $40, at my disposal.' To this unknown man (Weydemeyer does not even mention his name) we owe it that 'The Eighteenth Brumaire of Louis Bonaparte' saw the light. Truly a class-conscious worker!"

First in America.

A great deal of original writing by Marx was first published in America. Those, however, were in the main contributions to the New York Tribune during the 50's, dealing with current political events in Europe. The American revolutionary movement should take particular pride in the fact that so great a work as "The Eighteenth Brumaire," which will live as long as workers will struggle for their complete emancipation, saw first light in America and that it was an American worker who gave his task sufficient to see it published.

The Other Side— of the Question

By VERA BLACKER.

THAT the bosses and the workers do have something in common has been manifested thruout the shops and factories in Los Angeles on the day the Dempsey-Tunney bout took place.

The "haves" and the "have-nots" joined hands together and all participated on equal basis in the "sports." In some instances the workers standing from the bosses. Such a strong "good will towards all mankind" prevailed that the bosses actually tolerated workers slacking on the job and full freedom was given to talk and discuss the fight. Now, if the workers would only not talk "organizing the unorganized" and advocating "independent political action," there would be no need for revolution and the "world would be safe for democracy"—for the bosses.

Current Events

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY

CHICAGO is located on the eastern outskirts of the great open spaces and is a city of beans, with more callouses on their hands than on their heads. The mayor of Chicago comes from Massachusetts, but his ancasters did not come over on the Mayflower. In fact it is rumored that the mayor, at one time in his life worked in a tannery. Which does not explain why he is mayor of this wealthy city. History does not record the story of a tanner who could afford to quit politics and sojourn for a period in the alleged Holy Land merely because he was a tanner. Whether Dever is going to Palestine to cater to his Irish or Hebrew constituants is not stated.

BE that as it may, as the professional humorists say, the queen of all the Rumanians that are not in jail, is coming to Chicago this week and our capitalist politicians have been listening at the ward keyholes recently to gauge the intensity of the animation inside the political cerebrum of their reason for existence. French scholars use more polite language, particularly those who have patronized a Berlitz academy. What the politicians have heard in this proletarian city has convinced them that they may lose nothing in the way of popularity by being out of town next Saturday, when the queen gets here.

A NEW YORK mayor never stopped to think what Gotham citizens might do to him in the next election because he gargled his throat before receiving a queen. Jimmy Walker spends more money in Manhattan cabarets in one month than would keep the queen of Rumania's husband in chewing gum for a year. And it appears that the natives of our metropolis are more surfeited with republicanism than the Irish, Polish, Lithuanian and Bohemian Americans that make the Windy City the most American berg in the United States. Therefore Jimmy Walker, mayor of New York can ignore his constituents while Mayor Dever must receive the queen with finger nails unmanicured unless he wants to spend the rest of his life in a political limbo.

Last Sunday the Chicago Federation of labor took a crack at royalty and the reverberations reached City Hall. The Mayor Dever worked in a tannery he is not hidebound, or politically muscle bound. I fear that the democratic soul of our mayor might be sufficiently corrupted to allow him to kiss the queen's hand unless fear of losing votes acts as a deterrent. The mayor compromised with the "south of the yards" folks and decided to appear before the queen in an English walking suit. The tall mayor is of Irish descent he does not carry a blackthorn stick or smoke an underslung pipe.

SO Chicago alderman will receive the queen or receive her not as the case may be, with the reception depending on the political precocity of the ward inhabitants, plus, what is left of the original honesty of the politicians and their ability to follow the orgina of their inner selves without being compelled to send their wives and daughters to work in the stockyards as retribution. No doubt the average wife of an American politician (perhaps it should read "the wife of the average American politician" as this is a meritocratic country) would rather osculate the queen's mitt than accept a cake of ice from "Red Grange" net because the queen's patchtitude is superior to that of the famous football player, but because queens are rarer than athletes, even in America. And we know from our study of economics that the value of any article is determined by the so-

BORAH ISSUES CHALLENGE TO SLUSH SOLONS

Ready to Lead Fight on Smith and Vare

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, Nov. 10.—Sen. Borah has thrown down a challenge to Boss Vare in Pennsylvania, Sam Insull in Illinois and all other purchasers of seats in the United States senate, by asserting that congress today has constitutional power to regulate all primaries leading up to the election of the membership of the federal legislature. He proposes that congress clean out the corruptionists from the primaries, and unseat all members who come to Washington as a result of primary election frauds.

This doctrine is contrary to all previous assertions by the organization republicans and democrats. They have looked upon the primaries as an invention to which the constitution does not threw a protecting shadow, and in which the only curb upon bribery and theft is state law. Borah as a defender of the direct primary system has dug into the Federalist papers, studied court decisions, consulted the old and new authorities, and is convinced that he can show that a crooked election is just as crooked if held in July as if held in November. Therefore he is going to get up in the senate and solemly and warningly till Dawes and Coolidge and Smoot and all of their standpat adherents that he is against them. He is against Vare and against Frank Smith of Illinois, and he is going to ask congress to take charge of primary elections of House and Senate members in future by the passage of a primary law to be enforced by the federal government and its courts.

Invoks Rights.

Borah's argument is that there no logic in the clause in the constitution which gives congress supervision over the election of its members, if that supervision is not to include the process by which men are elected. The first part of that process is the placing of names on the ballot. How do they get there? Why? Obviously because they have a political right there, determined by legal machinery. The primary is that machinery. Then the federal government, thru congress, must have the right to see that that machinery is not tampered with.

Cal Will Resist.

Coolidge, Mellon, Vare, and the other machine politicians, will resist this blow to the intrenchments. They are demanding the repeal of direct primary laws. They had hopes of securing a compromise, if not complete success, with few years. But Borah has counter-attacked in a way that worries them. To advance his plan Borah will now be inclined to investigate every slush fund reported in any primary contest, and to so advertise the factor of corruption in republican politics as to endanger the hold of the machine on large blocks of quiescent voters. They do not anticipate that Borah will stick to his own fight long, but they know that Walsh of Montana, Reed of Missouri, Johnson of California and others will take up his argument in one way or another and use it against the old guard and its interests.

No one need be surprised, therefore, if the old guard now drops its fight against direct primaries.

Break Flying Records.

NORFOLK, Va., Nov. 9.—New speed records are in prospect here on Thursday when the pilots and planes of the United States army and Italy meet in a resumption of the Schneider cup races.

On Armistice Day—a couple of minues for thanksgiving and prayer.

GET THE FACTS ABOUT MARIE AND HER REGIME AT I. L. D. MASS MEETING

Hear a most daring and damning exposure of Queen Marie and startling facts of the bloody regime of oppression and murder of workers in Roumania at the I. L. D. protest mass meeting, Saturday, Nov. 13, 3:30 o'clock, at Redifer Hall, 30 N. Wells street.

What is "Cotzofenesti"?

Come and find out, even if you have to put off something else. Bring others. You may join the I. L. D. protest delogation at the Illinois Central station as late as 5 or 5:30 p. m., if you cannot possibly be at the mass meeting.

The I. L. D. will maintain headquarters at 30 N. Wells until 8:30, Saturday, where late-comers will at least be able to get the leaflet on Roumania, which will be issued and released on Saturday for distribution.

Why don't you write it up? It may be interesting to other workers.

PARSONS, HAYMARKET MARTYR, GAVE SELF UP WILLINGLY TO DIE FOR THE WORKERS; REVERE MEMORY NOV. 11

Albert R. Parsons, one of the most active spirits in the labor movement of the '80s of the last century, was a leader in the eight hour day campaign of that period. An excellent speaker, agitator and organizer, he was one of the most popular working class figures in Chicago.

Volunteered for Death.

After the fameus Haymarket riot, when a number of his comrades were arrested and charged with having thrown a bomb at the meeting, he voluntarily surrendered himself in court to be tried with his colleagues. He was sentenced, together with Louis Lingg, Engel, Spies and Adolph Fischer, to be hung, after a thorofy shameful trial, with a prejudiced jury and a judge whose reactionary class instincts were shown at every stage of the proceedings. Lingg was either murdered or committed suicide on the eve of his propdsed execution. The other martyrs went bravely and unflinchingly to their death. Just as the trap was sprung Spies called out from beneath the hood which enveloped his head:

Silence Mere Powerful.

"There will come a time when our silence will be more powerful than the voices you are strangling today!"

Parsons' last words were: "Let the voice of the people be heard . . ."

Were choked at the signal of the executioner when the noose tightened about his throat and strangled him.

Since that day, November 11, 1887, workers everywhere have gathered every year to commemorate the Haymarket martyrs. The Pioneer Aid Association, an organization which has kept alive their memory for two-score years, and has maintained their graves and monument in Waldheim cemetery, together with the International Labor Defense, will hold a Haymarket memorial meeting at the Social Turner Tall, Paulina and Belmont, on Thursday, November 11, with Emil Arnold, president of Painters' Union, Local 275; James P. Cannon, national secretary of International Labor Defense, and Mathilda Kalonsek, who will speak in Czecho-Slovak.

All workers are urged to attend. Admission is free.

Gas Death Accident.

BELVIDERE, Ill., Nov. 9.—Attorney Raymond B. Hall, 31, found dead in his gas-filled kitchen, met an accidental death, a coroner's jury held today.

BANKS DISTRUST CITY CONTROL OF TRANSPORTATION

Want State to Come in for Solution

Distrust of local authorities to deal with the Chicago transportation problem was expressed by presidents of four large Chicago banks—who will have a lot to do with the final solution—at the hearing before the state transportation commission Monday.

The bankers, John J. Mitchell, Illinois Merchants Bank; George M. Reynolds, Continental and Commercial; George Woodruf, National Bank of Republic, and Ralph Van Vechten, State Bank of Chicago, declared they were in favor of state control of the transportation system.

Couldn't Be Worse.

Mitchell declared that state control could not be any worse than the present city management, and that it has possibilities of being much better. He declared that Chicago has had some mayors who couldn't be trusted to handle the situation honestly, and would perhaps have more of that kind.

The granting of indeterminate franchises to the system was also urged by the bankers. They insisted that 20-year franchins would not attract sufficient capital.

Predict Receivership.

Receivership for the surface lines was predicted after Feb. 1, as then all bonds will be due, amounting to $150,000,000. With the present uncertain situation existing, receivership is inevitable, it was stated.

The Haymarket Martyrs

On November 11, 1887, four labor leaders were strung from the gallows in Chicago, and millions of American workers are now enjoying an eight-hour day because of the struggle for a shorter workday initiated by the four who were hanged and their associates, thirty-nine years ago.

The names of Adolph Fischer, Albert R. Parsons, August Spies and George Engel, those heroes of the infancy of the American trade union movement, will be enshrined in the hearts of the workers when the memories of the Gompers, Greens, Lewises and other traitors will be only mentioned to draw hisses and curses from proletarian generations yet unborn.

And yet today our reactionary labor leaders are cheek by jowl with the militarists in the celebration of the ending of the greatest mass slaughter in history—Armistice Day.

The bosses hanged the Haymarket martyrs in 1887. They did, and got away with it. The bosses would have more trouble in springing the death trap today. They have been trying to murder Sacco and Vanzetti for six years, and the mighty protest of world labor has blocked them. To the sacrifice of the Haymarket martyrs and the hosts of others who have immolated themselves on labor's altar can be attributed the steeling of the moral backbone of the working class movement, a backbone that neither bends nor breaks when it sees the capitalists determined to snuff out the life of a labor leader who stands by the cause regardless of consequences to himself.

Let the workers of the United States, at least those of them who are not with the divine fire of revolt, determine on this day, sacred to the working class, to pay tribute to the martyred dead, by redoubling their efforts to place upon the brow of labor the crown of victory that Fischer, Parsons, Spies, Engel and their comrades designed with their hearts' blood.

British Coal Strike Has Cost One and One Half Billion Dollars

(Special to The Daily Worker)

LONDON, Nov. 10.—The British coal strike, which has been in progress since May 1, has cost Great Britain in excess of $1,500,000,000 according to estimates presented to the house of commons this afternoon by Sir Phillip Cunliffe-Lister, chairman of the board of trade.

Sir Phillip estimated that reduced industrial activity and increased unemployment had alone cost the nation between 250,000,000 and 300,000,000 pound sterling.

The estimates which Sir Phillip presented do not include disturbances to trade and losses due to contracts which might have been secured had the nation been industrially capable of filling orders.

Furthermore the cost of government intervention in the strike and the enforcement of emergency regulations is not estimated by Sir Phillip.

Senate Meets to Try English But Adjourns to Allow Dismissal

WASHINGTON, Nov. 10.—For the first time in American history, the senate met today as a court of impachment to try former federal Judge George W. English, of Illinois, on charges of high crimes and misdemeanors in office—but without a prisoner at the bar.

As Judge English resigned from the federal bench a week ago, administration leaders agreed to adjourn the court until December 13, to allow the house time in which to recommend dismissal of the charges.

This procedure would follow a precedent established in 1798 when impeachment charges against William Blount, a senator from Tennessee, were dismissed after he resigned from the senate.

Fall and Doheny Plead Not Guilty

WASHINGTON, Nov. 10.—Arraigned before a court after nearly five years of contentious litigation, Albert Fall, secretary of the interior, and Edward L. Doheny, multi-millionaire oil magnate, entered formal pleas of not guilty today to indictments charging them with conspiracy to defraud the government in the leasing of naval oil reserves in California.

The central figures in the oil scandal were arraigned in district supreme court on the first of four indictments growing out of the leasing of the naval oil reserves by Fall to Doheny and to Harry F. Sinclair. Today's pleadings concerned only Fall and Doheny and the Elk Hills reserve in California.

15 CLOAKMAKERS ARRESTED IN N. Y. INJUNCTION WAR

47 Are Jailed in Post-Election Battle

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, Nov. 10.—Fifteen striking cloakmakers yesterday chose a day in jail rather than pay $1 fines for alleged disorderly conduct while picketing when brought before Magistrate Corrigan in Jefferson Market court. Thirty-two cloak pickets were freed of similar charges.

The 47 arrests were the first mass arrests in the garment zone, according to union officials, since the before-the-election period. The renewed activity of the police is considered especially significant now that the elections are over.

Wednesday a number of mass meetings for striking garment workers were held thruout the city at various halls. Local Arrington Hall, John Coughlin, secretary of the Central Trades and Labor Council; J. M. Budish, of the Cappmakers' Union and others spoke.

At Hennington Hall the speakers included Louis Hyman, chairman of the General Strike Committee; Salvatore Ninfo, vice president of the International Ladies Garment Workers Union, and Alexander Trachtenberg, Augusi Claessens was principal speaker at Stuyvesant Casino Hog Gold, manager of the Furriers' Joint Board and David Dubinsky were among the speakers at Bryant Hall. Morris Sigman, president of the International Ladies Garment Workers Union, J. Boruchson, a vice president of the same organization and Rose Wortis addressed a gathering of strikers at Manhattan Lyceum.

Municipal Court Justice Jacob Panken, recent socialist candidate for governor, in addition to his work here, says Paris candidate for the same office and others will speak to strikers at Webster Hall.

Labor's Reward

SPOKANE, Wash.—(FP)—"It is either the poor farm or the grave yard for me. I prefer the grave-yard." So wrote James R. Scott, 83, before taking poison at his home near Spokane. Scott was an old timer who had nothing to show for his years of hard labor.

DELAWARE, Ohio, Nov. 9.—Judge L. Porterfield federal prohibition commissioner for Ohio and Michigan died suddenly at the Jane M. Case Hospital here this afternoon. He had been ill of goitre for one week.

CHANG KAI SHEK, CANTONESE GENERAL, RECOVERS FROM WOUNDS AND DIRECTS ATTACK ON NANKING, SUN STRONGHOLD

SHANGHAI, Nov. 10.—Cantonese troops are massing in the vicinity of Kiukiang, preparatory to launching an attack from five directions on the city of Nanking, according to word received here today. The movement towards Nanking will begin immediately, advices said.

Recovering from wounds, the young General Chang Kai Shek, leader of the Cantonese, today at Kiukiang predicted that his armies would be in possession of their objective before December.

The Cantonese general declared that all troops of General Sun Chuan Fank had been driven from the provinces of Kiangsi and that the Antwei armies were in disordered flight.

Thirty-Nine Years Ago the Haymarket Victims Gave their Lives for Labor—What Are You Giving?

On Nov. 11, 1887, thirty-nine years ago, five of the bravest fighters the American labor movement has ever known, died on the gallows in the city of Chicago. Lingg, Parsons, Engel, Spies and Fischer, the pioneers in the movement for the eight-hour day, GAVE THEIR LIVES, uncomplainingly, so that the toilers of the future might enjoy the fruits of their noble sacrifice. They gave willingly all they had to give.

Today we honor the memory of their glorious martyrdom. Thousands upon thousands of workers, the country over, will assemble to pay tribute to the brave victims of capitalist ruthlessness and oppression. But their sacrifice has not been in vain. Their glorious example will be followed by thousands of militant workers who will take up the struggle for labor's interests.

In this battle against the iron heel of American capitalism, The DAILY WORKER has been established as labor's standard bearer. In the struggle for a labor party, for the organization of the unorganized, for the protection of the foreign-born, for the recognition and defense of Soviet Russia, for world trade union unity and for the establishment of a workers' and farmers' republic in the United States, The DAILY WORKER stands foremost as the workers' most powerful and effective weapon.

What more fitting means of tribute can there be to labor's honored dead, than the support of The DAILY WORKER, which is carrying forward the cause for which they gave their all? GIVE AS LINGG, PARSONS, ENGEL, SPIES AND FISCHER GAVE. GIVE YOUR DOLLARS AS THEY GAVE THEIR LIVES.

A. F. OF L. HEADS RAP INJUNCTION IN N. Y. STRIKE

New York Cloakmakers Continue Struggle

NEW YORK, Nov. 10. — (FP) — Condemnation of the injunction issued against New York striking cloakmakers is contained in protests to the Emergency Labor Conference of unions received from Frank Morrison, secretary, and Daniel J. Tobin, treasurer of the American Federation of Labor. The emergency labor conference represents the support of 800,000 trade unionists of Greater New York to the strikers' fight against the injunction denying the right of peaceful picketing.

Dangerous"—Tobin.

Tobin writes of the injunction that "it is so dangerous that the masses of our people should rise up against it. It is continually creeping in and destroying the fundamental principles of liberty." Morrison says "The resistance of the New York cloakmakers against the threatened revival of the sweat shop system is an inspiration to the organized workers of North America. The cloakmakers must also combat the labor injunction that has swept aside their fundamental rights. If these workers permit themselves, if they fail to increase the agitation for their cause they accept a defeat in public. They must redouble their efforts to acquaint the public with the employers' purpose and with the effect it is why that is a reproach to American Judiciary. The labor injunction and the sweatshop go hand in hand."

Referring to the cloakmakers' injunction Tobin says: "The latitude of the injunction depends entirely upon the prejudice of the judge, and judges being human are very often decided and prejudiced. Every trick known to the legal fraternity hired by the employers' press for the cloakmakers was called into practice in order to prejudice the court when the application for an injunction was made, and all honesty, decency and truthfulness set aside. Insinuations were made that the cloakmakers are foreigners, not in sympathy with the desire to destroy Anarchistic tendencies, with not the best interest of our country in mind, and many other dangerous, far-reaching, unprincipled, hidden charges were conveyed to the plea for the injunction, with the result that, as stated above, a most sweeping injunction was granted the employers against the striking but determined cloakmakers."

Fifth Month of Strike.

John Sullivan, president New York State Federation of Labor, is honorary chairman; M. Feinstone of the United Hebrew Trades, is chairman, and J. M. Budish of the capmakers' union, is secretary of the emergency labor conference. The cloakmakers, organized in the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, are in their fifth month of strike. Their main demands are for jobbers' responsibility for conditions in their contractors' shops, limitation of contractors, guarantee of 36 weeks' work per year, 40-hour week and wage increases.

Confessor Attacks.

YOUNGSTOWN, Ohio, Nov. 10. — Walter H. Cantield, 57, a prominent business man and owner of apartment houses here, today made a written confession to authorities, the latter announced, admitting attacking four little girls, all under years of age.

Passaic Film Returns

The marvelous film drama of the Passaic textile strike will be shown once again in Chicago on Friday, Nov. 12, at Schoenhoffan Hall, Ashland Ave. and Division St., under the auspices of the Polish Relief Committee for Passaic Strikers. Many workers did not have a chance to see this historical picture when it was shown at Ashland Auditorium on October 29 and where four thousand workers came to see it. They will have a chance to see it on Nov. 12. Admission is 50 cents. Two showings, at 7 p. m. and 9 p. m.

VISIT OF QUEEN HERE WON'T BE A 'ROYAL' SUCCESS AS I. L. D. EXPOSES REGIME AND CITY OFFICERS BALK

With the International Labor Defense local carrying on an extensive campaign against her welcome and exposing the treatment of Roumanian workers to the world, the refusal of many city officials to indulge in any knee-bending, and general disgust being demonstrated thruout the city, the Chicago visit of Queen Marie isn't going to be such a "success" as her "royal highness" is probably planning.

Queen Marie arrives in Chicago Saturday, and it is predicted that what this symbol of workers' oppression and persecution will find here will cause her to wish she hadn't come at all.

Workers to Meet Her.

The I. L. D., which represents some 20,000 workers of Chicago, will stage a mass meeting just prior to the queen's arrival, when the workers will be enlightened as to the real reason for her coming and what she really stands for. The meaning of "Cotzofanesti," which is the most damning evidence ever brought against any monarch, will be revealed then.

Display Banners.

A huge delegation of workers under the direction of the I. L. D. will form an "unofficial welcoming committee to the queen at the train station. "Appropriate" banners are being prepared for her coming.

The I. L. D. has sent a letter to all city officials, the United States department of state, the Roumanian legation, and Roumanian consulate here, telling that that the organization is carrying on a vigorous campaign against the official welcoming of the queen, which is termed an insult against the American workers and against America, which itself fought a revolution against the tyranny that Marie represents. The letter pointed out that Countess Karolyi, who opposed the Horthy government in Hungary, Sakiatvala, British parliamant members and friend of the worker, and Mme. Kollontai, representing the Soviet government, had been denied admittance, and-yet Queen Marie, who represents the worst oppression and tyranny in the world, is welcomed.

Alderman Balk.

City aldermen are not taking kindly to Marie's coming here. A good number of them have absolutely refused to attend the reception for her at the city hall. Alderman Wiley W. Mills, 37th ward, has declared that he won't be there. "I refuse to do any bowing to Queen Marie," he said.

Says Alderman Terrence F. Moran "I'm against the form of government that Queen Marie represents. I lived in Ireland and the tyranny of kings and queens is one of the reasons why I left. There's hundreds of thousands who hold the same views that I do. I won't be at the reception."

Frank Ringa, 39th ward, also refuses to bow down to the queen. "I won't be at the reception. I don't like this royalty hunk. I don't see why Queen Marie is doing over here, anyway, but I guess she is trying to create some favorable sentiment for a big loan," he said.

Doesn't Mean a Thing.

Alderman Thomas Bowler, 41st ward, told the secretary of the local I. L. D. that he "wouldn't walk across the street to see the queen. She doesn't mean a thing to me."

BILLION DOLLAR RAIL MERGER BEING PLANNED

NEW YORK, Nov. 10—Financiers are watching with keen interest negotiations leading to the most important railroad merger in the western half of the United States. It involves the "Hill roads"—the Great Northern, Northern Pacific and Chicago, Burlington & Quincy—whose combined capital is more than $1,600,000,000.

Arthur Curtiss James, director of the Great Northern and the largest individual holder of railroad securities in the country, indicated that merger plans were under way in dispatches received in the financial district.

28,000 Miles.

He was quoted as saying that the eventual extension of the northwest lines into California was James Jim Hill's dream, and that the great railroad builder's vision generally came true.

The three carriers total more than 28,000 miles of lines which tap one of the richest sections of the United States.

From the viewpoint of mileage alone, the consolidation of these three important railroads will make for the largest system in the country. The Burlington operates more than 9,000 miles, and the Northern Pacific about 8,200 miles, altho this covers only the main lines. Should the Western Pacific finally be included in the unification plan of the managers of these properties the total would be increased by more than 1,000 miles.

Await New Laws.

That any immediate announcement will be made of the perfection of the plan under which the consolidation will be brought about is not considered probable, but with several other leading mergers this one probably will await the enactment of laws which will permit such action.

THE British aristocracy are having a lot of fun with "us Americans" because, of our kowtowing to a queen. But if they only knew why we act like this! The reason is the same that urges a Gloria Swanson to marry a marquis after she has divorced half a dozen plebian millionaires. The average American business man, who has made his money in anything from millinery to moonshine, feels the same way about meeting a queen as a waiter would about going in to a Ritz Hotel and getting waited on by a waiter. It's the kick that counts with that kind of a person. Hoi, the politicians love royalty any better than "democracy." They know very little about anything but enough to know that it does not mean a darn thing whether you have democracy or the reverse provided somebody owns the factory in which you work and can say whether you shall be allowed to earn a living or not. That is the point.

EVERY tale should serve as a peg to hang a moral on, and so is the old queen. Marie gets more attention in the United States than she did in Europe, and for very good reason. Monarchism, absolutism, imperialism go hand in hand. In all probability a monarch will be as scarce in Europe in a few years as teeth are in a chicken's mouth. But American capitalism, is sitting more comfortably than British capitalism was some years ago, and the American workers for the time being, are not obliged to disturb the roots of their hairs thinking of the whereabouts of tomorrow's breakfast. So when the wives of their rulers wait on regals themselves crawling before a queen, the masses who have something to eat don't get excited, even tho there are thousands of Roumanian workers serving to enable this female parasite to live in luxury. And as Elks travel to where the salt tastes best, kings and queens will move to this republic where the sun shines best for them and the moon for those who cannot afford smuggled champagne.

RADICALS of little faith are liable to get pessimistic under those conditions. But pessimism is a disease that must be combatted by knowledge. That is the medicine. History is not a collection of fables agreed on, as Napoleon is alleged to have said. Even tho we agree that most of the historians were excellent liars, each one striving to justify his own angle on life. But the student of history can afford to be objective. And there is nothing that history makes clearer than that one economic system follows another. Capitalism is the prevailing system at this period. It is on the down-grade, everywhere except here in America. America "The Last Mohican" of the capitalist system, cannot survive in a Communist world. With the downfall of capitalism will go the kings, queens and other parasites that now eat, drink and revel in luxury at the expense of the masses.

Suit to Admit Girl to School Wearing Knickers in Court

NEW ALBANY, Ind., Nov. 10.—The now famous "Knickers" case will probably be placed on the docket of Judge John M. Parla of the Floyd circuit court tomorrow, it was indicated today following the receipt of the transcript of the suit of Mrs. Pauline Allon, of Port Fulton, who is seeking to mandate the Jeffersonville school authorities to admit her daughter, Virginia, aged 9, to school in knickerbockers.

The case came here on a change of venue from the Clark circuit court, the school authorities claiming they could not procure a fair trial at Jeffersonville owing to prejudice against them.

While the case is pending disposition, Mrs. Allan continues to send her daughter to school twice daily dressed in knickers and the child is refused admittance by the teacher each time.

Sacco-Vanzetti Issue

A. C. W. LEADER JOINS EDITORS' SACCO PROTEST

Fuller Appointe Sacco 'Cutor to Bench

NEW YORK, Nov. 10. — Joseph Schlossberg, secretary-treasurer of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers and editor of the union's official organ, Advance, wired that his name might be included among the New York labor paper editors signing the letter to Gov. Alvan Fuller of Massachusetts asking the removal of Judge Webster Thayer from the Sacco-Vanzetti case and from the bench of the bay state. Schlossberg was sent off town when the letter was being signed but telegraphed its approval as soon as he saw a copy of the letter.

Attack Thayer.

The labor editors attacked Judge Thayer severely for his prejudice in this frame-up of two radical Italian workers and urged his ousting as a menace and danger to other workers who may have to come before him for judgment. The New York editors, in addressing their letter to Gov. Fuller a he departed for a vacation in Europe, hoped that editors of labor papers throout the country would join their protest and plea for Thayer's removal.

Fuller Appoints Former Sacco Prosecutor to Bench.

BOSTON, Nov. 10.—The Massachusetts executive council is considering the appointment of United States Attorney Harold P. Williams to the superior court bench. Governor Alvan T. Fuller made the appointment just prior to his departure for a vacation abroad after being reelected republican governor of the state. Williams was assistant district attorney in Norfolk county in 1920-21 and aided in the prosecution of Nicola Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti, the two Italian workers who were framed up on a murder charge when the United States government failed to secure their deportation as radicals in the last motion for new trial filed by these workers, their attorney bot out strong evidence indicating a conspiracy between state and federal governments to convict Sacco and Vanzetti. Williams, sometime after the conviction of these workers in 1921, was made U. S. attorney in this district.

Painters 275, Chicago, Acts on Sacco, Vanzetti, Queen and Cloakmakers

At the meeting of Painters' Union 275 at 220 Oak St. last night three important actions were taken, one on the Queen of Roumania, one on Sacco and Vanzetti and on the cloakmakers' strike in New York. A strong condemnation of protest against the Roumanian queen was passed in which stress was laid on the fact that there are 2,500 political prisoners in the jails of her country.

A telegram was voted sent to Gov. Fuller of Massachusetts demanding a new trial for Sacco and Vanzetti. Three hundred dollars was unanimously voted to help the struggle of the striking cloakmakers of New York against a vicious anti-labor injunction made against them. More money will be raised for the cloakmakers in the near future.

Durkin Begins Time in State Pen, Must Serve Fifty Years

Martin J. Durkin, convicted slayer of Federal Officer Edward Shanahan was today ordered taken to the Illinois penitentiary at Stateville to serve a 35 year sentence for the crime.

Judge Harry B. Miller issued a mittimus for Durkin's transfer and indications were that before the end of the week the "bible" slayer would begin serving a total of 50 years and 5 days.

Sentences totalling 15 years and 5 days have been already imposed, following Durkin's conviction under the federal anti-auto theft law.

'THE PASSAIC STRIKE' TO BE SHOWN IN N. Y. AT NEW CASINO FRIDAY

NEW YORK, Nov. 10.—The Passaic strike will come to New York Friday night, Nov. 12, when the thrilling seven reel film of that historic struggle is shown at the New Star Casino, 107 Street and Park avenue, continuously from 8 o'clock.

New York workers will have an opportunity of seeing before their very eyes the actual scenes of the big struggle of which they have heard so much thru the newspapers.

A musical program will be included with each showing during the evening, thru the co-operation of the following well-known artists: Anna Shatlen, famous coloratura soprano; Laningrad Operal N. Dontzoff, Russian accordion player; and George Rightling, who will perform on a carpenter's saw.

Austrian Socialists Aid Capitalists Strengthen Tyranny Against Labor

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

IN the days when Communists were making their exodus en masse from the American socialist party, its theoretical leader, Morris Hillquit, argued frantically that the Communists were not Marxians, declaring especially that Karl Marx had never mentioned the dictatorship of the proletariat in any of his writings, and here the Communists, even in the United States of America, were demanding the dictatorship in the form of soviets during the transition period from capitalism to Communism. Arguing thus, Hillquit claimed the socialists were the only real Marxians, the only true disciples of Karl Marx.

Of course, Hillquit had to close his eyes to everything that Marx had ever written in order to cling to his untenable position. It is sufficient here to quote what Marx said in the Gotha program:

"Between the capitalist and the Communist society there lies the period of the revolutionary transformation of the one into the other. Corresponding to this is a political transition period whose state cannot be other than the revolutionary dictatorship of the proletariat."

Messrs. Bauer, Renner & Co., in the best Hillquitian sense, have now put their Austrian Social-Democratic party thru the motions of adopting a new program which they claim is entirely Marxist. The bold claim is made that "the entire trend of ideas in the draft is Marxist." Such hypocrites are not uncommon among the Austrian socialists who offered themselves as the vanguard in the attack on the Communist International thru the organization of the Vienna (Two and a half) International, with their own Fritz Adler as one of its chief heroes.

Like many European socialists who gave lip service to the revolution in the days following the world war, American socialists were not backward in claiming they were in favor of affiliation with the Communist International "with reservations."

When it became clear that the position of the Communist International was for affiliation without reservations, then American socialists drifted toward the Vienna International, they declared for no international affiliation. Now they strike the Austrian socialists back in the Second (Socialist) International, helping as best they can, according to their special abilities, in serving the interests of capitalism.

The New York Times spends a good deal of space in its 1,200 words cabled to this country reviewing the new Austrian program adopted in the congress just adjourned at Linz. It is good news for the American imperialist interests that have adopted Austria as a foster child.

The whole aim of the new program is to ignore the social revolution entirely, even forgetting to give the slightest mention to the existence of the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics, while stressing every pet issue that will capture a few more votes "to win power, not in the next generation, but in the national elections next year." The New York Times hails the fact that the Austrian socialists have gone thru a "decided break with several of the most traditional Socialist revolutionary doctrines."

Like American socialists, the Austrians fondly embrace the imperialist league of nations, urge "the defense of the republic," refuse to combat the deadening influences of religion because it might alienate some of the backward peasantry, avoid entirely a class analysis of the present Austrian state and therefore blot out all traces of Marx's courageous theory of the development of the internal contradictions of capitalism and of the inevitable growth in class antagonism. The Austrian socialists try to forget the lessons of the world war that has just passed and they ignore completely the forces bearing toward the world social revolution in the future. Thus the Austro-Marxists, in their task of helping to strengthen and "perfect" the present Austrian capitalist state, turn traitor to all the principles of Marxism.

Thus the social traitors of Austria follow in the trail of McDonaldism in Great Britain that gave the British capitalists "one of the best administrations they ever had" when J. Ramsay MacDonald, as "labor premier," entered the service of the king. The Austrians, for instance, join MacDonald, in his support of imperialistic oppression in its colonies. Thus Nikolai Bukharin, in analyzing the Austrian program, points out that instead of recognizing the right of oppressed peoples to rebel and pledging themselves to support the national revolutions against imperialism (it is characteristic that the program does not even call these revolutions by their name) the leaders of the Austrian Socialist-Democratic party speak of these colonial movements as the main reason "for the danger of war!"

American socialists will hail the Austrian program as an endorsement of all their treasons to the working class in this country. But that labels them as traitors, too, and the Austrian program should give to America's workers a clear view of the pro-capitalistic role of the social-democracy in Europe at this hour.

RADICALS WIN VICTORY WHEN CO-OP LEAGUE UNANIMOUSLY ALLIES SELF WITH U. S. WORKING CLASS MOVEMENT

By DOROTHY GARY, Federated Press.

MINNEAPOLIS, Nov. 10.—After a 3-day struggle behind the scenes between the radicals and the more conservative wings, the 5th biennial congress of the Co-operative League of America meeting in Minneapolis voted unanimously that the co-operative movement must be a definite part of the working class movement.

It further declared that it must co-operate with all organised workor and farmer organizations. The radicals had wanted a still more outspoken declaration while the conservatives wanted the movement to remain neutral, fearing identification in working class activity to the individual members.

Second Victory.

The forward note was sharply sounded by George Halonen of the Superior, Wis., co-operatives when he declared, "The aim of our movement is to replace capitalism by the co-operative commonwealth. Capitalism is highly centralised and uses the state for its own purposes. In Great Britain the co-operatives sided with the workers against the state in the general strike. In Italy the co-operatives remained neutral in the class struggle. The italian co-operatives are dead, the British ones are working out still greater unity with the trade unions and strike committees.

"In Russia the co-operative movement with 11,000,000 members is the biggest in the world, and no wonder, for there the workers and peasants have taken the state away from the capitalists and are building a worker social structure."

Meeting in U. S.

In his opening address Pres. J. P. Warbasse of the league said co-operative progress in the United States is slow because the majority of the people are satisfied with the capitalist system, which is regarded as the natural thing in the schools, churches, business enterprises, legislatures and courts.

The congress seated 64 delegates from 32 co-operative societies, having in the United States. Trade unions and other organizations sent 28 fraternal delegates. From 13 European countries, including Russia, came cables of fraternal greeting.

Condemn Fascisti.

"The fascists of Italy under Mussolini have destroyed, looted and burned 8,000 co-operative stores," Pres. Warbasse reported. A resolution condemning fascism was passed.

PEACE BANQUET IS HELD ABOARD MARIE SPECIAL

But Royal War Goes on Unabated

Aboard Queen Marie's special train, (in Colorado), Nov. 10.—Despite an attempted "peace banquet," the internal strife aboard the Roumanian special continued today as the royal party was arriving in Denver.

Severe Strain.

Strained relations bordering on an open rupture existed between the royal entourage and the official in charge of the train following the imposing of a virtual censorship over news emanating from her majesty by Professor Nicholas Petrosco, representing Premier Athanesco of Roumania.

A special car today was at the disposal of Lois Fuller, danseuse friend of Queen Marie and indirect cause of the storm center. This car, furnished by Col. John H. Carroll, official host to her majesty, was ready to take Mme. Fuller to New York or any other place she desired.

Birkhead Bounced.

In addition, Col. Carroll announced that May Birkhead, press agent for Mme. Fuller, would leave the train at Denver. Miss Birkhead, charged with intrigue by Carroll, was reported improved in health since her recent nervous collapse.

In the contact of the newspaper correspondents aboard with the queen, Maj. Stanley Washburn, aid to her majesty, has previously acted as liason officer. Professor Petrpsco's announcement that hereafter he would control the press interviews and would be the one to give forth official information hid fair to lead to another conflict even more bitter than when Sam Hill, eccentric millionaire of Washington, was expelled from the train.

So It Goes.

Mme. Fuller is Hill's friend and she indignantly protested his elimination. Professor Petresco at first announced that her majesty was annoyed with the controversy caused by the presence of Mme. Fuller, and would not be sorry to see her leave in Chicago.

Col. Carroll, learning of the statement of Petresco, immediately declared Mme. Fuller was his guest and would be ordered off by no one but him.

HURRY TO GET RID OF ALIEN PROPERTY NOW

Investigation Causes Change in Mind

WASHINGTON, Nov. 10. —(FP)— "Why so sudden?" was Sen. Borah's caustic inquiry when told of Speaker Longworth's post-election announcement that the first thing the regular republican organization in congress will do is to pass a bill restoring all property taken from Germany or German citizens during the war.

Borah has been urging for the past six years that this property be given back to its owners, but Longworth and Coolidge and their organization seemed unwilling to let go the rich perquisities of the alien property custodian's office.

Senate Investigates

When Borah was asked whether he meant to imply that the administration was now in a hurry to wind up the business because Borah's special senate committee is about to investigate the graft in the alien property custodian's office, he smiled and said he did not.

But Longworth's discovery of the need for haste comes just after the narrow escape of his friends Harry Daugherty and Thomas W. Miller from conviction in the federal court in New York on charges of conspiracy in one alien property case.

And it comes rather soon after a visit by Miller to powerful friends in the administration. It does not technically interfere with the federal prosecution promised for Daugherty and Miller, on their second trial, but with the promised prosecution of A. Mitchell Palmer and Hornblower and Weeks and others in the case of the Bosch Magneto Co., whose assets were sold for about $5,600,000 less than they were worth. But it does raise a question of motive.

If the administration is ready to leave the well-picked bones of this property, someone must be afraid of the coming investigation.

Street-Car Employes in Worcester Strike for Union Standing

WORCESTER, Mass., Nov. 10—Worcester street railroad workers in the freight and transportation department of Boston & Worcester Railway are striking for recognition of their union.

About 30 workers are involved.

The workers say in a public statement that they have tried for a year to get the ear of the railroad's receiver on their demands but have failed, altho their union was organized 18 years on this property. The company officials declare that motor buses will be used to break the strike.

COMMUNISTS MAKE GAINS IN GREEK ELECTIONS, REPORTS HERE INDICATE

Information received from Athens by Empros, Greek proletarian newspaper here, indicates that the Communists made great gains in the Voule, Grecian parliament, elections held Monday.

Full returns have not been received, but it is believed that at least 20 Communists were elected to the Voule. In the last election three Communists were elected.

The party is especially strong in northern Greece, Thesally, Macedonia, and Peirseus, the information indicates.

SPANISH UNREST IS GREAT WORRY FOR GOVERNMENT

Reds Arrested, Army Officers Ousted

(Special to The Daily Worker)

MADRID, Nov. 10.—Persistent rumors of unrest thruout the country, especially in the ranks of the army, is driving the government almost hysterical. About 75 arrests were made in Madrid, principally of Communists, by police under orders of the government, altho no charges have been placed against them except "suspicion."

Army officers Ousted.

Seventeen army officers have been demoted and placed in remote stations as precaution, it is announced, against possible mutiny. Resentment in the army is being expressed because of the government's delay in granting amnesty to those involved in the September "plot." Army officials no longer trust their own subordinates, attaching suspicion upon everyone.

Censor Everything.

Everything is being censored thruout Spain. Innocent telegrams are held up for days while the intelligence department inspects their contents. Telephone conversations between Spanish cities and France is almost impossible because the lines are tapped and government censors are continually interrupting.

Police in every city have been reinforced by army rifles for patrol duty.

CAPITALISTS CHANGE MINDS ABOUT BENITO

Disclosures Justify All Labor's Charges

WASHINGTON, Nov. 10 —(FP) — Disclosure of the shameful treachery of Ricciotti Garibaldi, grandson of the Italian liberator, to the million Italian exiles in France whom he had pretended to lead, and the realization that Mussolini has drawn pertiously near to a break with France by his plottings on French soil, has brought home to Washington the meaning of fascism.

Highly Praised.

Judge Gary had praised Mussolini; returning diplomats had prondly related their acquaintance with the dictator; Dawes was envious of his power. Suddenly he was revealed as an international criminal, who bribed the leaders of the liberal refugees abroad to foment plots against himself and to deliver the plotters into his pitiless hands.

Lehor Justified.

At the same time Mussolini justifies the worst fears expressed by organized labor as to his purpose of enslaving the italian nation. Having made strike crime and regular labor unions illegal, he decrees death or long terms of imprisonment for anyone who seeks to impair his iron rule, directly or indirectly.

Say Nicaragua Will Elect Diaz President

MANAGUA, Nicaragua, Nov. 10.—The Nicaraguan congress meets on Wednesday and the reactionaries are preparing to elect Adolfo Diaz, bolwar of Chamorro and backed by the United States capitalists, as president.

It is reliably reported that Diaz will be recognized immediately by Secretary of State Kellogg, who will couple the recognition with the landing of American marines in Nicaragua.

U. S. Marines to Land.

Diaz will ask that American militarists take complete charge of the country in order to crush the liberals. Reconstruction of the national guard and increase in its numbers will be urged on the United States. It is announced. The present national guard is in command of Brooks Carter, former major of the Philadelphia Boy Scouts. Other officers are Americans.

With the conservatives preparing for the election, the rebels, meanwhile, are making military gains. They are now approaching Matagelpa. Matagelpa is a center of American coffee planters, all of them wealthy.

The Americans, it is reported, are panicky over the approach of the rebel troops and have appealed to the United States consul to ask the rebels to refrain from "bombarding" the city. Charge d'Affaire Dennis has complied, and sent a note to Gen Moncada declaring "he would be held personally responsible to the United States for any lives taken."

The British Empire Conference

It is difficult to get any detailed and authoritative news from the British empire conference which is being held behind closed doors in London, but it can be said with certainty that even less than the previous conference of 1923 will it result in a strengthening of the empire hammered out by Disraeli and Joseph Chamberlain. So clear is this that it has become a commonplace to hear of the disintegration of the once mighty British imperial domain.

The opening of the conference was marked by the fear of the demand of the Union of South Africa, represented by the old General Hertzog for a more independent status than is afforded it with the present relationship. Nor did the general's absence from the empire press banquet serve to dispel this fear.

Another delegate, Cosgrove, from the Irish free state, declined to attend the memorial services for British world war workers because of his participation in the eastern rebellion of 1916 in Dublin. This is only a small indication that the anti-imperialist bitterness in Ireland has by no means been liquidated. During the very course of the conference Ireland filed with the league of nations three conventions which it had signed with other sections of the British empire. This was done in the face of the president of opposition created by London, when the British government protested to the league of nations in December, 1924, on the occasion of Ireland's filing of the Anglo-Irish convention. England maintained that the league had not the right to interfere in affairs concerning members of the British "commonwealth of nations."

Australia now demands the right to appoint a representative to Japan, and so have its governors chosen from their own land. The fact that Australia looks to London to the extent that it does is due to the fear of Japanese aggression against the former and its need of the British navy. The recent visit of the American navy to Australian shores was a hint that the United States could just as easily give the inhabitants any necessary protection and obviate the need of relying upon the British navy. The negotiations between Britain and Japan for joint intervention in action against the the attempt to build up the British base at Singapore (a point of security for Australia and New Zealand)—have not resulted in increased love of Australia for the motherland.

Canada, which is honeycombed with American capital investments, in which the victory of McKenzie-King over Meighan was a blow against the empire and towards an orientation to the United States, has demanded and been granted a diplomatic representative in Washington. The anti-British sentiment is growing steadily in Canada.

These are not the blackest pictures. In the other colonies of British imperialism, not the "white ones," the anti-imperialist movement is sharper and more decisive. India, Egypt and Irak are cauldrons of rebellion. Abyssinia, recently divided between the two bandits, Chamberlain and Mussolini, burns with hatred. In China Britain has no friend but the treacherous ones whom it purchases. None of these "colored colonists" have even a voice at the empire conference.

Not one of the decisions arrived at by the 1923 empire conference have materialized. The hope of the British to liquidate the omnipresent unemployment situation by giving governmental aid to emigrants to the dominions and colonies has practically vanished. None of the dominions wants a greater population in that manner, for it will aggravate their own labor problem. Despite the state-subsidised emigration movement, fewer persons are emigrating from England today than did in 1913, without a government subsidy.

The other 1923 conference decision, to increase the British market possibilities in the colonies and dominions, has not only failed of realization, but has suffered a decisive setback. By 1924 British exports had fallen 10 per cent, while American exports had increased by 20 per cent, without counting finished products. And country by country, the decay of Britain's imperial strength is shown by the gain everywhere of American capital over Britain—and in Britain's own territories.

Between the period of 1913-14 in from 20 per cent to 17.2 per cent, while American exports to Canada in the same period rose from 65 per cent to 67.3 per cent. In the same period British exports to Australia declined from 52.4 per cent to 45.2 per cent; American exports rose from 13.9 to 26.4 per cent. In the same period, British exports to New Zealand dropped from 51.5 to 47.8 per cent; American exports increased from 9.5 to 18.9 per cent. Even in India, white British exports fell from 64.2 to 60.2 per cent in that ten-year period. American export went up from 2.6 to 5.6 per cent. (Figures given are percentages of total imports of respective countries.) Nor is this the whole story, for since 1924 the situation has become worse for England, and in inverse proportion better for the United States. Even in the face of Union of South Africa, American investments in enterprises are constantly increasing. A couple of months ago the organization of the first large American company in British South Africa, the Rantjes New Reef Company, with a registered capital of $1,250,000, marked the beginning of the process of financial infiltration which has reached its highest point in Canada.

This is only a part of the story of the disintegration of a once powerful empire. The British lion still roars, but no longer with triumph and the feeling of strength, only with pain. The empire conference can only mark the public opening of all the gaping wounds.

New British Attacks on the Soviet Union

One concrete result of the British imperial conference, according to a special report in the Chicago Tribune, has been the formation of a committee to organize anti-Soviet propaganda in such countries as China, Afghanistan, Persia and Turkey. The committee is headed by such gentlemen as the secretary of state for India, Lord Birkenhead; the first lord of the admiralty, W. C. Bridgman, and O. Locker-Sampson, a tory M. P.

British imperialists know too well that the persistent policy of friendship of the Soviet Union has served to increase the influence of the workers' republic at the expense of the British, especially in the Near and Far East. England has done its utmost to destroy this influence, and in accordance with the best imperialist traditions no means have been too scrupulously to be utilized. The Moscow investie recently exposed the plot against the shah of Persia planned by the formed deputies of the Medjilis (parliament), Sardschi, Zade and Hahm, well-known British imperialist tools. The British had aided in the election of Riza Kahn, but the shah inclined towards co-operation with the U. S. S. R. The conspiracy which, stated by the British to "disarm" him from these inclinations.

It is no secret, furthermore, that Poincaré's ambitions to conquer new worlds, now directed towards placing a fight with Russia, are inspired from the general direction of 10 Downing street. If this "socialist" bloodhound would only come to read the story of the fate that attended similar attempts by Judenich, Denikin, Wrangel, Kolchak, Mahkno and their kin, his unbelievable ardor might be considerably dampened.

The Ramek Regime Falls in Austria

FOLLOWING upon the bank scandals in Austria and the demands of the government employes, the Ramek cabinet has resigned and the catholic Mgr. Seipel, the delegate from Austria to the recent Eucharistic congress, has formed a new government.

The bank scandal investigation disclosed the shameless corruption that existed in the christian-socialist party of Ramek. The Zentralbank had advanced millions of crowns to other banks controlled by members of the christian-socialist party, without any guarantees. There followed the losses by those banks of millions of crowns to a sum the total of which was more than the capital of the Zentralbank. To cover up these shady transactions, Ramek, who had been responsible for the [illegible] development of the state-owned industries, especially the Zentralbank, had the national bank turn over to the former some millions of crowns, also without guarantees.

Combined with this and the fever of speculation that exists today in Austria were the demands of the harassed and miserable government employes. To meet the inexorable demands of the league of nations financial dictator, Zimmermen, so as to stay off the Anglo-Saxon bankers, the wages of these employes have been cut. Recently their salary union decided upon a strike unless their demand for a 23 per cent increase in wages was granted. Ramek attempted to compromise at an 11 per cent increase, which the union bureaucrats dared not accept. A strike was inevitable and might have become general. The Ramek cabinet fell. Seipel, who had been minister in 1924 and whose cabinet had fallen under similar circumstances (after the railway strike) formed the new cabinet. Seipel is the "strong" man of Austria; his strength is directed chiefly against the workers of the country.

The hopeless conditions of Austria, with its housing crisis, its unemployment problem, is all the sharper when it is considered that the international bankers will not permit it to accomplish the ethnic unity of Germany and Austria, demands for which increase with every recurring crisis. For all his "strength," Seipel will not be able to liquidate the crisis. Neither will the Austrian social-democracy, which at its recent congress formulated a program with the probability of forming the next Austrian government in view. The social democracy of Austria, in particular, which favors a coalition in any way except by basing it struggle against the Austrian bourgeoisie, is led by two accommodating and solicitous foe the established capitalist leaders to be able to solve the Austrian problem, which can be solved only by revolution and unity with the U. S. S. R.

A New Phenomenon in Czecho-Slovakia

THE latest development of the struggle of the Zentralbank had the national bank turn over to the former some millions of crowns, also without guarantees.

Combined with this and the fever of speculation that exists today in Austria were the demands of the harassed and miserable government employes. To meet the inexorable demands of the league of nations financial dictator, Zimmermen, so as to stay off the Anglo-Saxon bankers, the wages of these employes have been cut. ## A New Phenomenon in Czecho-Slovakia

THE latest development of the struggle of the [illegible] against the [illegible] bolized by the new government of the Svehla cabinet. For the first time the Czech bourgeoisie has united with the German bourgeoisie into one government. The German bourgeoisie, in the form of the agrarians of the revolutionary forces has repudiated the struggle of the national German minority. Two members of the German party are included in the Svehla government. A temporary unity of the bourgeoisie has been accomplished in the vain hope of finding a solution for the Czech crisis.

Czecho-Slovakia has been "stabilized" with a vengeance. It has gone thru an intensified period of industrialization, but has conquered no foreign markets, and it cannot compete with Germany. The result has been a passive balance of trade. The home market has been hardly cut into because of the decreased buying capacity of the workers and the peasants. The latter, on the latter, the mass unemployment and lowered wages (wages have fallen 40 to 60 per cent) have aggravated this condition. The tax-reform policy of the government, which threw the burden of the budget onto the shoulders of the workers and the peasantry, and the constantly mounting unemployment have brought the masses of workers into the streets in tremendous demonstrations against the government.

In addition, the steady growth of the Communist Party—which not only leads the struggle of the workers and peasants, but also of the oppressed Hungarian, Slovak and German national minorities—has put the fear of revolution into the hearts of the bourgeoisie. The last election showed that the Czecho-Slovak Communist Party was the strongest single party in the whole country, and its influence has been increased by the inability of the bourgeoisie to find a way out of the crisis of "stabilization." The unity of the formerly "irreconcilable" German and Czech bourgeoisie is the answer of the black forces of the country to the growing revolutionary movement.

The social democrats of Czecho-Slovakia, never distinguished by any opposition to the bourgeoisie, have allthusiasm. The German social democrats in Czecho-Slovakia will follow suit and it is expected that a common basis of unity between the two will soon be found. Like master, like man

M. Vandervelde and the Chinese Revolution

AT a time when the Chinese revolutionary forces are on the point of assuming control of all the southern Chinese provinces, and are on the verge of taking Shanghai; when the revolutionary feelings and pressure of the masses is such that even the Peking government is obliged to make a protest at the league of nations sessions against the British massacre at Wanhsien; when the British imperialists are seeking to unite all other powers for a concerted intervention to move their armies to their old advantageous position; when his Belgian majesty's most loyal minister, M. Vandervelde, the socialist minister of foreign affairs, in a conference with Belgian business men with interests in China confesses quite after the fashion of his imperial Nun-socialist" neighbors Vandervelde's stand on the Sino-Belgian trade treaty, negotiated in 1865-66 was approved. The Peking government declares that this treaty unconnected with numerous others in the early days of European imperialism's capital on October 27, 1926. The principal point of the Chinese minister according to Vandervelde, women mean that Belgian nationals residing in China would be subject to Chinese courts. Nevertheless, like a good social democrat and lover of freedom and equality, is horrified at such a prospect. That would be like having French men, or Britishers or Americans, who live in Belgium be subject to Belgian courts . . .

It would not be amiss to suggest that, in the event that British secures sufficient support in Parliament in the coming revolutionary struggles against the Chinese rebels, Comrade Vandervelde who is now minister of labor and Second International, and in a brigade with Sir Austen Chamberlain and his comrades, MacDonald, Brenschaal, Bauer, Renaudel, Aramovitch and a few picked Belgian trusty warriors as a volunteer infantry company to help bring christian freedom and enlightenment to the stubborn heathen Chinese.

THE PROGRESSIVE CARPENTERS MUST DOUBLE THEIR ACTIVITY

By B. GOLDBERG.

The progressive and class-conscious carpenters have realised for a long time that in order that their appeal should not be a voice in the wilderness and in order to spread and have their ideas permeate deeply into the minds of the broad masses of carpenters, it is necessary first of all for all progressive carpenters to organize themselves. It is especially necessary to guard against carrying on work in a haphazard manner; each with his personal plans and his own tactics. All plans and tactics must be utilised in an organized way and on a broad scale.

When this idea became ripe in the minds of the carpenters about seven months ago, they organized the Progressive Carpenters' Club. This club aroused the sympathy of many non-partisan workers and did not disappoint its organisers with its activity.

In the meantime, the disorganising summer months arrived, and in spite of the fact that these were the busy months for the carpenters they were not favorable for organization work. It also had its effect on the activity of the club which did not utilize the opportunity of the busy period in order to organize the passive and disinterested carpenters, to strengthen the union and combat the reactionary forces in our union

Work For the Winter Months.

Now the winter months are coming. The Progressive Carpenters' Club was able to outline the crisis of the summer months. It did not lose the root of its existence. It has even now its organisation apparatus which is able to arouse all progressive carpenters to intensive organisation activity. Therefore the time has come to address a few words to the progressive carpenters.

Every progressive carpenter is more or less acquainted with the conditions under which the carpenters are working and what effect these conditions have on their jobs. How they rush the life out of each other and there is no one to complain to. The carpenters can't complain to their union officials, who claim to be their "friends." They notify the bosses and fine one who complains is immediately laid off. And since we have no job control, because Hutcheson says it's unconstitutional, therefore the bosses can do what they like with the carpenter and he must keep quiet.

The Remedy.

What's to be done? Can we remain passive and allow our union to turn into a private business for a handful of politicians and grafters? Can we permit a situation where our leaders can do what they please with the progressive carpenters? They suspend members and expel entire locals only because they don't agree with their corrupt policies. Can we afford to stand by and keep silent? Can we look on with indifference when they are leading us back to the old days when a worker required the O. K. of the employer before getting a job? We still remember the "security tickets" we used to bring to the boss. And there was no job without it.

No Passivity.

Can we remain passive while we know that such a situation is inevitable because the present prosperity cannot remain forever. The leaders surely don't care about us. They are well taken care of. If $125 a week was not enough, they raised our dues and their wages to $200 a week. We can expect nothing from them. Therefore, it is our duty the duty of all progressive carpenters not to allow such a situation. We must unite our forces to spread progressive ideas among the carpenters. We must make every carpenter understand that the union is for the workers and not for a clique of politicians. They should help us get rid of the corrupt gang whose place is surely not among the workers.

UNIONISTS AID IN FIGHT FOR N. Y. TEACHERS

On Committee to Hit Discrimination

NEW YORK, Nov. 10—Besides William J. O'Shea, superintendent of New York city schools, counsel, other school officials, there appeared representatives of various patriotic organizations at the appeal of the American Civil Liberties Union against the ban on its members speaking in New York schools.

Eugene C. Gibney and Julius T. Cashman appeared for Women Builders, Dwight Braman for Allied Patriotic Societies, Inc., Maj. Richard A. Charles for American Defense Society, Mrs. George E. Olds for Government Club and Federated Woman's Clubs, Capt. George L. Darte, Military Order of the World War, and Rev. Harry E. Rowlby, Lord's Day Alliance. For the Civil Liberties appeared Samuel Untermeyer, Arthur Garfield Hays and Roger Baldwin, protesting that the organization was unfairly judged as "un-American and unpatriotic" in its being on the schools speakers' blacklist.

The state department of education is expected to give an early decision on the fight of the Civil Liberties speakers to use New York schools. Members of the union tried to hold a free speech meeting in Stuyvesant High School last June and were denied the privilege.

Baggage Worker Is Killed When Struck by Newspaper Bundle

SOMERVILLE, N. J., Nov. 10.—Arthur Butler, 24-year-old assistant baggage master for Central Railroad of New Jersey was killed at the Somerville station when a bundle of newspapers struck him, hurling him against a telegraph pole.

He had been loading the bundles on a train, which had just started to move.

The car door caught one side of the bundle sticking out from the truck on which Butler had been loading and threw the newspapers against the worker with sufficient force to knock him thru the air to the pole. His neck was broken.

NEW YORK, Nov. 10—Harry Persson, Swedish contender for the heavyweight crown, today was indefinitely suspended by the New York state boxing commission.

The action was taken as a result of Persson's fouling of Bud Gorman of Kenosha, Wis., in their bout at Madison Square Garden two weeks ago.

CROUCH REFUSES OFFER OF PAROLE FROM ALCATRAZ

Will Not Accept "Conditions"

Information which has been received here gives the report that Paul Crouch, arrested and convicted for revolutionary activity among the American soldiers stationed at Hawaii, who is now serving his three year term in Alcatraz military prison, has refused to accept a parole if it means that he must forsake all activities in the labor and radical movement in the future. It is known that the war department has considered the question of paroling Paul Crouch if he would consent to sign statements to the effect that he repudiated his activities for the working class and that he would retire to his home in North Carolina, where his father is at present residing. Despite the fact that Mr. I. M. Crouch, his father, is in very poor physical condition and has suffered a great deal because of the inability of Paul Crouch to lend financial support to his aged parents, his son, serving "time" in one of the worst prisons in the United States, refuses to give up the principles and ideals for which he stands for the sake of a parole.

History of Case.

Crouch was arrested with his comrade, Walter Trumbull, and a number of other privates and non-commissioned officers in the army after they had formed a legal organization known as the Hawaiian Communist League. They were convicted under a Hawaiian statute which provides penalties for the formation of secret organizations, but the Communist League was not a secret organization, hold its initial meeting in the barracks and secret meeting thereafter. Its official stationery was printed by the regiment printing plant and approved by the officer in charge. The league was broken up and Crouch and Trumbull sentenced because the league stood for freedom from oppression of the Hawaiian sugar plantation slaves and better conditions for labor and the soldiers stationed on the island.

Got 40 Years.

Crouch was sentenced to 40 years and Trumbull to 37 years. These monstrous sentences aroused such a storm of indignation in American labor and progressive circles that the courts were forced to revise the sentences, giving Crouch a three-year term and Trumbull only one year.

Trumbull's Tour.

Upon Trumbull's release he made a nation-wide tour for International Labor Defense, which had taken up the cases and conducted a big propaganda campaign in behalf of the two radical soldiers

The last report concerning Crouch is an indication that he intends to stand as firmly as ever for his principles, even if it means the continuation of his prison term.

WITH THE YOUNG WORKERS

CONDUCTED BY THE YOUNG WORKERS LEAGUE

LENINISM AND NAT'L LEAGUE SCHOOL

By ISRAEL PELTZ.

One of the subjects of the curriculum of our National League Training School is Leninism. It would be quite important to take this phase of our school's program and see what significance there is in teaching the students the fundamentals of Leninism.

"Leninism is the application of Marxism in the period of imperialism expressed in the activity of the party," says I. Stalin in his pamphlet on Leninism. This drives home the practice of Leninism among the members of the Young Workers League.

The most essential factor necessary to make the activities of the Y. W. L. more effective is that at least, the leading comrades of the league should look into the economic and political situation of the world, particularly the home country, from a correct angle, that is, the Leninist method. The comrades must clearly see that we live in the period of imperialism, which is the "final stage of capitalism." Our activities must always line up with this principal fact.

Thus, for instance, the importance of carrying on anti-imperialist and anti-militarist work on a larger scale, must be understood by every active comrade of the league.

The comrades must clearly understand that the stage of imperialism is a period of brutal capitalist wars, which will bring about the social revolution, the emancipation of the proletariat. We must necessarily apply our daily activities to this factor, as Lenin has taught us.

Knowing the Leninist theory without its methods of practice is not Leninism.

The Leninist method is a method of flexability. This means that we use the method as designed by Lenin as a sort of magnifying glass, and apply his teachings in practice to the given situation, keeping the approaching social revolution in front of us as the guiding star on our path.

Yet, this league school would be a total waste of time and resources if the students of it would consider all this a matter of mere generalities. When the school is over we must go back to the districts and practically put into practice what Leninism teaches the party.

The most important element of Leninism is practical activity. We must broaden our work amongst the masses. This means every detail of our work. We, the students, comin home must broaden the activities of our respective locals in the trade unions, shops, clubs and all the other different organizations where working youth can be found, schools, colleges, etc.

In short, we must see that the N. L. T. S. gives a great push to the league towards building a mass Young Workers League of America. The aims of the school is not to produce some new "theoreticians" for the league, but to prepare more practical "professional" Communists for the labor movement, in accordance with the requirements of the epoch of imperialism.

We are not Leninists until we put the theory into practice. Not with words, but with deeds!

Buffalo Plenum Is Forward Step for League

BUFFALO, N. Y.—On November 7, simultaneously with the celebration of the ninth anniversary of the Russian Revolution, there was held a plenum of the district committee of the Young Workers League here. Besides the Buffalo members of the district committee, Comrade Esther Drawsky was present from the Syracuse League.

The plenum opened with Comrade I. Greenberg, district organizer, in the chair and Comrade Drawsky as secretary. A report on the political and economical situation and the consequent activities of the Workers (Communist) Party on the basis of this situation was outlined by Comrade H. Benjamin, the party district organizer. In the course of his talk, Benjamin pointed out the need for a better co-operation between the league and the party, that the league should make greater use of the party apparatus for its work, etc.

Comrade Nat Kaplan, representing the national committee of the league, then reported. He pointed out how the situation in the country is affecting the young workers. Progress has been made by the American young workers, particularly in the heavy industries, etc. This has been made possible because of the successes in the unification of our own forces on a correct line. For the Buffalo district, the most elementary problems faces us which shall result in doubling our present membership.

These elementary problems were than tackled in the reports of Comrade Greenberg, Aliquist, Laine and Drawsky. On the economic-trade union field some work can be done in the form of propaganda in at least one factory employing youth labor in Buffalo, Syracuse and Rochester. The comrades must join the union, take up the youth problems in the party fractions, etc. A course in the political minimum with either party or league instructors will be undertaken. In Buffalo the league will help the Open Forum run by the various working class elements and try to attract new league members thru this work. Every member must win over at least one other member for the league and the educational work and the introduction of lighter features must be instituted to keep these members in the league. These questions were all discussed in great detail.

The possibilities for sports work was discussed for Buffalo and Rochester. For both these leagues the immediate steps to carry on this work was decided on in detail. The immediate steps to perfect the functioning of the league apparatus, the relationship with the national office, individual responsability, more collective work, financial problems, etc., were all discussed. Altho little had been done for the 4th campaign of the Young Worker the plenum laid the basis for the doubling of the quota assigned this district.

Comrades from Rochester and Syracuse were co-optated to the district committee and a secretariat consisting of Comrades Greenberg, Aliquist and Laine was elected. The district committee will meet once every month and the secretariat will handle technical matters in between meetings of the D. E. C. for both the district and

JUDGE TAKES SPITE OUT ON BOX WORKERS

Fines Pickets Despite Contrary Evidence

NEW YORK, Nov. 10.— Judge Well imposed $45 in fines upon four strikers paper box workers yesterday in Tombs Court. The judge was evidently sore at William Karlin, attorney for the union, and took his spite out on the pickets who were brought before him charged with disorderly conduct. Last Monday Karlin had a tiff with the judge in regard to another case and yesterday the judge had his revenge.

Diaboliaves Girl.

One girl, Eva Solansky, testified that she had been hit in the face by a scab and exhibited a bloody handkerchief as evidence. The officer who arrested her testified that she had interfered with scabs when they were leaving work at the Unique Paper Box Co., 109 Spring Street. The Judge believed the officer, rather than the girl herself, and even tried to confuse the girl's testimony. Finding himself mistaken about the testimony given by Miss Solansky, the judge fined her extra heavily to the tune of $25.

Rabukas Attorney

Another girl was fined $10 altho a witness testified in her behalf that she had not used vile language against the scabs nor had she accused the officer of taking graft from the employers, as had been charged. The judge refused to credit the testimony of the witness as the one who complains is immediately laid off. And since we have no job

Loves Workers.

Mr. Karlin then asked him if he loved the workers" in his shop which had gone on strike. The employer said he did, to the amusement of the audience in the court room.

Fred Calola, manager of the union, announced last night that scabs working in the Florida Paper Box Co., 207 East 12th Street, had quit work because the employer refused to pay them the wages that he had promised them for strike-breaking work. He also announced that I. Isenberg and Sons, 139 Alabama Ave., Brooklyn, employing 21 workers, had settled with the union. Twenty-two firms have settled with the union to date

800 STRIKE IN McKEESPORT, PA. PLATING WORKS

Tin Platers Walk Out Against Extra Toil

By GEORGE PAPCUN.
(Special to The Daily Worker)

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Nov. 10.—Over 800 workers in the McKeesport Tin Plate Company of McKeesport, Pa., walked out on strike on Nov. 8. The night shift came on and supported the day workers who had laid down their tools

100 Per Cent.

The workers are striking in protest against the addition of extra work to their tasks that, in effect, represents a reduction to wages of 15 to 20 per cent.

More than 3,000 workers are prevented from work by the walkout. Those who have downed tools are sticking together 100 per cent. They have held no meetings thus far, but a leaflet calling for solidarity has been issued and signed by a group of workers.

N. Y. Jewish Workers' Club Doing Good Work

NEW YORK, Nov. 10. — The Bronx Jewish Workers' Club has, since its organization, succeeded in gathering quite a following

It can best be illustrated by the money collected for the Passaic relief—over $500 and by the 200 clothing bundles for the strike

It has held a series of open air meetings to arouse sympathy and gather relief for the British miners. Finally it has pledged itself to raise $1,000 for the Freiheit in its present campaign

The lectures the club has arranged recently with Comrades Marmour and Mellech Epstein have been a huge success.

The next thing about to be staged will be the literary evening and concert, with Uncle Sam Liptzin and Sam Zibulsky, that pleasing tenor, who is one of the prite students at the Dam rosch Institute

This will take place Friday, November 12, at 1347 Boston road. After the affair we will have a get-together for the active members and those of the sympathizers who wish to join us

McKinley Near Death.

MARTINSVILLE Ind., Nov. 10.— Senator William B. McKinley, republican of Illinois, continued to sink today and fear was felt he might not survive the five relapses which followed an attack of neuritis and pulmonary congestion last August.

McKinley's condition is becoming weaker daily, said Dr. Robert H. Egbert. A milk diet has replaced solid food.

LABOR COUNCIL OF N. Y. SENDS PASSAIC APPEAL

Deak and Wagenknecht Make Plea

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, Nov. 10.—The Central Trades and Labor Council of this city voted last night to appeal to its members to lend to render assistance to the heroic Passaic textile strikers and also voted credentials to representatives of the strikers allowing them to visit the locals to present and further their appeal. As an example to the locals, the central body donated $15 to the cause. This is the maximum allowed under its constitution.

Told of Eviction.

The action followed addresses by Gustave Deak and Ellen Dawson, respectively president and secretary of Local 1603, United Textile Workers, and Alfred Wagenknecht, relief chairman. They pointed out that Governor Moore of New Jersey, Senator Borah and a committee of New Jersey public men had recently taken steps to bring the mill owners into settlement negotiations. Also, they said, landlords had shown sudden severity in evicting families of strikers, and the gas company was denying to strikers the ordinary extensions given to other customers.

Crisis in Relief.

"The crisis has come in Passaic," said Wagenknecht, "and organized labor in New York can do much to bring us thru. Incidents indicate that mill owners are in collusion with landlords and the gas company to force us to quit and that the political parties see an approaching end to the strike and want credit for ending it. Whether we return with the right to organize or are starved out is to be decided by funds. The mills are producing little and they want us back. Our surplus of $100,000 put aside from contributions in the early days of the strike has been used since June. The textile industry all over the country is watching Passaic to see whether the workers will win and the mills be forced to raise wages and recognise the human rights of their workers.

CLEANERS AND DYERS OF LONG BEACH, CALIFORNIA, STAGE 100% WALKOUT

By L. P. RINDAL
(Worker Correspondent)

LONG BEACH, Calif., Nov. 10. — A few months ago, members of Cleaners' and Dyers' Union No. 174, Los Angeles, went on strike—1,000 to 1,500 strong—in protest against short pay, long hours and all around unbearable scab conditions for workers of both sexes. The leadership was in the hand and hands of General Organizer A. S. Glassman of Journeymen Tailors. The blunderhand in the paradise of the open shop did what it could to scatter the forces of organized labor by the usual formula: Divide and Rule. But the spirit of solidarity in the ranks of the workers triumphed into "the greatest victory for years" in this part of an exploiting master class world.

Unionism Spreading.

Organizer Glassman and his lieutenants extended the cleaners' and dyers' organization to the Pacific ocean, Long Beach and Wilmington—workers for oil, tourists and bathing beauties, etc. Sub-Local No. 2, branch of 174 L. A., was formed. According to The Citizen, organ of the Central Labor Council of Los Angeles, and brother Glassman—the membership is approximately 400; 250 in Long Beach and the rest in Wilmington. These communities are small, but the character of the population explains the great amount of fine suits and dresses, etc., sent to the shops for cleaning and dying.

Trouble in The Air.

The work was piling up very heavy, and the discontent increased with the victory in the cleaning and dyeing industry of Los Angeles. To some extent, the black-suited open-shopper of that "white spot" promised employers of other cities from granting better conditions to their overworked and underpaid wage slaves.

Brother Glassman speaking: "Many cases have been called to my attention where workers in the cleaning and dyeing industry have been forced to work 60, 70, yes even 105 hours per week for a period of more than a month. . . Some of our members have been working for as little as $16 per week and a great number of the men working in the industry receive $30 and less per week and work from 60 hours per week for such wages."

Workers' Demands Rejected.

Monday, Nov. 1, a committee of nine, a delegation representing the plant owners. The demands in the form of an "agreement," presented to the agents of the bosses were, in part, as follows: Rights of collective bargaining; a minimum wage scale, i. e., $32.50 for women (unskilled), and $60 per week for first class mechanics; a 44-hour week; no discharge without the consent of the union; work to be divided in slack seasons; 6 major holidays in the year, and other reasonable treatments and conditions—necessary in order to create and maintain a decent standard of living for the workers.

It took the bosses one hour and a half to reject these demands, no counter proposal of any kind was offered the workers, and the conference was "adjourned by the plant owners."

In the evening, same day, a mass meeting was held, a strike ballot taken: "almost 150 ballots" in favor of a walk-out and no opposition.

Strike.

Tuesday, Nov. 2 (election day), the strike call went out. The workers responded wonderfully. Every plant (119) but one in the city, the Sunset Dye Works, was affected. The management of this plant turned in a riot call. The riot squad, led by Chief Taney, "responded to find a large and most orderly gathering of men, women and girls staging a peaceful demonstration." The strikers, however, have been accused of violence by the forces of reaction. A parade in the streets of Long Beach was broken up by the police, and 61 men and women were arrested because of mass picketing. The strikers were questioned and released.

When the writer reached the Sunset Dye Works in the afternoon of Nov. 5, he found that plant shut down also. The only activity in evidence were two big "bulls," substituting for watch dogs. So the dyeing and cleaning business is at a complete standstill in Long Beach and Wilmington today, and the shops evidently will remain closed until an agreement is reached, Glassman said.

Sad Surroundings.

The Sunset plant is located in the factory section of the city; it is a shack-like and unhealthy-looking slave driving affair. With its dangerous fumes of high volatile gasoline, and other "spotting" chemicals, it is a plant turning out business for the undertaker and the grave digger.

A few hundred feet from the Sunset Dye Works, a branch of the Hammon Lumber Co. of San Pedro, California, can be seen. Mr. Hammon was the most notorious character back of the persecution and prosecution of workers in San Pedro and Los Angeles during the year 1923. The presence of labor-baiters like that is enough to poison the air in any community. As a matter of fact, the workers struggling for a living under this environment were the last to listen to reason, the last to walk out with the rest of class conscious men, women and girls.

Victory in Sight.

Owners of forty-four out of sixty-five of the small cleaning shops have organized the Retail Shop Owners' Association. The main object of the new organization is mediation between the strikers and the plant owners. The strikers consider this to be a good sign for an early settlement.

KUOMINTANG OF BOSTON MOVES INTO NEW HOME

By FRED DOUGLAS
(Worker Correspondent)

BOSTON, Mass., Nov. 10. — The Kuo Min Tang, Chinese Nationalist Party, celebrated the occasion of moving into new headquarters at 17 Hudson Street, Boston with a program crowded with activity. A house-warming ceremony was followed by an elaborate banquet which in turn was followed by a reception to new members in the spacious meeting room.

Tribute to Sun Yet Sen.

An impressive tribute was paid to the memory of Dr. Sun Yat Sen and Mr. W. Hong reviewed the life struggle of the beloved Chinese emancipator. Brief appeals were made by the various officers of the Boston Branch for unity and increased support of the advancing liberation forces in China.

The spirit of the Russian revolution was voiced by two new members, Dr. Lerner and Dr. Weinrebe, both Russian born, who described the situation existent during the Czarist regime and the subsequent overthrow of the vicious imperialism which is making a last stand in China at the present time, and pledged their support to the Kuo Min Tang movement.

Present Play.

A play by Chinese actors augmented by Chinese music rounded out the day and a midnight banquet for those who were unable to attend earlier was prepared.

As usual the kept press of Boston carefully avoided mentioning the celebration in pious consideration, no doubt, of the feelings of the ultra-conservative element who have long since lost all vestige of the revolutionary spirit which characterized Boston, in days gone by, as the Cradle of Liberty.

SHERIFF STOPS CELEBRATION IN YORKVILLE, OHIO

But Event Is Held in Home, Anyway

By a Worker Correspondent

YORKVILLE, O., Nov. 10. — Before the meeting that was arranged by the Workers (Communist) Party started, several deputy sheriffs, heavily armed, appeared and stated that the meeting would not take place on order of the county authorities.

The speaker, Comrade N. Shafer, had not yet arrived, but when he came and demanded the reason of stopping the meeting, the deputies merely responded that those were their orders.

The meeting took place just the same, but at the home of a comrade. If the county authorities think that they will be able to arrest the resentment of the miners by openly allying themselves with the coal operators—and with the reactionary machine of the nation—they are sadly mistaken. The miners are waking up again, and the 300 who were present to celebrate the tenth anniversary of the Russian Revolution will have learned more by the stopping of the meeting than by anything else.

A meeting the next day at Nelfa was successful.

Time He Served Is Not Recorded; Almost Jailed Again

(By a Worker Correspondent.)

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 10.—Fearful that he might be kept in Los Angeles county jail for life on a minor offense, Edward O'Neil vowed the other day that he would never again run any risk to be arrested.

O'Neil speaks from experience. He was recently convicted of a liquor violation and was sentenced to serve 30 days in the county jail by Judge Forbes. The sentence was passed two months ago and O'Neil served it. In fact, O'Neil served 54 days—four more than the court asked for.

A few days ago O'Neil was brought into Judge Turney's court on a liquor charge, which proved to be the same one for which he had already served four days overtime.

"Guilty or not guilty?" asked the judge.

"Well, if your honor please," O'Neil hesitatingly opined, "I've already served time for that charge—with four days addition. I sort of thought it had all been settled. I guess I'm guilty, but . . ."

Judge Turney at once launched an investigation, which revealed that O'Neil had been sentenced 60 days ago and had served the term. The sentence had not been recorded. The judge then apologized to the defendant, adding:

"If you are ever brought in here again I'll see that the four days go to your credit."

Milwaukee Celebrated the Ninth Anniversary of Russian Revolution

By Z. BEGALOW
(Worker Correspondent.)

MILWAUKEE, Wis.—The ninth anniversary of the Russian revolution was celebrated here with a big mass meeting. The hall was overcrowded with workers who eagerly listened to the speakers. The robbin work of the Russian workers and peasants inspired the audience. Many workers learned the truth about Russia and the Russian revolution.

PROGRESSIVE FARMERS ISSUE CALL FOR NATIONAL CONVENTION MEET AT MINNEAPOLIS, MINN., ON DEC. 6

(Special to The Daily Worker)

BISMARCK, N. D., Nov. 10.—The following call for a national convention of the Progressive Farmers of America has been sent out by the headquarters of that body and is of interest to farmers and workers alike who are aware of the critical situation with which the land workers of the United States are confronted:

CALL FOR NATIONAL CONVENTION OF THE PROGRESSIVE FARMERS OF AMERICA

BROTHERS:

Conditions on the farms of America are becoming steadily worse as time goes by. Farmers as a class are descending in the economic scale. The mortgage holders have taken the place of the feudal barons of Europe and great numbers of free born citizens have been reduced to the level of peasantry.

The mortgage indebtedness of the farmers of the country increased from $1,736,172,861 in 1910 to $4,003,787,192 in 1920 while farm taxes increased 140 per cent between the years 1914 and 1925. All this time the net income of the farmer has been steadily decreasing.

Thousands of farmers have been forced to leave the land and enter into competition with the unorganized workers in the cities thereby reducing the wages both receive to the starvation point.

While these conditions obtain in the country's greatest industry—agriculture—politicians and business men are making confusion worse confounded by talking about farm relief from congress.

People presuming to speak for the farmers are frequently those whose principal occupation it has been to exploit the tillers of the oil.

But the true voice of the farmers has not been heard because there is no proper organizational vehicle to give expression thereto. To find such a vehicle and to force a powerful weapon for the emancipation of millions who make their living out of the soil, a national conference of the Progressive Farmers of America is considered necessary and desirable.

We, the undersigned, therefore, give notice to the members of the Progressive Farmers of America and the local and state councils thereof, that a national convention of said organization will be held in the city of Minneapolis beginning at 10 00 a. m on the 6th day of December 1926. That until further notice the delegates will gather at the Vendome Hotel in that city on the date mentioned.

The purpose of such a conference is to create a National Council of the Progressive Farmers of America and to formulate a constitution and program of action for its guidance.

The basis of representation shall be as follows:

Each local council of the Progressive Farmers of America in any state shall be allowed five delegates for the local, duly accredited by such local. Above the five delegates the local shall one delegate shall be allowed for each one hundred members. Each unorganized group of twenty five members shall be allowed one delegate. No county council of action shall be allowed five delegates at large, and one more for each 100 members. Each state council shall have five members at large. No double representation. Any member of the Western Progressives Farmers duly accredited, with dues up to date shall be allowed the privilege of the floor with no vote. The provisions of the call are such that all representatives of councils to be seated must show that their council is paid up to date on the state books, and that they personally are paid up to date. Those present who are unattached to Councils must show that they are in good standing in order to be admitted or take part in the procedure.

Wise to School.

LIBERTY, N. Y., Nov. 10.—Charlie Wise, 16-year-old orphan, acquitted in Monticello jail evening of the murder of Miss Nina Vilona, said today he planned to go to school in Brooklyn, N. Y.

Miss Vilona, 50, a pianist in a Mount Vernon, N. Y., motion picture theater, was slain near Bitter Sweet on July 9 while on her vacation.

Held Maid in Theft.

NEW YORK, Nov. 10—Margaret McConnachin, 52, a pantry maid, was being held today on a charge of suspicion of grand larceny in connection with the theft of $360,000 worth of jewels from the home of Myron C. Taylor, wealthy steel man.

The jewels have not been recovered. The maid was employed by the Taylors 10 days before the robbery occurred.

A NEW NOVEL OIL By Upton Sinclair

(Copyright, 1926, by Upton Sinclair)

There were a few who did not drink; Annabelle was one, and Vee Tracy another. The spectre had apparently been instructed not to go near Vernon Roscle, and if Vernon tried to approach the spectre, there would be a sharp warning, "No Verne!" But others drank, and tongues were loosened, and came to life, and revealed a tongue! It was Vernon Roscoe's habit to "josh" everybody, and now he got paid back, as the one-time rancher from Texas sat up in his chair and opened his long, horse's face and demanded, in a falsetto voice which sounded as if it came from a ventriloquist: "Anybody here know how this old shyster got his start in life?"

Apparently nobody did know; and Orpan put another question: "Anybody ever seen him in swimming? I bet you never! When it's out-doors, he'll tell you the water is too cold, and when it's indoors he'll tell you it's dirty or something. The reason is, he's got one too missing, and he's afraid to have it proved on him. When he was drilling his first well, he ran out of money and was clean done for; so he went and took out an accident insurance policy, and then went rabbit hunting and shot off one of his big toes. So he got the cash to finish the well! Is that true, old socks, or ain't it?"

The company laughed gleefully and clamored for an answer; and Vernon laughed as much as anyone. He didn't mind the story, but you could never get him to tell. Instead, he countered on his assailant, "You ought to hear about this old skeezicks, how he got rich leasing oil lands from Indians. They tell this about a dozen oil men, but Fred was the real one that done it, I know because I was there. It was Old Chief Leatherneck, of the Shawnees, and Fred offered him one-eight royalty, and the old codger screwed up his eyes and said, 'No take one-eighth, got to have one-sixteenth.' Fred said he couldn't afford that, and begged him to take one-twelfth, but he said, 'One-sixteenth or no lease.' So they signed up for a sixteenth, and now it's the Hellfire Dome, by Jess! It that so, old skeezicks, or ain't it?"

Said Fred Orpan, "You might complete the story by telling what the old chief does with his royalties. He's got a different colored automobile for each day of the week, and he figures to get drunk three times a day."

"Oh, take me to the Hellfire Dome!" wailed the voice of Harvey Manning. "They don't let me get drunk but one time in a night, and none at all in the day-time!"

IX

There was a large organ in this cathedral, a magic organ of the modern style, which played itself when you put in a roll of paper and pressed an electric switch. It played the very latest jazz tunes from Broadway, and the company danced, and Vee Tracy came to Bunny and said, "My doctor allows me only one drink in an evening and I want a sober partner. Bunny was glad to oblige, and so the time passed pleasantly. He danced with his hostess, and with the blonde fairy, Bessie Barrie. In between dances they chatted, and the Chinese spectre continued to flit about, and the deeps of the human spirit were more and more unveiled.

In front of Bunny stood Tommy Paley, super-director, handsome, immaculate if slightly ruffled, flushed ... face, and steady upon his legs if not in his thoughts. "Look here, Ross," he said. "I want you to tell me something."

"What is it?"

"I want to know what it's all about."

"What, Mr. Paley?"

"Life! What the hell are we here for, and where do we go when we get through?"

"If I knew," said Bunny, "I would surely tell you."

"But, lookit, man, I thought you went to college. I never got any education, I was a newsboy and all that. But I thought when a fellow's read a lotta books and goes to college—"

"We haven't got to it yet," said Bunny. "Maybe it comes in the last two years."

"Well, by God, if they tell you, you come tell me. And find out, old son, what the hell we going to do about sex? You can't live with 'em and you can't live without 'em, and what sort of a mess is it?"

"It's very puzzling," admitted Bunny.

"It's the devil!" said the other. "I'd pay anybody ten year's salary if they'd teach me to forget the whole damn business."

"Yes," said Bunny; "but then, what would you direct?"

And the super-director looked at him, bewildered, and suddenly burst out laughing. "By God, that's so! That's a good one! Ho, ho, ho!" And he went off, presumably to pass the good one on.

STRIKE STRATEGY

By WILLIAM Z. FOSTER

ARTICLE XII

An Effective First Blow

Especially must the strike strategist understand how to apply the theory of the offensive in the early stages of a struggle that has the earmarks of becoming far-reaching and bitter. We must learn how to start strikes successfully. In strikes, as in many other things, "Well begun is half done." In all kinds of fights an effective first blow is often decisive. Hence, an initial shattering attack must be a fundamental part of our strike strategy.

When workers are about to strike in a plant, a sort of strike fever runs among them from department to department. They are carried away with this overmastering spirit of revolt and class solidarity. They strike enthusiastically in a body. In the early stages of great struggles (such as those of the railroad shopmen, Lawrence and Passaic textile workers, etc.), something of this same burning wave of solidarity sweeps through vast categories of workers not directly in the fight. The dramatic struggles going on in their industry inspires them with a sense of their own wrongs, fires them to fight to redress their own grievances and those of their class brothers already in the fight. It is a strike contagion, a spreading revolt of the workers.

Spreading the Revolt

Once on strike they will fight loyally. But if they are not mobilized immediately and led into the struggle they grow cold. Their desire for action evaporates. They finally refuse to strike. Time and again in great upheavals amongst the unorganized in a given industry the left wing leaders (and of course the reactionaries) have failed to take advantage of it by organizing these masses into the first shattering offensive against the employers. Consequently their strikes have paid for it in their later stages.

The Element of Surprise

A strike strategy based on the theory of the offensive often gives the workers the advantage of the element of surprise. Military strategists are keenly aware of the value of surprising their enemies. They are constantly seeking to catch them napping, and to deliver attacks against them when they are unprepared. Strike strategists must bear the same principle in mind, for the class struggle offers many opportunities to the workers to strike unexpected blows against the employers. For example, the rapid extension of a strike along the lines above indicated often produces social conflagrations entirely unlooked for by the employers.

A good illustration of how the employers can be taken by surprise was seen in the campaign to organize the steel workers in 1918-19. From long experience Gary had gained a justified contempt for the organising ability of the A. F. of L. leaders so far as the steel industry was concerned. Hence, when another campaign was announced in 1918 he laid out no new lines, the effect of which he completely underestimated.

The original plan of the campaign was to make a swift organizing drive simultaneously in all steel centers. The situation was such that, with just a few weeks of work as proposed, such a grip could have been secured on the mass of steel workers that Gary, taken by surprise, would have been unable, when he did realize the effectiveness of the new tactics, to take any counter measure sufficient to defeat the campaign.

But the trade union leaders, partly through ignorance and partly because they were opposed to organizing the steel workers anyway, refused to support such a swift national offensive against the Steel Trust, which they had every means in hand to carry out. They confined the opening of the campaign to the Chicago district. There it proved highly successful. In two weeks of actual work the masses were either in the unions or under their direct influence. The same thing that was done in the Chicago district could have easily been done all over the country, had it not been for the reactionary leadership of the unions.

Gary quickly woke up after he saw what had happened in the Chicago district. His company gave the workers the basic 8-hour day and checked the movement. Thus we lost the advantage of surprise in this case where it would have been decisively favorable for the workers. The real working class strike strategist will always keep this question of surprise in his mind when working out his policies.

Strikes of related groups of unions present many difficult problems which must be studied and borne in mind in our strike strategy. For example, the I. L. G. W. strike in New York weakened the Passaic strike in that respect by shutting off the market for those goods, thus relieving somewhat the pressure on the Passaic

Armistice Day

Eight years ago today the capitalist powers that were fighting for civilization by proxy—the proxies being workers—decided to gag their guns and park their gas bombs until some other worthy cause demanded their use. Several million men were killed and three times the number maimed, not to count the sorrow that came to millions of homes thru the loss of their nearest and dearest. The total loss in life and suffering brought about by the war cannot be computed.

It was a "glorious war" while it lasted and afterwards profitable for those who pulled the strings. For those who did the fighting it meant toes pointed towards the skies, provided the toes could be located, or for those who survived, the wounded, a life-time in a lonely hospital. And for those who came out of it with more or less sound bodies, needed sound feet to pound the bricks in search of masters. Of course, there were those who survived physically and economically. They are now officers in the American Legion and are going to Paris for a drunk on the occasion of the next legion convention.

This is the day we do not celebrate. The capitalists do and have reason to. The American capitalists because the war left them sitting on the top of the world; the European capitalists, because it left them with a place to sit.

We do not celebrate armistice day; we merely draw a lesson from it and we try to get this lesson to the working class thru THE DAILY WORKER.

We ask the workers some pertinent questions. Those who had one experience fighting for "democracy" have had enough of it, we feel sure. But a young generation is growing up that did not feel the bite of a trench louse and did not hear the whistle of a shell that might as well as not have a familiar name on it. Those workers may be easy prey for the recruiting sergeants who are after cannon fodder. It is those we address ourselves to in particular.

The late war grew two millionaires where there was only one before. It cost the lives of 100,000 American lads, but it was worth it to the capitalists. The wounded—ask them what Mr. Forbes did with the money that was intended to salve their misery! What did the war accomplish? It fastened the yoke of British imperialism around the necks of millions of human beings in the undeveloped sections of the world, it sent the kaiser to Holland where he draws a fat pay check from a grateful capitalist republic and dreams of a come-back. The queen of Roumania is having the time of her life in America, being feted by our patriotic rich while almost every day some paper or other tells of a war hero's suicide, because he could not get a job. France grabbed off another slice of northern Africa and all of Syria and the Italian workers got Mussolini and murder. The rest of Europe, with few exceptions, got a reign of terror such as never shocked that portion of humanity that still has any humanity left. We got strike-breaking injunctions, proposals to finger-print workers and criminal syndicalist laws.

It was a glorious victory! It is true that we got the Russian Revolution out of it in spite of the efforts of the capitalist powers to restore the robber system in that country. But the Russian workers and peasants paid dearly for their victory. Still, it did not cost them as much in human life as fighting for the capitalists cost the rest of the world's working class.

Today our ruling classes and their servants will tell you what a glorious thing it is to die for your country. But they take good care that they live to honor the dead. You, sons and daughters of the working class, have no interest in fighting any war except the class war. Turn a deaf ear to the pleadings of the bloody militarists and make up your mind that the only war that is worthy of your steel is the class war, whether you fight it on the industrial field, in election campaigns, or somewhere else.

The workers and peasants of the Soviet Union are combatting the encircling ring of capitalist imperialism by building a strong socialist industry in their own country and making it an outpost of the struggling workers of the world.

British Imperialism Is Attempting to Build a Strangling Ring of Alliances Around the Soviet Union—Complications of Bourgeois Rivalries Prevent United Imperialist Front—the Soviet Is Gaining Ground in the East—the U. S. S. R. Has Its Allies in Every Land: The Workers and Peasants of all Countries

By S. YAVORSKY

GERMANY'S entry into the league of nations formally concludes the work of those English diplomats who have been aiming at opposing to the Soviet Union a bloc of capitalist states subservient to England thru the agency of the league of nations, and of a number of greater and lesser Locarnos. But the British statesmen as is usual with bourgeois politicians have laid their plans without reckoning with the antagonisms existing among the capitalist states and have not taken into account the development of national and class struggles in the bourgeois states. This by the time Germany was really initiated into the mysteries of the league of nations and made a knight of the "Order of the Geneva Virtues" those processes of development had already led to a radical change in the conditions obtaining in Europe, and Chamberlain had every reason to refrain from making festive speeches at the moment when Stresemann and Briand were exchanging expressions of cordial friendship.

The European Steel Trust, this first economic expression of the political cooperation being prepared between France and Germany, at the same time denotes the liquidation of the first move in the crusade planned by British diplomacy against the Soviet Union. Germany had already endeavored to secure itself by means of a neutrality agreement with the Soviet Union against the danger of serving as a cockpit in the case of an attack against the Soviet Union. And now Germany's foreign policy is to seek in France a counter-weight against the demands of England. British diplomacy must now turn its attention to creating a united front against the Soviet Union by means of a rapprochement not, to Germany, but to France.

France-British Rapprochement.

TWO all outward appearance conditions appear to favor British efforts in this direction. The Poincare government, the containing the "pacifists" Herriot and Briand, bears the sharp stamp of its aggressive leader. During the two years which have elapsed since the defeat of the national bloc, nothing has occurred to change the attitude of the obstinate reactionary and convinced imperialist Poincare towards the Soviet Union. France has pursued a more active foreign policy of late, and it has been inevitable that in leading circles in England there has been a revival of plans for encircling and strangling the Soviet Union with the aid of France.

But can France take any important position in the ranks of the bourgeois states against the Soviet Union? France and England are at loggerheads along the whole line of foreign policy, and there is not a single spot in all the world where these two states have mutual interests. Germany's rapprochement to France, and the impending combination of German coal with French ore, threaten the prosperity and even the existence of English heavy industry. In the Mediterranean the aggressive anti-French policy of the Italian fascisti imitates the endeavors of British diplomacy, which is exerting no inconsiderable effort for the firm establishment of the Italo-Spanish alliance, which is again directed against France. In the South East of Europe, and in the Balkans, [illegible] struggle with France, [illegible] be decisive for her own [illegible] deadlock with Turkey is a great obstacle in the way of British policy in the Near East. Under these circumstances it is extremely doubtful whether France will allow herself to be drawn in the wake of England's anti-Soviet plans unless she can see some prospect of advantage to herself.

France Steps Lightly

IT is true that between the Soviet Union and the French bourgeois there still stand the questions of the [illegible] of the czarist debts and of the nationalization of French capital; but undertakings in Russia, in order to accelerate the solution of these questions, the Poincare government can afford itself the luxury of a trading swindle, and can, for instance, support the doubtful pretentions of the Russian Asiatic Bank in the East China railway question. But should it attempt to carry on an active policy against the Soviet Union, it would find itself entirely without the support of not only the French peasantry and working people, but of the bourgeoisie, for these have learned how expensive wars are, even for the victors. And the government itself will scarcely, risk an advanture which would inevitably place France in an even more dependent position with respect to Anglo-American capital.

Mussolini may be doing his best to march shoulder to shoulder with British diplomacy, but as possesses sufficient acumen to avoid being accorded the task of fetching the chestnuts out of the Russian fire for the benefit of England. Fascist Italy hopes to gain some colonial possession with the aid of England. But she is none the less perfectly aware that she is not going to receive naptha concessions in the Caucasus, or coal from the Donetz basin, from the hands of British imperialism. A clear understanding for her own economic interests, should induce Italy to live on friendly terms with Soviet Russia. Viewed externally, a tendency in this direction may be seen, for instance, in Italy's refusal to include, in the agreement recently concluded with Roumania, guarantees for the "inviolableness" of Bessarabia, that is, for the rule over Bessarabia.

Poland Britain's Lackey.

THE "great idea" of the British diplomats at the present time is to create a united front of neighboring states "from sea to sea" against the Soviet Union. The main axis of this combination is Poland, where the hero of the Kiev campaign, Marshall Pilsudski, holds complete sway since the May upheaval. The present rulers in Poland do not even try to conceal their intentions with regard to the Soviet Union, and a series of quite openly unfriendly acts reveal their perfect readiness to serve the plans of English imperialism, which coincide for the most part with the aims of Polish imperialism. Poland's refusal to conclude the agreement of neutrality [illegible] Soviet Union, [illegible] Poland does not care to [illegible] Soviet Union, [illegible] quite [illegible] substantiated by the [illegible] Poland does not care [illegible] have to [illegible] cool since a third power might [illegible] war with the Soviet Union.

Passaic Worsted Mill Company, Employing 600 Workers, Is First to Recognize Union and Agree to Terms; Toilers Endorse Settlement

(Special to The Daily Worker)

Cracking under the unprecedented endurance and the determined fighting qualities shown by the sixteen thousand striking workers of Passaic, N. J., the ranks of the mill owners, for months solid against even the smallest recognition of the workers, have broken. The break was made by the Passaic Worstad Co., which came to an agreement with United Textile Workers' Local No. 1603.

The terms are as follows:

One.—The right of the workers to organize in their legitimate organizations.

Two.—If a grievance arises, the workers have the right of collective bargaining.

Three.—The closed shop is not demanded.

Four.—If no agreement can be reached between the workers and the company over demands raised, the dispute shall be left to a third party for arbitration.

Five.—All old workers go back to the mill without discrimination.

Six.—No outside help is to be employed from the date of the agreement until all old workers are back at work.

The agreement was signed by James Starr, international vice-president of the United Textile Workers of America, and W. W. Gannt, for the Worsted Company.

Thus the first victory in the ten months' fight of the textile workers of New Jersey has been won over the

THAT democracy is only skin deep in the United States is amply proven by the reception given to Marie by our democrat and republican politicians. Politicians have no scruples about anything that brings grist to their political mill. If we had a trade union movement that was not corrupted by capitalism this female would be chilled to stay at home. But only the radicals protest against a queen's presence here, and most of those radicals are Communists or sympathetic to the

Workers Are Murdered and Imprisoned by the Thousands in the Land of the Queen Marie

A Statement by the International Labor Defense.

Queen Marie von Hohenzollern, the monarch of Roumania, is being greeted by American governmental officials wherever she goes. In every city imposing welcomes are arranged to meet her.

Who is Queen Marie? What is she doing in the United States? What does she represent in Roumania?

The American department of state does not permit the entry into this country of Countess Karolyi, who opposes Hungarian autocracy, or Shapurji Saklatvala, member of British parliament, who is a labor representative, or Alexandra Kollontai, who represents workers' Russia, but it permits the entry of the reactionary queen of Roumania.

Queen Marie is the representative of an autocracy which bounds to death and prisons the best workers and poor farmers of Roumania. Under the government she represents, no trade unions are permitted to exist and fight for the rights of the working man and woman. Under her government, no workers' papers are permitted to be published, to give en-

MINNEAPOLIS CAP MAKERS STRIKE TO AID UNION IN ST. PAUL WIN IN STRUGGLE

MINNEAPOLIS, Nov. 12.—Locals 10 and 12 of the Cap Makers Union have declared a strike against the Stevenson Cap company here. The strike was called when it was learned that the Stevenson company has been making caps for the McKibben Cap company of St. Paul, where the cap makers are also striking.

The McKibben company told the strikers in St. Paul that they were going out of business. This bluff was called by the union with the strike against the Stevenson company. The union is doing its utmost now to win both struggles.

THE DAILY WORKER HELPED AT PASSAIC

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

THE ranks of the textile barons at Passaic have been broken. The owners of the Passaic Worstad company have surrendered to the workers. Other surrenders must follow.

This is the greatest labor victory of the year, a triumph of unorganized workers against strongly entrenched exploiters.

The DAILY WORKER helped at Passaic. It gave its support to the strike by keeping workers everywhere thruout the land informed as to every development on the New Jersey battle front. The DAILY WORKER helped to force the break in the exploiters' ranks and therefore became a factor in winning the strike.

But The DAILY WORKER could have done better. It must do better in the next "Passaic," the next big battle of the workers. In order to be able to do better, it must be strengthened now. It must be made financially secure against the pressing demands now facing it. Its circle of readers must be widened everywhere.

The victory at Passaic should hearten every reader and sympathizer of The DAILY WORKER to press forward rapidly and raise the $50,000 "Keep The DAILY WORKER Fund." Build now for the greater struggles tomorrow. Build The DAILY WORKER, the fighter for the whole working class. Use this blank:

Queen Marie and High Born Ladies of Court Discovered By Enraged Soldiers In Wild Orgy

BURN BUILDING WHICH HOUSED BACCHANALE

Thru the courtesy of International Red Aid, a world-wide organization formed to give assistance and defense to victims of the class war, The DAILY WORKER is today, on the occasion of the arrival of Queen Marie in this city, able to release a story that, tan times over, bares out the attitude of this paper, well known to its readers, towards the Hohenzollern Queen of Roumania.

International Red Aid is interested in Roumania because of the thousands of workers and peasants who are the victims of the Roumanian White Terror. It was this organization that encouraged Henri Barbusse, the famous French novelist to visit both Roumania and Bulgaria and to investigate the facts of the oppression and white terror for which these two countries had become notorious. Barbusse wrote a book on the basis of his investigations there called "The Executioners," chapters from which have been already carried by certain papers in this country.

The exposure printed below was sent to The DAILY WORKER by the Berlin office of this organization. A letter accompanying the story said that the facts had just been secured by its Roumanian Section and were forwarded to Berlin. A translation into English from Roumanien was made there and a copy sent to this paper.

In the meantime, copies of the Vienna Rota Fahne of October 17 reached us, containing the story in German. In order that we may not be open to the charge of manufacturing a story out of thin air, elsewhere in this issue we reproduce a photograph of this report as it appeared in the Vienna paper.

„Cotzofanesti!"

Warum die Königin von Rumänien den Krieg verabscheut.

Feindesland. Cotzofanesti lag damals im Rücken der rumänischen Armee und diente als Unterkunft für einen Armeestab, einen Teil des Kriegsprosequartiers und ein Barackenlazarett.

In diesem Lazarett waren die Königin Maria und ihre Töchter Elisabeth und Maria, sowie eine Reihe von Hofdamen als Pflegerinnen aufopferungsvolle tätig. Tag und Nacht widmeten sie diesem Liebeswerk.

Insbesondere aber die Nacht und mag raunte sich gar wunderliche Geschichten über das „Liebeswerk" der Königin an den verschiedenen französischen Offizieren.

Da begab es sich eines Nachts, daß die soeben von der Front eingelieferten Verwundeten eines Bataillons, das abends abgelöst werden sollte, sich nicht zum Abmarsch bereitmachten. Der Zugführer lief daraufhin in die Baracke, in der sie sich befanden, und sah zu seinem Erstaunen, daß sie alle, schon wieder ein Teil derselben, in tiefen Schlaf gesunken waren. Auch dem dumpfen Lärm des Anrückens feindlicher Kanonen, dem Klange einer Tanzmusik herausgemischt, vermochten sie nicht zu wecken. Und während wir an der Front und in Bukarest verbluteten, schlich [illegible] Offiziere und ihrer Damen [illegible] Lazarette und suchte sich dem Irrsinn [illegible] hinzugeben. Alles [illegible] sich fand [illegible] und Weinen. Hinter einem Vorhang spielte eine Musikkapelle.

Seinen Auftrag vergessend, lief der Soldat einige Kameraden herbei, die aus Wut über diesen Anblick eine Kanne Petroleum ergriffen, sie auf das trockene Holz der Baracke gossen und sie in Brand steckten.

Ihre Majestät im Nachthemd.

Als Offiziere und Mannschaft aus den umliegenden Quartieren zum Brandplatze eilten, fanden sie dort noch teilweise und torkelnd von Bacchus und Amors vielfältigen Gaben eine Gruppe höchst mangelhaft bekleideter französischer Offiziere und Damen des Hofes, darunter

Ihre Majestät, die Königin von Rumänien, Maria von Hohenzollern, in einem spitzenbesetzten Rosa-Nachthemd, die Prinzessinnen Maria, gegenwärtig Gemahlin des Königs von Jugoslawien, Alexander und Elisabeth, gegenwärtig Gemahlin des griechischen Exkönigs Georg. Weitere zwei Töchter des nachmaligen Ministerpräsidenten Voitoanu (eine dieser Damen ist heute die Frau des gegenwärtigen Innenministers Franasovici), die Töchter des Konservativen Ministers Delavrancea usw. usw.

Auf den Brandplatz kamen auch Mitglieder des Kriegsprosequartiers und im Schreien der Flammen gelangte

einige Munitionsladungen

dieses rötenden Gebäudes. Die Königin, ihre Töchter und die Hofdamen, sie fanden Asyl und Arznei wie ebenfalls halbnackten französischen Generalstabsoffizieren.

Ein Teil dieser Ärmsten wurde von der Signaranza beschlagnahmt und andere. Teil aber befindet sich an sicheren Hinderte, Plätzen hier, in Gefangenschaft [illegible] in den Händen einer Reihe rumänischer Politiker hier. [illegible] Zeitverlust — ein zweites [illegible] in Rumänien.

If one speaks of vice or orgies in Roumania and wishes to make these conceptions vivid, one simply makes the necessary gesture and lets drop the one word: "Cotzofanesti!" Everyone understands and nothing more need be said.

The fate of Roumania, which is on paper a constitutional monarchy, governed by parliament, is actually in the hands of a court junta which is economically and politically closely bound to the dominant fascist-feudal bank oligarchy. Neither European public opinion nor the will of the Roumanian parliament has any effect upon this junta. There is only one word which is capable of producing a magical effect upon it and its members, and that word is: "Cotzofanesti!"

TWELVE PENNSYLVANIA WORKERS ARRESTED IN 'RED RAID' ON HOMES

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Nov. 12.—Twelve workers were arrested at Woodland, Pennsylvania, in a "red raid" staged by steel company police, and state and local officers, according to word received here.

Three homes were raided by the police between 10 o'clock in the evening and 2 o'clock in the morning. The houses were ransacked by the officers who were in search for "red literature," it is reported. Seven workers were arrested at one home where they were attending a birthday party.

All of the workers are held at police headquarters.

The Pittsburgh International Labor Defense has sat in motion machinery for their release.

Social-Democrats Save German Cabinet Again

BERLIN, Nov. 12.—The Marx government has again been saved from the possibility of an upset in the near future by the social democrats pledging their support to the government.

The "socialist" pledge virtually reestablishes the so-called grand coalition, including the middle parties and the social-democrats.

In 1920, the governmental majority of the general Voitoanu refused to recognize the validity of the mandate of a Bessarabian member of parliament. The latter rose in his seat and shouted the one word, "Cotzofanesti!" In less than half an hour the validity of his mandate had been formally recognized.

A peasant delegation under the guidance of a lawyer is interviewing the minister of the interior, Franasovici. The latter is unwilling to grant the request of the delegation. The lawyer of the peasants loses his temper and shouts into the face of the minister: "Cotzofanesti!" The minister turns white as a sheet and writes the one word, "admis" (granted), on to the document.

What on earth is "Cotzofanesti?" What does it mean? It is the name of a village near the Moldavian town, Barn, and further, a collective expression often heard on Roumanian tongues.

Here is the story connected with this village:

It was in 1917, the hostile German army of Von Mackensen had penetrated far into the country. Cotzofanesti lay to the rear of the Roumanian army and served as the headquarters of the staff, and of the war correspondents. It also held a clearing station for the wounded.

Queen Marie of Roumania, her two daughters, Elizabeth and Maria, and a number of ladies of the court, were "sacrificing" themselves on the altar of patriotism and tending the wounded. They devoted day and night to their work of mercy, particularly the night, and many wonderful stories of their devotion were recounted, stories in which the officers of the French General Staff played no mean part. . .

One night it came to pass that a wounded soldier who had been brought in, suffered a sudden hemorrhage. The sergeant-major who was on duty immediately sent for the doctor who should also have been on duty. The doctor, however, was not

FF, BUSINESS AGENT OF JOINT BOARD, ARRESTED

Jailed in Connection with Strike Here

Harry Seff, business agent of the Chicago Joint Board of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, was arrested Friday, morning for merely being in the neighborhood of a small garment making shop here, where a strike is in progress. Seff was released on $50 bail, after being booked by police for disorderly conduct.

Discharge Union Girl.

The strike was called on the Weiss, Turner and Ross Company, 826 W. Adams street, when a member of the union was discharged Tuesday because the employers learned of her activity in the 1924 strike. The discharged girl had been arrested in 1924 for picketing and jailed for violation of the state law against picketing.

The employers gave as their excuse for firing her that "they didn't want no agitation in the shop."

Seff appeared near the shop Friday morning to see how the strike was progressing. He was recognized by the employers, who swarmed on Seff and then were "guarding" the place to arrest him.

to be found. The messenger was a gypsy with three years service. Directed by the guard, his search led to a building where some sort of celebration was going on. Something which happened very often.

The messenger tried to enter, but found that the doors were locked. He could hear muffled noise and the sound of dance music from the inside of the building. He thought bitterly of his comrades killing and being killed at the front, and in particular of that comrade vomiting up his heart's blood in the clearing station. He crept to one of the windows and tried to get a look at the goings on of the officers and their ladies. Nothing to be done. The windows were all carefully curtained. Finally he found a window at the back of the building where the curtain left a small, narrow space which enabled him to look thru into the hall. The sight which met his eyes filled him with fury and indignation.

Naked and half-naked officers and "nurses" were rolling in various attitudes on the floor which was covered with costly rugs. Although the banquet seemed to be at an end, the tables were still groaning with great quantities of the most expensive and rare foods and wines. In a alcove an orchestra was playing.

Forgetting his message, the soldier called as many of his fellows as he could find to the window. Their anger at the sight was so great that they took a can of oil, poured its contents over the dry wood of the building and put a match to it.

When the officers and men of the neighboring barracks arrived at the scene of the conflagration they found a society of sparsely clothed French staff officers and high born ladies of the Roumanian court still reeling from the combined gifts of Venus and Bacchus.

Amongst the company were: HER MAJESTY, THE QUEEN OF ROUMANIA, MARIA HOHENZOLLERN; in a pink diaphanous night dress trimmed with lace; the Princess Maria, the present consort of the king of Yugoslavia, Alexander; the Princess Elizabeth, the present consort of the ex-king of Greece, George; two daughters of General Voitoanu, who later became the prime minister of Roumania (one of these ladies is now the wife of the minister of interior, Franasovici), the daughter of the conservative Minister Delavrancea, etc., etc., etc.

Naturally, war correspondents were also on the scene and quickly made a number of instantaneous snaps of the idyllic picture: "The Queen of Roumania, her daughters and her ladies in waiting, intoxicated, clad only in thin night dresses and clinging to the arms of half-naked officers of the French General Staff!!

A number of the photographic plates were confiscated by the Siguranza (Roumanian secret police), but the rest of them are still in safe hands. These pictures work like charms in the hands of a number of Roumanian politicians. The magic formula is: "Cotzofanesti!" A second "Open Sesame!" in Roumania.

Not long ago a proposal was mooted to build the queen a palace of glass on the shore of the Black Sea, near Manaya, in the neighborhood of Constanza. But the pleasantry of one malicious newspaper, the "Facla," was sufficient to spoil it all. It wrote helpfully, "Build anything, but not exactly a glass palace! Cotzofanesti!"

To this our correspondent adds:

On the 10th of October the Queen of Roumania left on board the liner "Leviathan" for the hospitable shores of America. She has arrived. Her landing was not prevented on the score of moral turpitude; she was greeted as befits a downright regular royal queen: she has visited President Coolidge in the White House. Society heads, cultural institutions, universities, etc., fought and are still fighting for the honor of calling the queen their guest, who by the way is also something of a poetess. And so on. . . . COTZOFANESTI!

AGREEMENT WITH MANUFACTURERS REACHED, REPORT

Part of Cloakmakers Win Settlement

According to information received indirectly here by the joint board of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' union, a settlement with the manufacturers, involving some 6,000 strikers of the New York union, has been reached. Local officials are waiting verification of this.

However, the strike against the jobbers, which is the most important factor in the New York struggle, is not settled. The jobbers are the most bitter opponents of the union.

Set Hour Agreement.

The terms of the reported settlement include, it is said: a three-year agreement on hours, which provides a basis of 43 hours a week for the first two years, and a 40-hour week for the third year; a guarantee of 32 weeks' work a year; and an increase in wages.

No information as to what the wage scale is, except that it is substantial and more than the amount suggested by the governor's commission, was included in the report.

In the matter of reorganization of the personnel of the manufacturer's shop, which involves the rights of the bosses to discharge workers, the union also won a victory, according to the information. The governor's commission allowed the bosses to discharge 10 per cent a year, but did not specify a time. The union incorporated in the agreement that the discharging should take place only in slack months, so that the workers would not lose out and could find another job before the season opened.

Main Strike Still On.

The capitalist press has been hailing this reported settlement as the ending of the strike. This is seen as an attempt to bewilder the workers as the jobbers are not affected by the manufacturers' settlement.

ARRANGE TAG DAY FOR PAPER BOX STRIKERS

NEW YORK CITY—The following call has been issued for all members of the Young Workers' League here:

Dear Comrades:

For six weeks the paper box makers in New York City have been out on strike fighting for the establishment of a union that will guarantee them better conditions. Some 60 per cent of these are young workers. The bosses at the present time are doing their best to try and starve these workers back to slavery without a union. We must defeat the schemes of the bosses. We must mobilize our forces to help raise relief for these workers. For the present the union is arranging a tag day to raise funds for the strikers. Every member of the Young Workers' League must go out with a collection box on Saturday and Sunday, November 13 and 14, beginning at 9 a. m. You are to report to the district and from there you will be assigned to a station.

You must raise the question of the paper box makers in the unions and other organizations to which you belong and get them to come to the support of these striking workers.

Fraternally yours,

C. Miller,
Dist. Ind. Organizer.

Radio War Now Raging As Soviet Rule Sends the Truth to Roumania

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

THE capitalist press of the United States dares not tell the truth about the present murder regime in terrorised Roumania.

The press of the American profiteers hides the facts and groans in the dust as it joins in servile greetings to Queen Marie today, in Chicago, because to do otherwise would would be an indictment of the robber social system for which it speaks.

Queen Marie and Cal Coolidge clobber over each other, and the slaverings have continued these past few weeks over the United States and Canada, because of the identity of interest between the ruling class on this North American continent and the ruling class of Roumania. Maria and Cal, with "Jimmie" Walker, mayor of New York; Dever, mayor of Chicago, and all the little kept political puppets everywhere, and the old, senile King Ferdinand, back in Bucharest, are all of the same capitalist family that hangs together more tenaciously than any ruling class family in all history.

The subsidized press is anxious to hide the actual conditions in Roumania because, to reveal them, means to unveil the horrible slave American capitalism that gives millions of dollars, stolen from the wealth produced by American labor, to bolster the tottering Roumanian tyranny, capitalist outpost against the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics.

Millions of discontented and thinking workers and farmers would get a clearer picture of the nature of the Wall Street government that rules in Washington if they received a truthful view of the present Roumanian regime, petted and pampered by America's international bankers.

It is interesting to note, therefore, that in hiding the truth about the vicious oppression of Roumanian labor under the befeweled heel of American finance capital's darling queen in Roumania, the subsidized press in this country merely echoes the sore straits facing the Bucharest regime at home in suppressing the truth.

Roumania, however, suffers the great disadvantage of bordering on the Union of Soviet Republics, where workers and peasants, after having freed themselves from the tyranny of the centuries imposed on them by czarism.

The workers and peasants of the Soviet Union are anxious and eager to tell labor in Roumania, especially in the bordering province of Bessarabia, the truth as they see it, and thus make it impossible for the wily Bratianu gang to do it. This is revealed by the reports telling of the so-called radio war between the Roumania of Queen Marie and the international bankers, and the Soviet Union of workers and peasants.

The Roumanian assassins of labor complain bitterly that the offensive was taken by the Soviet broadcasting stations at Moscow, Odessa and other cities near the frontier of Bessarabia, the annexation of which by Roumania, supported by the Versailles peace bandits, has never been recognized by the workers' government. The Soviet Union, that is building a new social order—Communism—and ending profit rule, is accused by the Roumanian ruling class with attempting to lecture the Roumanians on the deficiencies of their government and of trying to broadcast revolutionary propaganda.

These charges are probably true. And why not? Why shouldn't labor in the Workers' Republic, having freed itself, be anxious to lift the workers of other countries along the road to their emancipation. Soviet labor is to be congratulated on using the radio, most modern method of transmitting information, as a weapon to combat the subversive propaganda of the enemy capitalist class, poisoning the minds of labor in all countries against its own class interests.

Does the Roumanian tyranny reply to the charges of labor in the Soviet Union. Not at all. It merely tries to silence them.

In Queen Marie's land today, in order to prevent Roumanian labor from getting the message of the emancipated working class of the Soviet Union, drastic methods have been adopted against the use of the radio. In Roumania, the radio is a state monopoly and the importation of all foreign apparatus is prohibited. "For the security of the state," which means, for the maintenance of the bloody tyranny of Queen Marie and the class for which she speaks, no radio receiving sets are allowed near frontiers and to install a set anywhere in the country, one must secure a special permit from the hostile government.

Nevertheless, when the Roumanian owner of a radio permit has succeeded in tuning in the grand opera or cabaret jazz at Vienna, Berlin or Paris, he is sure to have some Soviet broadcasting station come in with the working class viewpoint of the latest brutality against Roumanian labor. It is declared that the only defense of the Roumanian tyranny, in such straits, is to have its military broadcasting stations cut loose with all power so that it becomes impossible for the radio listenersto hear anything at all.

That is duplicated in part by the American capitalist press that hombards its readers with comics, sports, scandals of all kinds, murder, graft stuff, all nauseum, to the total exclusion of everything of any vital interest to the working class. As in Roumania, so in the United States, only thru different methods is the truth barred from all of the class struggle on this side of the Atlantic.

The DAILY WORKER alone among all English-language dailies in this country, gives the truth about anti-labor rule, not only in Roumania and the United States but in all lands. It is labor's broadcaster, serving the interests of the working class. That is why American labor will be gradually won to its support.

PASSAIC STRIKERS WIN VICTORY

mill barons. Union leaders say the battle will continue until all the owners are lined up and the union is a recognized defender of the workers' interests in Passaic.

But the settlement was not made until the strikers themselves had met in mass meeting at Dudas' Hall, Eighth and South Sts., and ratified the agreement. The agreement was discussed by the workers and some objection was voiced from the floor that the agreement did not contain the precise word, "recognition." But the extent of the concessions made by the company and the importance of the settlement to the entire 16,000 strikers was apparent to all of the 600 workers involved.

First Time.

This constitutes the first time in the history of Passaic in which a textile mill has given recognition to a union. Its immediate importance is the fact that while the workers' ranks are still strong, the mill owners' front is disintegrating. It is known that the Worsted Mills have many orders ahead and it is expected that 700 workers will be back to work in a short time. There are many indications that other mills will follow the lead of the Worsted.

Started on Friday.

The agreement ratified at the strikers' mass meeting had been negotiated by the citizens' committee. President Gaunt of the Worsted Company sent his manager to the citizens' committee last Friday to sue for peace. Several conferences were held in which Gustav Deak, president of the new local union, No. 1603 of the U. T. W., participated. Later came the formal document by Vice-President Starr of the U. T. W. and President Gaunt of the Worsted Mills.

New Local.

A local of the United Textile Workers' Union, with a special charter will now be formed in the Worsted plant, probably with the number 1604.

The strike at the Worsted Mills began on January 28, three days after the big walkout of 1,500 from the Botany mills. The workers set up strike headquarters near the plant and picketed constantly. The plant has been crippled, operating but very little since the first day of the strike.

Served 36 Prison Years—In Again

CHICAGO, Nov. 10.—John Murray, 77, who, since 1883 has served 36 years in prison was today sentenced to five years in Leavenworth federal penitentiary when he pleaded guilty to counterfeiting five and ten cent pieces. "I guess I better go again," he told Judge Wilkerson. "It kind of seems I belong there."

STATEMENT BY I. L. D. ON THE QUEEN'S VISIT

pression to the demands of the people. Under her government, workers and poor farmers are not permitted to hold public meetings, to organize into labor organizations of any kind. Under her government hundreds of workers have been murdered in cold blood by the bestial secret police called the "Siguranza." Hundreds of workers, men and women, are rotting in prison only because they defended the interests of workers. While the queen and her royal court riot away in extravagant orgies, the workers and farmers of Roumania live under the most miserable conditions. While the queen and part of her family come to make triumphant America, spending hundreds of thousands of dollars for expensive clothes and banquets, workers and their children are starving for want of food in Roumania.

Workers are imprisoned, and tortured there in the most unspeakable manner. Their conditions in prison are so frightful that they are forced to go on hunger strikes in an attempt to get even slight consideration. Neither woman nor children are spared by the blood-thirsty rulers of Roumania. Children are murdered in the military expeditions against workers and peasants; mothers and sweethearts are ravished and shot before the eyes of the helpless men.

The huts of the peasants are frequently burned down by the drunken soldiers and officers. The homes of workers are never safe from invasion by the "Siguranza." The oppressed nationalities in Roumania, which are fighting for that independence from tyranny and monarchy that our ancestors fought for in 1776, are mercilessly persecuted and suppressed.

A reign of terror exists in the land of Queen Maria! Her hands are red with the blood of workers and peasants! Under her fine clothes she wears the garments of an executioner of the people!

Queen Marie has come to the United States with lies on her lips about her country. She wants a loan from Wall Street so as to help maintain her bloody rule in Roumania. Those American governmental officials who are now toeing to her, are insulting the entire great, anti-monarchist tradition of the great revolutionary war of independence in 1776.

American labor looks upon the queen of Roumania only with horror and disgust. We want no part of all welcomes to her and her family. We want only a demonstration of our solidarity with the oppressed peoples of Roumania, who suffer under the iron heel of Queen Marie's despotism. We want no loans to be given by American bankers to bolster up her hideous government. We demand the end of the murdering of workers and peasants in Roumania, and the freedom of all workers from their rotten prisons!

The private life of "this queen" and her court has been for many years an open scandal. Not until a few weeks the story of Cotzofanesti has come to light. A big Vienna workers' daily has recently exposed the wartime "Cotzofanesti" affair. Facts regarding which have been suppressed all these years and are now made public and vouched for by reliable Roumanian sources in the town of Cotzofanesti, on the Moldavian battlefront during the war, the queen and others members of the royal family and the court, were found participating in a disgusting orgy with French officers, while Roumanian soldiers were dying in nearby hospitals. A soldier who discovered the orgy was so enraged that he set fire to the building in which royalty was exposing its degeneracy. When the participants ran out of the burning building, the "blue-blooded ladies" were seen in a half drunken and half unclothed condition. Every Roumanian knows the meaning of "Cotzofanesti" in her bloody regime in Roumania, her reign of terror against workers and peasants, is a stench in the nostrils of all honest people!

Protest against the visit of Queen Marie! Demand freedom for Roumania's imprisoned working class! Send your protests in messages to the department of State, to the Roumanian Legation, to Mayor Dever of Chicago; and to Governor Small of Illinois.

International Labor Defense calls upon American workers to join with it in this great protest and to express their solidarity with the Roumanian fighters for freedom. Follow the example of the Chicago workers, who have, thru the Chicago Federation of Labor, condemned the queen, her welcome here and her rulership in Roumania!

POWERS HAPGOOD ARRESTED WHILE ON SPEECH TOUR

Suspect Plotting of the Lewis Machine

By a Worker Correspondent.

DAISYTOWN, Pa., Nov. 12.—Police, controlled by the Vesta Coal company here arrested Powers Hapgood, speaker on the progressive ticket of the United Mine Workers of America election, when he arrived at the station here to speak to Local Union 3399, Sunday, Nov. 7. Hapgood, who is a coal miner and member of District Two, rank and file, was invited to speak at the meeting, as was P. T. Fagan, president of District Five.

It is known that Fagan had been booted in an argument recently with Hapgood, and had been angry with him. Workers are wondering whether there is any connection with this fact and the arrest.

Is Released.

Hapgood was taken to the Vesta Coal company police station and searched. When the cops discovered that all he carried in his brief case was a towel and shaving equipment, he was released twenty minutes later.

It is evident that the police had thought they were arresting the man what John L. Lewis had said was taking part "in a plot to capture the U. M. W. of A." Hapgood is a progressive candidate as delegate to the A. F. of L., and is the victim of many "Red plot lies" manufactured by the Lewis machine.

L. A. TO HOLD AN OPEN AIR MASS MEETING FOR SACCO AND VANZETTI ON SUNDAY

By a Worker Correspondent.

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 12. — A monster open air international mass meeting in behalf of the class-war prisoners, Sacco and Vanzetti, will be held Sunday, Nov. 14, 2:00 p. m., at the Mexican Plaza.

English, Italian, and Spanish speakers will address the meeting. Workers are urged to help Sacco and Vanzetti in their struggle for life by being present. The meeting is held under the auspices of the United Front Sacco and Vanzetti Defense Conference.

Bull fights, it is remarked are staged very often at such places as the Plaza, International mass action by the awakening working class is the only method whereby "bully horns" of any description can be pulled and made harmless—except for the exploiting master class.

It is pointed out here in connection with Sacco-Vanzetti case, that six innocent prisoners sent to San Quantin by District Attorney Asa Keyes, Los Angeles, have been pardoned in the last few months by Governor Friend W. Richardson, after the real criminals had been found. As these were not radicals, the question is asked, "When so many innocent bourgeois-minded workers are sent to prison, is it not reasonable to believe that the danger is much greater for class-conscious workers like Sacco and Vanzetti.

WRITE AS YOU FIGHT!

Organization of National League School

By NAT KAY

THE National Young Workers League school for the opening of which many comrades of the various district have looked forward for many months is a reality, over which we can be really proud.

School Attendance.

The school is attended by 15 students of many states in the union, such as: Mass., New Hampshire, New York, Pennsylvania, Ohio, Wisconsin, Washington, D. C., Michigan, Illinois, Minnesota, who are the leading comrades of their respective districts. Each student is provided by the N. E. C. with board, room, car fares and the necessary study books.

The school opens at 9:15 a. m. and ends at 5 p. m. The day is divided in the following order: 9:15 we have our class still 12:00 noon, 12:00 to 1:00 p. m. we have a reading period 1:00 to 2:00 p. m. we have our lunch, 2:00 to 3:00 we have our discussion circle where the previous lesson is reviewed and discussed. From 3:00 to 5:00 we again have class. The evenings is take up with recreation, work in the Chicago League and study. The school is managed and directed by Comrade Wicks who are the leading comrades of their respective districts. Each student is provided by the N. E. C. with board, room, car fares and the necessary study books.

The school is only 15 students at the school we found it important and necessary to organize ourselves in various committees, and groups. And what do you think we did? We certainly didn't hesitate to elect at the meeting of the students' body a students school committee which consists of comrades—Walter Burke, Detroit; Nat Kay, Boston; Philip Frankfeld, N. Y. C.; Valeria Meltz, Chicago and M. Horowitz, of Rochester, N. Y. This committee has as its function the supervision of the work in the school between the meetings of students' body. We also felt that the National Young Workers League school should have its own publication and sure enough, we elected a committee that will issue our red students' paper, which we hope will reflect the work and accomplishments of the national school.

Do you think we forgot about recreation and social activities? Of course not! We made sure to elect 5 comrades who will tackle the recreational activities problem.

Discipline is another thing we will teach our student comrades. Comrades Burke and Trumbull see to it that all the regulations and time schedule is carried out 100 per cent.

For press and publicity we have Comrade P. H. Frankfeld who will with the assistance and cooperation of the students' committee see to it that the world knows about our school and its achievements. At the school we also have a library which is taken care by 2 comrades and which contains the books for reference on the subjects we are to study.

This gives you an idea how our school is organized.

L. A. HOLDS HUGE CELEBRATION OF 9TH ANNIVERSARY

Workers Told Progress of Russia

By L. P. RINDAL
(Worker Correspondent)

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 13. — Soviet Russia was in the minds and on the lips and tongues of many people in the Municipal Hall yesterday afternoon, a capacity house—and then some—of workers held a splendid celebration of the ninth anniversary of the Russian revolution. The subject in the evening was, "Recent Developments in Russia," by Abraham Pistkin. The Pioneers opened the afternoon celebration by the singing of the International.

"The Scarlet Banner," "Bank Upon the Corner," "The Red Flag Unites Us," and "The Builder" were other songs given by the youngsters. Junior M. Ruhin made a brilliant speech. So did a member of the Y. W. L. "Pioneers," recitation, by May Globerman was likewise fine. The musical program consisted of: A. R. Mandolin Orchestra; violin, Helen Alroff; piano, Anna Rosenfeld. "Our Leader" and "Sickle and Hammer," impressive songs by A. R. Freiheit Gesang Verein played strongly on proletarian heartstrings. So did the 9th Year tableau, "Building Russia."

Help Daily Worker.

Tom Lewis divided his speech between showing the significance of the Russian revolution and the necessity of carrying out the slogan: KEEP THE DAILY WORKER. The collection for OUR DAILY was $93.08

On a background of red, "Revolution Comes" and the pictures of Karl Marx, Lenin and Trotsky played an important part in the decoration of the Music-Art Hall. The celebration ended as it started—everybody on their feet singing the International.

Russia Leads Reconstruction.

At the evening meeting of the open forum, A. Plotkin proved—by figures and other facts—that the First Workers' Republic is nearer the pre-war level today than any other country in Europe. And the source of his information came from where?—Moscow? —No!—From journals issued by Wall Street.

Russia Jells Bosses—Not Strikers

"Are there any strikes in Soviet Russia?" someone asked the speaker. "Yes, sometimes," Plotkin answered. "But when the workers do strike in Soviet land," he continued, "they have the full support of the government. The employers go to jail, if any,—not the strikers."

Russian songs were on the program, also a demonstration of "Revolutionary Rhythm," by John Hovington.

The collection of $30 went to the striking cloakmakers of New York.

Weisbord Outwits Mayor Who Tries to Stop Mass Meeting

By a Worker Correspondent.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Nov. 13. — Sunday Nov. 7, Albert Weisbord spoke in Derby, Conn. The audience was made up of textile and metal workers from the towns of Derby, Shelton, and Ansonia. The number of people present was about 140, which is very good for the locality.

Police Enter Hall.

Before Comrade Weisbord began to speak, three policemen entered the hall, and when he was introduced by the chairman, these three "cops" moved up so that they were right behind the audience.

Then Weisbord began to talk. When he came to where he showed how one of the factors influencing the success of the Passaic strike was the fact that many of the strikers were returned soldiers and therefore hardened fighters, the mayor of Derby interrupted with cries of "sedition." He then forbade him to say anymore about the war, threatening to close the meeting.

When, however, Comrade Weisbord hinted very strongly that, as an attorney and an American citizen, he would defend the rights granted him by the constitution, the mayor made a weak reply and the "opposition" subsided. The mayor left, the three policemen remained in the hall, and the meeting went on peacefully. But behind the stolid face of the Italian, Polish, Hungarian, and Slavish workers, there was a hot resentment against such proceedings in this land of "free speech."

Afterwards a collection" was taken up, a few questions were asked and clearly and definitely answered by Comrade Weisbord.

Communist movement. It is characteristic of the degeneration of the socialist movement in the United States that socialists have not raised a voice against the official welcome given by the American government to Marx while the same government has barred intellectual women like Madame Karoiyi and Madame Kollontai.

THE decision of Canada to appoint her own ambassador to Washington proves that THE DAILY WORKER was right in warning its readers not to take seriously the tales of peace and harmony that emanated from the press room of the British empire conference. And that is not all. The South African premier, Premier Hertzog, insists on freedom for his dominion in everything but the name. The Irish Free State delegates demand the right to make treaties without having to consult Downing Street. The fact that such a conference is in session proves that things are not moving to the satisfaction of the imperialists. The British empire is booked for the down train.

YOUVE got to hand it to the Japanese. A premier is reported to have switched the red light district in Osaka, after first taking the precaution to buy real estate in the vicinity of the new location. But the truth leaked out and lots of fellows got stung. It so happens in America, occasionally. The premier is now very much in the same position that Daugherty and Fall were during the Teapot Dome scandal. In fact Fall is not yet out of the woods. But while the American democrats confined themselves to pushing Daugherty and other hirlers out of offices, the Japanese went a step further. They bought a nice little coffin wrapped around three nice little daggers and sent the stiff to the premier with the suggestion that e short life and e merry one has its advantages.

THERE are rumors of an attempt to re establish the monarchy in Portugal. The week that fails to produce a rebellion in Portugal is a week that is too busy with an attempt on the life of Mussolini, by Mussolini and for Mussolini. The various factions in the Portuguese ruling class are somewhat comparable to the gangs of gunmen that shoot each other over the profits of the beer and alcohol business in Chicago. Not that we would insult a high class bootlegger by putting him on the same level with a Portuguese politician. We hope that our local gentry will see the point and will not squint the evil eye over a ride with a view to liquidating an insult.

* * *

IT has come to pass ther even Salvation army officers are demanding more pay. The job of fighting the devil is no cinch and his foes find that they are obliged to pay as much for their pork chops as citizens following a less godly occupation. The salvation army is a world wide organization. It has a force in Korea where British and American officers of the "army" stationed in Korea receive $5 a day for their onslaughts on the devil. But Korean devil-fighters receive only fifty cents for the same kind of work. The it is logical to assume that a Korean can slay a native devil with more effectiveness than a stranger can.

THERE was a little excitement when a Korean officer (Salvation Army) threw a little party in the street because he did not think fifty cents would last as long in a grog shop as a five dollar bill. He encountered opposition in the persons of some aristocrats of salvation army labor, namely those who were pulling down the five smackers per day. It was the old story of the hot dog jumping on the fried chicken. When the tarnished stars were separated from the blood of the christian fighters, General Booth, who owns the Salvation Army, came on the scene and promised that he would give the Korean's demands his "earnest consideration. And no doubt he will provided the Korean keeps his knuckles polished and doesn't fire until he is ready.

BISHOP BROWN IS ON TOUR FOR WORKERS' AID

Covers Middle West Under I. W. A. Auspices

Bishop Wm. Montgomery Brown, whose book "Christianism and Communism" violently convulsed the Orthodox world and in turn won the applause of radical and liberal circles, finally causing his ousting from the House of Bishops after a long and sensational trial, will speak in the following cities under the auspices of International Workers' Aid of which he is national chairman.

Saturday, Nov. 13, St. Paul, Minn., 8 p. m.

Sunday, Nov. 14, Unitarian Church, Minneapolis, Minn., 8 p. m.

Tuesday, Nov. 16, Liberty Hall, 415 Jennings St., Sioux City, Iowa, 8 p. m.

Wednesday, Nov. 17, Moose Hall, Crouse Block, 117 N. 16th St., Omaha, Nebr., 8 p. m.

Saturday, Nov. 20, Freie Gemeinde Hall, 8 and Walnut St., Milwaukee, Wis., 8 p. m.

Sunday, Nov. 21, Lyzan Hall, 4th Ave., Rockford, Ill., 2:30 p. m.

In addition to the Bishop, prominent speakers of the labor world will speak in the cities above. In Milwaukee and Rockford, Jack Bradon, former National President of the World War Veterans and present organizer of the International Workers' Aid, will be the bishop's co-speaker.

To hear the bishop is an unusual privilege. It is rarely that one of his age and environment so sharply changes one's views on life. The over seventy years old, Bishop Brown is a most vigorous and militant proponent of his views which fundamentally conflict with the prevalent consent of churchianity and economics.

Let Her Suffer—and Let Her Remember

THE DAILY WORKER feels that the story appearing on page one of this issue entirely vindicates the stand it has taken with regard to Queen Marie. Certain of our readers complained that the opprobrious terms we applied to the royal personage on several occasions in this column might have been chosen with better discretion.

We ask you—after you have read the account of the shameful behavior of this queen and her court at Cotzofanesti—whether or not, far from being too inconsiderate in our terminology, we succeeded in finding a phrase suited to the central figure in the events described.

Is the story true? We vouch for it. The source from which it came leaves no doubt in our minds as to its veracity. The International Red Aid, a working class organization for the defense and protection of class-war prisoners, we consider to be a reliable source. The integrity of this movement, that has sections in all lands, is attested to by the splendid record of assistance and succor to persecuted and terrorized workers in many lands. In every country the national sections of the movement count upon their executives, men of unquestioned reputation. Labor leaders of long standing in the workers' movement, prominent lawyers (the greatest lawyer of Roumania, Costa-Foru, is associated with the I. R. A. in its defense of political victims in the queen's own country), famous authors of the type of Henri Barbusse, publicists such as George Lansbury and Maximilian Harden—these are but a few of the names that bear witness to the responsibility of this international movement.

When the Berlin bureau of this organization forwarded to us the story that we print today, it did not for a moment think of the sensational and lurid nature of the story as of the greatest importance. No more do we. What they considered important was to expose the real character of a monarch who parades as a model of virtue and patriotism, while at the same time she stands as a symbol of a regime whose excesses on a national scale are quite as brutal and obscene as the individual behavior of its queen. So do we.

We have repeated many times that what is important for us, in our attitude towards Queen Marie is the fact that she represents an oligarchy whose unrestrained thirst for profit and privilege, enhanced by a fatal mixture of the worst elements of feudalism and capitalism, has resulted in the murder of thousands of workers and peasants and the imprisonment of many thousands more.

If we seem in this instance to make a concession to sensational journalism in publishing as we do a story under other circumstances and with different principles we would ignore, we call upon you to turn your mind's eye to the bastilles of Bucharest and Kishenev where 2,500 workers lay in chains, we ask you to visualize the soil of Bessarabia and Bukovina dyed with the blood of workers and peasants and then we ask you to note the assumption of piety and democracy which the queen has posed for her American audience.

The story that we publish today is a blow at the Roumanian autocrats upon whose heads rest the guilt of mass murder and whose queen is Marie. If, as an individual, her majesty suffers—let her. And let her at the same time remember the untold suffering she and her fellow oligarchs have caused the exploited masses of Roumania.

The McKeesport Strike

The strike of 700 skilled workers in the plant of the McKeesport Tin Plate company, the largest plant outside of the trust, is of much significance because of the practical absence of strikes in this industry—a subsidiary of the steel industry—for the last four years in McKeesport there is also the tradition of struggle.

The present strike, resulting from an attempt to speed up the workers, amounting in effect to a reduction in wages, may tie up the whole finishing department and involve 3,400 workers.

The union in the steel industry, which, as its name implies—Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers—has jurisdiction over this branch of work, is very weak. Its total membership is given as 11,400. It is likewise very conservative and Mike Tighe, its president, has waged war on the left wing ever since the union, under his direction, deserted the steel workers in the great strike of 1919-1920.

Like all such strikes the present one shows the possibility of organization in the industry. The excuses of the officialdom, to the effect that the workers are not willing to organize, are shown up in their full falsity by such occurrences.

WHY ARE PRINCES, KINGS AND QUEENS INVITED TO GARY, IND.?

THE prince of Greece paid his visit to Gary, Ind.; the prince of Sweden was recently in Gary and went thru the mills; now the Roumanian queen is going to come here and will be taken thru the mills.

Who and why invites the royalties to Gary? The workers? No, the workers were never asked whether they would like to have the princes, kings or queens come to Gary. There is nothing in common between workers and royalty. The kings are the rulers, the workers are slaves, royalty is rich, the workers are poor, royalty waste days in idle pleasure, the workers are compelled to work long hours and live in misery.

Who is it that is interested in inviting the princes, kings and queens, the parasites, who live and feed upon the misery of the people, to Gary? It is THE STEEL KING, GARY.

And why does he invite them? He wants to show them, that he too has a great power and a great kingdom, that he too has thousands of slaves who work for him, who fear and obey him, and who would lay down their lives for him. But this is not the only reason why princes, kings and queens are invited to Gary. The most important reason is that the steel king Gary knows that there are thousands of workers who still believe that kings and queens are put on earth by god and that the common people must obey them and give their lives for them. And Judge Gary wants that the workers keep up this faith so that they will always obey him and keep on working for miserable wages and under the most terrible conditions.

But is it true that the kings and queens rule by the divine power? No, it is the force of bayonets that keep them in power just as Judge Gary keeps his power over the workers by the force of arms.

Therefore intelligent workers will not be fooled into believing that they are honored by the visit of Queen Mary of Roumania. Queen Marie will go thru the mills the same as she would go thru a zoo. She will look upon the workers as she would look upon the animals, for she considers the workers and farmers as nothing but animals good only to work and produce wealth for crowned royalty and uncrowned kings of industry.

In Queen Marie's kingdom millions of workers and peasants are brutally oppressed and starved, thousands are kept in jail because they dared to rise against oppression, thousands of others are brutally tortured and murdered for the same reason. Their blood is on the queen.

To them is due our sympathy and support and honor. Their struggle for liberty against the bloody reign of lewd kings and queens is ours also. Our struggle against the brutal oppression of King Gary is their struggle. To them we stretch our hand of brotherhood!

RESOLUTION OF THE BUKOVINIAN AND BESSARABIAN COMMITTEE OF CHICAGO

THE national minorities in Roumania have been left completely without any rights under the present government. All of these peoples are bitterly oppressed. Some 800,000 people suffer under the heel of Roumanian tyranny.

This oppression is directed most sharply against the 800,000 Ukrainian workers and peasants in those districts which are occupied by the Roumanian military forces—Bessarabia and Bukovina.

In the course of the last three years all Ukrainian schools were either closed or transformed into Roumanian schools. By a brutal policy of colonization, Ukrainian peasants have been deprived of their land which was turned over to Roumanian settlers, not peasants, but former officers, sergeants and gendermerie. The Ukrainian peasants who protested against these measures are suppressed by means of punitive military expeditions.

Every day these districts are subjected to new waves of horrible terror, with mass arrests and mass executions.

The suppression of the trade union movement demases not only the economic rights of the workingclass but also has a terrible effect upon their cultural life, for it completely prevents the cultrnrl work which is conducted as much as possible by the trade unions.

The Roumanian political prisons, which are notorious for their inquisition-methods, their torture chambers, their cells of herror, hold scores of Ukrainian peopies. For weeks prisoners are held under the most bestial pressure and subjected to torture until they make "statements" satisfactory to the police. Many of them are tortured to death.

The Bukovinian and Bessarabian Committee of Chicago, speaking in the name of the nationals in this city, demands the cessation of the terror against the national minorities in Roumania.

We demand the right to the re-establishing of our schools, and the right to have our labor organizations, our trade unions exist and function.

We demand the right to independence or autitation with our own country, Ukrainia Republic.

We present this resolution to the representative of the city of Chicago, Mayor Dever.

Yours very truly,
The Bukovinian and Bessarabian Committee of Chicago.
TOM TKACHUK, Chairman.
NICHOLAS WELECHKO, Secretary.

SOUTH SLAVIC WORKERS PROTEST AGAINST ROYAL SYMBOL OF TERRORISM

RESOLUTION ON ROUMANIA

WHEREAS, there are at present more than 2,500 workers held in Roumania jails for political offenses, and,

WHEREAS, these workers have suffered the most brutal persecution by the Roumanian authorities, and many of their brothers have been tortured and murdered, and,

WHEREAS, Queen Marie of Roumania, now visits our country in an effort to get help for a government that orually oppresses the workers and peasants within its borders, and denies them of freedom of press, assemblage and organization, therefore be it

RESOLVED, that the South Slavic branch of International Labor Defense protests against the subservience of American officials to Queen Marie, the "royal" symbol of the terrorism, and the oppression of workers, peasants and racial minorities that exists in the militarist dictatorship of Roumania. We demand the release of the 2,500 workers in the prisons of Roumania for political "offenses" and the cessation of brutal persecution, torture and murder of workers and SUPPRESSION OF WORKERS' AND PEASANTS' ORGANIZATIONS. We protest against the action of the state department in keeping out of the United States both Countess Karolyi, because she is opposed to the terror regime in Hungary, and Sakitavla, a friend of the British workers and Indian peasants, while at the same time permitting the entry of Queen Marie of Roumania, and new also refusing admittance to Alexandra Kalienta, Soviet envoy to Mexico who represents the workers of her land.

'Lucia de Lammermoor' Starts Second Week of Chicago Civic Opera

The schedule of splendor marking the premiere of the Chicago Civic Opera company will characterize with brilliance the second week of Chicago's initial lyric season, opening next Monday evening, Nov. 16, with "Lucia de Lammermoor," in which the distinguished Italian coloratura soprano, Toti dal Monte, will make her first appearance of the season.

The first Sunday matinee offers an all-star cast in the most popular of operas "Carmen." Mary Garden, Edith Mason, Fernand Ansseau, Edward Cotreuil, and Giacomo Rimini will have the leading roles, surrounded by Anna Hamlin, Lorna Doone Jackson, Jose Mojica, Ernesto Torti, Pasquale Ardente, Eugenio Cotreuil, and others. There will be incidental dances by Serge Oukrainsky, assisted by Miles. Sherman, Nemeroff, Samuels and Chapman, and the entire ballet of the opera will be seen in the fourth act. Massimo Polacco will conduct.

"Lucia" starts off the second week on Monday evening, as stated, with Toti Dal Monte, Giuseppe Cortis, Mojica, Bonelli, Lazzari in the cast. St. Leger conducting.

Tuesday ushers in the first repeat performance of the season, "Aida," but the cast will not be the same heard on the premiere. Instead, the standard familiar "Aida" group—Raisa, Van Gordon, Marshall, Formichi, Kipnis and Lazzari, Serge Oukrainsky and Miles. Sherman and Samuels, and the corps de ballet will be seen to advantage in new costuming. Polacco will conduct.

Wednesday evening brings "The Love of Three Kings" back to the repertoire after a considerable absence. The great tragic work will be sung by a great cast—Garden, Ansseau, Rimini and Lazzari. Roberto Moranzoni, who conducted the first performance in this country, will be at the desk.

Thursday evening brings a feast of novelty, the first performance of Donizetti's "The Daughter of the Regiment," heard in Chicago in two generations and the first performance ever given by Chicago's resident company.

By Upton Sinclair

(Copyright, 1924, by Upton Sinclair)

California water is alway cold, but California sunshine is always warm; so Bunny would swim for a while, and then approach a cluster of rocks, and watch the silent company hump themselves into the water. Whatever he wanted, they would yield to him, the superior being, and content themselves with the places he had left. The green-white seas spla-shed over him, and underneath their surface was a garden of strange plants, with anemones and abalones clinging, too tightly to be pried off by fingers. White clouds drifted by, making swift shadows over the water, and far out at sea a streak of smoke showed where a steamer was passing.

The world was so beautiful, and at the same time strange, and interesting to be alive in! What must it be like to be a seal? What did they think concerning the arrogant being who commandeered their resting places? Did they see the Rhine castle on the shore, or did they see only fish to eat, and how did they understand so clearly that they must not eat a man? Embarrassing if one of them should be a "red," and rebel against the genial customs of the pinedale! Thus Bunny—just the same at the age of twenty-one as when first we met him, driving over the Guadalupe grade and speculating about the feelings of ground-squirrels and butcher birds. He had completed in the meantime a full course at the Beach City High School, and half a course at Southern Pacific University, but neither institution had told him what he wanted to know!

XI

The young philosopher decided that he had had enough, and started to swim in; but he noticed someone on horseback, galloping down the beach towards him. The figure was bareheaded and clad in knickerbockers, and appeared to be a man; but you never could be sure these days, so he swam and waited, and presently made out that it was Vee Tracy. She saw him, and waved her hand, and when she was opposite, reined up her horse. "Good morning, Mr. Rose."

"Good morning," he called. "Is this part of the doctor's prescription?"

"Yes, and it also includes swimming." There was laughter in her face, as if she guessed his plight. "Why don't you invite me to join you?"

"It would embarrass the seals." He swam in slowly, and stood with the waves tumbling about his shoulders.

"It is the morning of the world," said Vee. "Come out, and let us enjoy it."

"Look here, Miss Tracy," he explained, "it so happens that I wasn't expecting company. I am the way the Lord made me."

"O, you sons of men," she chanted, "how long will ye turn my glory into shame?" And she explained, "I once acted in King Solomon" a religious pageant. We had three real camels, and I was Alisbaz the Shamanite, the damsel who cherished the king and administered unto him; and he sang to me. Rise up my love, my fair one, and come away. For lo, the winter is past, and the rain is over and gone; the flowers appear on the earth, the time of the singing of birds is come, and the voice of the turtle is heard in our land. The fig-tree putteth forth her green figs, and the vines with the tender grape give a good smell. Arise, my love, my fair one, and come away. Oh my dove, that art in the clefts of the rocks..."

He was near enough to see the imp of mischief dancing in her black eyes. "Young woman," he said, "I give you fair notice I have been in this water an hour, and I am cold. I was on my way out."

She continues, "Thy neck is like the tower of David builded for an armory, whereon there hang a thousand bucklers, all shields of mighty men."

He took a few steps, until the breakers barely reached his waist. "I am on the way," he said.

"Who is this that cometh out of the water? My beloved is white and ruddy, the chiefest among ten thousand. His head is as the most fine gold, his locks are bushy—"

"Fair warning!" he announced. "One—two—three!" And when she gave no sign of yielding, he strode out from the waves, a figure of manly beauty, set upon sockets of fine gold; his countenance is as Lebanon, excellent as the cedars."

He stood confronting her, the water playing about his feet.

"Thou are beautiful, O my love, as Tirzah, comely as Jerusalem, terrible as an army with banners. Turn away thine eyes from me, for they have overcome me!"

"If that's in the Bible, I suppose it's all right," said Bunny.

"'King Solomon' lost a fortune," said the lady on horseback, "so it's the only pageant I was ever in, and it's the only poetry I can recite. But I dare say if I had been in a Greek pageant I could quote something appropriate, for I read they used to run naked in the games, and it did not embarrass them. Is that true?"

"So the books say," said Bunny.

"Well then, let's be Greek! You are a runner, I have heard. Are you in training?"

"Partly so."

"My beloved's lips are blue and he's got goose-flesh, so let's have a race, you and my horse, and it'll be a Greek pageant."

"Anything to oblige a lady."

STRIKE STRATEGY

By WILLIAM Z. FOSTER

ARTICLE XIV

MOBILIZATION OF THE RESERVES

The strike strategist, in an important strike, must look upon labor's forces pretty much as a military strategist does his army; that is, as active fighting troops and various classes of reserves. It must be his aim at all times to maintain his active fighting force at its maximum strength and to utilize his wide variety of reserves to the utmost.

Considered from this angle, strike reserves are of several classifications. First, there are those active reserves, the workers who are economically most closely related to the strikers and who can often be drawn directly into the struggle. In previous pages we have said much about the mobilization and activization of this class of reserves, so nothing further is necessary here. Then, there is another great class of reserves, less fluid and less available, the broad masses of organized and unorganized workers, economically not closely related to the strikers, who cannot be got to actually take part in the struggle, but who, nevertheless, can be made to help in various ways.

The strike strategist must know how to draw fully upon these important strike reserves. This he can do through financial contributions, protest meetings, the boycott, etc. If the strike is of especially great importance or is of the highly international type, such as of seamen, miners, etc., he must undertake to draw similarly upon the strength of the world labor movement. The left wing must understand always to utilize these demands on the labor movement at large for the purpose of establishing itself ideologically and organizationally among the masses.

ENLISTING THE WOMEN

An important class of strike reserves which must be utilized to the utmost are the womenfolk of the strikers. Ordinarily conservative leaders pay little or no attention to this element. But the left wing must enlist the women. The womenfolk in a strike can be either a great help or a great hindrance. Strikers' wives out of sympathy with the struggle and ignorant of its significance can destroy it. Or, militant supporters of it, they can be its very soul.

Hence, in all strikes our strike strategy must aim at enlisting the co-operation and active participation of the women. They must be inducted into the strike machinery and the general strike activities; they must be organized into housewives' unions. Thoroly aroused women possess an indomitable spirit. They make strikers unconquerable. Innumerable strikes among the miners and textile workers testify to their splendid fighting qualities. No strike can afford to dispense with this important reserve.

The co-operatives must also be considered and utilized as strike reserves. In European countries the co-operatives are many and large and powerful. They are often important depots of supplies for strikers. In this country, however, the co-operative movement is very weak and conservative. Nevertheless it must be utilized in support of strikes wherever the opportunity presents. Likewise, the labor banks, although not real co-operatives, should also be called upon to assist in strikes by making loans to the embattled unions.

PUBLIC OPINION—ITS LIMITATIONS

Finally, there is a certain element of strike reserve in the lower middle class elements; farmers, professionals, petty business men, etc., which must not be neglected. Ordinarily these elements, under present conditions in the United States, look rather askance at the organized workers and their struggles. Often they are frank supporters of the "open shop" campaigns of the employers. But in cases of bitter and spectacular conflicts, especially where the striking workers are desperately poor, where the employers ruthlessly violate the so-called civic liberties, or where a gigantic and hated trust is involved, they are often moved somewhat in sympathy for the strikers. Their petty bourgeois sentiments of humanitarianism, legalism, and competition, are touched. But even in such strikes they give little or no active support. Their chief contribution is to help create a "public opinion" favorable to the strike.

Right wing trade union leaders enormously overestimate the value of such a sympathetic public opinion. In order to secure it they always cut the heart out of their strikes, catering to every petit bourgeois conception. The left wing will make no such mistake. While realizing that a favorable public opinion is a valuable asset and while maneuvering skilfully to create it, the left wing must never forget that the strike can only be won by a successful fighting policy. It will not sacrifice the substance, a real fight, for the shadow, a favorable public opinion.

In their anxiety to pursue this shadow of "public opinion" right wing leaders make a fetish of legalism, and at every militant action of the workers cringe before this fetish, apologetic and timid, often even joining the employers and their controlled press in attacking the workers' disregard of the property rights of the employers. The workers, however, when aroused to struggle in strikes, often take little account of capitalistic-made legal "rights," and American labor history is filled with instances of militant action of strikers. More than in any other country, perhaps, has sabotage been used by American strikers in their bitter battles with employers.

SPORTS

AN APOLOGY is due our revolutionary forefathers, but "we hold this truth to be self-evident": Our colleges with their grand array of professors in science, history, sociology, economics, china painting and kindred subjects, do succeed in turning out fine football players. After which philosophic spasm we come to Capt. Marty Karow of Ohio State. This perfect product of modern education has a total of sixty points scored this season. He has done some handsome line backing and general ground gaining, and if he isn't on the All-American this year the football critics should go back to fish peddling.

TODAY Ohio State hooks up with Michigan. The game presents an Ohio that has not been beaten this year, Michigan has only one defeat, at the hands of the navy, which they did not suffer for patriotic reasons. But they have Benny Friedman, a football player for whom a college education has done wonders. He's a passer, kicker and ball carrier of some reputa. Benny will match wits with Marty Karow, the Ohio whiz. It's a shame that such a fine paper as The DAILY WORKER can't send this bug to Columbus to report the game. It's true the state penitentiary is there, but we'd put on whiskers and take a chance. We've got the whiskers, all we need is the price.

Where are all the Workers' Sports Clubs, and what are they doing? We have space reserved in this column for their activities. Shoot 'em in!

TY COBB is thru. We rave and rant and hold but little regard for professional baseball, but—Ty Cobb is thru! Years ago we satisfied the "Cat Stands" that stood high above the fence at the Detroit ball park (seats were cheaper than in the park) and strained our lungs with cheers for this man. Never lived so spectacular a performer. We bowled for his batting, fielding and his circus base-running. And in the backyard of our home we practiced the "hook slide" he made famous until the side of our seat was so sore we couldn't sit at school. For years afterwards we watched this shrewd, quick-thinking athletic marvel, and he never failed us. If you show surprise at the rant of this bug on the passing of the greatest ball player who ever wore spiked shoes, remember this bug is especially a baseball bug. And nothing in all fields of sport is so pretty to watch as to see a fast man go from first to third on an infield out. We've seen Ty Cobb do this often. Sure, brother, bugs are bugs—whether Red or not. Particularly baseball bugs.

SPORTS writer's opinions are just like those of a politician in one respect; they are sure to provoke a fight. If by chance you'd like to exchange wordy blows on opinions casually aired in this column, or you just want to speak a word or two on matters of sport—brother, you're welcome! Whether brick or posey, just send it to the Magazine Section of The DAILY WORKER in care of

Genesis of the Farmer---His Ideals

By WILLIAM BOUCK.

We have been asked to write a short article on the farmer as he is in America, and we have also been asked to write on the "united front" of the farmer and industrial worker. It seems to me that in order to get to the latter situation, and bring an intelligent picture of the farmer's attempts to better himself economically and politically, we must first show the readers the farmer as he is.

The story of the American farmer is the old story—in new setting of shrewd, clever and dishonest schemers and innocent, childlike faith and trust of the unsophisticated countryman. America was discovered in a critical time, for Europe was becoming crowded and America's vast plains relieved that congestion and took these poverty-stricken, ignorant peasants and placed them upon land—land all their own, their very own—and thru this self-same propaganda they developed.

A Capitalist Psychology.

The exploiting classes for 100 years have seen to it that the farmer was well trained in his belief that he was a property owner—a business man—one of the real "rulers of America, until the farmer's capitalist ideas have become deep-rooted. His belief is a part of him. He is the champion patriot of the century. Any criticism of the fathers who caused the revolution—and incidentally developed our exploitation system—is more or less resented.

Then the farmer is a very religious man. Unlike the business man, who universally makes his religion a part of his business, or rather, determines his religious affiliations as his business may need, the farmer's religion is a part of him. It's as ideal. He is close to nature, and that brings him into close contact with the infinite, with nature, with the miracle of growth and development. He is not a great mixer. His faith is childlike, and he resents any criticism or reflection upon his ideals of religion, or so-called patriotism. And the business elements are not slow to recognize this characteristic, and they defer and play up to this one great ideal of the mature man—the farmer.

They speak to him in terms of endearment. They call him the "backbone" of the country, the great moral, law-abiding middle class, the richest farmer in the world, and getting richer, etc.

Now, there is one other factor that should not be overlooked in the American farmer movement. When he settled these broad plains there were no towns, and towns grew up after he came. So his son started a little store, his nephew started a little mill, his grandson started a bank. And so it was that the second and third generation of farmers in America are all tied up with the business men in the towns, and hence what Cousin Charlie, the banker, said about some farmer movement had great weight with him.

Now, one other matter that looms large on the farmer movement in the United States is that farmers here are descendants of every group and race in Europe, each having its own ideals and each for centuries having been prejudiced thru racial and national-istic feelings to hate the other fellow from the other country across a somewhat mythical border. Now you have a little picture of the American farmer.

First, very religious; second, very patriotic when it comes to upholding our institutions, and he is carefully taught that our present ones are about perfect. Banking, real estate sharks, watering stock of railroads, tax robbery and many other grafts he looks at as regular American institutions, and resents, to begin with, any reflection upon any of these institutions which he believes to be a regular integral part of the greatest and best country in the world.

Now, it takes many graft scandals, the loss of countless farms by mortgage and many attempts to organize before this trusting religious farmer can and will see enough to cause him to get together and become a unit in any movement for his betterment.

IN THE WAKE OF THE NEWS

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY

THE queen of Roumania arrives today in Chicago and our "best people" are ready to do "the right thing" by this female parasite who lives at the expense of the most exploited people in Europe. The shallowness of our democracy was never better exemplified than thru the flunkyism displayed in extending a welcome to this heavy queen. Marie is infamous, even among the aristocratic circles of Europe, because of her debauchery. Yet our ruling classes that make a profession of puritanism refuse entrance to useful foreigners while they crawl on their bellies to Queen Marie. The beneficiaries of the sweat of the packing industry slaves can afford to spend thousands of dollars on gowns considered suitable to exhibit to the queen, but if their slaves asked for a trifling raise those bloodsuckers would spill more blood in resisting the modest demand than would fill the empty champagne bottles that strew the path of the royal train from Seattle to Chicago.

IN all probability, Frank L. Smith, senator-elect from Illinois, the benefactor of the Insull millions, will not sit in the senate. Neither will Mr. William Vare of Pennsylvania. The both are members of the republican party, otherwise known as the G. O. P. (grand old party) but the fight to unseat them will be initiated by such prominent republicans as Senator Borah of Idaho and Norris of Nebraska. Which proves that inside of the G. O. P. there is a cleavage born out of the diverging interests of the elements that originally provided the party with an economic base.

THERE is plenty of hypocrisy involved in this matter. Borah says that the senate has a right to purge itself of undesirable elements. And right in taking this position, is rendering a service to the capitalist system. The capitalist class as a whole is not in favor of selecting political servants that will spend most of their time picking the pockets of their masters, which picking they regard as a bonus for allowing their masters to pick the pockets of the workers. The capitalists have no ethical objection against the picking of pockets, provided it is not their own. So Frank L. Smith, who was elected thru the generosity of the sole shop mutt-and-Jeanire utility magnate, Samuel Insull, will probably get the gate because he got caught. The voting class of Illinois should not forget that Smith, despite his support by the open-shop Insull, was endorsed by the labor officialdom of the Illinois Federation of Labor.

BETWEEN William S. Vare, who was elected senator from Pennsylvania, and William B. Wilson, his democratic opponent, there is no choice for the workers. Both are servants of capitalism, and the democrat, Wilson, is a particularly scabby specimen. Wilson owns scab coal mines, and openly labor publications supportof him, not caring a particle whether he was an employer of scab labor or not, because he was a democrat. William B. Wilson was secretary of labor in Woodrow Wilson's cabinet. A former coal miner, he degenerated into a red baiter and strike breaker. It does not make the slightest difference to the workers of Illinois and Pennsylvania whether Messrs. Vare and Smith are elected or not. Until they organize a labor party in alliance with the farmers they will be at the mercy of political grafters and crooks of both parties.

THE Briton, Gibbons, who wrote "The Decline and Fall of the Roman Empire," might be urged to perform a similar service for the human race with regard to the British empire, were he alive today. The British empire conference which is holding forth in London is an infallible indication that the pirate empire is on the wane. During the late war a French banker remarked that Britain would pull thru that debacle, but would never win another war. It seems that the banker knew what he was talking about. The appointment of a Canadian ambassador to Washington shows that the northern dominion has practically broken with the "mother country." South Africa is out for practical independence and the Irish Free State has had an envoy in Washington for the past few years. With a disastrous strike at home, the dominions kicking up their heels, the Chinese boycotting British trade and the United States grabbing all that is left, it does not look so bright for the old empire. All those who have tears to shed can do so, but this writer remains dry.

BENITO MUSSOLINI has often been pictured as a valiant man. He is the kind of a lunatic that might be resemble to danger under certain subjective conditions. But note how he crawled to France. The latest incident in the life of this bloody montebank did not add any laurels to his crown. Apparently he engaged a press sea with the honored name of Garibaldi to act as an agent provocateur n France and entice anti-fascists into activities only for the purpose of getting them into the hands of the fascist police. Mussolini's tools also got busy in Spain and insinuated themselves into the Spanish revolutionary movement with a view to embroiling Spain with France, so that Italy could use Spain's antipathy to France to advantage in her aim to win colonies from France or from France's colonies. Tuesday. However, the French police got the goods on Mussolini and now the erstwhile brave dictator is crawling to the French foreign office.

EVERY vestige of freedom of expression is abolished in Italy. The fact that the fascist dictatorship is obliged to intensify the reign of terror after four years of power, proves that the masses are still in revolt against fascism and that the Mussolini regime has failed to satisfy the needs of the masses. The Daily Herald of London reports that hundreds of Italian workers were killed in a bloody orgy of terror following the latest attempt on Mussolini's life. The investigations of the French police have shown that most of the attempts on Mussolini's life have been instigated by Mussolini himself to provide him with an excuse to slaughter more progressives.

ALL opposition papers are now suppressed in Italy. All opposition parties are suppressed. Foreign correspondents are threatened with arrest if they send out any information that is unfavorable to the fascist regime. The death penalty for homicide has been re-established, but only for attempts on the lives of Mussolini and members of the royal family. Heavy prison penalties for the mildest criticism of the fascist regime are provided by laws recently passed under the lash of the black shirt dictatorship. There are reports that even inside the fascist party there is a nucleus of revolutionaries waiting for an opportunity to dynamite the hated regime. Uneasy rests the crown that sits on the head of a dictatorship that rests on a minority of the dictated. And yet it is not strange that the American capitalist class should smile on the fascist dictatorship in Italy while they frown on the rule of the workers and peasants in Russia.

WHEN Mussolini discovers opposition in the ranks of the fascist party in Italy he hires an efficient dagger and dispenses of his trouble. How different in the Soviet Union? Recently there was quite a sharp discussion in the ranks of the Russian Communist Party, now called the All-Union Communist Party. What happened? A conference of delegates of the party from all sections of the Soviet Union was held in Kremlin—in the palace of the late czar—and there

Unite!

Ye workers in fields and in orchards,
Ye toilers in factory and mill,
Ye workers of wealth, pulling turbines
With your brain, and your brawn, and your skill,
Do you love so the shackles that bind ye,
That ye kiss the fetters that bind?
Do you hate so the sunlight of freedom
That ye'd rather wear blinkers, walk blind?

Now by the mills that grind slowly
The grinding has ground up the meal,
The sacks are filled to o'erflowing—
And yet you still sweat at the wheel.
For what? . . . that your masters may rule you;
For what? . . . that they treed you in scorn;
For what? . . . that your children may hunger
And curse the dark day they were born.

For God's sake awake and arouse ye!
A Moses is walking the land
With the scythe of the field and the hammer
Of labor aloft in his hand:
The day and the hour approaches
For the slaves to arise in their might;—
Farmers and Workers join forces,
Form your own party—and fight!

—Henry Georgs Weiss.

who held views in opposition to the central committee of the party present to them. The opposition position did not prevail, but it is quite probable that any worth-while suggestions they had to make were accepted. While this hot discussion was going on there was no necessity for one extra policeman thruout the tremendous territory that is covered by the Soviet Union. And the reason is that the dictatorship of the workers and peasants in Russia is based on 95 per cent of the population and is therefore the nearest thing to complete democracy that the world has ever seen. In Italy the black shirt dictatorship is based on the needs of the big capitalists and is at loggerheads with the great majority of the population.

WE see a picture of President Hindenburg of Germany reviewing monarchist army leaders in Bremen. Hindenburg, the monarchist, occupies the anamolous position of being president of a republic. The German socialists, whose leaders murdered the revolutionists, Rosa Luxemburg and Karl Liebknecht, in 1920, look with a benign eye on the preparations being made by the extreme reactionaries to restore the kaiser to the throne. In the meantime "Me Und Gott" is in Holland living like a Chicago bootlegger, while families of German workers are unemployed. And only recently the Prussian parliament, with the aid of the socialists, gave Wilhelm enough money to keep half a dozen kings in champagne for a lifetime. Socialism still means that the serfs and the products thereof must belong to the workers." But socialists all over the world are supporters of capitalism.

PRINCESS ASTRID of Swedan married Prince Leopold of Belgium and the marriage ceremony was performed in Sweden by the socialist mayor of Stockholm. Socialists do not even seem to be good republicans. The princess is a protestant of some brand and the prince is a catholic, so before the royal pair can share the royal couch the pope must sprinkle holy water on them, and incidentally get a rakeoff. Representatives of all the ancient European monarchies were present at the wedding ceremony, including Mrs. William Phillips, wife of the American ambassador, who, we are told, "wore only pearls." Now that their princelings are married off the workers of Sweden and Belgium should sleep easy.

WITH the Cantonese troops sweeping up from the south and the armies of Gen. Feng moving in from the west it looks as if there would be nothing left of the old imperialist armies of China in a few weeks except whatever Chang Tso-lin can snatch from the blaze. The Kuomintan, founded by Sun Yat Sen, the great Chinese liberator, which was reorted smashed several times during the past few years by the capitalist press, now stands in a fair way of getting complete control of China. When that day comes the imperialists of the world will not rejoice. America and Japan have already given indications that they will not stand in the way of Chinese unity. They better not. England is in the soup and cannot undo the blunders committed by her bloodthirsty rulers. It was good fun shooting the Chinese while they were armed only with bamboo sticks. But a Chinaman with a gun is about as deadly as anything we can think of.

THE government that has made itself the laughing stock of the world thru its disgraceful kowtowing to the Queen of Roumanie refused Mme. Kollontai, Soviet ambassadress to Mexico, permission to visit this country on her way to her post. This is not surprising. Our ruling classes are so conscious of their thievery that they fear the presence of the representative of a country where the workers have thrown off the yoke of slavery might inspire their own slaves to go and do likewise. Nevertheless, the United States will be obliged to recognize the Soviet Union and our bourgeoisie must stand the humiliation of seeing the red flag over the Soviet embassy in Washington one of these days.

THIRTY-NINE years ago last Thursday four labor leaders were hanged in Chicago because of their activity in pushing the eight-hour day movement. An excellent story about this tragedy appears on another page. The two men who were murdered in 1887 had nothing in common with the labor fakers of today, who spend more time helping the employers rob the workers than they spend organizing the working class. There is nothing in common between the Haymarket martyrs and men like William Green, John L. Lewis and their kind.

A PICTURE of two old people left in front of me. Harry J. Kaes, 61, and his wife, 60, were thrown out on the cold streets because they could not pay rent. No doubt they produced plenty of surplus value in their lifetime, but evidently they did not know enough to get others to work for them. Our masters tell us that we should never look at the clock or bother about the pay envelope; that these things take care of themselves. But we know from experience that the more the workers produce the quicker they work themselves out of a job, unless they live in a workers' republic where the increased production redounds to the benefit of the producers.

A PEEK EACH WEEK AT MOTION PICTURES

THE BLACK PIRATE.

Yo-ho-ho, what a bunch of athletic pirates sit on a dead man's chest in this picture! Never did a more villainous crew board the peaceful merchantman than that headed by Douglas Fairbanks, the Black Pirate. Never was the crew such carbon copies of their leader as this one. They raid ships, swear blue streaks, fight, gamble and carouse in fashion fitting the most blood-thirsty novel of the buccaneers. Douglas Fairbanks does all the flashy unbelievable things that little boys dream of—and that buccaneers no doubt wished that they could have done. And his crew of Black Pirates does them like their leader. It is a pirate picture all right, but in Fairbanks' style.

Here's the romantic Spanish Maine of the boys' adventure stories—treasure chests in secret hiding, raiding ships, climbing the riggieg, duels, villains, heroes, lovely heroine—yo-ho-ho, what a bunch of hokum!

The spirit of the picture (showing at the Roosevelt) is a gay one. No pretense at honesty, of course. It claims none. It asks you to believe the things you believed when you were a kid. And Douglas Fairbanks adds a touch or two to romance with sparkling athletic feats that will thrill a small boy down to his shoe tops. He makes a handsome, swash-buckling hero. He moves the picture along in jolly, if unreal, fashion. The story itself is really punk. Too cheap, in fact, for a Fairbanks picture. We expect more from this fellow.

So there you are! The whole thing is done in natural colors and heightens the effect of romantic adventure. There are scenes of pirates swarming on a ship from deck to rigging that are quite splendid. There are many features that put "The Black Pirate" somewhat above the average. The story itself, however, gets the picture nowhere. We don't like it. You may, if you don't go expecting very much.

Douglas Fairbanks in "The Black Pirate."

The story is rotten. The acting is worse (yes, brother, European acting, too!). The preachy moralistic tone of the whole thing will make you sick to your stomach.

A few scenes of the slum proletariat (actual scenes, so they say) are not bad. The make-up and acting of an old wash woman was splendidly done. To offset these two things were all the bad features we mentioned, and the business of telling us that because God so ordained it such conditions exist. The conclusions of the film are to the effect that love, brotherliness(?), kindness and charity would do away with this blight on humanity! Such is the fertilizer they dish out in this film. As a disgusted fellow-viewer pointedly characterized it: "Horses!"

A DOZEN IN BRIEF

"Eagle of the Sea"—J. C. says: "Not bad."

Don Juan—John Barrymore gives a synthetic version of the well-known ancient pimp. (At Orpheum with the Vitaphone).

The Strong Man—Fairly funny, thanks to Harry Langdon. (Northern).

The Better 'Ole—According to S. P. Eyd Chaplin keeps up the family reputation in a funny one. Variety—Sure—go!

London—Smaxtra wasn't particularly impressed with this one.

Subway Sadie — This stuff — but clever.

Man of Steel—Made to make you love your home.

Mare Nostrum—Remember we warned you? You'll waste your money.

The Gods—Yes and no and maybe.

Across the Pacific — Over there they'd never stand for this stuff.

The Peanic Strike—It will stiffen your spine and quicken your blood. Don't miss it!

THE BLUMS OF BERLIN.

After seeing such splendid films as "Passion," "Cabinet of Doctor Caligari" and "Variety" you may have come to the conclusion the Germans can turn out no bad pictures. If you are under this impression by all means avoid seeing "The Slums of Berlin" (Die Verrufenen). This picture (showing at the Randolph) has all the worst features of the worst American films plus a few American bad films never thought of. The photography is bad.

THE THEATER

LE MAIRE'S AFFAIRS

I DID not make this show my affair because it had its premiere in Chicago. But the blurbs claimed the run for four months and I got curious. I wanted to see what makes these things go.

There are reasons. Sophie Tucker is the main one. This roaring lady who was a star when Sophie was a prairie, is still good enough to make youngsters anxious. Here's a rough sort of humor—a low-down, off-color Sue-making. It is reminiscent of old burlesque shows and (maybe mine is a perverted preference!) it is worth having. And brother, this lady can put over a jazz song as nobody else can.

Ted Lewis, the ancient jazz king is also in it. So's his old orchestra. The orchestra is better. But the crowd seemed to like his ancient hokum and maybe my reactions are due to having seen this fellow so often since childhood. He doesn't seem to have changed since then either. Lester Allen, the third star on the bill is even less my idea of a clever comic.

But the music is lively. The dancing is above the average. The Albertina Rasch girls are an able troupe and add much to the evening's performance. The whole production is lavish one on which much money has been expended. The scenery and costumes are not only pretentious but at times really splendid. The humor is quite often beyond Sunday school bounds. There's a burlesque skit on "The Dove" that will get your face slapped if repeated in mixed company. But they pay to hear this stuff when it's in the theater. The humor as a whole is ancient hokum.

There are a good many good things, in "Le Maire's Affairs." There are also a good many worse. It is tuneful, lavishly presented, includes shapely ladies and—Sophie Tucker. Altho it is now in its fifth month at the Woods Theatre it is likely to be there a few more months before New York will see it. Chicago likes it. Maybe you will also . . . but we warn you not to break a leg rushing to get there. It is fest another, the slightly better, musical show.

Hurrah! "The Country Is Prosperous"

By PAULINE SCHULMAN.

JULIUS ROSENWALD, head of a big mail order house, says the "country is splendidly prosperous." Do I agree with him? Of course I do.

Why, for twelve long years I have been working in the factories of the cities of New York sewing dresses for those ladies who spend their winters in Miami, Florida, and their summers surely not in New York City, as is my fate. And yet whenever spring comes and birds begin their old and new songs familiar to me from the old country days my heart begins to weep within me. Many a time did I attempt to leave the city and the factory and get away, away somewhere in the forests and fields. But dresses were to be made and I never had enough money saved up to leave. But how different it is today! Not only is the country, according to Julius Rosenwald, "prosperous," but I, too, am similarly prosperous. No longer am I in the city for the summer sweating away in the factory, as was the case for many years, for now am I tucked away in the country, disporting myself among the beautiful fruit orchards. I think Marlboro is a "dandy" place.

I was in need of a little change, for my savings of even twelve years of constant work were not sufficient to maintain me for the summer at Marlboro, for my expenses were less than $3 a week, so rent troubles are obviated by my pitched tent. Yet when even small change is needed one nevertheless must go and get it, for in the land of equal opportunities those willing to work can always earn a livelihood. Hence I turned to cherry picking and earned as high as 90 cents a day. My boss considered me the "champion" in this profession, or this is a piecework profession. But no matter how intense the rush the 90 cents a day could not be, and has not as yet been, broken.

You are probably anxious to learn wherein lies this here prosperity. But wait a minute, to be sure the cherries are gone. But a new crop has arisen —peaches. My boss gave me the opportunity to advance. I am pulling weeds now and am paid by the hour at a rate of 50 cents. Well, here is where prosperity, together with $3.60 a day comes in. Isn't this sufficient to indicate that not only is the "country splendidly prosperous," but that I also am somehow sharing this prosperity?

Pulling weeds is very good exercise, particularly for the spinal column. One must remain all the time in a stooping posture, one arm, or the elbow rather, supported by the knee, and with the other hand one must do the weeding and hand over the heavy uprooted parasites to the supported hand, until a sizable bunch is accumulated, whence it goes to the heap. The throwing of this bunch of weeds to the rising heap is an excellent substitute for ball playing.

Had I known about this splendid exercise when I worked as governess I surely would have advised the lady of the house to indulge in it, for she always endeavored to work up an appetite, but without success.

Those who can benefit by my latest discovery are 200-pound women who patronize the "swell" boarding houses, especially those who are busily engaged in playing cards and sitting in the rockers worrying about both the quality of the next meal and the manner they will consume same. They console themselves by cursing those "damn cloakmakers out on strike," who "never have enough, no matter how much money you give them, they always want more and more."

Of course these "damn" workers spoil the vacation of such ladies as well as their appetites. But I am willing to help them, let them head come to Marlboro and pull weeds, and they surely will benefit by it a great deal. As for the strikers, if they would but read the New York Times and their consequent enlightenment about the prevalent prosperity in this country would convince them that they are not starving.

It seems that Mr. Rosenwald, the birds and myself are the only ones who know of this remarkable "prosperity." But why did not the manufacturer try to discover whether this is true? When I was told that girls cannot do any work on a farm I convinced myself that this was a fallacy. "Why shouldn't a girl be able to work on a farm," I asked, "when she can in the factory and work as men do; when on strike be clubbed by the police or men are, and be beaten by the hired gangsters as men are? Then, if that is the case," said I, "she will be able to do farm work as well."

The birds surely know of the existing "prosperity." They do not have to wait for Mr. Rosenwald to tell it to them via the New York Tribune, for they know how to help themselves. As only the masses do not know how and what to do, they have to touch their stale fruit. Rosenwald, who came to inform President Coolidge about the wave of "splendid prosperity" sweeping the country.

How I Become A Pioneer

By Peter Kelley

One of the Pioneers took me to one of the meetings. I thought it was good. Next time they had a circle meeting and we had a good time. I should like to be an organizer or some other kind of officer. The Pioneers teach things as they really are.

Keep it up Peter. You will surely be a fine organizer some day!

TWO LETTERS - - - A Story

By MOISSAYE J. OLGIN.

(Letter No. 1 was published in the November 9 issue of this magazine.)

LETTER No. 2.

Dear Marie:

To the avoid scenes and voluminous talks, I have decided to let you know of my decision thru a letter. I have learned to part with you forever. I do not intend to return from this trip to what we fraudulently termed our home.

Frankly speaking, I do not see the need for explanations. We are free people, a man and a woman, equal in rights and responsibilities. It would have suffered if I declared: "Life with you is no more acceptable to me." Decisions it would have been more simplified. You know I never believed in "explanations." One of the sources of satisfaction in our mutual life was your unwavering desire to weave a fable of reasons to attend every occurrence. We first refused for you unless you equipped it with wrapping upon wrapping of old pretenses. You will not be at home would you have put into well polished words the "meaning" of our parting. So be it.

I spoke about fraudulently calling our life a home. I mean what I say. We have never had a home. In your conception, a home was something sweet, soft, pink, lacy and atmospheric. You wished every breath of real life, every experience which always smacked with it strong currents and powerful smells, to be kept outside of that vacuum which you choose to call home. To me it was a waste of time, to say the least. But it was more than that. It was degrading.

When centered me in your mental pattern more than anything else was the reminiscences that always spoke of your disposal. Here was public life, here was privacy; here the world, here we; here, experience, here safety, religion, morality. You never made it clear to me when you unconsciously assumed that I was another problem. You will be shocked if I say that I suspected real nobleness in you when you chided your friends for their worldliness, a fastidious yearning for things beyond your reach, a clear understanding of one's personality and a supreme objective power, why, even to be beautiful, but this was not your religion. There was something profound, something evanescent, a thought dimmed down almost to nothingness, as gentle as the perfume of distant lilac in the evening. The shadowy of a shadow, the reminiscence of a sound that is no more. You, my dear Marie, were the product of thousand generations playing with fatalities where real experiences are too strong to stomach. This I cannot respect. Decadence is surrounded by retching, to decomposed then. You do not expect me to respect the suppleness of life.

You called it beauty. You consider this the greatest value in life. I may as well confess that it was that ready made, pretty something, that fragrance of refined spirituality, that captivated me when I first met you. At that time it seemed to me you embodied all the many soul was craving for from early boyhood.

You know my biography. The son of a day laborer, raised in squalor first, an apprentice in a blacksmith's shop, then a youthful factory worker with a devilish hunger for the higher things in life. A self-taught intellectual parvenu, who, thru long and weary evenings of poring over books, thru great audacity in trying to take as large a bite of knowledge as his intellectual digestion permitted, was trying to patch up the spalling holes in his edifice of knowledge, only to discover that these confounded holes were growing in size and number. A starving man full of corroding envy of those who had the leisure and the facilities to acquire knowledge. How I idealized the college students, striding dandyish moving in an atmosphere of power, of spirituality, they were to my fervid imagination. How I longed to cast off the crudities, the awkwardness, the humiliating consciousness of inferiority that I had brought with me from my environment! I early became involved in the class struggle, and I was not the last among the comrades of my age, but into my revolutionary ardor I perseveringly brought in this added envy for the cultural possibilities open before the bourgeoisie—an envy akin to pain. My class consciousness surely was not limited to the problems of bread and butter, as you chose to characterize it again and again.

The revolution was for me a step towards the realization of this spiritual yearning of the working class, of which I considered myself only a more advanced member. What was conficated bourgeois houses, nobody knew with what awe I entered places which I almost intuitively considered temples of beauty. I will never forget two hours spent in the library of Ryabkov's mansion, of which I was assigned to take inventory. What a wealth of taste, what a blending of colors! What a mollifying combination of lights, what an atmosphere of peace, delightful thought, and what books! What a number of well-bound, beautifully printed volumes! Never did my heart throb in the presence of a woman as violently as it did that evening when I opened one bookcase after another.

When I met you I thought the most exquisite flower of culture had come into my path. I never believed in saints—not since I was five—but you, Marie, actually seemed to exude a certain radiance. With you and thru you I thought to reach those heights of woman as violently as it did that evening when I opened one bookcase after another.

When I met you I thought the most exquisite flower of culture had come into my path. I never believed in saints—not since I was five—but you, Marie, actually seemed to exude a certain radiance. With you and thru you I thought to reach those heights of "real" culture, the vision of which tormented my soul for years.

You may not have noted what an infernal amount to labor it cost me to adapt myself, at least outwardly, to your ways, to your standards of behavior. I am a working man with strong arms and a powerful body. I am used to wield a hammer, a shovel, a ladle of molten metal, a machine gun. You demanded gentlemanly manners. I molded myself according to your requirements. My comrades often mocked at my "excess of refinement," calling me derogatory names in perfectly friendly good humor. I took the pain of breaking myself. I thought it worth while. Only on common ground could I meet with you to share that which you were to offer me, I thought.

It took me some time to discover that you had nothing to offer. True, you were a fair representative of the culture of your class, but I had not known that that culture was shallow. It was a thin, glittering skin covering a very selfish, self-centered substance. All your beauty, all your refinement, was, as the English say, skin deep. You had manners, you had ready-made patterns of conduct, you had ready-made patterns of opinion, but it was all on the surface. You never knew what it was to be storm-shaken to the very last vestige of your being.

Since I have allowed myself to indulge in this futile frankness I may just as well tell you that your compliance was repelling to me. You were opposed to the revolution. Why didn't you fight? I was an enemy of your class, a destroyer of the existences of those dear to you; how could you seek peace in my arms? Why did you not kill me in my sleep? You consider yourself a romantic lady, you love to carry this sign of high emotionalism. Let me tell you that for months after we became lovers I still anticipated an act of violence on your part. I hardly went to sleep without a lingering idea that you might kill me, after all. You had not the strength to do it. You never thought of that. You found shelter and devotion in the enemy's camp, and you gradually learned to talk his jargon. Is that romantic?

Here I touch upon something fundamental, perhaps the most fundamental, of all things. You are concerned with yourself alone. You think of the world only as a source wherefrom to draw convenience and pleasure. It is always you and the world. You are a veritable enemy of mankind; never for a moment do you forget your own self. I know this is not a personal peculiarity of yours. It is a characteristic of your class. But what value is there in culture, beauty, refinement, spirituality, when it is all for oneself, all so to speak, for individual consumption? Theoretically, I had none of the individualistic propensities of the bourgeoisie. A live experience it became to me only thru association with you.

Ah! you blamed me for coldness! You never knew that flame of exultation when a man loses the consciousness of his self, when a man is capable of throwing away his self as one throws away a discarded rag, because he does not think of himself, because the bigger universal thing had capitated him with such power that it became his own life, his very substance. No, with all your refinement you never lived the life of the universe. You recited your spiritualist poets, who, you said, were groping by sheer intuition for the things experience can never achieve. What did they know, what did you know, about merging with things supreme. I am fully cognizant of the fact that you will not be able to understand what I have just written down.

And then something else. Your avarice. You did not realize that you became somewhat like an ant dragging things into its nest. It was hideous, Maria, hideous! You seemed to think that the revolution was made for the express purpose of furnishing a beautiful apartment for you, of securing you box seats at the opera. You even took it for granted that, being the wife of a state official, you had to wear jewels. I could not dissuade you. It was too humiliating to argue such things. You thought it your privilege to shine in a lodge with a diamond ring flashing all sorts of colors in front of my comrades. You never thought of that, ah? To you it was beauty; to me . . . The least said, the better.

Dear Maria, I do not want to be untrue to myself and to you. I cared for you a great deal. I wish I had not become so much attached to you. You are lovely underneath and beyond your shell of bourgeois culture. I often thought you would be able to cast off the old Adam and Eve. I saw, I thought I saw, seeds of a future loveliness that would overshadow the past. My hopes have not materialized. I waited long and labored patiently. I hate to give up a task. As things stand, I must admit my defeat. Better let us part, peacefully if we can.

You will think of another woman. I assure you there is none. This much you have done to me, that the women of my own class all seem crude and primitive to me. The theoreticians of our movement would say that association with the bourgeoisie has placed me in between the two classes—a white raven, as it were. I wish I had a sense of humor strong enough to laugh at my own plight. But let's not talk of this.

Good-bye, Maria, and be happy, if you can. If I am not mistaken, you will find some peace of mind in association with people of your own class.

Be well.

Yours,
Alexander.

Cotzofanesti

The shades of night were falling fast
When through the Balkan darkness passed
The Reaper grim. . . . A soldier died
Without his nurse, his queen, and cried—
"Cotzofanesti!"

While peasants starved and workers went
To prison for their discontent,
The tyrant queen of all this hell
Was nursing soldiers who were well
At Cotzofanesti.

This nurse, this queen, the gay Marie,
Had other business, as you'll see,
With officers of greater vigor
Than the poor boob who pulled a trigger
At Cotzofanesti.

Like Messalina on a tear
With nymphs and satyrs gathered there,
The royal dame who ruled the nation
Left little to imagination
At Cotzofanesti.

So when you're asked why Queen Marie
Has mobilised a huge army
Of soldiers strong and broad and tall,
You have, therefore, but to recall—
Cotzofanesti!

Personal Recollections of Karl Marx

By PAUL LAFARGUE.

VI.

Marx (who had begun by being one of the radical leaders of the bourgeoisie, saw himself deserted as soon as his opposition had become too decided; and he was treated as an enemy when he became a socialist. Hunted and driven out of Germany after being insulted and calumniated, they organized a deadly conspiracy of silence against his person and his works. They completely ignored "The Eighteenth Brumaire" which proves that of all the historians and statesman of the year 1848, Marx was the only one who understood, and clearly revealed the true character of the causes and results of the coup d'etat of December 2, 1851. Not a single bourgeois journal mentioned the work in spite of its actuality. "The Poverty of Philosophy," an answer to the "Philosophy of Poverty," as well as "A Critique of Political Economy," were equally ignored. But the "International" grew and filled the world with the report of its deeds. Altho Marx held himself in the background and let others act, they soon discovered who the director was; in Germany, the Social Democratic Party had been founded and raised to a power which Bismarck wooed before he attacked The Lassalleas, Schweitzer, published a series of articles which Marx found very noteworthy and which acquainted the working class public with "Capital." On the motion of J. Ph. Becker, the congress of the International decided to draw the attention of international socialists to this work as to the Bible of the Working Class.

After the uprising of March 18, 1871, in which they saw the hand of the International, and after the defeat of the Commune, the defense of which the general council of the International took up against the unleashed bourgeois press of all countries, the name of Marx became world-famous. Marx was then recognized as the undisputed theoretician of scientific socialism and as the organizer of the first International Labor Movement. "Capital" became the text book of the socialists of all countries; all the socialist and labor papers popularized its learned theories; and in America, during a large strike which took place in New York, they published passages out of it in the form of pamphlets in order to inspire the workers to hold out and to prove to them the justification of their demands. "Capital" was translated into the principal languages of Europe, into Russian, French, English; excerpts from it appeared in German, Italian, French, Spanish and Dutch. And as often as opposed as in Europe or America attempted to refute his theories, the economists immediately found a socialist answer which silenced them. In truth, "Capital" has today become what the congress of the International has called it, the Bible of the Working Class.

Marx's active part in the international socialist movement was carried on at the expense of his scientific labors. The death of his wife and oldest daughter, Mme. Longuet, was supposed to have been absolutely fatal for him.

Marx was closely bound to his wife by a feeling of deep attachment. Her fraternal bond between his joy and his pride; her tender-heartedness and devotion of character had helped him to bear more easily the misery unavoidably bound up with his agitated life as a revolutionary socialist. The suffering which brought Mrs. Marx to her grave undoubtedly also shortened her husband's life. During her long and painful illness, Marx, spiritually fatigued as a result of the excitement and bodily exhaustion as a result of sleeplessness, lack of movement and fresh air, contracted pneumonia which threatened to carry him off.

On December 2, 1881, Mrs. Marx died as she lived, a Communist and materialist. Death had no terror for her. When she felt that the last moment had come she called out: "Karl, my strength is broken." These were her last clearly audible words. On December 5th, she was buried in the Highgate cemetery in the section of the "damned" (unconsecrated ground). In accordance with the habits of her whole life and those of Marx, they had carefully avoided making the burial a public one; only a few intimate friends accompanied the dead person to her last resting place. Before they dispersed, Marx's old friend, Frederick Engels, spoke the following words at the edge of the grave:

"My friends! The noble-minded woman whom we are burying was born at Salzwedel in 1814. Her father, the Baron of Westphalen, was soon thereafter stationed at Trier as government counsellor and made close friends with the Marx family. The children grew up together. The two highly talented natures found one another. When Marx entered the university, the community of their future fates was already decided.

"In 1843, after the suppression of the first Rheinische Zeitung which was edited by Marx for a time, the wedding took place. From then on, Jenny Marx not only shared the fate, the labors and the struggles of her husband, but she also took part in them with the greatest understanding, the most glowing passion.

"The young couple went to Paris in voluntary exile which all too soon became a real one. The Prussian government persecuted Marx even there. I must add with regret that a man like Alexander Humboldt was active in effecting a deportation order. The family was driven to Brussels. The February revolution came. During unrest which broke out in Brussels, too, not only Marx was arrested; the Belgian government did not fail to also throw his wife into prison without any cause.

"The revolutionary revival of 1848 had already collapsed by the next year. New exile, first in Paris, then, as a result of renewed interference of the French government, in London. And this time, in fact, it was for Jenny Marx's exile with all its terrors. Nevertheless, she had overcome the material pressure under which she saw her two boys and one little girl sink into the grave. But the fact that governmental and bourgeois opposition, vulgar liberal and democrat, combined in one large conspiracy against her husband, the fact that they overwhelmed him with the most miserable and vile calumnies, that the entire press closed itself to him, cutting off all defense on his part, so that momentarily he stood defenseless before opponents which he and she scorned—that struck her profoundly. And that lasted very long.

"But not forever. The European proletariat came into a position where it could once more move independently to some extent. The International was founded. The class struggle of the proletariat pressed from country to country. And among the foremost fought her husband, himself the foremost. Then began a period of severe suffering for her. She lived to see the calumnies, which rained down upon Marx as thick as hail, dispersed like chaff before the wind. His teachings, which all reactionary parties, feudal as well as democratic, tried to suppress, were now preached from every roof-top in every civilized country and in every educated language. She lived to see the proletarian movement, with which her whole being was fused, shake the foundation of the old world from Russia to America and, despite all resistance, press forward ever more certain of victory. And the striking proof of an indestructible life force which our German workers gave in the last Reichstag elections, was also one of her last joys.

"That which has been contributed by such a woman with such keen and critical understanding, with such devotion to the comrades of battle in the movement during almost forty years—that has never forced its way into publicity, that is not written in the annals of the contemporary press; that, one must experience himself. But this I know: Just as the wives of the Communist fugitives will often remember her, so others will often enough miss her bold and wise advice—bold without ostentation, wise without the honor of ever forgiving anything.

"I do not need to speak of her personal characteristics. Her friends knew her and will not forget her. If ever there was a woman who found her greatest happiness in making others happy, it was this woman."

After the death of his wife, Marx's life was nothing more than a series of steadily borne moral and physical sufferings which were only lessened when a year later Mme. Longuet, his oldest daughter, also suddenly died. He was broken and he never recovered again. He expired, sitting before his study table, on March 14, 1883, in his sixty-seventh year.

The Four That Were Hanged - - - -

By Amy Shechter

Thirty-nine years ago, Nov. 11th, 1887, the murder of the Chicago Anarchists by the capitalist state deprived the American working-class movement of revolutionary leadership that might have immeasurably strengthened the cause of the American proletariat in the last decades. Spies and Parsons, the two leading figures among the men condemned, were of Debs' generation. They would probably have lived to render as great services to the working class as Debs has done.

They both had real qualities of leadership, and as editors of revolutionary papers—Spies of the German Arbeiter-Zeitung, Parsons of the English Alarm—as eloquent speakers and energetic organizers, they wielded a powerful revolutionary influence on the American labor movement. Of the others, Engel, a man forced into the revolutionary movement by the bitter logic of a life of hardship, the oldest, a man of fifty, had done a great deal of effective organization work among the German workers of Chicago; he was a speaker of rugged force. Fischer, a 24-year-old compositor, and the son of socialist parents, was also a thorough-going revolutionist and a man in whom his fellow-workers had confidence. The fifth, Louis Lingg, a strange, brilliant figure, was only 22 years old, and some nine months out of Germany, but he had a name in anarchist circles in his native land and was already doing effective work in Chicago. It is difficult to tell what his line of development in relation to the labor movement might have been: he was the stuff of which the Russian terrorists were made. His extraordinary mental capacity and cold courage would probably have made him a force to be reckoned with.

Capitalism carried out its purpose efficiently. With the hanging of these men and the breaking up of the Chicago Anarchist group, it left the revolutionary movement in the United States practically leaderless for the time being, and desperately crippled. Capitalism had planned to strike a double blow at the revolutionary movement, first by depriving it of leadership, and secondly by "making an example" of the foremost to trial that should strike such terror into the hearts of labor that not only the revolutionary movement but militancy of any sort, and especially the labor movement, then gaining tremendous impetus, would be utterly destroyed. It was as deliberate a move on the part of the capitalist dictatorship to stem the onward surge of the proletariat by violence, as Kornilov's manifestation of the white terror, as any of the deeds perpetrated in Czarist Russia, as the killing of Liebknecht and Luxemburg in Germany, or the long roll of murders of Communists in "our Marie's" Roumania, and the whole Balkan shambles of today. In fact a certain Russian prince, Shastakov, minister of the czarist navy, arriving in the United States at the time of the trial feeling the homelike atmosphere of our democracy, politely inquired of the reporters, "Have you hanged your Nihilists yet?"

Anarchism on Trial.

There was never any question but that it was anarchism (used indiscriminately at that time by capital for all radical doctrines, as Bolshevism is today) that was on trial. It was openly stated and reiterated by press, prosecuting attorneys, and the judge upon the bench, Elbert H. Gary, who, with his victims four decades in their graves, still lives today to invoke violence against his slaves in the steel mills at the first sign of discontent.

"The state intends," wrote the Chicago Tribune during the trial "to try the men for anarchism, not murder. A jury avowedly opposed to such doctrines has been secured." "Anarchy is on trial" declared Ingham, special counsel for the state. "Hang these eight men and save our institutions" shouted States Attorney Grinnell during the trial. "These are the leaders; make examples of them" demanded the prosecution addressing the jury. "Those eight defendants," said the state attorney to the jury "were picked out and indicted by the grand jury. They are no more guilty than the thousands who follow them. They were picked out because they were leaders." Again the prosecution: "Convict them and our society is safe." Every one of the 1120 men summoned as jurors by the state's attorney was asked: "Are you a member of a trade and labor union? Are you a member of the Knights of Labor? Have you any sympathy with communists, anarchists and socialists?" Only those answering 100 per cent in the negative were passed.

The Upheaval of the '80s.

In a previous article a sketch was given of the great upheaval of the eighties, the rapid increase of class-conscious feeling among the workers, and the violent methods with which capitalism sought to check it. Briefly the main causes of unrest were: the ruthless [illegible] of man power by machinery, [illegible] sale, by which hundreds of thousands of workers were thrown from the class of skilled into that of unskilled labor; the final expropriation of the free public lands by railroad and land companies, [illegible] for the first time in this wave systematic began to awaken the consciousness of "capitalistic democracy" which it [illegible] escape. However vaguely the "free lands" had served to keep alive the immense immigration to the west, with its attendant increase in unemployment, as it did in the acute suffering of the workers during the great crisis of 1854-1886.

With all the cards stacked against labor, capital expected to have a submissive lot of wage slaves that would suffer themselves to be used as purely passive and uncomplaining adjuncts to that marvelous new machinery that seemed to promise such unlimited profits. Instead it found itself confronted with a militant spirit that not only fought bitterly against the constant wage cuts that capital tried to put over, but actually dared to demand a share in the benefits of the infinitely more productive new machinery constantly being installed, in the form of an eight-hour day in place of one of anywhere from ten to twenty hours.

The struggle of the classes was openly recognized by both sides. Not only the press, but also the official spokesmen of government and army talked class war "with cannon and powder, not votes" and recommended violence in answer to the demands of the working class. This was not merely abstract talk in strike after strike: on Gould's railroad lines, in the coalfields of Ohio and Pennsylvania, in the lumber mills of the Saginaw valley, in the stockyards of Chicago workers were shot down by mine guards, Pinkertons and militia. In answer the workers organized unions and militia, in answer to the demands of the working class. This was not merely abstract talk in strike after strike: on Gould's railroad lines, in the coalfields of Ohio and Pennsylvania, in the lumber mills of the Saginaw valley, in the stockyards of Chicago workers were shot down by mine guards, Pinkertons and militia. In answer the workers organized unions and militia, to meet force with force and armed detachments were formed in connection with unions and other workers' organizations.

The leading forces in the workers' movement capitalism especially feared and was determined to destroy. Firstly, the Knights of Labor, into which the workers were flocking by the hundreds of thousands and which was essentially an organization of the unskilled worker who previously had been absolutely at the mercy of their employers, and tended in the solidarity of all labor, sweeping aside barriers of race, and color and craft. Secondly, the International Working Peoples' Association—centering in Chicago, which represented revolutionary organization among the workers and was increasingly successful in spreading its revolutionary propaganda. The destruction of the Knights of Labor was to be accomplished by widespread blacklisting of K. of L. members, by shutting down factories in which the organization was influential and then offering to take back simply those who would renounce their membership, by violently breaking up K of L. strikes, and in not a small measure, by winning over certain of its leaders to become capital's own lieutenants. The rounding-up and banning of the anarchist leaders was the method capital employed to exterminate the other force that it considered a menace to its supremacy.

The International Working People's Association.

The International Working People's Association of which the Chicago anarchists were leading members had been organized three years earlier at a Pittsburgh convention attended by social revolutionaries as they called themselves, and anarchist groups from a number of cities. It was not very clear in its principles, combining a good deal of anarchism with some socialism and syndicalism. But it was definitely militant in outlook in contradistinction to the declining S. L. P. and rallied to itself the most earnest and revolutionary elements in the labor movement. These elements had become disgusted with the S. L. P. which at this period definitely repudiated the idea of class war and put its faith in education and above all the ballot box. The waning confidence of militant workers in the S. L. P. had received a bad blow when the national executive committee ordered all its sections, then Pittsburgh from the Lehr-und Wehr Verein (Education and Defense societies) and the ground that affiliation to these societies gave the public the impression that the socialists were determined to accomplish by force what they could not obtain by the ballot."

The Chicago groups of the international which Spies and Parsons founded leaned strongly toward Marxian socialism. Speaking of the program adopted by the organization at Pittsburgh Spies, perhaps the clearest of the leaders theoretically, declared: "The Pittsburgh program is of secondary importance. Our platform is the Communist Manifesto." And in his writings we find socialism mostly used to denote the seizure of the means of production by the proletariat, and the social system built upon their social possession; and anarchism, the ethical system obtaining under socialism, allowing free development to the individual.

The influence of the International grew at a tremendous rate. It provided just that energetic revolutionary leadership that men felt increasing need of in this time of economic upheaval. Capital inveighed against [illegible] press and pulpit [illegible] for its destruction. [illegible] Railway Magnates [illegible] made a state [illegible] of the [illegible] of the [illegible] The fact that the [illegible] workingmen [illegible] for the [illegible] was [illegible] for their native countries [illegible] Men [illegible] in Germany or Russia would be [illegible] with their [illegible] within prison walls are heroes here. They are leaders and the blatant outcry of their shameful ideas wins applause. Man who were born of patriotic parents—reared where fear of God was inculcated—such men have been befogged by the shouts and imprecations and fiendish teachings of these imported Communists who preach in the name of suffering humanity doctrines that no man could declare who was not mad with the fumes of the meanest dregs of nihilism."

"Mr. Gould," the awed reporter writes with fervor that he quickly added with a brighter look: "The day for this sort of thing is nearly at an end. There is a great awakening at hand. The spirit that filled the streets of Paris with blood and that developed murder and outrage to a Russian science has been flaunting itself freely along our lines in Missouri, in Kansas and Illinois, but America is not France, and the Commune has failed. America is not Russia, and nihilism has not deposed those in authority "nor been able to ruin the property of those who presume to disobey."

The Eight-hour Movement and Anarchist Leadership.

The venom against the internationalists doubled when they gave their support to the eight-hour movement in Chicago, and gave it revolutionary leadership. For over 20 years the question of the eight-hour day had been "locally" agitated. Then, in 1884, a number of unions declared that May 1, 1886 should be set for its consummation. At the beginning, so long as the idea seemed a plaything to be dangled just out of labor's reach and keep it contented, it received the enthusiastic support of the bosses. As the day set approached, however, and it became evident that labor was in dead earnest, no longer humbly beseeching for the passage of laws that would never be put into effect, but ready to take what it wanted by its own organized strength, then capital completely changed its tone. As trade after trade prepared to strike and the movement assumed nation-wide proportions, the press broke into hysterical denunciation of the movement as an anarchist plot.

In Chicago, the center of the movement, the eight-hour plan took tremendous hold on the workers' imaginations. Unions tripled their membership. New unions were organized. Altho Powderly, chief of the Knights of Labor, sent out a secret circular hinting the belter-Zeitung, Neebe, and Lingg. Parsons was not to be found at the time but came and gave himself up to the police preferring to stand trial with his comrades.

The Anarchist Trial

The trial was the wildest of wild travesties of justice. To start with, instead of the jury being drawn in the usual manner, by lot, Judge Gary appointed a special bailiff to go out and get together a jury of his own choosing. When this bailiff's method of procedure was questioned he replied: (Altgeld vouches for this) "I am managing this case and know what I am about. These fellows are going to be hanged as certain as death."

The prosecutors constantly harped upon the fact that most of the men were "foreigners." Spies wrote, no criticism could be made of "such wise and intelligent men as Mr. Grinnell and his jury for hanging miscreants who have shown so little discrimination in the selection of their birthplace. Society must protect itself against offenses of this kind."

Altgeld showed in his review of the case that first of all the jury had been packed, then wholesale bribery and intimidation of witnesses resorted to, that the "defendants were not proven guilty of the crime charged in the indictment," those of the defendants could be at all connected with the bomb throwing, and that the trial judge was either so prejudiced against the defendant or else so determined to win the applause of a certain class in the community that he could not or did not grant a fair trial."

The actual bomb-thrower was never found. Every indication pointed to the fact that it was provocateur's frame up and later a number of facts came to light that tended to show that the secret service had previous knowledge of the whole affair. A number of such bomb scares, but with less tragic consequences had come to light in various cities at the period. Czarist methods had been taken over wholesale by the republic.

The conduct of the accused in court made a deep impression among the workers both of America and Europe. They used the court-room as a rostrum from which to proclaim the principles or revolution. Parsons went into a lengthy analysis of conditions in the United States under the capitalist system and the need for revolutionary change. Engel described the long and bitter road of proletarian life that had made him a revolutionist. Lingg's brief speech was a cry of defiance to his capitalist hangmen, typical of his bitter and passionate youth:

"I repeat" he ended, "that I am the enemy of the order of today, and I repeat that with all my powers, so long as breath remains in me, I shall combat it. I declare again, openly and frankly, that I am in favor of using force . . . I despise you. I despise your order, your force-propped authority. Hang me for it!"

a number of laboring people guilty of no one save been shot down in cold blood . . and none of the murderers were brought to justice. Peaceable meetings were broken up and rabbled." Citing a number of cases of police violence in strikes in 1885 he says that the police under the leadership of Capt. John Bonfield "indulged in brutality never equalled before," and that in the spring of the following year, 1886, "the police brutalities of the previous year were even exceeded."

The Haymarket Meeting.

The day following the McCormick shooting, May 4th, a number of unions called a protest meeting to be held that evening at Haymarket Square "for branding the murder of our fellow workmen." It was a stormy evening and the meeting was not very well attended. The mayor of Chicago, Carter H. Harrison, attended the meeting and left at ten o'clock concluding that it was a peaceable assembly. He told Capt. Bondfield that he could issue orders to his reserves to go home. A downpour was threatening and only a couple of hundred remained at the meeting. Suddenly some 200 policemen marched down on the crowd which Fielden, the English anarchist was addressing and began viciously clubbing them right and left, and firing. Suddenly a bomb burst among the crowd, wild excitement ensued and a number of workers were killed (the actual number was never established), scores wounded, and seven policemen killed and sixty wounded.

And now the capitalist organs were easily able to work up a mad wave of hysteria against every militant in the country. The eight hour movement was smashed. Hundreds of arrests were made and finally eight selected to stand trial in Chicago: Spies, Parsons, Fielden, Fischer, Schwab, Spies' assistant on the Ar-

DIVIDE SPOILS AT EXPENSE OF BRITISH LABOR

Coal Shippers in U. S. Break All Records

By GORDON CASCADEN.
(Special to The Daily Worker)

NORFOLK, Va., Nov. 14.—Hampton Roads and Baltimore, the world's two largest centers for shipment of "scab" coal to smash the British miners' strike, passed their own previous high monthly records in this strike-breaking business during October.

They beat all expectations despite the entrance of still more North American seaports into the profitable export of "scab" fuel.

Divide Spoils.

When Norfolk and Newport News, the twin ports of Hampton Roads, and Baltimore, several months ago, found it hard to fill all orders, announcement was made that Charleston, So. Carolina; Philadelphia and New York would get a share of these spoils.

Another section of the country, however, joined the list of coal exporting centers during October. It was the Gulf of Mexico.

But still another North American Pacific Coast is jealous of its rapidly-gained is now in the business. The Nation. So that coal firms in far off British Columbia, Canada's Pacific province, are preparing to send coal to help their British brothers in their war on British labor.

Pacific Coast, Too.

For the first time in the history of carry coal to the British Isles. A Pacific coast shipping a boat will yesterday steamer has the unenviable distinction of starting this trade, thereby showing the internationalism of capital in this capitalist onslaught on labor. The Japanese ship was chartered in San Francisco, United States, to carry coal from Comox, British Columbia, Canada, to a port in the British isles. She leaves with a full cargo next week and sails for England by way of the Panama Canal.

Peace Won't Have Effect.

A temporary peace in Britain's coal regions before her arrival will make no difference for months must ensue before the British trade can reach a normal condition.

This use of every section of the continent to aid British capital does not mean an easing up in the shipment of coal from this port.

96,000 Tons a Day.

Hampton Roads exported 96,000 tons of "scab" coal one day last week. The average daily shipment does not run far behind that mark.

But Hampton Roads is filled with ships waiting berths. So is the port of Baltimore. Often they find it necessary to wait for a week or ten days for turns at loading piers.

Railroads had to place embargoes on shipments of coal to these two ports. Their yards in Norfolk, Newport News and Baltimore were filled with long trains of loaded coal cars waiting discharge.

During October Hampton Roads coal piers dumped 3,047,333 tons, thereby breaking all previous records.

The dumpings in August, which set the previous high record, reached 2,763,013 tons.

Break All Records.

The dumpings from piers last month were as follows: Norfolk and Western, 1,159,152 tons; Chesapeake and Ohio, 1,100,035 tons, and Virginian, 788,116 tons. The Norfolk and Western and the Chesapeake and Ohio both broke their own previous high marks.

Baltimore exported more than 1,000,000 tons during the same month, the export loadings for the period being officially placed at 1,046,123 tons on 170 vessels. One hundred and twenty-one of these ships carried 803,455 tons to English ports. Ireland got 87,698 tons and Wales 4,699 tons.

Active in Gulf.

The coal trade in the gulf is more active than ever before. It is handicapped only by a limit on the traffic from the Alabama and Kentucky coal mines.

Altho most of the boats that usually carry other commodities such as grain and cotton, have been pressed into the coal carrying trade; shippers of coal have found it necessary to fall back on small vessels of from 400 to 1,500 tons net.

Even sailing ships are being used to transport coal from the gulf to the Indies and South American

(Courtesy Herald and Examiner)

LEFT to right are, George Maurer, secretary of Chicago local of International Labor Defense, the organization that staged the protest against the queen; Margarite Miller and A. Zuris, members of the organization. They were arrested by Capt. Keillher and his men in front of City Hall when the police charged several hundred workers carrying banners such as the one in the above picture. Maurer was roughly handled. The Tkatchenko mentioned in the slogan was a Roumanian worker who was murdered in the Doftana prison in Bucharest by the Roumanian secret police (siguranza).

BLUECOATS CHARGE WORKERS' PARADE; MAKE 3 ARRESTS

By THURBER LEWIS.

Policemen's clubs were used on the heads of American workers to save a ruling monarch from the embarrassment of being reminded of the brutal and tyranneous reign of her royal house; Chicago is buzzing with wonder and amazement over the word "Cotzofanesti" with which the queen was greeted from the throats of hundreds of workers; and for the first time in her triumphant procession over the continent, her royal highness was made vividly to understand that the workers and peasants of Roumania who have been murdered and imprisoned by her regime have champions in this country who can make their voices heard.

These are the outstanding facts of the arrival of Maria von-Hohenzollern in this city, the workers of which can sympathize all the more readily with the martyrs of Roumania because they have in their tradition martyrs of their own, the Haymarket victims of 1887.

Her face blanched with fear, shuddering and drawing back into the cushions of her limousine, Queen Marie heard the word that has haunted her from that shameful day on the Moldavian battlefront in 1917. COTZOFANESTI! the word that has held the whip of the terrorist suspended in mid air, that has caused crime ministers to turn sudden-ly pale and that has a magic effect in the fascist-controlled parliament of Roumania—this word the queen heard and read from banners held aloft in the driving rain. — And she was afraid.

The crowds of curious thousands who stood in the puddles in Michigan Blvd. and the Illinois Central depot approach Saturday night to get a fleeing glimpse of a real queen felt the tenseness created by the shouting of this word. Their curiosity gave way to a sense of tragedy in the air as the brave band of one thousand or more workers carried their slogans high and voiced their convictions on royalty and rule by terror.

Four Police Charges.

But it was the drawn batons of the police that completed the picture. Four seperate charges of the bluecoats upon the manifestants, all workers and most of them citizens of "the land of the free," gave the finishing touch to the comparison between the royal life guards of Bucharest tearing with their clubs into peaceful meetings of workers and peasants weary of absolutism and the tightening of the blue cordon around workers voicing the same protests against the same queen in the "cradle of liberty."

Three arrests were made. George Maurer, secretary of International Labor Defense, the organization which staged the demonstration, Margarite Miller and A. Zuris, both members of the organization, were taken to Central Station by Capt. Keillher of the first district, who explained his action by saying he "feared they would go to the Drake Hotel (where the queen stopped) and cause a disturbance." Many workers were hit by clubs as the bluecoats rushed the crowd, swinging their clubs right and left.

I. L. D. Leads Workers.

The first police charge was at the depot. Two parades of members and sympathizers of International Labor Defense had marched thru the loop and arrived at the depot a few minutes before the royal special pulled into the shed. One of these parades was broken up and the banners confiscated. But the manifestants pushed across Michigan Boulevard and into the front lines nearest the queen to speak their minds and let the queen and her escort of Chicago plutocrats know that they were not sharing in

Seamen Don't Thank Rockefeller for His Donations to Church

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 14.—(FP)—No thanks are due by American seamen to John D. Rockefeller, Jr., for donating $250,000 to the Seamen Church Institute in New York, says the Seamen's Journal, organ of the International Seaman's Union of America.

"A charitable concern which attempts to mix religion with doles," is the Journal's definition of the institute. It points out that in feudal times and in slavery days the master was bound to feed his workers, so it is not surprising that young Rockefeller, whose family built its fortune on oil, should give something to keep some of the workers in that industry from starving."

SEE PEACE IN BRITISH MINE STRIKE SOON

Government Now More "Friendly"

(Special to The Daily Worker)

LONDON, Nov. 14.—Possibility of peace in the mine strike loomed here as much headway is reported made by the negotiations between the government's coal committee and the executive committee of the Miners' Federation. Long sessions have been held and both sides are reported to be intensely satisfied with progress made.

Obstinacy of the coal mine owners toward making even slight concessions to the miners is reported the only obstacle toward reaching an agreement.

The Miners' Delegate Conference has passed a resolution giving the executive committee a free hand in negotiating an agreement. This action will tend to expedite negotiations greatly, it is believed.

Favors National Tribunal.

The government, it is understood, will meet the miners' demands for national consideration of wage and hours agreements by establishing a national tribunal with the power to review all district agreements to force co-ordination with the national principle.

The national tribunal will be established by an act of parliament, if a definite agreement on this is reached. It was indicated that the government would "take the bull by the horns" and force the establishment of the tribunal despite the highly probable objections of the owners.

Demand Peace Guarantee.

In return for this, it is understood, the government will ask for a guarantee that there will be no other strike for a period of some years. It is highly improbable that the miners will give such a far-reaching guarantee, but a compromise may be reached on this, it is indicated.

The cancellation of a speaking trip, by Premier Baldwin and Steel-Maitland, minister of labor, to remain in London for the negotiations is seen as an indication that the government seriously expects an agreement soon.

Talk With Baldwin.

A conference between the Miners' Executive with Baldwin and Winston Churchill, chancellor of the exchequer, was held in Baldwin's private room in the House of Commons just prior to the meeting with the coal committee of the government.

Another proposal of the government is the creation of a "board of experts" to be in existence six months to act as a board of adjustment on immediate agreements. This is an attempt, however, to side-step the miners' demands for a permanent national commission. The government is not insistant on this, it is indicated.

ANOTHER 'NOTE' SENT BY U. S. TO MEXICO ON OIL

Domineering Attitude Is Maintained

(Special to The Daily Worker)

MEXICO CITY, Nov. 14.— Another note, more domineering than any previous one, attacking Mexico's enforcement of the constitutional provision on oil lands and concessions, has been sent to the Mexican government by the United States department of state.

The note demands that the Calles government settle the controversy before Dec. 31. This is the date set for the limit on applications for concession rights to exploit oil land that was acquired prior to April, 1917. After Dec. 1 the lands will be thrown open to the first applicants.

It is understood that the U. S. government charges the Mexican government specifically with violating the agreement signed by Charles Beecher Warren and John Barton Payne for the U. S., and Fernand Gonsalas Roa and Ramon Rose, for Mexico, in passing the oil acts last year. This agreement, which was signed when the Obregon government was in power, provided, according to the note, that Mexico was not to make its oil act retroactive.

The U. S. indicated that it will not accept the view that the agreement was merely a "gentlemen's contract," and that the Calles government is not bound by it.

Explosives Went Off in Pocket.

Death of "three fingered" Peto Kasinski when explosives went off in his pocket, today stood branded by a coroner's jury as "accidental." Kasinski was said to be a lieutenant of Joe Saltis, acquitted of the murder of John "Milturs" Foley. The jury found however, that Kasinski had been carrying the explosives for an "unlawful purpose."

Fight Ford Control of Toledo Railroads Before Commerce Body

WASHINGTON, Nov. 14. — Henry Ford's plan to merge his railroad properties will be argued orally before the interstate commerce commission on November 27, it was announced today. The Ford plan involves the acquisition of control of the Detroit, Toledo and Ironton and the Toledo-Detroit by the Detroit and Ironton.

Majority stockholders who hold about 2 per cent of the stock of the Toledo and Ironton are fighting the proposed merger on the grounds that Ford has not allowed them a sufficient amount per share for their stock.

MASSACHUSETTS FEDERATION HEAD JOINS FIGHT FOR SACCO-VANZETTI

NEW YORK, Nov. 14.—The following telegram has been received by the New York Sacco-Vanzetti Emergency Committee:

"Elizabeth Gurley Flynn,
"80 E. 11th St., New York City.

"Say for me that everything should be done to save Sacco and Vanzetti. From my knowledge of case, as one who secured confession of state's star witness as to her perjury in the case, I am convinced that both of these boys are innocent of the crime charges against them.

"John Vanvaernwyck, President, Massachusetts State Federation of Labor."

Intensive Work Must Be Continued

KEEP THE DAILY WORKER FUND GOES UPWARD AGAIN

By C. E. RUTHENBERG
General Secretary, Workers (Communist) Party.

THE Keep The DAILY WORKER Fund on Saturday, November 6, stood at $14,692.75. In the five days to November 12 the contributions made totaled $2,592.55, bringing the total to $17,485.23.

With one day's receipts still to be added, the total for the week ending November 13, is already twice that of the previous week. The total will still fall short of the $6,000 weekly which we have asked the supporters of The DAILY WORKER to raise each week, but it shows that the Keep The DAILY WORKER campaign is going forward with new spirit and energy.

The work of intensifying the campaign must be continued and all the energy of the party mobilized to raise the weekly contribution to $5,000. Six weeks of $5,000 each week for the Keep The DAILY WORKER Fund will carry The DAILY WORKER thru the present situation victoriously and insure the appearance of our paper for another year.

To raise $5,000 weekly for the Keep The DAILY WORKER campaign the actual strength of the party must be mobilized for the campaign. This can only be done thru organization. We must have a Keep The DAILY WORKER Campaign Committee organized immediately in every unit of the party, from the district committee to the nuclei.

The Keep The DAILY WORKER committees of the leading committees must canvass every nucleus and every member in support of the sale of the Keep The DAILY WORKER certificates.

It is only if we draw the whole party membership into the fight for The DAILY WORKER that the $50,000 fund can be completed. The whole-hearted and enthusiastic support of the party organization is essential to really mobilize the party to win the fight for The DAILY WORKER.

The $3,000 raised during the last week for the Keep The DAILY WORKER campaign must increase to $5,000 during the present week. The raising of $5,000 weekly is necessary to meet the obligation of The DAILY WORKER during the next two weeks. With $5,000 raised for the two weeks The DAILY WORKER will be in a position to set aside part of the Keep The DAILY WORKER Fund as a reserve to safeguard the future of our paper.

TO WORK TO BUILD THE KEEP THE DAILY WORKER FUND.

INTENSIFY THE CAMPAIGN.

RAISE THE WEEKLY CONTRIBUTIONS TO THE KEEP THE DAILY WORKER FUND TO THE $5,000 MARK.

MOBILIZE THE PARTY IN A FORWARD DRIVE FOR VICTORY IN THE CAMPAIGN FOR THE DAILY WORKER.

LONDON VIEWS CAL'S SPEECH WITH RESERVE

Geneva Sees Entrance to Court Doomed

(Special to The Daily Worker)

LONDON, Nov. 12. — Despite its nationalistic and jingoistic tone the speech of President Coolidge at the dedication of the liberty war memorial at Kansas City has met with general approval and comparatively little criticism in British government circles.

One prominent government official who preferred that his name be not used, characterized the speech as follows:

"President Coolidge's address is essentially an extremely sensible utterance made by a patriotic American. There is nothing in the speech to which we could legitimately object as a government."

The British press took varying views of the President's speech. The London Chronicle thought the speech was not happily inspired, but was sure that Mr. Coolidge's intention was pacific."

"The president has a perfect right to be firm regarding the payment of the war debts," the journal said. "But nothing is to be gained by debating the ethics of the matter. We know, and many Americans agree with us, that the mere statement make speeches upon the subject, the more the creditors are apt to look like dunners and the debtors like defaulting scamps. The sooner these business matters can be settled and the talk concerning them dropped, the sooner will mutual respect between nations be restored."

Consider Court Ended.

The only comment made by the Times was on the fact that the Coolidge speech destroyed Europe's expectation that the United States would eventually adhere to the world court tribunal.

League Despairs

GENEVA, Nov. 12 — In authoritative league of nations circles here President Coolidge's armistice day speech at Kansas City yesterday is interpreted as definitel. barring the United States from membership in the world court.

It was declared that the present members of the world court can not sanctibly make more concessions to the United States than those made at the Geneva signatory conference in September.

Paris Silent.

PARIS, Nov. 12. — The French newspapers printed President Coolidge's Kansas City speech freely on the front pages, but had no editorial interpretations or comment to offer on it.

Manly Roasts Coolidge Tax Scheme.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 12.—Basil M. Manly of the People's Legislative Service denounces the Coolidge tax remedial scheme announced just after election day as "peanut politics" and a wasteful method of tax revision.

LABOR REVOLTS IN JAVA; CAPTURES THE TELEPHONE AND RAILROAD SERVICES

LONDON, Nov. 14—Labor demonstrations occurred in Western Java last night, which were suppressed by authorities only after serious fighting, according to a Central News dispatch from Batavia.

Governor Wedana was killed in an attack on a government house, and several policemen on guard were also killed. At the Welvereden one policemen was killed and two were injured in dispersing a meeting.

The demonstrators made an attack on the Tangerin barracks, and succeeded in occupying the Batavian telephone office, after a furious fight.

The railroad tracks near Negrak were torn up and telephones were disconnected. Train service had to be suspended.

C. L. U. TO FIGHT FOR FREE SPEECH IN PENNSYLVANIA

Disturbances in State Multiplying

NEW YORK, Nov. 14.—Wholesale interference with meetings and ban on speakers in the mining territory around Scranton and Wilkes-Barre, Pa., will be fought by the American Civil Liberties Union. An investigator for the union is now surveying the region and union officials announce that they propose to form a Pennsylvania emergency committee of prominent liberals to start a campaign of test meetings.

Meetings Halted.

Word has reached the union that in the first ten days of November three meetings were halted or broken up by police in Wilkes-Barre. Hall owners are being intimidated by reactionary forces, according to the report, to bar Alexander Hewat and C. Frank Keeney, progressive miners' union leaders, scheduled to speak in this region during the middle of November.

Police are accused of denying permits to all radical groups. Sacco-Vanzetti protest meetings, anti-fascist meetings of various Italian groups are said to have been stopped or forbidden during the last month in Scranton.

Bar John Brophy.

In Dunsmore and Plymouth all radical gatherings are outlawed. Detectives prevented speakers from speaking in Edwardsville. Hall owners were ordered to withhold halls from John Brophy, mine leader, scheduled to speak in and near Wilkes-Barre early in November.

On November 7 the police and fascist of Wilkes-Barre broke up a meeting of 400 Ukrainians and Russians gathered to hear a Communist member of the Ukrainian parliament on conditions in Europe.

"No god-damned bolshevik meetings will be held in Wilkes-Barre," was given as the reason by police.

Unique Program at Crimean Ball in Brooklyn, Nov. 20

BROOKLYN, N. Y., Nov. 12. — A unique and interesting program will be presented at the Crimean Ball here on Nov. 20 at the New Harlem Casino, 116th end, Lenox Ave., given by the First Crimean Brotherhood of Americas, Inc. The following will be the program:

The great Rajoh, the magician, will present "Salomao Alekoom."

The great opera tenor, J. Schiff, will sing Russian songs.

Miss Leitmans, well-known piano player, will give a recital.

Jashe Tahorni and Miss Abrashowa will dance.

A prize will be given for the best Russian waltz.

Will Fight Bankers' Suggestion of State Utilities Control

Chicago would go overwhelmingly in favor of home rule of public utilities said Alderman Joseph McDonough, who today advocated a referendum in answer to Chicago bankers who favor state control of all utilities.

At the next session of the state commission to investigate terminable permits for public utilities, Nov. 26, Mayor Dever, corporation counsel Francis X. Busch and several aldermen were expected to advocate city rule of utilities.

Sacco-Vanzetti Issue

In conjunction with the big mass meeting to be held in New York City at Madison Square Garden on Nov. 17th protesting against the denial of a new trial for Sacco and Vanzetti, The DAILY WORKER of that date will carry special features devoted to the Sacco and Vanzetti case.

ASIATIC LEAGUE DISTURBING TO LEAGUE POWERS

Fear Russia, Turkey and China in Compact

LONDON, Nov. 14.— News of the formation of an "Asiatic League of Nations," including the Soviet Union, Turkey, China, Persia and Afghanistan, is causing much consternation in high government circles here. London sees the combine of the eastern nations as a formidable opponent of the League of Nations, the existence of which is greatly dependent upon Great Britain.

The reported direct alliance of China with the Soviet Union in all the more disturbing to Great Britain because of recent occurrences in China which threaten Great Britain's imperialistic interests in the orient. At a time when Britain's grip in the East is becoming visibly weakened, this reported alliance is a staggering blow to the foreign office.

Reply to British Intrigue.

Formation of the "Asiatic League" is seen in some high quarters, as the answer of the Eastern powers to the reported "understanding" between Italy and Great Britain, which resulted from the recent secret meeting of Sir Austen Chamberlain, British foreign secretary, and Premier Mussolini.

Turkey Friendly.

British government officials view with unsuppressed feelings of alarm the meeting between Tchitcherin, Soviet foreign minister, and Rushdi Bey, Turkish foreign minister. It is said that at this meeting Soviet-Turkish understanding will be signed. This report follows closely the speech in the opening of the Turkish parliament by Mustapha Kemel Pasha who stressed the desirability of friendship between Turkey, Soviet Union, Persia and Afghanistan.

A meeting between Dr. Alfred Sao, the Chinese ambassador to the United States, with Soviet officials at Astova intensifies the feeling here that a definite agreement has been reached between those nations.

Turkish Minister Impressed.

ODESSA, Nov. 14. — After many hours of close conversation with Tchitcherin, Russian foreign minister, the Turkish foreign minister Bey, was today preparing for his departure, stating that he was greatly impressed by the warmth of his reception in the Soviet Union.

Odessa declared a general holiday during the visit of Bey. The entire population celebrated this event which is interpreted as a most important step on the reestablishing of the Soviet program of rapprochement with Eastern nations.

Tchitcherin, in commenting on the visit of Bey, said that the personal contact which had been established was of tremendous importance.

Discount "Alliance" Reports.

MOSCOW, Nov. 14. — That the meeting between Foreign Ministers Tchitcherin and Rushdi Bey will result in no more than a new commercial treaty and strengthening of certain clauses in the neutrality treaty signed in Paris last year was indicated by official Soviet newspapers.

"The conference does not mean the forming of a political bloc against other nations, but is merely a settlement of questions concerning Russia and Turkey," says one newspaper, commenting on reports of an "Asiatic League of Nations" being formed.

Turkey's friendship with the Soviet Union is a result of the feeling in Turkey that the league of nations is merely a mask hiding the hostile attitude of the western nations toward the east, it is indicated.

Decide Against Labor Banking for Holland

AMSTERDAM, Nov. 11.—Establishment of a labor bank is "not desirable for Holland" was the decision voted by the recent congress of the Netherlands Federation of Trade Unions at Utrecht. This vote upholds the report of a joint commission representing the trade unions and the social democratic party, which studied the matter.

Another important action of the congress was the changing of its rules governing the national strike fund, so that 10 per cent of that fund may be paid out for strikes in other international labor movement to aid a labor struggle abroad, without waiting for approval by the congress. Not more than half of the annual income of the fund may be thus sent abroad in any one year.

The congress discussed plans for organizing the young workers, promoting workers' education, and the work and organization of women.

Motorboat Hapless.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Nov. 12. — Battling mountainous seas, coast guards were fighting their way to the rescue today of three men aboard the 55-foot motorboat Ora Indreas of Racine, bound from Benton Harbor to Milwaukee, reported helpless 14 miles off the Milwaukee harbor.

EVIDENCE FOUND EVANGELIST DISCOVERED IN MINISTER'S TRUNK

Mrs. Paul Rader, wife of the Chicago evangelist, flatly refused to permit him to explain to newspapermen how her handkerchief got into Kenneth Ormiston's trunk along with a collection of feminine wearing apparel, said to fit Aimee Semple McPherson.

Rader arrived today from an evangelistic tour of the east. Closeted in his home, the evangelist was closely guarded from questioners by Mrs. Rader, who also declined to discuss the handkerchief.

ISSUE CALL FOR SACCO-VANZETTI MEETING TONIGHT

Chicago Labor Urged to Send Delegates

As the demand thruout the country rapidly grows for a new and fair trial for the "framed-up" Sacco and Vanzetti, for a state commission of Massachusetts to review the evidence before allowing sentence, even for the removal of the prejudiced and unfair Judge Thayer, the Chicago Sacco-Vanzetti conference had broadcasted the call for all unions, other workers' organizations, and interested groups, to send delegates to the conference which will meet Monday at 8 p. m. November 15, at 80 North Wells street, Redifer Hall, room 801.

Mass Meeting Nov. 29.

The executive committee of the conference, with the backing of the Chicago Federation of Labor and many other bodies, has arranged for a great protest mass meeting on November 29 at Ashland Auditorium, with John Fitzpatrick, president of Chicago Federation of Labor; Anton Johannsen, well-known Chicago labor organizer, Vincenzo Vacirca, prominent New York speaker and editor, who, once a labor member of parliament, is now a political exile from Italy, and who will speak in Italian; Elizabeth Gurley Flynn of New York, chairman of the International Labor Defense, and Rev. Charles Clayton Morrison of Chicago, who is editor of the Christian Century, will speak on behalf of the life of America.

Workers' Interests at Stake.

The letter which the committee has sent out to the hundreds of Chicago labor organizations warns that labor's interests, as menaced by capitalist-controlled courts, is at stake, as well as the lives of these two workers, and urges every organization, small or large, to elect a delegate to the conference November 15 and to send its protest and demands to Governor Alvin T. Fuller, Boston, Mass.

Members of Grower Associations Must Abide by Contracts

CADILLAC, Mich., Nov. 7.—Circuit Judge Gilbert here has ruled that farmers who have signed contracts with an exchange thru its locals cannot sell thru any other medium.

The decision was made in the case of the Cedar Produce Exchange, one of the locals of the Michigan Potato Growers' Association against Louis Oversby of Prove Monte. The court ordered Oversby, who violated his contract, to pay the exchange 25 cents per hundredweight for potatoes sold outside the association.

Borah Favors Repeal of Law Kellogg Used to Bar Mme. Kollontai

NEW YORK, Nov. 14.—The repeal of the passport control law under which Mme. Alexandra Kollontai, Soviet minister to Mexico, has been denied permission to pass thru the United States, will be supported by Senator William E. Borah, chairman of the foreign relations committee, according to a letter received by the American Civil Liberties Union.

The letter from Senator Borah is in reply to a telegram urging repeal and a statement by Morris L. Ernst, New York attorney for the union, condemning the ban on Mme. Kollantai and charging Secretary of State Kellogg with partiality in the application of the law.

"The state department gives as its reason for barring Mme. Kollantai that she would spread Communist propaganda," declared Mr. Ernst. "Communist business men are in New York this minute dealing with big bankers and prominent merchants. They had no difficulty getting their passports visaed.

"Secretary Kellogg has no fear of Communist propaganda when it is accompanied by the taste of dollars and business. But when Mme. Kollantai asks the courtesy of a visa to pass thru this country on the way to her post in Mexico he invokes the law to exclude her as 'contrary to public safety.'"

Carl Sandburg, Poet, Is Given His Baptismal As Ally of Parasite Class

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

CARL SANDBURG autographed a copy of his book, "Abraham Lincoln," the Illinois Manufacturers' Association adopted resolutions of eulogistic greetings, while the police beat up and clubbed workers—all for Queen Marie of Roumania on her arrival in Chicago.

The brutalities of the police, of course, were to be expected. The club of oppression swings in Chicago as Bucharest in support of the same ruling class tyranny.

Also, the views of open shoppers leagued against labor in the manufacturers' association lived up to expectations. In their resolutions, solemnly adopted, they join with the high officers of the French command at Cotsofanesti during the world war, in declaring Queen Marie "a woman of great amiability."

But the outegreghing stunt by the poet and author, Carl Sandburg, adds an incongruous touch to this picture, describing the memory of Abraham Lincoln and marring Sandburg's official baptism as an obedient and petted poodle of the dollar aristocracy. It reveals his complete acceptance by the dictators of American capitalist "culture."

Sandburg has been a little different from other renegades. It is therefore necessary to give his case special attention.

Sandburg was always accepted as a "rebel," even when he continued and still does write sloppy movie reviews for the Daily News, now the property of LaSalle Street's great financial interests. The excuse was offered that it was the needed "pie card" while doing more serious work. Evidently Sandburg has found that the crumbs from the overflowing tables of capitalist recognition tasted good. So he intends to get a larger slice of the luscious fruit of master class appreciation.

Sandburg was a rebel in the socialist party even tho he found himself early surrounded by the debasing influence of the reformist brand of socialism that Victor L. Berger developed in Milwaukee and Wisconsin. He was at least touched by the revolution in spite of the fact that Bergerism sought to swathe the whole Wisconsin labor movement in the confining bandages of opportunism.

Altho he became private secretary of Emil Seidel, the first socialist mayor of Milwaukee, and the first socialist to be elected as an executive of any large American city, Sandburg did not succumb to the radiant promises of a brilliant political career, at that time (1910) tho most treasured gem among all of the promises held forth by the American socialist movement. This was the period when a whole army of place seekers poured into the socialist ranks making it easy for the Berger-Hillquit machine to write the infamous "Article 2, Section 6" into the party constitution in 1912, practically outlawing revolutionaries with the party's ranks. Sandburg shrank from these methods.

In 1912, Sandburg joined others in the rebellion of editorial workers on the Milwaukee Leader against the Victor Berger editorship and management. He came to Chicago and joined the editorial department of The Daily World (The Chicago Daily Socialist renamed) during the newspaper strike in 1912, probably the most bitterly fought struggle in the whole history of the American printing trades unions.

When The Daily World fell into the hands of the sharrit and the bankruptcy courts, Sandburg later drifted to The Day Book, a small daily publication in pamphlet form, that tried to survive without advertising. This publication was a protest against domination of the daily press by advertisers. It did not long survive. But it was while writing for this struggling publication that Sandburg began to write also about the workers in the stockyards, the steel mills and other great industries, using a loose poetic style that helped develop his appeal. He became in his own way a poet of labor.

Sandburg disappeared from the socialist ranks. The failure of The Day Book, that sought to cater to the trade unions, cut off Sandburg's last contact with the labor movement. For a time he faced severe financial difficulties. But these quickly disappeared with the success that greeted his "Rutabaga Stories," harmless tales for children, also intended for grownups.

Sandburg took no part during the war, but he did show considerable sympathy for the Bolshevik Revolution in its early years. But that, too, quickly disappeared.

Sandburg gradually developed a vogue all his own, going about the country giving readings and lectures to petit bourgeois and "artistic" audiences. His latest and most voluminous effort is his "Life of Abraham Lincoln," a copy of which is now being used as Queen Marie's official souvenir of Chicago.

It is claimed that Queen Marie has frequently expressed her interest in Lincoln. This is probably another one of those press agent yarns that try to surround royal personages with heroic and popular myths. If the truth were known, it would probably be discovered that the Police Gazette is Queen Marie's favorite American publication while Evan Will Rogers, in literature, is "too heavy" for her.

In the great struggle of rival economic interests that resulted in the American Civil War (1861-65), Lincoln was against the established order. He was the rebel of his time. Queen Marie and the American parasites with her pay their way about before her, are on the side of things as they are today. Queen Marie is the embodiment of the anti-labor traditions of the chattel-slave owning South of the early half of the last century. To link her up with Lincoln is not only to insult the memory of the Civil War president, but a deliberate perversion of history.

But the capitalists and their literary lackeys stop at nothing. As ghouls of history they are unsurpassed. This instance is no exception.

Sandburg's "Life of Lincoln" is to be handed the terror queen as a handsomely leather-covered volume embossed with the Roumanian coat of arms of the reigning house of terrorland. Sandburg will bave his autograph in the book. The signatures of the Chicago committee, including some of the worst open shop exploiters in the city, will appear on the fly leaf.

One of Sandburg's poems is entitled, "Chicago—Hog Butcher for the World." Like Armour, Swift, Cudahy, Morris and the rest, in common with the exploiters in all industry, Sandburg has learned to breathe as sweet perfume the scent of warm animal blood mingling with the sweat and agony of human toil in the production of profits. Now this is mingled with the scent of blood, the suffering, the misery of the Roumanian toiling masses. Thus Sandburg's baptism into the realms of parasitism is complete.

Trial of Prisoners Who Escaped from Stateville Begins

JOLIET, Ill., Nov. 14.—Clarence Rogers, draftsman, was the first witness today as the trial of six of the seven convicts who clubbed their way out of the New Statesville penitentiary last May 4, killing Deputy Warden Peter N. Klein, got under way.

Defendants are Walter Stalecki, Charles Duchowski, Charles Shader, Bernardo Rios, Gregario Rizzo and Robert Torres.

State's Attorney Hjalmar Rhen introduced in evidence drawings of the prison to show the scene of the slaying and the escape route of the prisoners.

The jury was completed last night.

Arrest Station Robber.

CHICAGO, Nov. 13.—Eugene Wyatt, 26, Terre Haute, Ind., and William Jerome were arrested here today in connection with the attempted railway station robbery at Cook, Ind., last Sunday, at which a gun duel was staged with detectives.

Leaders of Shelton Gang of Williamson County Are Arrested

(Special to The Daily Worker)

BENTON, Ill., Nov. 14.—Carl and Bernie Shelton, brothers, and leaders of the Shelton gang which has figured in recent gun warfare in southern Illinois, were arrested on the main street here Friday by U. S. postoffice inspectors and hurried out of the city aboard a train.

The exact nature of the charge against the men was not disclosed. The men were taken aboard a Chicago and Eastern Illinois train which left in the direction of Danville, Ill.

Wanted in Rochester Too.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Nov. 14. — Judson Wordan, 28, of the this city, said to be wanted as the slayer of a Chicago policeman, was under indictment today as a second offender for assault first degree and burglary third degree. Both charges are based on the alleged robbery of a New York Central freight car at Wayneo Port, N. Y.

FILIPINOS ARE MADE SLAVES TO U. S. IMPERIALISM

Bereft of Last Remnant of Independence

By Laurence Todd,
Fadarated Press.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 14.—No sooner have the senatorial and congressional elections passed than the Washington administration has struck at the existing rights of the Filipinos. Governer General Wood has issued an executive order dissolving the board of control which until now has manned the directors of the public utility corporations owned by the Filipino government. His action is seen as the first step toward the sale of these government enterprises to private American capital.

Vigorous Protest.

Vigorous protest is made by Osevera, the Philippine commissioner in Congress, and by friends of the cause of Philippine independence. General Wood was sent to the islands by President Harding to balk the hopes of the people for national sovereignty, and he has worked hard at the task. From the beginning of his rule he has tried to force the legislature of the islands to consent to the sale of the Manila Railroad Co., with its valuable terminal property in Luzon. He has tried to force the sale of the Philippine National Bank, the National Coal Co. and the National Development Co., as well as other public enterprises. But the Filipinos, led by Osmena don Quezon, have steadfastly refused to permit the nation's properties to be disposed of.

Early this year Wood appealed to the war department for a legal ruling as to whether the board of control, created by act of the Philippine legislature in 1916 and amended in 1921, to control these public corporations, should be recognized. The legislature had ordered that this board be comprised of the governor general, the president of the senate and the speaker of the lower house of the legislature. Thus the Filipinos had a two-to-one majority against Wood, and overrode his suggestions as to policy.

Gives "Opinion."

On April 16 General Hull, judge advocate general of the army, gave an opinion that the board created by an act of the legislature could not be changed under the organic act passed by congress for the islands. This opinion went to the department of justice, and on Sept. 20 an opinion was given by acting Attorney General Donovan, who is a protege of Senator Wadsworth of New York, likewise upholding Wood. Donovan ruled that under the terms of the organic act all executive functions must be performed by the governor-general or by departments controlled by him. Also, that members of the legislature are forbidden to hold any other public office. And, finally, that the basic concept of American constitutional government is the separation of the executive from the legislative branch. Donovan closed his decision by declaring that until the legislature should create a board which gave to the governor-general the power to name its members Wood had the right to exercise personally the functions claimed by the board.

Filipinos' Repentment.

The Filipinos and their friends look upon this as a raid upon publicly owned properties of the Filipino people, and as an act of suppression which calls for new efforts to secure complete national independence. Agitation for independence will, accordingly, be stimulated in the coming session of congress, while bills will be introduced with the object of annulling the organic act so as to give to the Filipinos the absolute control of their public utilities. If Wood should now force the sale of the bank, the railroad and the coal mines, he may provoke a real storm in congress and make Philippine independence once more a national issue.

Dolly Sisters Win Suit Against Paris Vaudeville Company

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PARIS, Nov. 14.—The Dolly Sisters won a court verdict today and also had their injured pride considerably assuaged.

The Seine tribunal ordered the Moulin Rouge, a music hall in Montmartre, to pay the Dolly Sisters 550,000 francs (approximately $18,000) for breach of contract.

The Dolly Sisters left the Moulin Rouge when when the management displayed hill-board advertisements of the appearance there of mistinguatte, in a manner which the Dolly thought was too prominent. The Dollys maintained that their contract provided that they should be the leading attraction.

Seek Wordon.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Nov. 14.—Gov. Len Small today issued a requisition on the governor of New York for the return from Rochester, N. Y., where he is under arrest, of Judson Wordon to Chicago, where he is charged with killing John Byrnes, a policeman, Sept. 20, last. Wordon is alleged to have shot Byrnes when the officer stopped him in an alley for questioning.

WORKERS' SCHOOL WRITING CLASS TOO POPULAR, NEED TWO SESSIONS

By a Worker Correspondent.

NEW YORK, Nov. 14.—When 35 workers crowded into the first session of the labor journalism course given by the Workers' School, Assistant Director D. Benjamin first threw up his hands in despair and then grabbed for the axe, cutting the class into two sections.

"Thirty-five workers in a laboratory course on workers correspondence and journalism is a mob, and not a class," declared Benjamin, "as he performed the major surgical operation. Students participated in the operation by proposing, discussing and finally adopting the method to be pursued in dividing the class, which is to meet in two sections, one beginning at 7 p. m. Monday and the other at 8:30.

College Men Join.

Graduates of California, Columbia, Kansas and Oberlin rub shoulders with workers whose formal education was confined to a few years in primary schools of Poland, Hungary, Germany and Russia. Members of the painters', printing pressmen's, office workers' and teachers' unions are joining with members of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers, furriers, ladies' garment workers, capmakers and leather goods workers in seeking the key to service in the workers' movement thru developing the technique of labor journalism.

The imperative need of organizing shop and trade papers, of strengthening official union magazines and of organizing workers correspondence to The DAILY WORKER and other workers' newspapers was stressed in the opening session. Plans were laid to effect the closest co-operation in speedy, accurate and proficient reporting of news events in New York City and neighboring cities to The DAILY WORKER and other workers' papers. Members of the class also intend to start a Workers' School paper.

Classes during the remainder of November will study the organization of simple news stories and workers correspondence and will examine carefully the growth of the shop and trade paper movement with special attention directed to speedy co-operation with existing papers in the New York metropolitan area. Because the class has been cut into two sections, registration is still open, with the assurance that new students will receive individual attention in their problems.

Employers Donate to Community Chest by Docking Workers' Pay

By MOLLY TALLENTIRE
(Worker Correspondent)

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Nov. 14.—This is the final week of the Community food drive being run in Minneapolis for the purpose, ostensibly, of relieving distress among the poor. In reality, this fund will establish a bureaucracy of charities which will keep tab on the paupers. The snooping activities of the charities are already known to many wage-slaves who are from time to time forced to appeal to these charity crooks to save themselves and their families from death by starvation.

Among the firms donating for this fund is the Maurice Rothschild company, which donated the sum of $3,000. This was not contributed out of the profits of this company, but was made up of "voluntary" contributions from the workers, whose share in the contribution was taken out of their pay envelopes without even the formality of asking their consent. On Saturday the workers got their pay, with the Community Fund donation already deducted.

It is interesting to note that the symbol appearing on all advertising matter in connection with this drive, is a heart. Rothschild company has demonstrated that it has a heart, by cutting a large slice out of the heart of each worker's pay envelope.

YOUTHS GIVEN LEADING PART IN CELEBRATION

Cops Try to Stop Big Philadelphia Event

By a Worker Correspondent.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 14.—The Workers (Communist) Party of Philadelphia celebrated the ninth anniversary of the Russian revolution on Friday, November 5, at the Labor Lyceum, Sixth and Brown streets.

The Young Pioneers were out in full force, clad in their red kerchiefs and white blouses. The first rows of seats were occupied by them.

Comrade J. O. Bentall, district secretary of the Workers (Communist) Party in District 3, was chairman of the meeting. In his opening address Comrade Bentall explained the purpose of the meeting and introduced as the first speaker of the evening Morris Trachtenberg of the Young Pioneer League.

Young Pioneer Talks.

Trachtenburg delivered a stirring speech, in which he spoke about the Russian revolution and American Education Week. His voice reached out into every corner of the hall, holding his audience spellbound. His flaming red kerchief around his neck was outstanding. Even the cops and detectives of whom there were many, were quiet and listened to the words of our youthful comrade. During his speech the reporters were not idle and reports appeared in all the Saturday morning papers. Comrade Trachtenberg's picture appeared in the Daily News, as compelled by a report of the meeting. At the close of Comrade Trachtenberg's speech the Pioneers started singing "Over There," a peppy revolutionary song, which was followed by a great applause from the audience.

Musical Program.

The Ukrainian Singing Society and the Young Workers' Mandolin Orchestra furnished the musical numbers on the program.

Comrade Bentall introduced as speaker for the Young Workers (Communist) League Barney Herman. He spoke about the young workers and their connections with the revolution. He spoke of the capitalistic wars and urged the workers to resort to revolutionary tactics. At this point Superintendent of Police Mr. H. Mills ordered a cop to the platform and silenced the speakers. Comrade Herman stopped and a police captain ordered the meeting closed. Comrade Bentall then announced that the meeting would go on, but Herman would not speak.

A Pioneer, Ruthe Kitty, then gave a recitation entitled a "Converted Yankee Speaks."

Bentall then introduced Comrade Benjamin Gitlow, candidate for governor of New York and well-known Communist. Comrade Gitlow spoke about the campaign in New York, of our own Sesqui-Centennial held here, of the United States constitution, and the Russian revolution.

The police sitting near the stage listened to him, watching for a chance to interfere, but Comrade Gitlow finished his speech amidst applause and cheers from the Pioneers.

8-DAY BAZAAR TO BE HELD FOR PASSAIC RELIEF

Labor Asked to Send Donations

PASSAIC, N. J., Nov. 14. — Alfred Wagenknecht, relief chairman, announced this morning that plans had been perfected for the staging of a monster eight-day bazaar in this city December 8 to 11, inclusive, for strike relief.

Under Joint Auspices.

The bazaar will be held under the joint auspices of the Central Trades and Labor Council of Passaic, the general relief committee and the strikers' local, Local 1603, United Textile Workers, A. F. of L. The endorsement of the State Federation of Labor is being sought, with every expectation of success.

At a meeting last night of the committee in charge of arrangements, William Johnson, of the musicians' union and president of the Passaic Central Trades and Labor Council, was elected chairman of the committee. This committee will be augmented to include sympathetic bodies, as well.

Furriers Pledge $3,000.

Responding to the appeal of the committee for contributions of articles from labor unions, the New York furriers' union, which has stood steadfastly by the textile strikers, pledged $3,000 worth of furs for the bazaar. The furriers will operate a booth at the bazaar. Other labor unions are taking under advisement the question of contributing articles, and the indications are that the bazaar will be as much a national event as the Passaic textile strike is of national importance.

To Show Strike Picture.

The bazaar will be open every evening and Saturday and Sunday afternoons, as well, during the eight-day period. Musical programs will be given nightly, and the strike motion picture will be shown one night of the eight. Tickets will be sold at 25 cents in order to make a wide mass appeal.

It is felt here that the bazaar, with the showing of the strike picture, will greatly help the cause of organized labor as well as the relief needs of the textile strikers.

N. J. Electrical Union Pledges Passaic $1,200

NEWARK, N. J., Nov. 14.—(FP)—Electrical Workers Local 52, Newark, N. J., has pledged its membership to give $1 apiece to the Passaic strikers' relief. A total of $1,200 will be raised by this means, of which $200 has been sent on account at once to the General Relief Committee. Relief field organizer Sara Sherman made the appeal to Newark electricians.

The New Jersey state secretary of the International Bakery & Confectionary Workers' Union is calling a special conference of local unions to make arrangements for the regular supply of bread to Passaic wool textile strikers. Local 86 of Newark has pledged 500 loaves weekly for 11 weeks. Union bakers have been generous to Passaic's hungry strikers since the beginning of the fight.

Half of Australian Workers in Unions.

MELBOURNE, Nov. 12.—Out of a total of 2,632,000 wage workers in Australia—men and women—a total of 1,368,800 belong to labor organizations. This percentage—slightly over 50 per cent—nevertheless gives to organized labor in the island continent a firm control over industrial situations in time of test of strength. In Denmark the trade union strength is 30 per cent. In the United States it is between 12 and 13 per cent, as the Australian labor press points out.

CITIES TO BE VISITED BY ALBERT WEISBORD ON LENGTHY SPEAKING TOUR

NEWS AND COMMENT

This department will appear in every Monday's issue of the The DAILY WORKER.

The Co-operative Movement

By OLIVER CARLSON.

Pros and Cons.

On the one hand we have the claim that "co-operation, in the social sense of the word, is a new power of industry, constituted by the equitable combination of the worker, capitalist and consumer, and a new means of commercial morality, by which honesty is rendered reproductive" (Holyoake); and on the other the extreme view that "as we are organized to abolish wage slavery we are opposed to the co-operative movement" (Socialist Standard).

Another socialist criticism was voiced years ago by the late Henry Quelch, who said: "Its very success as a commercial concern demonstrates the failure of co-operation as a means of emancipating the workers. Nevertheless, this was the hope of many of the original advocates of co-operation. They imagined that, starting as a small store, or a small workshop or factory, the Co-operative Society would grow and grow until we had universal co-operation."

The main difference between the outlook of the modern movement and that of the pioneers is that the pioneers' trading, etc., was considered to be merely the necessary prelude to revolutionary social ends, whereas the trading and productive aids today is generally looked upon as an end in itself.

Points in Favor.

Enthusiastic friends of co-operation claim that the movement has been the means of giving the workers more self-reliance, increased their powers of self-government, and given them a better knowledge of business and trading (an understanding of the workings of the capitalist system being a necessary preliminary to the substitution of a better social system). Further, they assert that it has promoted a spirit of free realisation of strikes and lock-outs, notably in Dublin in 1913, and in the miners' struggle, 1921.

How the Organized Worker Can Contribute His Quota.

Any development in this latter direction necessitates, however, greater support from trade unionists. Of the many millions of money (to be sure very inadequate) received in wages by the workers, only ¾d in the pound finds its way over co-operative counters. A few years ago, of the estimated accumulated funds (£18,000,000), of the trade unions, no less than £10,000,00 was invested in joint stock banks and capitalist concerns. Of late years an increasing number of the unions are banking with C. W. S. as experience had shown that joint stock banks might suspend payment when the money was urgently needed.

Limitations.

Can the co-operative movement in itself achieve the co-operative commonwealth? The answer lies in a comparison of the capital represented by the Federation of British Industries and that of the co-operative movement: £5,000,000 against £128,000,000. Capital is accumulating in private hands at an ever-increasing rate. Of £16,000,000,000, the estimated capitalized wealth of the country, no less than £13,000,000,000 is owned by fewer than 250,000 people. The C. W. S. is more an agent than a producer; acts as distributing agent, with the stores as distributing machinery, for capitalist enterprise, and is mainly dependent on private sources for raw materials. Its business," so far, is not seriously disturbed and can afford to look on the movement with complacency.

Every student of economics is conversant with the gigantic role the modern banks play in the control of credits—these "banking gods who ordained our lives even unto the fixing of the bloody rate."

We can therefore see that co-operation has no control over general economic conditions. On minor points of criticism we know co-operation stands mainly on the insecure foundation of dividends; dividends must be paid, whether they can be legitimately obtained or not. There is considerable carping and rivalry of the 1,321, loosely associated, but essentially independent, retail distributive societies. Tests for ascertaining the real capacity of members of management committees are non-existent, that the movement is largely controlled by its permanent paid officials. There is very little contact with management and the scattered membership, particularly in big societies. The movement helps the thrifty person, but generally neglects the very poor. On the educational side its main purpose fails, because the enormous majority of co-operators have not the slightest conception of co-operative principles.

Voluntaryism vs. Collectivism.

Within the movement today there is a controversy between "voluntaryism and collectivism." Where should the line be drawn between co-operative enterprise and state and municipal services? The most urgent social need today imperatively demand that the railways and miners should be community owned, and that the financial machinery of credit should be under state control, during the transitional stage between capitalism and complete socialism. It should be quite clear that no great advance of social reconstruction is possible until these services are wrenched from private interests. Therefore, the whole of the people organized as a community, and not those organized in a voluntary association like the co-operative movement, should own them for the common good.

We must learn to see each section of the workers' movement in true perspective. There is great need for unification of all our forces. Conflicts of interest are inevitable, but they are capable of being subordinated to the common purpose. There is no room today for that contradictory trinity—the worker who separates himself into three separate individuals, socialist, trade unionist and co-operator—each pulling in opposite directions.

Arising from the same need, socialism, trade unionism and co-operation are related in time, circumstance and purpose. All sprang out of the social anarchy attendant on the industrial revolution, all should be aimed at delivering the workers from the bondage of capitalism. And they can only achieve that aim if they work together consciously for its realization.

The Co-operative Congress Moves to the Left

By OLIVER CARLSON.

THE Co-operative League of America has been largely the personal plaything of Dr. J. P. Warbasse, a millionaire who has interested himself in co-operation, ever since its inception a decade ago. To be sure, this does not mean that the local co-operatives have been under his control or supervision, but the national organization, which is largely financed, has borne the ideological stamp of Warbasse and his followers. At the national congresses which took place it was Warbasse who appointed committees, recommended the persons to be on the national executive committee, etc., etc. It was Warbasse who laid down the policies to be pursued. And it was Warbasse who was lauded to the skies by almost every delegate.

Now all this has changed. The signs of the onslaught were already discernable at the fourth congress, which took place in New York in 1924. But the left wing was not yet thoroughly organized at that time, nor did it know how to proceed. Its spokesmen came largely from co-operatives run by the Finns, and most of them of view as effective in English as they would have liked to do.

IN the fifth congress, which has just closed, the left wing proletarian section of the co-operative movement, under the direct leadership of the Communists, had a solid bloc which numerically was about 40 per cent of the congress, while it rallied to its support additional delegations, making its strength a majority of the congress.

From the moment the first session began the power of the old machine was challenged. The first blow to the prestige of Dr. Warbasse and his henchmen came with the motion to have all committees nominated and elected from the floor of the convention, instead of having them handpicked by the president. This motion was carried by an overwhelming vote. In the election of committees which followed the left wing dominees in each case received the biggest votes. Had they so decided they could have had a complete majority on each committee, but this was considered unwise. A majority was secured on the resolutions committee, while substantial minorities were placed on all other committees.

Win Important Resolutions.

NEUTRALITY, that favorite concept of all middle-class and reactionary elements within the co-operative movement received a setback at the congress. The first resolution adopted by a vote of 6 to 1) was bitterly fought on the floor. Saveri Alanne, renegade Communist, who delighted in licking the boots of the reactionaries at the congress, made a motion to table the resolution. When he saw that this was defeated, he made a motion to refer the resolution back to the course in Advanced Marxian Economics is intended only for those who already have a basic knowledge of the subject or for those who have studied economics for some length of time under the "old system." In other words, this course should be useful to people who have gone thru the schools of the S. L. P. or the proletarian party or the S. P. of Canada or the classes of Waten and other such "psendo Marxists." Those wishing to be admitted to the course must show the equivalent of a course in the Elements of Marxian Economics.

The Three Volumes.

Another one of the old errors generally made in teaching Advanced Marxian Economics, which Mr. Wicks will avoid, is that of basing the work exclusively on a study of Volume I of Capital. A thero knowledge of Volumo I of Capital without its relation to Volumos II and III is responsible for many of the stupidities of so-called Marxists, and therefore Wicks will base his course on the entire three volumes. He will include also an analysis of the official university or orthodox economics; of the vulgar economists; of the marginal utility school; as well as a study of revisionism and its errors. His course also includes a study of the economics of class collaboration; of "rationalisation"; Fordism and other now economic tendencies.

Basic Prologue.

The course in the Elements of Marxian Economics will devote itself to the basic problems of the field, but instead of going from value to wages, it will use proper teaching principles and go from that which the worker knows to that which he does not know. The subjects to be covered are: Wages, value, surplus value, capital, rate of profit, accumulation and concentration of capital in industry and agriculture, banks, finance capital, etc. It also will take as its field, altho in a much more elementary fashion, not only the matter contained in the first volume of capital, but will draw its material from all three volumes, thus not teaching things that have to be untaught or "corrected" later on.

Teachers of economics of all schools are invited to attend and observe these courses find to offar suggestions on the method used and the content. It is expected that they will oventually ho productive of textbooks in the field. A description of these and other courses offered at the Workers' School may be secured by writing to Bertram D. Wolfe, director Workers' School, 108-108 East 14th street, New York City.

Register for these courses any afternoon or evening at the office of the school, room 35, 108 East 14th street, New York City.

...ISTS FOR DAILY WORKER BAZAAR IN PITTSBURGH, DEC. 10-11

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Nov. 14.—Arrangements are completed for The DAILY WORKER Bazaar to be held Friday and Saturday, December 10 and 11 at the Labor Lyceum, 83 Miller St. This will be one of the big events of the season, and one that merits the support of every worker in and around Pittsburgh.

Subscription lists have been sent out and every one should get busy and collect everything possible to be sold.

The DAILY WORKER needs the money and this is an easy way for it to be raised, if every one will get on the job and put it over. Each language section will have their booths and compete with each other to see which can raise the most cash. There will be a program of recitations and music.

Huge Generator to Be Installed Here

The world's largest turbo-generator, supplying power equal to the labor of 5,000,000 men, will be installed on Lake Michigan, just south of the Indiana state line, it was announced today following a conference of General Electric and State Line Generating Co. officials.

Why don't you write it up? It may be interesting to other workers.

KEEP THE DAILY WORKER!

In Detroit

You'll find no buckets full of tears in Detroit! Our local comrades refuse to weep all over the place. When they want to get money for "Our Daily"—they get it! Here's one way they show in which it can be done:

Section 2 decided on "an affair" with good fun, good food and good cheer (prohibition style). To help them they asked The DAILY WORKER for "just a little ad." They got it! The DAILY WORKER in return asked them for just a little money. WE GOT IT! They sent The DAILY WORKER the tidy sum of three hundred dollars!

Comrade Lena Rosenberg, Daily Worker agent for Section 2, who was keeping a careful eye on the whole business writes this beside her check:

"We had about six hundred people present. It was the most crowded affair that I have ever seen and certainly an inspiration to these who were present. This affair shewed that workers of Detroit are interested in The DAILY WORKER and when given an opportunity ARE READY TO SUPPORT IT. This ought to be good encouragement for other cities."

We agree! It ought to be good encouragement for other cities. Come on comrades—WHO HOLDS THE NEXT AFFAIR FOR THE DAILY WORKER?

More Encouragement from Boston.

Comrade Shohan, Daily Worker agent for Boston, is so very busy he is getting short-winded. He writes very briefly but just look how much he says:

"We have a package party arranged by Section 1 for Nov. 24. This week there will be a dance at Wilton, N. H. The Italian section has arranged a dance for Dec. 31., Brockton is preparing for an affair in a week or two. Worcester is arranging a dance."

With all these arrangements for The DAILY WORKER no wonder this comrade can't write.

Who holds the next affair for The DAILY WORKER?

DIFFERENCES IN PHILOSOPHIES TO BE POINTED OUT

Workers' School Class Is Basic Study

NEW YORK, Nov. 14.—At the end of a lecture given last year on the nature of the Communist movement the following question was asked: "Aren't the Communist Party and socialist party fighting for the same end? Isn't the difference between them only one on methods?" This question is not unusual. In fact, thousands of workers over the country wish to know the difference between the movement typified by the Communist Party and socialist party. This is only one question that will be raised and answered in the course on "Rival Social Philosophies," to be given at the New York Workers' School by H. Bourgin, starting on Thursday night, Nov. 25, at 8 p. m.

Analyze Philosophies.

This course will analyze socialism, anarchism, syndicalism and Communism their aims, philosophies, tactics and policies toward pressing problems of the present. Their attitudes toward political action, toward the state, toward the institution of parliament, toward property—will be differentiated. These are not mere abstract principles of thought—these affect the very life of the working class today. These determine policies as regards the British general strike, the Russian revolution, imperialist wars, colonial oppressions, league of nations. This subject is, therefore, of immediate and practical importance.

It may well be said that the course in "Rival Social Philosophies" with Comrade Bourgin on Thursday nights is one in which every thoro student of the American labor movement is interested. To some it will be a means of clarifications, enabling them to determine how to act in the working class struggle. For others it will serve as a theoretical basis from which concrete policies can be formulated to develop and strengthen the working class.

All interested should register immediately any afternoon or evening at the Workers' School, room 35, 108 East 14th street, New York City.

WITH THE YOUNG WORKERS

CONDUCTED BY THE YOUNG WORKERS LEAGUE

PROBLEMS OF YOUNG WORKERS GET ATTENTION IN N. Y. WORKERS' SCHOOL

NEW YORK, Nov. 14.—The young workers of this country play a most important role in production. At present 15,000,000 under the age of 24 years are working in American industry. This process, due to extension of machinery and mechanization of industry is increasing rather than decreasing. These young workers are usually unorganized and therefore subject to worse exploitation than adult workers.

Special Problem.

The doors of most unions in the A. F. of L. are closed to them. They, therefore, not only have the same problem that every worker is confronted with, but special problems in addition as young, unorganized workers. This situation must be understood by young workers, otherwise they will not know how to act to improve their conditions or status.

This is but one problem treated in "Problems of Working Class Youth," given every Tuesday night at 8 p. m. at the New York Workers' School, with Sam Doa, New York district organizer of the Young Workers (Communist) League as instructor.

Imperialism Study.

Then there is the important question of growing militarism and increased dangers of war. The great war of 1914 has taught all youth that it must understand thoroly the nature of imperialism and know how to act, otherwise the youth will suffer as it did in 1914-1918 and it is youth that suffers first in imperialist wars.

The course in "Problems of Working Class Youth," therefore, is not an abstract, academic subject but one of immediate, practical and life importance.

Child labor, propaganda in the schools, the young Negro workers—these two will be taken up in the course. All who wish to lead young workers into organization, militancy and class consciousness should have clarfiy on these important problems and should therefore register for the course in "Problems of Working Class Youth." Register any afternoon or evening in Room 35, at 108 East 14th St., New York City.

Young Paper Box Makers in Battle Front

By C. MILLER

SOME three thousand paper box makers of whom about 60 per cent are young workers were forced to go on strike against the most miserable conditions existing in their shops. It is not the first time that paper box makers went out on strike, but never before have they put up such a wonderful fight. The labor movement of New York City is surprised at the young workers under a militant leadership and with methods similar to those used in Passaic can do.

This strike is interesting from several points. First it has a large percentage of young workers who have been drawn into activity. Experience in this strike, as well as in others, has shown that it is very hard to involve the young workers in a strike, but once they are out they form the backbone of the movement.

Secondly, the mass picket lines, the daily mass meetings, the spirit and character of the leadership, marks a new step in the labor movement.

Thirdly, we must remember that even though there was a union in existence its influence was almost nothing. But today we find them putting up a splendid fight.

The militant struggle that these workers have put up is due considerably to the misery with which they had to put up while working. Long hours in many cases 55 hours and more, wages even in the so-called union shops amounted on the average to about $23 per week. The work in a paper box factory required their standing up all day with a short rest during the half hour rest. The dust in the air hurt the lungs of the workers especially the young ones.

The bosses are doing everything possible to try and break the strike. Police, courts, injunctions, gangsters, strikebreakers, spies and stool pigeons are some of the means used in the attempt to crush the strike. These methods failed. Their attempt to subdivide the colored workers from the white workers also failed. The union has issued a leaflet to the colored young workers.

The problem before the union at the present time is to raise relief. The young Workers League is mobilizing its members to start active work in the trade unions and in other organizations to come to the support of the striking paper box makers. Every class conscious worker young or old will do all in his power to help these workers win a union.

Paper box makers fight on to victory! The organized labor movement is with you.

Proletariat Ball, With Unique Plans, to Be in New York

NEW YORK, Nov. 14. — The New Masses Workers and Peasants' Ball to be held Dec. 3 in Webster Hall, New York City, will present for the first time in New York a Russian proletarian entertainment and scheme of decoration. Decorations have been designed by distinguished New Masses cartoonists and artists, including Bill Gropper, Hugo Gellert and Louis Lozwick.

The ball will follow the tradition of the Old Masses and Liberator balls which became rendevous for New York bohemians, liberals, and radicals. A Russian orchestra will provide the music. On the entertainment program are listed Russian singers, dancers, artists, and writers. Prominent labor leaders, playwrights, authors, and painters will be among the guests of honor.

WORKERS' TESTIMONY GIVES LIFE TO DRY STATISTICS BEFORE MEET ON NEW WAGES FOR RAILROADERS

By ESTHER LOWELL, Federated Press.

NEW YORK, Nov. 14.—Stacks of statistics and tabulations are making the case of eastern railroads physically pulky in the arbitration board hearings on conductor's and trainmen's demands for average 30% wage increases. W. G. Lee, president Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen, and L. E. Sheppard, president Order of Railway Conductors, occasionally attack the figures presented but mostly are content to wait their turn in rebuttal.

The main contentions of the railroads against the workers' demands are: that while the roads' profits grow from year to year they still do not reach the 5½% earnings allowed by the Interstate Commerce Commission; that the roads have invested heavily in new property and equipment; that passenger traffic is declining; that freight traffic is increasingly manufactured goods which are expensive to haul; that stockholders are not getting a proper proportion to bondholders from the roads' earnings and cannot if wage demands are granted; that conductors' and trainers' wages are "favorable proportions" of railroads' earnings.

New High Earnings.

Meanwhile financial reports indicate that 1926 railroad earnings will set a new high record. J. G. Walber, New York Central vice-president conducting the roads' case, submits total earnings of workers which are challenged by workers' testimony and their claim that basic rates and earnings should be the ones considered, not totals.

$4.24 Per Day.

One good witness for the rail workers was Eugene Badger, head freight brakeman on the Big Four. He worked six years as an extra and intermittently for another four years before getting regular assignment. His basic pay is $4.84 per eight hour day. He has to make 150 miles or 12 hours a day and his job works eight out of nine days. He told that one yardmaster would not allow the crew to line up its freight train in his terminal while the yardmaster to whose terminal they went required that the train be classified by arrival. The switching of cars had to be done enroute at the men's delay. Badger said he had to work practically all the time" to earn enough for his wife and three children and that he would not have a chance to enjoy an auto even if he could afford one. He said he had to be familiar with four or five rule books and had no pay for preparatory time reading them and special orders.

Can't Save.

Local freight conductor J. H. Seidel on the Baltimore & Ohio told that he has been in service 24 years of his 41. He said: "I'd certainly like to have a wage on which I could save." He said he can't save. He is away from home two-thirds of the time. He said that the monthly pay guarantee for regularly assigned men is 26 days a month but doesn't count if the workers lay off voluntarily for sickness or other reasons and doesn't cover holidays voluntarily taken off.

Dangerous Work.

William J. Heyworth, New York Central brakeman, told how his monthly wage of $204 was reduced to $151.50 by his away-from-home expenses. He said special rates in company restaurants were no lower than outside. He told of deadheading on his own time when assigned from a terminal other than home. Ernest W. Burch, B. & O. bump conductor in Brunswick yards, gave detailed data on his work. He said he considered it particularly dangerous work because the car riders had to jump on and off freight cars as they "cut" up the trains that came in and assigned cars to respective classifications. Brakes had to be put on quickly and sometimes the bar flew off and struck the worker, often doing serious injury.

The men complain of sore feet and broken arches from work, Burch said. With speeders now in use the workers rush from delivering a cut of cars to begin work on an waiting train. The few minutes formerly spent in walking to the next train are reduced to almost none so that the workers have scarcely a breathing spell. The network of tracks increases the hazards. Men with long standing in service choose seven-day assignments because they need the higher rate of pay.

H. O. Barr, Nickel Plate brakeman, told of the workers' grievance on that line over the "pick up and drop" rule. Thru freight trains are given up to four stops each, increasing the workers' work without higher pay, as the local freight rate does not begin to apply until five stops are made.

DISSENSION IN JEWELRY BOSSES' RANKS REPORTED

Many Shops Settle with Union

NEW YORK, Nov. 14. — About half the workers in the novelty jewelry industry are now back at work under union agreement. Fourteen shops involving 450 workers have settled with the union. The rest of the workers are on strike and the union is picketing the unsettled shops daily.

Dissension Among Bosses.

There is dissension in the manufacturers ranks already, according to Anthony Capraro, manager of the union. Some of the manufacturers are sorry that they ever joined the Novelty Jewelers Association which is now out to prolong the strike and break the union.

The employers are using the same strikebreaking agency to assist in breaking the strike that the paper box manufacturers association has been using in their situation.

A few days ago they sent a man from this agency to negotiate with the union, altho the real purpose was to find out as many of the union's plans as possible. This agent provocateur even suggested certain tactics to the workers' representatives, which were not accepted.

Come Back to Work.

Yesterday the association distributed a circular among the striking workers asking them to disregard the counsel of the union "agitators" and return to work.

"Call up your boss, tell him you are coming back to work," read the statement, "and the association will see that you will not be molested by these agitators."

None of the strikers acceded to the call, however.

Tough on Strikers in New York City

NEW YORK, Nov. 14.—Police Commissioner McLaughlin's announcement that the gangsters' squad and industrial squad of the New York police department have been merged is hard news for striking trades unionists. Police have interfered in the current cloakmakers' strike, paper box makers and novelty jewelry workers' strikes and in the fur workers' fight earlier in the year. Detective Sergeant John Broderick about 27 and sometimes called a "beau brummel," is head of the combined squad, which keeps the best members—from a police view "beat"—in its ranks. The gangsters' squad was specially chosen of big burly men who could handle the roughest sorts of criminals. It came into existence when Mayor Gaynor ruled against uniformed police hitting citizens with night sticks. The gangsters' squad has previously aided the industrial squad in strike-breaking activities.

Save Two From River.

JOLIET, Ill., Nov. 14.—Two Chicago men and a boy were rescued from the Illinois river today, when their motorboat, enroute to New Orleans, struck a submerged cofferdam and sank in midstream. They were Frank Klein, 24, Grant Wands and his son Leroy, 6.

STILL PRESSING WRIT ISSUED IN SUBWAY STRIKE

Interborough Does Not Like Union Work

NEW YORK, Nov. 14 — Echoing from the July subway strike in New York city is the attempt of Interborough Rapid Transit Co. to secure an injunction against the former strike leaders and the organization they started at the time—Consolidated Railroad Workers. Judge Francis Delehanty reserved decision in the suit, which had been thot dismissed. Nathan D. Perlman, counsel for the strikers, argued that the interborough brotherhood — company union — was not a voluntary organization and that no contracts existed between the workers and the company.

The agreements were made between the company and company paid agents in the brotherhood's official positions, Perlman said. An injunction against the strike leaders—now no longer employed by interborough—could not be obtained on the grounds that the men violated any voluntary contract with the company.

The only thing the men are now doing is to solicit members for the Amalgamated Association of Street & Electric Railway Employes among subway workers. The court could not grant an injunction against peaceful persuasion, counsel held.

Edward P. Lavin, Harry Bark, Joseph Phelan and James Walsh were the strike leaders named. Their beginnings of an independent Consolidated Railroad Workers' Union have been merged in the Amalgamated Association, affiliated with the American Federation of Labor.

Domestics Organized in Argentina.

BUENOS AIRES, Nov. 14.—Among the many labor organizations that have joined the new national federation of labor affiliated with the International Federation of Trade Unions is the Domestic Servants' Union in Buenos Aires.

MADISON SQUARE SCENE OF GREAT SACCO PROTEST

Nov. 17th Date for Big Defense Rally

NEW YORK, Nov. 14.—The workers of New York City are planning to come by thousands to Madison Square Garden on November 17th to show that they are solidly behind the demand for a new trial and freedom for Sacco and Vanzetti.

Bartolomeo Vanzetti himself writes in the October Bulletin of the Defense a denunciation of the capitalist press and its conspiracy of silence during the years they have been fighting for their lives, and it must be the workers and their papers now, as it has always been during the past six years, who will raise the cry for justice and a fair trial.

Unions Aid.

Unions in New York City are planning to come to Madison Square on the 17th in delegations, with banners and slogans which will decorate the huge auditorium. Preparations for making these banners, and all other arrangements in connection with the demonstration were completed Thursday evening, the 11th, at a meeting in Manhattan Lyceum at which Elizabeth Gurley Flynn spoke.

The Defense Committee Bulletin says, "Will the working people of America allow these two fellow-workers to burn in the chair in Charlestown jail? There's not much time. By January the state Supreme court will have given its decision. Remember this may happen to you. Sacco and Vanzetti stand for your right to live. If sane people of this country want them saved, THEY WILL BE SAVED!"

Workers, remember Madison Square Garden on November 17th.

Passaic Picture to Be Shown in Detroit on Wednesday, Dec. 1

DETROIT, Nov. 14. — The motion picture "The Passaic Textile Strike" will be shown in this city at the Majestic Theatre, Woodward and Willis avenues, on Wednesday, December 1, at 8 p. m.

This 7-reel picture is a vivid portrayal of the heroic struggle of the textile workers for living conditions and the right to organize into a union.

All sympathetic organizations are requested to hold open this date and come to see the movie that has been acclaimed with approval and interest by the workers of Chicago, New York and many other cities.

First Victim of Hunt Season.

DANVILLE, Ill., Nov. 14. — The first victim of the quail and rabbit shooting period which began Wednesday morning, was Lawrence E. Lemmons, a machinist at the C. & I. plant, who today had the thumb and forefinger of his right hand shot away.

CHICAGO, Nov. 14. — Ten thousand dollars reward was offered by the government today for the arrest of Dave Berman, William Kannar, Charles P. Clouse and Reuben D. Lilly, indicted for the $75,000 Superior, Wis. post-office robbery.

ANTI-FASCIST TO SPEAK HERE FOR SACCO-VANZETTI

Chicago Conference to Meet Monday

Vincenzo Vacirca, widely known Italian anti-fascist, publicist and lecturer, will be one of the speakers at the huge mass meeting here Friday, Nov. 26, arranged by the Chicago Sacco-Vanzetti conference to demand a new trial for the two Massachusetts frame-up victims.

Vacirca, who edits an anti-fascist paper in New York, is a former workers' deputy in the Italian parliament and was forced into political exile because of his opposition to Mussolini. He is a member of the executive board of the Anti-Fascist Alliance and of the League of Political Refugees. He is rated as one of the best Italian speakers in America.

Try to Get Morrison.

Attempts are being made to have Rev. Charles Clayton Morrison, editor of the Christian Century, liberal religious magazine of Chicago, to also address the meeting, it is announced by officials of the conference. It is believed that Dr. Morrison will accept the invitation.

Fitzpatrick to Talk.

Other speakers at the mass meeting will include John Fitzpatrick, president of the Chicago Federation of Labor, Anton Johannsen, vice-president of the Chicago Federation of Labor, and Elizabeth Gurley Flynn, widely known lecturer and member of the Sacco-Vanzetti emergency committee. The Chicago Federation of Labor is co-operating with the conference in the work to secure freedom for Sacco and Vanzetti, and will broadcast the mass meeting announcements over the federation radio station, WCFL.

Conference Meets Monday.

On Monday night, Nov. 15, the delegate body of the conference will meet at Redifer Hall, 30 North Wells St., to lay plans for the intensive campaign to be undertaken by Chicago workers in behalf of the two workers. Every labor body, workers' society, and workers' political organization is urged to send delegates to this meeting.

Many union locals of Chicago have already sent strong messages to Governor Fuller of Massachusetts protesting the denial of a new trial to Sacco and Vanzetti, as part of the campaign.

Pseudo-Economist, Babson, Predicts Decrease in Wages

WASHINGTON, Nov. 14 — Announcement by Roger Babson, professional economic adviser to employers, that the upward wage movement has definitely stopped is contradicted by Frank Morrison, secretary of the American Federation of Labor.

Babson's suggestion that the next general movement will be "downward," and that employers who want to cut wages with the least expense should "establish a sense of confidence on the part of labor," made Morrison laugh. He said he would like to see the employer who could now cut wages and make his workers like it.

Reports reaching the A. F. of L. from all corners of the continent show that wages are being forced up by local movements in most of the industries, from time to time, while wage cuts are not reported from any industry. Labor officials do not believe any wage cut can be forced by the employers over any considerable field, because living costs have more than kept pace with wages.

There has been no halt in the rise of living costs.

A NEW NOVEL By Upton Sinclair

(Copyright, 1926, by Upton Sinclair)

"Ready! Set!" she called sharply—and then, to his great surprise, pulled a little revolver from under her jacket and fired it into the air. It was to be a real race!

He started at the rate of twenty miles an hour, or a little better, and heard the horse loping on the sand behind him. He did not know how long the race was to last, so presently he settled down to a long distance gait. He was warm again, and willing to investigate being a Greek. The sky was blue, and the colds white, and the sea green, and the sand sparkling cold; truly, as the girl had said, it was the morning of the world!

They came to a place where wagon-tracks came down to the beach, and there were fishermen's boats, and three men had just shoved out through the breakers. They rested on their oars, to stare at this amazing spectacle, an entirely naked youth running a race on the beach with a woman on horse-back. Their swarthy Italian or Portuguese faces wore broad grins, with white teeth showing. They knew about the Monastery, and this was the latest freak of the idle rich!

But then came a place where the highway came near to the beach. There were tents ahead, and automobiles parked, with canvas covers to protect them from the sun. There were people on the beach; and these, Bunny knew, would not be primitive foreigners, but ranchmen from the interior, having brought their families to spend Sunday away from the baking heat. They would have no toleration for the freaks of the idle rich, neither would they know about the customs of the ancient Greeks; they were sober, churchgoing people, the sort who formed the Ku Klux Klan, and punished fornications and adulteries by tarring and feathering and riding on a rail. But Vee had challenged Bunny, and he said to himself that it was up to her. Did she really want to be pagan and take the consequences?

He ran on and on. The tents came near, and he saw women stare, and then dive into shelter; he saw the men, not running away, or turning their heads, but glaring menace in their faces. What would they do? Seize the obscene intruder, and wrap him perforce in a blanket, and deliver him over to the police? Bunny's quick mind leaped to the outcome—a streamer-head across the front page of the "Angel City Evening Howler"—

STAR RACES NUDE OIL RED!

Then suddenly he heard a voice behind him: "I give up! I'm going black!" So he whirled and the horse whirled and away they went, even faster than they had come, and both of them shaking with laughter in the morning of the world!

XII

The Greeks had never worn either trousers or shirts, and the process of getting into these garments didn't lend itself to romantic or esthetic interpretations. Therefore Vee Tracy rode down the beach while Bunny dressed; and when he rejoined her, she was no longer Greek, but an American young lady upon her dignity, and it would have been bad taste to have referred to her crazy prank.

She was leading the horse, with the bridle over its head, and Bunny walked by her side. "Did you notice that nightmare?" she said, as they passed the thirty-two Lorelels in their grave-clothes. "That was one of the dreams of old Hank Thatcher. You've heard of 'Happy Hank,' the California Grapeking?"

"So that's his place!" exclaimed Bunny.

"He dreamed of orgies, and kept half a dozen harems; his wife refused him a divorce to punish him, and when he died she covered up his dream as a kind of public penance."

"Nobody seems to see it but the seals."

"Oh, the papers were full of it; they would never pass up any news about the Thatchers. They send out a reporter once in a while. One time they had a scream of a story—the reporter had worn a suit of chain mail under his trousers, and the dogs had torn at him in vain!"

"She sets dogs on them?"

"That's why nobody dares go up there to peek at the statues."

"Good Lord!" exclaimed Bunny. "I peeked at half a dozen of them."

"Well, you were lucky. That's why I carried this revolver along; they sometimes come onto the beach, and the neighbors make war on them."

"Why doesn't she put up a fence?"

"She's in a dispute with the county. She claims to own the beach, and every now and then she puts a barrier across it, and the county sends men at night to tear it down. They've been fighting it out for the past ten years. Also the state is trying to put a highway through the tract—it would save several miles of the coast route—but she has spent a fortune fighting them; she lives in that castle like a beleaguered princess in the old days—all the shades drawn, and she steals about from room to room with a gun in her hand, looking for burglars and spies. Ask Harve about it—he knows her."

The Fight Against Hunger

The most powerful of all the weapons employed by the capitalists in ordinary strikes is that of hunger. They seek to starve the workers, their women and their children; to shut off their supply of life necessities until their courage is broken and they come back to work upon the employers' terms, defeated. It is a cold and brutal business, but it is one of the many barbaric ways the employers use to maintain their power to rob and exploit the workers. Starvation in all its forms in strikes is a morale breaker, a scab breeder.

There are many kinds of scabs, each of which has to be combatted in its own way. There are professional scabs, there are good-job scabs who fear the loss of their preferred positions, and there are weakling scabs who simply have not the courage or intelligence to fight. But the most menacing and terrible scabs are hunger scabs, those sincere workers who are driven back to work because they lack the physical necessities of life to continue the fight.

It is this form of scabbery that loses strikes, especially among the unorganized and unskilled, and this danger the strike strategist must find ways and means to prevent. To do so confronts us with a whole mass of very difficult practical problems. Here only a bare outline of a general solution of the problem can be given.

The Question of Funds

This problem raises the general question of the role and defect them? The right wing leaders' policy constitutes practically an affirmative answer to this. They place great reliance on huge strike funds and large strike benefits. The ultra-leftists, typified by the I. W. W., give a negative answer. They scorn the power of the workers to finance their own strikes. They will have nothing to do with strike funds or regular benefits.

Both these policies are wrong. Ample experience teaches us that by depending on money alone we cannot win, except in the case of a few highly skilled and thoroly organized trades, especially in these days of an enormously enriched and strengthened capitalism. It is altogether impossible to win in such a manner when great masses of the unorganized are on strike. Take for example, the strike of 400,000 steel workers. What chance was there to pay benefits in such a situation? Millions would have had to be poured into the strike weekly. Or, consider a national strike of coal miners or railroad workers. Manifestly such strikes must depend for winning chiefly upon their shattering effects on the industrial system and upon their profound political consequences. Nevertheless, the ultra-leftists, I. W. W.'s, by rejecting the strike benefit system altogether and by generally minimizing the importance of money in the fight, make a mistake in the other extreme.

The issue is not money (as the right wing proposes) versus militancy (as the ultra-leftists advocate). The solution of the problem comes from a correct combination of the two, militancy and money. Extra high dues, such as exist in many unions of skilled workers, and great strike fees, such as the $75 assessment levied in the Passaic strike, are out of the question in the case of the unorganized, and spread a general spirit of conservatism through the unions. Besides, they are no specific protection in far-reaching struggles against the employers.

On the other hand, the low dues and cheap financial systems of the I. W. W. and other radical independent unions keep these organizations so impoverished that they are virtually helpless. Militancy alone is not sufficient to meet all the needs of a labor movement under capitalism. The left wing must stand for relatively high dues, based on the ability of the various categories to pay it. It must also make provision for strike funds in established unions, especially by strike assessments levied in the months prior to an expected strike.

Practical Financing

Financing of strikes of long organized workers presents considerably different problems from those in the financing of unorganized workers' strikes. If the former strikes are not too large, in all probability some form of regular benefits must be paid, particularly if the groups of workers have been accustomed to such a benefit system. Failure to do this may result in the collapse of the strikes. On the other hand, when large masses of unskilled are on strike they cannot be paid benefits, nor are they accustomed to look very hard for them.

The policy must be to take care of the most needy cases with cash and to establish commissary systems to furnish food supplies to the rest. Where the workers are strong enough they should enforce the "pay-no-rent" of the workers' funds in strikes. The question has often been put thus: Can the workers win strikes with money? rule until the strike ends. Skilled workers and others who have been long organized do not take kindly to the commissary system under present conditions, unless they are driven against the wall by a desperately fought strike, such as those that often take place among the miners. The skilled nearly always demand and insist upon cash. Always we should fight for the pooling of funds and benefits where several unions are engaged in a joint struggle against the employers. Nothing is so demoralizing to a strike as to have certain categories of workers receive regular and large strike benefits while others get few or none.

In any event, whether a given left wing strike be of organized or unorganized workers, it is certain that there will be a most urgent need of money in large quantities. Hence, the strike strategy must develop the most effective ways and means of mobilizing the financial reserves of the workers in support of strikes. This involves problems of publicity, of dramatizing the strike, of spreading a network of relief committees throughout the local and national labor movement, of insisting that other unions regularly assess themselves for the strike.

This relief work, which offers a splendid means for the left wing to establish its organization and prestige in the unions, must be accompanied by a penetrating propaganda carefully calculated to drive home to the workers the real economic and political significance of the struggle and to awaken their class consciousness. Ordinarily these strike relief committees can best be organized under the auspices of either the strikers' unions or of the section of the labor movement being appealed to. In several strike situations in this country the International Workers' Aid had done good service.

They Did Themselves Proud

THE DAILY WORKER congratulates the Chicago workers who participated in the splendid demonstration against the Roumanian terror symbolized by Queen Marie.

The workers who, on Sunday morning, nursed the bruised heads they carried bravely and defiantly under the violent attacks of Mayor Dever's bluecoats the night before, were probably not fully aware of the far-reaching significance of the effort they made. They knew what their duty was to their persecuted fellow workers in Roumania. They knew that it was necessary to make a protest against the adulation and belly-crawling of Chicago's owning class and their official henchmen, the politicians. They knew that they would be doing a service to the working-class of Chicago and the entire world by raising under the queen's nose, while she is the center of public attention, the question of the unrestrained brutality of her Roumanian oligarchy.

In congratulating these workers, THE DAILY WORKER wants to tell them what their demonstration signified and feels that they will consider the results of their work on Saturday more than enough reward for the violence of which they were the victims.

The wires of all the news services are buzzing with the events of Saturday. The story of the brave demonstration will be read by millions of workers in this country. We know that the workers of the United States do not share the obeisances to royalty being made by the ruling class of this country. We know also that when workers learn of the white terror in Roumania and the shameful occurrences at Cotzofanesti that they, too, will join in the indignation of those workers familiar with these things. And now they know.

But most important of all is the fact that over in Roumania the workers and peasants will hear of the championing of their cause by the workers of Chicago. This show of international solidarity will hearten them in their struggle against absolutism and steel them for the final and fast approaching fight for the abolition of their oligarchs and task masters, of whom Queen Marie is a living symbol, at present in this country.

The workers who carried high the banners disclosing the excesses of the Roumanian autocracy against the workers of Roumania and exposing the hand of the owning class which now tows to monarchy out of a feeling of emulation, had the backing of the labor movement. The workers of Chicago were united on this question, as shown by the fact that the Chicago Federation of Labor passed unanimously a resolution condemning the homage paid to the terror queen and calling for release of the 2,500 political prisoners held in the prisons of her country. Many of the slogans carried on the banners of the demonstrators were taken bodily out of the resolution of the federation. This unity on an issue with regard to which the sentiments of the entire working class are being expressed privately or publicly is a real contribution to the movement. The workers who gave the queen her unexpected "greeting" in Chicago made this issue a living reality.

The queen has not yet left the country. Altho it is becoming more uncomfortable for her every day she stays, her itinerary will probably be continued until she sails out of New York harbor some time next month.

These demonstrations of solidarity must continue. The workers of Chicago have shown the way.

Police Charge Workers Who Hail Marie With Cries of "Down With All Royalty"

the abasement before royalty that the whole official show constituted.

The second police charge came at the City Hall after the "greeting" of her highness when the two parades reformed and with recovered banners paraded back into the loop to the municipal building. While the queen had left the City Hall by the time the demonstration got there, the march around the building had progressed only half way when Capt. Kelliher led his men into the crowd. It was here that Maurer and the other two were arrested.

Much Violence.

A third police charge was made at Central station where the crowd followed the officers who had Maurer in custody. All the attacks were marked by the usual violence accompanying a police movement against demonstrations of workers.

4 Police Charges.

Four separate charges of the blue-

Another attack was made on the first parade coming down Roosevelt Rd. and half of the banners smashed, but the workers reformed their lines and later joined their fellow manifestants in the march to the City Hall.

The street around City Hall was strewn with broken banners. But they had done their work and done it well. Thousands upon thousands of persons stopped to read the slogans: "Down With Queen Marie." "Only in America Does Royalty Get Support." "We Fought Royalty In 1776, Why Do We Pay Homage to a Queen?" "Remember Cotzofanesti." "Down With the Bloody White Terror of the Roumanian Monarchy." "We Stand With the Persecuted Workers and Peasants of Roumania." "Release the 2,500 Political Prisoners in Queen Marie's Country." and many more.

Flat Welcome.

Amid the booming of camera flashes and the glare of magnesium flares fired by the movie men Queen Marie made her unpleasant way thru lines of soldiers standing at attention in the corridors of the Illinois Central Station where her train pulled in at 5:30 A. M. Saturday.

Two hundred soldiers from Fort Sheridan and two hundred disgruntled policeman were the "guard of honor" in the depot approach a squadron of U. S. cavalry sat their mounts with drawn sabers at attention. As the Queen's party marched thru the waiting room curious bystanders looked merely curious and that was all. There was a noticeable absence of cheering and enthusiasm. The only noise was made by the booming of the camera men, the hissing of their flares and the Roumanian national anthem being played by a sailor band from Great Lakes naval station.

Arrangements Flivver.

Everything was done to give the royal entry a touch of real European pomp and circumstance. The arrangements flivvered from the very start. The plug hatted dignitaries, army generals and major generals who were on the station platform to hand her royal highness down from the steps of her luxurious car had to run the length of the platform in obvious disorder to get to the unappointed place at which the special train really stopped.

Lieutenants Balled Up

Young army lieutenants, many of them not without a pre-Volstead area in their paunching breaths, flew hither and yon about the station trying to get some sort of order in the proceedings. It was plain that few of them had forgotten their instructions and that the other half didn't care much. The only thing the young military men cared for was a chance to drive away the detegation of costumed Roumanians who were to meet their royal lady as she stepped from the train and to walk all over the feet of the rear admirals and major generals.

Roumanians Sore.

The Roumanians were sore. They had their Greek orthodox protopopp with them in red lined robes of black. They had banners flaunting the nationalist ambitions of "Greater Roumania," as they call it, and the women folks were dressed to kill, fourteen petticoats, beads and all.

"Get back where you belong," and "Go on upstairs, the queen is going to make a speech is you on the steps as she comes up," the top lieutenant, the least amber of them all, said to the disappointed nationalists. And with choice Roumanian cuss words and much gritting of sharp teeth, the Moldavian contingent of royalists and royalists "got back." But the queen didn't speak to them. They were pushed aside and very much bewildered by the camera bombardment—and the queen didn't speak to her children. One of them pronounced a Balkan word that would no doubt pass in English for "frame-up." Some of the women folks and children crashed thru the lines in the confusion and tried to kiss the queen's hand—but they all felt very much snubbed.

Top Hatters Ignored.

And the innumerable top hatters, members of the mayor's committee, local plutes, consuls of various lands (the little Japanese Consul was noticeable), the camera men, some of them on top of the train, tore loose. It was bedlam. Her Royal Highness was surrounded with secret service men (some of them acted poor red porter in true Burns style) and the queen marched along the platform, attempting to smile.

Wet Reception.

Outside was a driving rain. When the procession reached the street the queen was pushed into the limousine that Henry Ford donated and it began creeping thru the wgon room made for it by the mounted police. The way led along a sort of abeitmen raised ten or so feet above the car as they went forward in low gear. It was here that the royal lady shudder ed. From the bank above her came great shouts of "Cotzofanesti." She was seen to turn pale. Editions of the DAILY WORKER containing the exposé were flashed from the abutment where the Queen could see. She read the headline: "Marie—What of Cotzofanesti?" The car put up speed and proceeded down Michigan boulevard to the City Hall, where a very brief and unimpressive "greetieg" to the lity was given her by Mayor Dever

Parade Loop.

It was so brief that the demonstrators, having recovered their banners from the police, got to the City Hall on late, altho they lost no time in marching directly there thru the loop The baenars attracted great attention as the manifestants walked the mile from the Illinois Central Depot to the City Hall.

Groups of policemen stationed in the loop and the traffic cops took a delight in reading the banners and stepped out of the way as the parade came along thru the crowded loop district Traffic was held up at the crossings and State street was filled with cries of "Down with Marie" and "Stop the bloody terror in Roumania"

Police Strike.

It wasn't until the parade had proceeded half way around City Hall that the police phalanx attack It was only a half block from Central Police station and the captain of the squad had led his men into the crowd with shouts of "break 'em up," and "get the guys with the banners" A number of heads were bashed and the banners effectively destroyed or confiscated. George Maurer, Margerite Miller and A. Zurn, all carrying banners, were thus taken in tow.

Follow Cops.

But the crowd reformed and followed the officers to the Central Station. They stood outside and demanded the release of the three. More reserves were called out and rushed into the crowd for the second time with drawn clubs

Propagandize Cops.

The three workers were held in the station for a half hour, where they explained the purposes of the demonstration while the waiting room what the demonstration was all about. After the photographers took pictures of the group they were let go.

Cops Wet and Annoyed.

Several hours before the train arrived, the station was barren of anyone but passengers and the policemen who were reporting to their lieutenants and formiey their lines. It was drizzling. They were uncomfortable. They were duy men drawn in from the districts after a day's work. As your reporter made his way thru the ranks he heard many unkeelingly remarks about a queen for whom "We have to come out on a day like this."

The damenstration against the queen began at 3:30 in the afternoon at 30 N. Wells St. where International Labor Defense had called a mass meeting of its members. Speeches were made by William F. Dunne, Max Schactman and George Maurer. The object of the meeting was to prepare the crowd for the parade and manifestation thru the loop and at the Illinois central station.

Thousands of leaflets were given to the assembled workers to be passed out along the line of march. One leaflet was a reproduction of a cartoon shewing the queen receiving the adulations of the plutocrats on one side and on the other, a terror scene in Roumania. Still another leaflet, signed by International Labor Defense asked why Countess Karolyi and Sekiatvala were kept out of the country while Queen Marie, the queen of Cotzofanesti, was accorded official welcome.

At the hall also, the banners were given out and the crowd formed into two groups to march in different directions to the depot. One group went South on Wella St. to Roosavelt Road and then over te the station. The other went directly East to Michigan blvd., and south on the broad thoroughfare to the deppt.

Daily Worker Sells Heavily.

On the march, there was no interference. DAILY WORKER containing the story of Cotsofanesti were sold by hundreds as the parades moved along. A great deal of interest was manifested in the crowded loop district. It was not until the demonstrailon had reached the depot and began to parade over the entrance that the first battalion of police under Lieutenant Freeman moved to attack the parade that had come down the boulevard. The banners were seized and kept in custody in front of a building north of 11th Street.

Other Section Pulls Up.

George Maurer completed to the lieutenant about the confiscation of the banners. The lieutenant said he was holding them "for a while on his own responsibility." After the Queen's car passed by the workers grabbed the banners again and started for the City Hall.

In the meantime, however, the parade that had gone directly South to Roosevelt Road and thee east pulled up while the police were busy taking the banners from their comrades of the other column. It was too much for the cops and Her Majesty had the privilege of reading a great streamer which spoke in no uncertain terms about the white terror in Roumanie and the connection with it of the fur coated lady in the Lincoln car.

Queen's Aids Alarmed.

In the Queen's car on the drizzling east to City Hall were Ira Nelson Morris Roumanian Consul General and Charles Vopicka, wertime minister to Roumenta from the United States.

They seemed every bit as alarmed as the queen over the shouts of "Cotzofanesti" that penetrated the windows of the limousine and Morris was seen to shout heated but unheeded instructions to a mounted patrol

Aldermen Missing.

The welcome in the city at the county building was a flat failure. Here too the arrangements were hopelessly tangled. There was a noticeable lack of alderman to greet her majesty. There were only seven Forty-three stayed away. The reasons were various. Many of the aldermen had "good reliable" statements saying they would have no share in the "flow ewing." Others feared that if they took part in the royal business, it would injure them at the polls next November

The business was gotten over with quickly. Mayor Dever mumbled a few words of bon mot meaningless compliments ary terms in which he showed a marked lack of knowledge about Roumania and the Queen thanked him in the same stereotyped way that she has thanked dozens of other mayors.

Wine Served at Dinner.

At a private dinner sponsored by Arthur Meeker, Chicago millionaire, at the Drake Hotel, at nine o'clock she was treated to the guests to such unpronounceable foods with fancy French names The excuse for the wine was that diplomatic immunity has followed the official journey of the queen and created the rum smatchers who can do nothing but gnash their teeth.

It was a very select crowd that sat at the table. Only the most exclusive families of the Gold Coast were admitted Mrs. Rockefeller McCormick filled upon the former Meister Vopicka for a speech He spoke of the Queen's "heroism" during the war. He was careful not to mention "Cotzofanesti" about which he certainly knows. When he had finished the queen leaned over to him and said gravely. "Those were the most solemn days of lives."

"Where were you" asked Mr. Meeker.

"We were nearest the Bolsheviks, Ally" answered her majesty, lighting a cigarette.

Chinese Treaty Crisis with Powers Imminent

WASHINGTON, Nov. 11—(FP)—Under pressure of nationwide demaen he "government" in Peking, which consists of Wellington Koo, formei minister at Washington, has terminated the Belgian treaty which gives Belgians in China the right to be tried before their own courts. This is the first of the extra-territorial privileges of foreign powers in China to be cancelled. But the Cantonese program calls for cancellation of the British American, Japanese and French treaties as well, in order that China shall be master of her own house. A crisis over the American treaty is apparently near, despite the fact that Secretary Kellogg insists that it cannot be terminated until 1934 without the consent of Washington.

"Their Sacrifice Will Not Be in Vain", Says Lucy Parsons, Widow of Haymarket Martyr, as Chicago Labor Honors Memory

By CARL HAESSLER, Fadarated Press.

SHE sat in the second row of the big meeting and looked around with sad pride. The place of honor on the platform was occupied by a bust of her dead husband. Strands of red and black were draped around it. Over 40 years ago she had attended an open air mass meeting where her husband was the leading speaker. She had taken her two little children. Exactly 39 years ago on Nov. 11, 1887, her husband had been executed by hanging in the Cook county jail. Since then both children had died. And here she sat, sole survivor of her little family, in the ascend row of the memorial meeting for the Haymarket martyrs, the pioneer workers in America and in the world of the agitation for the 8-hour working day.

Eyes Still Flame.

Lucy Parsons' dark eager eyes still flame as they must have when Albert H. Parsons, her innocent husband, had his neck broken by the noose on the Chicago gallows and 20,000 workers followed him to his grave. He had been the most successful trade union agitator in the country. Her dark hair still shows some of its onetime youthful color. She spoke gladly of Parsons and of the three trade unionists who had been hanged with him. Spies, Engel and Fischer, of Linex who died in his cell just before the executions, and of their three comrades, Neebe, Schwab and Fielden who were given long terms of imprisonment but were pardoned some years later by Gov. Altgeld.

Mamory Will Live.

"The mamery of their sacrifices for labor will not die," she told the interviewar. "I can see it growing as the years go by. This year the Chicago Federation of Labor voted to commemerate Nov. 11 not as simple tics day, but as the anniversary of the martyrdom of Parsons and his comrades. The 8-hour day has been largely achieved and labor is advancing to further reductions of the working day."

Hall Filled.

The meeting in the well-filled hall was called this year as in the past by the Pioneer Aid Association, composed of survivors of the splendid labor movement of Parsons' day and Arnold, president of Painters' Local No. 275, and William Z. Foster, organizer of the steel strike of 1919 and now the leadieg radical trade union figure in the country, were the principal speakers. An effective chorus of 50 women's voices and a small orchestra furnished music.

Foster praised the excellent organizating work and the militant spirit of the martyrs.

"In 1879 there men drew 60,000 workers to a demonstration in Chicago in honor of the Paris Commune of 1871," Foster said. "Can you conceive of such an outpouring of labor in any American city for any similar purpose today? In 1877 they had been leaders of the widespread railroad strike. In 1886 they organized the first great nation-wide general strike in the world history of labor. No wonder the masters of industry and finance wanted to bring such men to the scaffold. The capitalist aim is always to destroy the effective leaders of the working class. Than they hang ed them. Now they fall them, and hang or electrocute if they can. The best way to honor the Haymarket heroes is to struggle as valiantly and spiritedly as they did."

Or, as Lucy Parsons exclaims, "As you look upon the awful murdar of our comrades, swear within your heart never to cease your work until this accursed system of capitalism is overthrown."

Join in Cry "Cotzofanesti!"

MANY bystanders, hearing the word "Cotzofanesti" and not yet having read of the expose in THE DAILY WORKER thought the word was a Roumanian greeting and joined in the yelling as well as their American version of its pronounciation would permit. All of which, of course, added to the queen's dismay.

Take Your Choice of These Two Resolutions on Roumanian Queen

Two resolutions that greeted Queen Marie of Roumania when she arrived in Chicago show whose queen she is and whose interests she represents. The Chicago Federation of Labor points to her record of white terrorism, and the 2,500 workers and peasants in her dungeons. The Illinois Manufacturers' Association hails this terror queen as "amiable and progressive."

Here are the two resolutions. Take your choice

Chicago Federation of Labor

"Whereas, There are at present more then 2,500 workers and trade unionists in the jails of Roumania for political offenses, accounts of which have been given in the Chicago daily papers submitted by their foreign correspondents, and

"Whereas, These workers have suffered the most brutal persecution by the Roumanian authorities, many of them having been tortured and murdered, and

"Whereas, Queen Marie of Roumania now visits our country to solicit help for a government that cruelly oppresses the workers, peasants and trade unionists within its borders, destroys their legitimate trade unions and peasants' organizations and denies them the right of free speech, free press and freedom of assamblage, therefore be it

"Rasolved, That the Chicago Federation of Labor protests against the subservience of American officials to Queen Marie, the 'royal' symbol of oppression, and terrorism of workers and peasants and racial minorities within the borders of that country, and be it further

"Resolved, That we declare that organized labor will do no homage to any potentate, particularly as when in this case the potentate represents a government which persecutes and imprisons workers for belonging to a trade union and for their struggles for better conditions of living. Tha sympathy of our labor movement is with those who now suffer under the iron heel of Roumanian capitalism." — Introduced by Lodge No. 337, International Association of Mechinists.

Manufacturers' Association

Whereas, Her Majesty during her visit and journey thru our country has demonstrated herself a woman of great amiability and progressiveness, thereby winning the hearts of the American people, therefore, be it

Resolved, By the board of directors of the Illinois Manufacturers' Association, that we express our high regard for Queen Marie of Raumania, and hope her impressions of Illinois and the American commonwealth may form the basis of a permanent friendship between the United States and Roumania.

FIVE WORKERS ARRESTED AT QUEEN SERVICES

Were Distributing Anti-Terror Leaflets

Five workers were arrested by Chicago police Sunday afternoon for distributing leaflets denouncing the Roumanian terror in a Jewish synagogue. Five persons were being held in Oliver Marcus' home here. Warrants, in connection with the distribution, he the police took the workers in hail because the leaflets were being read with avidity by the assembled crowd

I. Greenspoon, Mrs. L. Greenspoon S. Podolsky and two others were taken to the station house.

A large crowd of workers gathered in front of the synagogue to see the excitement of a social crisis in the life of the Jewish people as the world worship in a Jewish temple.

The services were arranged by reactionary elements who organized a fake body known as the Society of Roumanian Jews of Illinois," headed by Abram Harry Fisher

Judge Mechelin, County Trustee Rosenberg and others. The ceremonies were held at Sharatin Komesh Synagogue, Douglas and Millard streets, which means "door to heaven" in English

Many copies of Saturday's issue of the DAILY WORKER containing the story of Cotzofanesti were sold to the crowd.

A demonstration by the workers greeted the queen when she came out of the church after 4 o'clock.

QUEEN GETS $100,000,000 LOAN

AMERICAN LABOR! ON YOUR GUARD! SACCO AND VANZETTI MUST NOT DIE!

Current Events

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY

MAYOR DEVER of Chicago shook hands twice with the queen of Roumania last Saturday but that important incident did not get the big headline in a Chicago newspaper that honor was reserved for the demonstration staged by the Chicago Inferno of the International Labor Defense. The seven column line read: "Police quell riot over queen." Due regard must be given to these requirements of finding the proper words to fit in a limited space so headlines do not always mean what they say. As a matter of fact the Chicago police did not quell anything and the demonstration of the I. L. D. wes very popular and the most effective demonstration of its kind carried out since this royal parasite set foot on these shores.

THE banners carried by the workers in the I. L. D. demonstration called attention to the reign of terror that now prevails in Roumania. Thousands of workers and peasants are being subjected to torture in Roumanian jails while this useless female, once referred to as a lady of very unusual virtue, is wined and dined by the American capitalist class and their hirelings. And the unusualness of her virtue is exactly the kind that is not considered proper in polite American society. The reception accorded to Marie proves how lightly this spurious democracy sits on the shoulders of our politicians.

THERE are many ways of getting a message to the public. But there is no better way than the sensational method, provided the message itself is not sensational. Of course it must be remembered that the opportunity such as was presented by the queen of Roumania's visit does not occur every day. Nevertheless the Chicago I. L. D. must be complimented for taking advantage of the opportunity when it presented itself. A mass meeting held in New York that was attended by thousands of workers was not nearly as effective as a parade of a few hundred people carrying banners. The banner-carrying demonstrators created news and the papers are concerned with peddling news to the public. While the comparatively few demonstrators made the loud headline in the capitalist press, the mass meeting held for the same purpose in New York reached only a very narrow circle. The art of using sensational methods to convey quite unsensational, but very important ideas, should be studied seriously.

THE queen of Roumania may be an interesting woman. In fact I have

RENEW SPIRIT OF FIGHT TO SAVE SACCO, VANZETTI

Big New York Meeting Leads National Protest

EDITOR'S NOTE—Thousands of extra copies of this issue of The DAILY WORKER will be distributed in the renewed drive for the liberation of Sacco and Vanzetti. There will be a general distribution at the great demonstration at Madison Square Garden, New York City, Wednesday night that should launch the new campaign for the whole country. Raise the slogan everywhere: "American Labor! On Your Guard! Sacco and Vanzetti Must Not Die!"

A renewed demonstration of the protest of American labor against the threatened legal execution of Nicola Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti, and in expression of unending solidarity will be given in the mass meetings which are being organized in various parts of the country, to be led off by a large gathering in the biggest hall in New York City, Madison Square Garden.

The lessons of the Sacco-Vanzetti case which have been hammered home to workers everywhere in the course of the six years of struggle for their liberation, are bearing fruit in the form of ever more determined opposition, by labor as the executioners of the Massachusetts bourbons to railroad the two innocent Italian radicals

Demand New Trial

Editor's Note: — An increasing number of capitalist newspapers are joining the demand for a new trial for Sacco and Vanzetti, declaring this is the only escape for the government, now that the frame-up has been exposed. Some of these editorial expressions are as follows:

Hartford (Conn.) Times

WHATEVER bearing the affidavits, introduced into the hearing, on the Sacco-Vanzetti application for a new trial for the murder of a Braintree paymaster, have upon the guilt or innocence of the accused, they are too sadly reminiscent of the frenzy which swept over

Sacco and Vanzetti in the Dock

HERE is a court room picture of the two workers who are victims of one of the most brazen legal conspiracies in the history of the labor movement. Left to right are Vanzetti, Sacco and Mrs. Sacco. The great protest meeting being held in Madison Square Gardan on Nov. 17 will be the signal for a nation-wide demonstration of solidarity with two framed-up victims of "capitalist justice".

Massachusetts Governor Who Refuses to Act in the Sacco-Vanzetti Case Is Guarded in Paris Like Queen Marie in the U. S. A.

PARIS, Nov. 15.—Governor Fuller of Massachusetts today stated the fact that he is being guarded in Paris, due to fears of demonstrations by sympathizers of the condemned workers, Nicola Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti. He claims the action was prompted by the American embassy.

"The American embassy, under instructions from Washington, is taking these precautions in view of the recent demonstrations in Paris on behalf of Sacco and Vanzetti," said Governor Fuller.

The Comunist newspaper L'Humanite has published a warning to the governor that his refusal to intervene in the Sacco and Vanzetti case may have serious consequences.

REACTIONARIES OF I. L. G. W. IN NEW DISRUPTION

Ex-Officials in Chicago Union Try Splitting

Over technical issue of but little importance to the life of the union generally a handful of right wingers led by ex-officials of the Chicago Joint Board of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union have opened war upon the left wing joint board and called a mass meeting, scheduled to meet at Labor Lyceum, Kedzie and Ogden Aves. Monday night at 8 p. m.

The issue is the question of the abolition of the office of the secretary-treasurer, a purely technical job of

How to Keep the Daily Worker

Contributions { Week ending Nov. 6, $1,348.43 / Week ending Nov. 13, 2,832.32

By C. E. RUTHENBERG,
General Secretary, Workers (Communist) Party.

THE contributions for the Keep The DAILY WORKER Fund for the week ending November 13,-were double those of the previous week, as shown above.

That shows that the party members and the sympathizers of the party who are helping The DAILY WORKER have thrown double the strength into the Keep The DAILY WORKER campaign.

Even last week's showing, however, does not show a full mobilization of the party forces to Keep The DAILY WORKER. For two weeks during the month of October the contributions for Keep The DAILY WORKER certificates reached close to the $5,500 mark. The contributions for last week were still $800 under this showing and $1,500 short of the $5,000 per week which must be raised during the remainder of the Keep The DAILY WORKER campaign.

There are still thousands of members of the party who should have contributed for Keep The DAILY WORKER certificates. With these thousands giving their support of the campaign we can drive up the weekly contributions to the $5,000 mark.

We ask these members to join their strength to that of the party members and sympathizers who have given splendid support in the fight to Keep The DAILY WORKER for our movement. Their failure to respond to the campaign is keeping The DAILY WORKER in constant financial difficulties which are dangerous to the existence of our paper in place of their helping to Keep The DAILY WORKER for the revolutionary struggle against capitalism in the United States.

It is the work of the section committees, the city committees and the district committees to see that these members are drawn into the campaign and give their full support.

It is only by making a thoro and systematic canvass of what the members of each nucleus have done to help Keep The DAILY WORKER and securing a 100 per cent support that the campaign can be carried to a successful close.

The immediate task is to raise the contributions to $5,000 per week. This week The DAILY WORKER must have $5,000 weak in order to weather the difficulties which have again accumulated.

Make the figures at the top of this appeal grow.

Make them grow so as to reach the $5,000 mark this week.

Next week put still greater energy into the campaign and make up the amount we fell short of the $5,000 mark last week.

There is sufficient energy and strength in our party to achieve this if the will to do it is developed.

We must develop this will to win the struggle for the DAILY WORKER.

It is the only way to Keep The DAILY WORKER and keep for our party the strength which gains thru its daily paper.

Marie Wins What She Came for and Cuts Trip Short

By THURBER LEWIS.

Queen Marie has gotten what she came for. Wall Street has consented to grant the Roumanian oligarchy a loan of large proportions. Reports from Bucharest, where parliament was opened on Monday, state that a group of New York financiers has agreed to advance credit amounting to $100,000,000 to the queen's country.

Coincident with this news, the queen's lady-in-waiting, Madame Lahovary, told reporters that the queen's itinerary had been re-arranged so the royal party could depart for home at an earlier date than originally scheduled. Various reasons were given. One was the king's health, another was the queen's desire to be "home for her children's birthdays."

But the fact of the matter is plainly that the queen is departing for her Bucharest palace because she has done the job she came to do. The whole time she has been in the country, it is known that her so-called "social retinue" was far out-numbered by a busy band of Roumanian diplomats and financiers who were here for the sole purpose of utilizing the queen's journey to talk and negotiate with the men who hold the purse strings.

Ira Nelson Morris, the Roumanian consul general for the eastern half of the United States, has not once left the queen's side. At the famous banquet given for her at the Bank of'a Club in New York several days after her arrival, reporters were not allowed to be present and an attache of the Roumanian embassy was known to have spoken in plain terms about Roumanian finances.

Demonstration Counts.

Some significance no doubt also attaches to the fact that the announcement of the shortened stay in the country was issued the morning after the hot reception given to the queen on her arrival in Chicago. The Chicago demonstration has had a strong reverberation thruout the country. The broadcasting of The DAILY WORKER'S expose concerning Cotzo-tenesti has also doubtless had its influence on the plans of the royal auditors.

The "King's speech" to the Roumanian Dobrudja, (parliament) casts a revealing light on the financial aspects of the queen's trip to the United States. The speech, written by the prime minister, General Avarescu, announced that a "solution had been found for the difficult problem of re

'ROYAL HONOR' GIVEN TO MARIE ON WEST POINT MILITARY ACADEMY VISIT

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WEST POINT, N. Y., Nov. 15.—When Queen Marie visited the United States Military Academy here on her way west the school commanders conferred a privilege upon her which is extended only to "royal visitors." With a wave of the hand she caused to be wiped off the academy records all minor offenses and penalties against the students. The same honor was conferred upon the Swedish prince when he attended last summer.

Needless to say, this custom, which is reserved for royalty only, hardly fits in with the democratic traditions of the country. The value of the practice seems to lay in the fact that the students feel a sense of gratefulness for the visitors who thus make it easy for them—in this case, royalty.

EIGHT WORKERS ARRESTED FOR ANTI-ROYALISM

Shameful Servility Is Shown at Synagogue

A disgusting display of shameless servility was shown in Chicago when the portals of the "Doors of Heaven" synagogue, a Roumanian-Jewish institution, were thrown open to receive Queen Marie of Roumania with lavish display on Sunday afternoon. Special services were held honoring the monarch of Roumania, which has outdone any other European nation in anti-semitism, the lot of the Jewish minority there being incredibly frightful. And more workers were arrested for continuing the work of protest that began on Saturday.

A protest, organized by International Labor Defense, circled around the synagogue, distributing leaflets in the Jewish language and an English leaflet, calling upon the workers to express their resentment of the terrorist regime of the queen and to demonstrate their solidarity with the Roumanian workers, peasants and national minorities.

8 Arrested.

As a result of this distribution, eight men and women were arrested by the police, upon orders from their democratic officials who were anxious to avoid causing embarrassment to the representative of decrowned royalty. Eleanor Sadlowski, who has already served sixty days in Cook county jail in connection with the notorious injunction case against the local International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, Sophie Greenspoon, Sarah Fertin, Sidney Petovsky, Joseph Krieberger, Paul Wasserman, I. Ellingon and Louis Greenspoon all members of I. L. D. were held by the police, having been arrested in the neighborhood of Douglas Boulevard and Millard St.

$400 Bail.

The station captain was at first inclined to book the prisoners on a charge of inciting to riot, but after a conference with local politicians and plain clothes men, the eight were booked on charges of distributing leaflets and disorderly conduct. Each was held on bail of $25 for each charge, making $50 each, a total of $400. Attorney Mendel Shuchter, member of the national committee of International Labor Defense, who was called in to represent the prisoners, put up the bail together with the local organization of I. L. D.

MORE MINE STRIKES PREDICTED BY BRENNAN BECAUSE OF DISCONTENT; FAVORS MILITANT UNION POLICIES

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PITTSBURGH, Nov. 15.—More discontent among the miners and more strikes were predicted by William J. Brennan, former president of the Scranton-Wilkes-Barre, district of the United Mine Workers, and now candidate for international secretary-treasurer against Thomas Kennedy of Hazleton.

"The strike just unsatisfactorily ended at Old Forge against the Pennsylvania Coal Co., and the strike still in progress at the Cravity Slope mine of the Hudson Coal Co. are the outcome of the bad agreement accepted at

CHINESE LABOR FORCES MAKING SHOW OF POWER

Growth of Cantonese Strength Feared

WASHINGTON, Nov. 15.—(FP)—China's workers, savagely repressed by the northern alliance of Chang Tso-lin and Wu Pei-fu, have so thrown their weight to the side of the nationalist government at Canton that Washington, London, Paris and Tokio are feeling the direct consequences. News from Peking that the shadow government in Peking has torn up the expired treaty with Belgium is followed by news that Japan has notified the Peking officials that she is ready to discuss a new treaty in which China will be, perhaps, treated as an equal rather than as an inferior. It seems likely that the turn of London end of Washington is near.

Washington Worried.

At the State Department all inquiries are met with the assurance that no foreign nation has offered China more than has the United States. On Sept. 3, 1925, the nine powers that took part in the Washington conference of 1922 sent identical notes of Peking, offering to discuss the demands made by China in the matters of tariff revision and the abolition of foreign courts in China. They said that if, after getting full information thru conferences on these subjects, they could agree with China on new arrangements, they would be glad to discuss the situation.

The tariff conference and the extra-territoriality or foreign lawcourt conference were duly launched in Peking last winter. A report was agreed upon by the conference dealing with foreign courts. It has not yet been made public, but is known to be unfavorable to abolishing these courts at present. The tariff conference was indefinitely suspended because no Chinese delegate could be persuaded to remain in it. Chinese public feeling was strongly against any further debate of Chinese customs control with foreigners.

Fear Boycott.

The United States does not ask the Japanese to wait and discuss jointly with the other foreign powers the terms of the treaty by which it may surrender its courts in China. It is watching carefully, however, to see how far it must give up its own special privileges in China in order to retain its share of the trade of the country. China has no military power that western nation need fear, but its power of boycott, as practiced upon the British in the past two years, is as effective as a blockade.

Washington and London know that the shadow government in Peking is seeking annulment of the old unequal treaties. Even the workers' government in the south is steadily increasing its sway to the northward, and may reach Peking within a few months. With every advance of the Canton or Kuomintang troops the trade unions are revived, the militarist reactionaries are driven out, and the new China, based on co-operation of worker and peasant and small merchant classes, is given political organization to maintain the new regime. Washington may within a year be negotiating with a Chinese workers' republic, which will have the sympathy of the trade unions around the world.

NEARLY ALL OF NATION'S WEALTH IS MORTGAGED TO BANKERS, THEIR OWN SPOKESMAN SHOWS; SLUMP DUE

By LELAND OLDS, Federated Press.

A burden of debt which has already passed the $190,000,000,000 mark is engulfing not only the freedom but also the prosperity of the American people. It is enslaving them to the money-lending class—chiefly the bankers who are constantly inducing the people to mortgage themselves more heavily.

These are the conclusions not of radical theorists but of a conservative financial writer, who reflects views held by many business men. In a series on "What We Owe" in the Chicago Journal of Commerce W. P. Helm says:

One Third of All Wealth.

"The American people are in debt to the extent of not less than $123,000,000,000 or more than one-third of the value of everything they own. On this great indebtedness they are paying annual interest of about $7,500,000,000, a sum sufficient in give steady, full-time employment to nearly 5,000,000 workmen, or about one person out of every nine gainfully employed at the present time. To discharge the debt the entire nation would have to apply its full earnings without deduction for living or other expenses for nearly two years."

Interest Grows.

The huge indebtedness includes corporate debt $50,000,000,000 to $55,000,000; national, state and municipal debt $23,500,000,000; individual debts $35,000,000,000; farm mortgages about $8,000,000,000; and about $8,000,000,000 outstanding on installment sales. Interest on the individual indebtedness alone absorbs the energies of 1,000,000 men working full time.

"Thus, the moneylenders appear to have the entire nation, corporate and individual, thoroly and completely mortgaged," says Helm. "With national wealth estimated by the federal trade commission at about $353,000,000,000, apparently the moneylenders have loans amounting to the extent of about 35 per cent of our present worth."

Debt Menacing.

This debt is increasing by more than $7,000,000,000 a year. In the last three years it increased from $100,000,000 to $122,000,000,000.

"The American people," Helm continues, "are going into debt so fast, latest figures indicate, that they are rapidly approaching the day when they can no longer pay interest on what they owe and gradually retire the principal. We have seemingly reached the point where we are working on the average one day a week to meet interest payments on the principal."

Helm refers to estimates of national income running from $65,000,000,000 to $75,000,000,000 and shows that interest on the debt is today absorbing more than half or what remains after paying essential living expenses and taxes. We are paying, he says, more than six times as much for borrowed money and for debt retirement as we are putting into savings funds and the rate of saving is declining. All of which indicates the rapidity with which the country is going into debt and living beyond its means.

Blames Bankers.

The most important cause of this situation Helm finds in the fact that the money lending class has too many dollars available for lending. He says, "Thus our present heavy debt is undoubtedly due in some measure to the bankers and others who want us to go in debt in order that new outlets may be found for putting their idle funds safely to work."

This mad rush to profitably oppress the country's workers for it can be met only by a very material increase in prosperity and spending power or by lowering the American standard of living. The bankers have brought things to the point where they can exact a day's work a week as interest tribute from every worker in the country. If they go much further there won't be enough of the working week left to produce the goods and services essential to the American plane of living.

Brennan Predicts More Mine Strikes

the close of the anthracite strike.

Condemns Bosses.

"Since the strike ended prices for rock removal have been cut; again day men are laid off after only five, six and seven hours' work and compelled to speed-up next morning to catch up. Men are arbitrarily discharged. And what is worse, the open shop is being established. The Hudson Coal Co. says it is under the agreement it has the right to keep organizers away.

No Square Dealing.

"If President Coppellini and the international officers are right those interpretations the men would have a chance. Not getting relief thru their higher union officer the men resort to innumerable local strikes. Since the men get a new deal in their union these strikes will get much worse.

Need Aggressive Policy.

"The only hope of the miners lies in a more aggressive policy by the district and national union. Our ticket stands for that policy. If the men are protected in their rights these local strikes will become unnecessary. We stand also for the abolition of the contract system that plays one set of miners off against the rest. We stand for organization of the non-union bituminous fields and for a labor party and nationalization of the coal industry and for the reinstatement of men unjustly expelled or suspended such as Alexander Howat."

Howat Speaks.

Howat comes to the anthracite this week to champion the causes of John Brophy, president of the central Pennsylvania miners, and candidate for international president against John Lewis, of William Stevenson, international board member for Michigan, who is opposing Philip Murrey for international vice-president, of Brennan, candidate for international secretary-treasurer against Thomas Kennedy of Hazleton.

Played Dramatic Role.

Brennan is helping to arrange the Howat meetings. Howat has played a dramatic role among the miners. Twenty years president of the Kansas district he won national attention by the strike against Governor Allen's Industrial Court law outlawing strikes. President Lewis, opposing Howat's methods, fought the strike and had Howat expelled. He is again a member of the union and candidate for president in District 14 in the coming elections.

Monday he speaks in Edwardsville. Tuesday he goes to Shamokin where he speaks in the large Moose Auditorium at 7:00 p. m., Shenandoah the 17th and Hazleton at the Standard Hall, 134 N. Pine St. at 7.00 p. m.

At all these meetings speakers in Polish, Italian, Slavic, Lithuanian and other languages will speak with Howat, additional to Brennan and other well known anthracite figures.

Immediately following Howat, C. Frank Keeney of Charleston, West Virginia, for years leader of the West Virginia miners and at present editor of the "Coal Miner," official Brophy organ will tour the region.

Investigate Graft of U. S. Officials Among Indian Tribes

WASHINGTON, Nov. 15.—A survey of the educational, social and medical activities maintained among the American Indians, as well as their personal rights, and their present economic conditions, is to be made by the Institute for Government Research, at the request of the secretary of the interior, Hubert Work. This institute for Government Research is a private organization financed by Robert Brookings of St. Louis, and is directed by Prof. W. F. Willoughby. The latter has organized a special staff for the investigation, which will require a year to make the study and report.

Secretary Work has been persuaded to invite this study of his Indian administration because of the vigorous criticism raised against his handling of the properties and the civil rights of the Indians in recent years. Last spring there was formed in Washington a federation of many Indian tribes for the purpose of joint action in resisting graft and oppression from Work's subordinates and their favored friends.

Two Banks Close In Minnesota During Week

DETROIT, Mich., Nov. 15.—The closing of the Security State Bank marks the second bank failure here within a week. The First National Bank, the largest in Becker county, closed its doors on Monday. The Security, which closed following a run, had deposits of $750,000.

L. J. Norby, president of the Security, is a brother of W. J. Norby of Lake Park, one of the two bankers found shot in the State Bank of Callaway, Tuesday. It is not known whether there is a connection between the failures and the shooting.

CANTON SUCCESS CAUSE OF WORRY TO NORTHERNERS

Fear Invasion of the North Soon

PEKING, Nov. 15.—Recent victories of the Cantonese armies are causing much uneasiness in the north.

The defeat of Marshal Sun Chuang-fang in Kiangsi and the inability of Marshal Wu Pei-fu to make any progress, coupled with the ability of the Cantonese to cause the soldiers of the northern militarists to mutiny and join the nationalists are the source of worry.

Soon in Yangtze.

The Cantonese have made such headway that they are expected to be in command of the entire lower Yangtze basin. This is a strategic position, as from here the southerners can press their campaign toward the north.

Nanking is Cool.

Nanking, junction for two important railway lines, is the goal of the Cantonese. Occupation of Nanking will give the nationalists virtual control of the situation in the north.

Much of the strength that the Canton armies have is the solidarity of the ranks, something that the militarists armies lack sadly. The northern armies are continually disturbed by dissension and mutiny.

Cheng in Tientsin.

The arrival of Marshall Chang Tso-lin in Tientsin has caused some excitement here. It is believed that this Manchurian war lord intends to come to Peking and make a clean sweep of the politicians, reform the government and set up himself as head.

Judges Decide Who Will Preside at the McPherson Trial

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 15.—Either presiding Judge Albert Stephens or superior Judge McLucas will hear the Aimee McPherson conspiracy trial, it was learned today.

If the trial begins before the first of the year, Judge Stephens declared that Judge McLucas would handle the case; if after Jan. 1, then Stephens will preside.

Death seems ready to strike for the fifth time among the ranks of persons connected with the case.

Today H. C. Benedict, owner of the Carmel cottage where Mrs. McPherson and Kenneth Ormiston are alleged by the prosecution to have spent ten days, is said to be near death from illness.

Mystery Surrounds Slaying of Chicago High School Girl

Authorities today were seeking to fathom the mystery surrounding the death of Victorie Delemata, pretty 16-year-old high school girl, who was shot last night within two blocks of her home in Chicago Heights.

The girl was returning home from the studio of her violin instructor, F. J. Schneider. A single shot, fired from the rear, penetrated her head, killing her instantly.

A women neighbor, who heard the shot, found the body a few minutes later. The girl's violin case was clasped tightly in her arms.

Every Worker Must Join In Swelling the Protest for Sacco and Vanzetti

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

THE Sacco-Vanzetti Emergency Committee in New York City received a telegram from John Vanvaernwyck, president of the Massachusetts State Federation of Labor, declaring that our two comrades facing the electric chair in Massachusetts are "innocent of the crime charged against them."

Copies of the telegram were immediately rushed out as important publicity to all the labor press. It was displayed yesterday on the first page of The DAILY WORKER in a two-column box, in big bold-faced type.

Nothing could better reveal the lack of support of the fight to save Sacco and Vanzetti from being murdered in cold blood by America's ruling class than this incident. It shows that organized labor, especially its officialdom, is not in this struggle.

When the president of one state federation of labor is won for this court battle against the predatory shoe and textile interests of New England, it is heralded as a great achievement. And it no doubt is. But that is not, of course, as it should be.

No greater indictment could be returned against the whole officialdom of the American organized labor movement, then the fact that this endorsement by one official is accepted as something unusual. Such support should be so common that only those labor officials exercising extraordinary energy in this life-and-death struggle would stand out from the crowd. Since this aid is not forthcoming at this moment, one of the big efforts to save Sacco and Vanzetti from the government's legalized assassination must be the awakening of the American working class on a broad scale.

The case of John Vanvaernwyck, president of the Massachusetts State Federation of Labor, must become the rule and not remain the exception.

This task will not be an easy one. The huge obstacles raised against the fight to save Sacco and Vanzetti have all seemed insurmountable. But the high precipices of capitalist opposition have been scaled one by one until today it is the American ruling class' tyranny that is on the defensive. Capitalism that oppresses labor has been forced on trial. It must be declared guilty before the whole American working class, in order to achieve this result all who toil must be stirred by the employers' deliberate, carefully planned frame-up to send Nicola Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti to death. Labor must be stirred to action, to struggle.

The American Federation of Labor has not led this fight as it should. It has been literally dragged into it. Insofar as it is involved at the present time. Its annual conventions have adopted week-kneed resolutions calling for a new trial. These resolutions have been introduced by progressive elements but watered down by the official resolutions committee. Instead of helping to intensify and broaden the Sacco-Vanzetti campaign, the A. F. of L. has tended to cripple and hemstring it.

Instead of stimulating all labor to an appreciation of its class interest, the A. F. of L. has, as it did in its convention at El Paso, Texas, November 1924, reiterated its demand for a new trial "for these defenseless victims of race and national prejudice and class hatred, to the end that the honor and fairness of the American people may be preserved untarnished before the eyes of the civilized world."

Defenseless indeed! They surely are without labor supporting them. Defenseless indeed! Especially when the A. F. of L. officialdom raises its hypocritical plea, not to the working class, but to the mythical "honor and fairness of the American people" that does not exist. It is the capitalist class justice of the greatest exploiters of labor that is hungry for the lives of Sacco and Vanzetti. The profit takers do not fear "the American people." They do fear the American working class, dreading the day of its awakening.

It was in the A. F. of L. convention at Atlantic City the following year (1926) that Vice-President Metthew Woll, reporting for the resolutions committee, declared that the officialdom resented having the Sacco-Vanzetti issue injected into every recurring annual convention. Woll declared the A. F. of L. was on record for a new trial and it was not necessary to reiterate this stand each year.

This year, however, at Detroit, the labor reaction was faced with the avalanche of affidavits poured in to Judge Webster Thayer's court room at Dedham, Mass., especially the affidavit of Celestino Madeiros, absolutely absolving Sacco and Vanzetti from any part in the South Braintree crime, and the confessions of the department of justice agents admitting the government's frame-up. Instead of seizing this opportunity to arouse all labor, however, the A. F. of L. convention meekly accepted the recommendation of the officialdom that congress be asked to conduct an investigation of this judicial outrage. Congress is not in session. There is no opportunity to press this demand. In the meantime no other action is taken.

This failure of organized labor to rally for Sacco and Vanzetti is the concern of all workers. There can be no exceptions.

The least that any worker can do is to get literature for distribution in his own locality. This can be secured from the International Labor Defense, 23 South Lincoln street, Chicago, Illinois, or from the various Sacco-Vanzetti committees.

Thousands of workers can join in the local committees. Organized workers can bring this issue up for action in their trade unions. They can write about the case to their union journals and continually bombard the officialdom with demands for effective action.

All workers can help raise the issue even in their local capitalist press. Mass meetings can be and must be held. No effort is so small that it does not help add to the growing protest over the land and over the world. Sacco and Vanzetti must not die. Only labor can stop this murder.

Slovenese Aroused by Persecution of Their Peoples by Fascists

BELGRADE, Nov. 15.—News of persecution of Italian-Slovenes in Italy by the fascisti is causing much excitement in parliamentary circles. Statements against the fascists were cheered frequently by members of the Skupshtina.

Reports of the arrest of Signor Wilfan, Italian-Slovene deputy in Rome, and fascist threats to kill Signor Besednajak, another Italian-Slovene deputy, have aroused intense feeling.

McKinley Sinking.

MARTINSVILLE, Ind., Nov. 15.—The condition of Senator William B. McKinley, republican, of Illinois, remained unchanged today. He passed a restless night and his breathing difficulties have increased, said Dr. Robert H. Egbert.

He has been confined with neuritis and pulmonary congestion since Aug. 18.

EVEN REGULAR G. O. P.'S FIGHT NEW TAX PLAN

Coolidge to Have Hard Sledding This Time

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, Nov. 15.—Troubles multiplied today for the Coolidge-Mellon plan for a tax rebate at the approaching short session of congress.

So formidable has the opposition now become, and so widespread the criticism, not only among the democrats and insurgents in congress, but among administration regulars as well, that it seemed certain that unless some heroic compromising is done the whole project will have some extremely rough sailing.

Can Be Killed Easily.

It won't take many squalls to effectually kill it, either thru outright defeat or negation, because the congress that convenes here three weeks hence has but ten weeks to live. There are few who believe a controversial measure of this sort can be jammed thru a recalcitrant congress in anything like that time.

Representative Green, republican of Iowa, chairman of the powerful ways and means committee, which has a life-and-death control of all revenue legislation, is the latest administration wheelhorse to question the advisability of what President Coolidge has proposed and Secretary Mellon has qualifiedly endorsed.

"Unsatisfactory," in many respects is Green's summery of the scheme. "The plan of making a reduction in payments for next year, either on the personal income tax or that of corporations, is workable."

Claims Court Denies Farmers Reimbursement for State Destruction

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Nov. 15.—Joe. Mate and 95 other Madison county farmers, seeking $7,589 reimbursement from the state for straw destroyed several years ago by the department of agriculture in the fight to eradicate flag smut near Edwardsville, have been denied a rehearing by the state court of claims.

The case was dismissed by the court originally on the grounds that these farmers had been reimbursed previously for money spent personally in the campaign.

A claim of $10,000 was denied by J. B. Neighbors, administrator of the estate of Elsie Neighbors, who died in her home in Galatia, Saline county, after she had contracted tuberculosis at the state hospital at Peoria. Granting of such a claim, the court held, would create a precedent almost equal to state health insurance.

The court will hold its next regular session in this city next January.

Anti-Vivisectionist Urges Music as Cows Are Slaughtered Here

Soft violin music should be played for the benefit of Mrs. Cow and Mr Bull while they await their fate before slaughtering time, the Duchess of Hamilton and Brandon declared today.

Cattle endure great anguish worrying over their destiny in the strange quarters of the Chicago stockyards and this fretting causes a form of physical poisonfng, the duchess said Lady Hamilton is touring America, speaking against vivisection.

Family of Eight Is Poisoned by Placing of Arsenic in Flour

BALLINGER, Tex., Nov. 15.—Officers here today searched for a man believed to have attempted to poison the eight members of the W. H. Ash ton family, three miles north of here by mixing arsenic powder with wheat flour.

Five members of the family are in a critical condition from eating bread made from the poisoned flour.

A chemist here analyzed the flour and said the poison was similar to that used to spray cotton.

Royalty Meets The Daily Worker

"BLOODY MARIE," Queen of Roumania, has made the acquaintance of THE DAILY WORKER. No frock-coated flunkies made the introduction. No silk-hatted plutocrats performed the ceremony. No, indeed. The queen met THE DAILY WORKER as all representatives of the ruling class, will some day meet those whom they enslave. The queen met THE DAILY WORKER and turned pale. The queen met THE DAILY WORKER with fear and trembling, for there amid the gold-braided, bejewelled sycophants of American capitalism, it stood out as the single challenging voice. There it was, borne by the willing hands of thousands of workers, flinging its fearless message in the face of this powerful monarch. "What of Cozofanescii?" it cried and the Queen's face blanched. "What of our murdered brother Trachenko?" and her terror stricken Highness shrank abashed into the soft cushions of her limousine.

Shall this fearless voice of challenge now be crushed? Shall tyrants and exploiters have their way and THE DAILY WORKER be silent? No! Never! THE DAILY WORKER must be kept and strengthened for the day when it will be powerful enough to strike fear in the hearts of all tyrants, when it will be powerful enough to rally all the exploited and oppressed for the abolition of the entire system of exploitation and the establishment of a new system of society—and a workers' and farmers' republic. To that end THE DAILY WORKER needs help at once—needs it urgently—needs it NOW. Send in your donations toward the $50,000 fund and help to Keep THE DAILY WORKER.

22,000 MINERS MAY WALK OUT IN ANTHRACITE

Challenge Hudson Coal Co. on Grievances

By ART SHIELDS,
Federated Press.

SCRANTON, Nov. 15. —(FP)—Hudson Coal Co., whose breakers spot the Lackawanna anthracite field for many miles, is threatened with a strike of its 22,000 employes. The general grievance committee of the 22 local unions involved, says that unless the management remedies one of the many grievances that have been hanging fire so long it will call a strike in the latter half of November.

Hudson Coal — a subsidiary of Lorse's Delaware & Hudson R. R. — has the worst labor record in the hard coal region. The particular grievance that brings the threat of war is only a last straw on the camel's back. Yet the facts of this local grievance are worth telling because they well illustrate the company's methods.

In the Grasey Island Colliery the payment of, the lonnege miners for rock removal has been slashed more than two thirds. This rock is a strata in the middle of the coal vein. Removing this rork took up so much time of the place workers that they were formerly alloted a substantial time allowance. Every bi-weekly pay they were credited with 40 hours or five shifts at the day-time rate of $6.95 a shift, totalling more then forty dollars for this form of "dead work."

Slashes 2 Years Ago.

Three years ago the management slashed this forty-odd dollars to a flat five, six and seven dollars, depending on the man and the work place. The union protested that the company, under the system and from, time to time change a rate until the agreement expired. The case went to the conciliation board representing operators and union for the hard coal region. It went on to Umpire Neill. The umpire agreed in principle with the union but failed to fix a rate. He asked the union and the company to get together and do this. And this weary round, through the conciliation board and back again to Neil, who has had the case three months. The company argues—falsely the union says—that part of the forty-odd dollars formerly went for other kinds of "dead work" now compensated for under other headings. But no records are shown to prove this assertion.

Cut Rock Rates.

Encouraged by the delay the company recently cut rock rates again to $3 a bi-weekly pay, allowing $5 to exceptionally hard kickers. And as aggravated by the delay the grievance committee threatens strike at a time when the coal trade is booming.

There are a host of other grievances: numerous arbitrary discharges; unfair dockage of piece workers; general speed-up of day men and in some cases laying men off after five and six and seven hours, to make them speed up in the morning to catch up with lost time.

Overshadowing other grievances—with those who suffer from it—is the contract system that is being extended, making one miner the profiteer over many others. The union has traditionally been opposed to the contract system and from, time to time has rebelled against it and either wiped it out or curtailed it. But in the last three years Hudson Coal, among other operators in the northern field, has been extending it.

Perhaps most serious of all to the union's present welfare is Hudson Coal's latest move, forbidding organizers the right to come on the property and backing this up with a declaration that the union does not have the right to a closed shop.

Post Office to Give Air Mail Business to Private Corporations

WASHINGTON, Nov. 15.—The first step of the post office department in turning over to private concerns the transcontinental air mail service, as well as the supplemental over night service between New York and Chicago, was taken today when Second Assistant Postmaster General Glover issued a call for bids on the two routes to supersede the present government-operated air mail service. The bids will be opened on January 15, 1927.

BALKAN POLICE ARREST WORKERS IN SOFIA RAID ON ORGANIZATION

(Special to The Daily Worker)

SOFIA, Nov. 15.—An alleged secret Communist organization with a thousand members has been "discovered" by the Sofia police, it was announced today following the arrest of many workers presumed to be leaders of the [illegible] raid on their headquarters.

AFFIDAVIT SHOWS ROLE PLAYED BY DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE IN TRIAL

From the affidavit of William G. Thompson, defense attorney for Sacco and Vanzetti, the following extract showing the part played by the Department of Justice in the frame-up of Sacco and Vanzetti is illuminating:

"I further state that on July 8, 1926, I wrote to the Hon. John G. Sargent, attorney general of the United States, stating that I had obtained an affidavit from Fred J. Weyand, a former special agent of the Department of Justice in Boston, which seemed to indicate cooperation between the Boston special agents and the district attorney in the prosecuting of Sacco and Vanzetti for murder, and asking him to instruct Mr. William J. West, now a special agent of the Department in Boston, to give me whatever information he possessed about this matter, and to show me whatever documents and correspondence were on file in his office dealing with the investigation made by the Department agents in Boston before, during and after the trial of Sacco and Vanzetti. I received no reply to this letter.

Queen Marie Wins What She Came for and Cuts Trip Short

conditioning the petroleum industry destroyed by the war."

This statement, made simultaneously with the consummation of large foreign loans, signifies that an arrangement has been made to virtually mortgage the oil industry of Roumania for foreign credit. It means that the advance of $100,000,000 made by Wall Street was done to insure an American foothold in the large petrol resources of Roumania.

There are also reports of a loan of 20,000,000 pounds ($150,000,000) being granted by an Anglo-American consortium in London. Advices from Berlin state that the German firm of Krupps is considering a project which would result in the granting of a loan of 500,000,000 marks to Roumania. But it is patent that Wall Street, the center of world banking, has the last word in the matter and that Queen Marie's journey here was intimately bound up with these international financial negotiations.

Sees Gary Thru Glass.

On Monday morning the queen and her party went to Gary, Ind. where they "inspected" the mills. Her majesty expressed a desire to see part of "America's workshop."

Of the nature of her visit to the Indiana slave pens of the United States Steel Corporation, it is easy to say that her majesty and party were conducted thru the mills in specially constructed cars entirely covered by glass.

From these protected cages the queen viewed the huge smelters, the great piles of ore and saw the molten steel being poured into the molds. None of the tantalizing ore dust entered her royal lungs. The murderous heat of the open hearth furnaces before which the workers toil did not burn her aristocratic cheeks. She got only superficial glimpses of the sweating toilers, making profits for Judge Gary and his fellow profiteers. From her glass cage she was impressed only by the "efficiency" and the "greatness" of these huge mills.

Slavery Familiar.

Not that slavery is an unfamiliar sight to Maria von Hohenzollern. The driven workers of Bucharest and Constanza, the toiling peasants of Bessarabia and the exploited oil field workers in Wallachia are no uncommon objects of her royal vision at home.

Six Drown Trying to Evade Police in Raid on Mississippi Boat

ST. PAUL, Minn., Nov. 15.—Six persons are known to have been drowned, one is missing, and three others were rescued from the icy waters of the Mississippi river here early today. All were in a houseboat anchored in the Mississippi and, according to occupants of other houseboats, were staging a wild drinking party.

When police attempted to raid the houseboat ten of the party made their way out thru a back door, jammed themselves into a small boat tied to the houseboat. Immediately after shoving off in the dark their small boat overturned. Police succeeded in rescuing three of the ten.

A Letter of Bartolomeo Vanzetti to International Labor Defense

For the Abolition of All Oppression

DEAR Friends of the International Labor Defense:

On April 30, 1926 I received $20 from the Defense committee. They are yours. And previous to that date I had received a third $20 from you, through the D. C. I have also regularly received your bulletin since its first issue. It is a long time that I wanted to write to you to tell you that I appreciate your solidarity. I am one of the old guard who appreciate and approve the solidarity and have been solidly with all.

If I delayed so much it is because I was embarrassed to write to you on account of our different views on very delicate and important matters, which I would, or rather which I shall not hide to you. But the last ebullig of the Massachusetts Supreme Court does not give one time enough, nor breath enough to discuss things. They are preparing the fire on which to burn us alive. Only the revolutionary workers, the people, can give us life and freedom. I said the above because I felt morally duty-bound. So that I only remains to me to say and repeat that I appreciate your solidarity to me and to the other P. P. and that I am and will remain till to the death, for the emancipation of the workers, for the elimination of every oppression, exploitation and injustice.

Fraternally yours,
Bartolemo Vanzetti.

RENEW SPIRIT OF FIGHT TO SAVE SACCO, VANZETTI

Big New York Meeting Leads National Protest

to the electrocution chair. The workers of the entire world who have on more than one occasion shown their fraternal spirit are becoming convinced that in the united power of the workers themselves lies the hope of Sacco and Vanzetti.

On November 17.

The New York mass meeting, which will be held on Wednesday, November 17, 1926, will take place in the Madison Square Garden, Eighth avenue and 50th street, at 8 p. m. Among the speakers will be Ben Gold, of the Furriers' Joint Board, Enea Sormenti, of the Anti-Fascisti Alliance, Richard Brazier of the I. W. W., Norman Thomas of the socialist party, and William W. Weinstone of the Workers (Commun ist) Party. Elizabeth Gurley Flynn, national chairman of International Labor Defense, will act as chairman of the meeting.

In Chicago, also, a huge mass protest meeting is being arranged. At the Ashland Boulevard Auditorium, Ashland Boulevard and Van Buren, on Friday, Nov. 26, the Chicago Sacco-Vanzetti conference will hold a meeting with John Fitzpatrick, president of the Chicago Federation of Labor, Vincso Vacirca, well known Italian labor editor of New York who was recently saved from deportation to Italy, the Reverend Charles Clayton Morrison, editor of the Christian Century, Elisabeth Gurley Flynn, national chairman of I. L. D., and Anton Johannsen, of the Chicago Federation of Labor, who will act as chairman.

Admission to both meetings is free and workers are urged to attend in masses to show their solidarity with the two victims of the frame-up in Massachusetts.

MORE THAN SIX YEARS OF GROWING STRUGGLE TO HALT JUDICIAL MURDER OF TWO WORKERS IN MASSACHUSETTS

ON May 5, 1920, Nicola Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti, two Italian radical workers, were arrested at Brockton, Massachusetts, and charged with the murder of the paymaster and his guard of the Slater & Merrill Shoe company of South Braintree. The arrests took place amid the anti-Red hysteria that followed the "red raids" of former Attorney-General A. Mitchell Palmer.

Sacco and Vanzetti had been active in arousing sentiment against the imprisonment and torture of two of their friends and comrades, Robert Elia and Andrea Salsedo. Salsedo was found dead on a pavement of New York City below the offices of the department of justice in Park Row, where he had been held and alleged to have been tortured by "D. of J." agents in an attempt to force a confession, from them. Elia was deported.

After a trial in which the courtroom was charged with an atmosphere of anti-radical and anti-alien prejudice, and in which the judge, Webster Thayer, was so obviously partial as to call forth protests from even capitalist newspapers, both Sacco and Vanzetti were convicted and sentenced to death July 14, 1921.

Stay of execution was granted while five motions for a new trial were argued on October 1923. In this period, and in the months that followed, the entire labor movement of America and of the world was aroused by what assumed even greater international proportions than the Mooney-Billings case. One after another, the witnesses produced by the prosecution were uncovered as perjurers and otherwise dubious characters. Experts had already testified that the charge of murder and robbery against the two Italian workers were manifestly absurd. The conclusive alibis which were proved by the defense did not, however, carry any weight with the perjudged and [illegible]

A hearing before the supreme court of Massachusetts was finally set for January 11, 1926. On May 12, 1926, the supreme court rendered its decision denying the radicals a new trial. It went left to the superior court to sentence them.

The imminent threat of execution to the two workers, for whom the workers thruout the world had already demonstrated their solidarity and conviction of innocence, renewed the spirit of protest in the labor movement, generally. International Labor Defense organized a huge campaign of protest thruout the land and took initial measures to systematize and centralize the protest movement in calling for Sacco-Vanzetti conferences, which were organized in all the centers of America with hundreds of labor unions, fraternal organizations and representatives of labor political organizations.

On July 16, 1926, a date was set for a hearing on a new motion for a retrial, based upon additional information secured by the defense. The judge before whom the arguments were heard was Judge Webster Thayer, the trial judge who had convicted and sentenced Sacco and Vanzetti!

The new evidence consisted largely of sensational confessions of Celestino Madeiros, himself under conviction of murder, in which he completely exonerated Sacco and Vanzetti of the charges originally placed against them. Madeiros indicated that the notorious Morelli gang of Providence, R. I., were the real instigators of the South Braintree holdup and were actually guilty of having committed the robbery and subsequent murder.

Despite this evidence, which also included numerous affidavits from police officials, Judge Thayer, on October 24, 1926, announced his decision refusing to grant Sacco and Vanzetti a new trial.

They Are Innocent!

By FRED J. WEYAND,
Former Agent of the Department of Justice.

I am thoroly convinced, and always have been, and I believe that is and always has been the opinion of such Boston agents of the Department of Justice as had any knowledge on the subject, that these men (Sacco and Vanzetti) had nothing whatever to do with the South Braintree murders, and that their conviction was a result of co-operation between the Boston agents of the Department of Justice and the District Attorney. It was the general opinion of the Boston agents of the Department of Justice having knowledge of the affair that the South Braintree crime was committed by a gang of professional highwaymen.—(Signed) FRED J. WEYAND.

The Chances Are Desperate for Sacco and Vanzetti, Review of the Case Shows

ON October 23rd Judge Webster Thayer handed down his decision on the motions for a new trial heard the week of September 13th. Here are some words!

"In conclusion, as far as the Madeiros affidavit is concerned it would have been an easy task for this court to transfer the responsibility upon another jury, but if this were done it would be the shirking of a solemn duty that the law places upon the trial court. Guided by this solemn duty I have examined and studied for several weeks without interruption the record of the testimony upon this motion and the Madeiros deposition; and, being controlled only by judgment, reason and conscience, and after giving as favorable consideration to these defendants as may be consistent with a due regard for the rights of the public and sound principles of laws, I am forced to the conclusion that the affidavit of Madeiros is unreliable, untrustworthy and untrue. To set aside the verdict of a jury affirmed by the Supreme Judicial Court of this Commonwealth on such an affidavit would be a mockery upon truth and justice. Therefore, exercising every right vested in this court in the granting of motions for new trials by the law of his commonwealth, the motion for a new trial is hereby denied."

That means that in spite of the confession of Madeiros, in spite of the affidavits of the department of justice agents, Lethermen and Weyand and Weise's letter and the great mass of testimony that has been piled up refuting the evidence on which they were convicted, Sacco and Vanzetti must die.

The chances of a reversal by Judge Thayer's decision by the supreme Court of Massachusetts are desperately small. An appeal to the United States supreme court on "due process of law" is a forlorn hope either. It is one of the guarantees set down in the constitution. The opinion of one man, backed up by the huge cumbersome power of the judicial system, is going to prevent the reversal of a verdict gotten from a jury in a time of hatred and hysteria, is going to brand forever on our minds the fact that a foreigner and a holder of an unpopular creed cannot expect justice in this country, and is going to murder two innocent men, already tortured beyond human endurance by the suspense of six years in jail.

Yet this long decision of thirty thousand words, that denies the possibility of a gunman and murderer telling the truth, that attacks personally the counsel for the defense and makes light of the new general[illegible] admitted accusations against Attorney General Palmer's anti-Red crusade, seems to anyone not up in the technicalities of the law, rather a personal defense of himself and of his conduct of the trial, than the impartial statement of a judge. It is Judge Thayer and the courts of Massachusetts that are on trial.

Will the working people of America allow these two fellow workers to burn in the chair in Chalestown jail?

There's not much time.

By January the supreme court will have given its decision.

Join in the growing nation-wide protest for the liberation of Sacco and Vanzetti.

These workers must not die!
They must be freed!

Even Kept Press Seeks New Trial

the country in 1919 and 1920 when Mr. Palmer went on his hunt for "reds" and the democratic nomination. The fact that agents of the department of justice who did not believe that Sacco or Vanzetti were guilty of the crime, had seized a means of disposing of them, suggests how about the methods employed by the agents provocateurs at that time which are at the least disquieting.

So far as the present hearing is concerned, it is sufficient to say that if the Massachusetts courts wish to avoid lasting stigma, they will hear the evidence de novo . . . that counsel has presented a confession of the crime by another man and various affidavits which cast a sickening reflection upon the motives of some of those who were active in bringing about their conviction. In rebuttal the state is expected to introduce testimony for the state.

What any friend of justice asks is that these affidavits be weighed upon their merits and without reference to attitudes already formed upon the case. It is difficult for most people to approach a problem they regard as settled without regard to the previous answer. But a judge ought to be able to accomplish this.

Baltimore Sun

THAT the last word is by no means said in the Sacco-Vanzetti case is indicated by the startling nature of testimony given at the first hearing on motion for a new trial. Two former agents of the department of justice, one of them a man who spent thirty-eight years in government service before resigning to go into commercial work, made affidavit that the federal government was out "to get" these two Italian radicals at all costs. Failing evidence for deportation, it was asserted, they were convicted of murder "as one way of disposing of them."

There are other affidavits to be placed in opposition to these, and doubtless they will be just as circumstantial in supporting evidence of guilt. Nevertheless, the eager interest of the department of justice in securing a conviction of Sacco and Vanzetti is now established beyond a doubt. One of the many curious features of this important case. The whole business is bashed over closer and more it appears that other considerations played an important part in the original trial.

Providence (R. I.) Tribune

THE Sacco-Vanzetti case has received world-wide attention, and demonstrations protesting against the execution of the two Italians have been held in the far-flung quarters of the globe. . . . The conduct of the trial was such that there is ground for the belief that Sacco and Vanzetti were "railroaded" because of their radical affiliations rather than found guilty thru a preponderance of evidence. Their trial was held in the period when the United States was going thru the "Red" hysteria, and the two Italians, it is claimed, were the victims of a sadistic popular desire to vent its feelings upon radicalism.

Since the restoration of normality, however, new anglers appear in the case. Witnesses have admitted perjury, affidavits upholding the innocence of the men have appeared, and a man convicted of murder in another case has testified that he was a member of the gang which put the Braintree paymaster to death. A mass of evidence has been produced to show that state officials and department of justice agents conspired to send the two men to the chair upon doubtful stories which they had dug up. Dean Pound of the Harvard Law School has interested himself in the case and has given his opinion that, from the nature of the courts' records, a new trial is only fair.

Revolutionary Dies.

MOSCOW, Nov. 15. Michael Asbrenner, one of the most active revolutionary leaders of the early 90s, is dead. He was 84 years old. Asbrenner was sentenced to death by the czarist government in 1884 for his activities, but the sentence was commuted to life imprisonment. He was released in 1917.

the now ones the electric power is in use now.

But it would have been wrong to think that only our new oil fields are well equipped and that the old ones remain in the previous state.

All Well Equipped.

All the oil fields are getting their equipment according to the request of the modern terhoics. From the old method of the shock boring we are already getting on to the turning boring, tross boring and to the combloed boring.

Instead of previous methods of getting oil by means of "jelonka," we are beginning to use the deep pumps.

It is true that for us who are residing here all this became a usual thing and we do not notice all the alterations which took place in our oil fields, but if one is leaving for six months or so then he can see the progress when he comes back.

A friend of mine, after being eight months in Leningrad, returned in Baku with a Leningrad citizen.

"Jalonkes Zena."

When they came to see how we are getting the oil out of the pits in our region, my friend wanted to prove to his Leningrad friend the fact of the superiority of the deep pumping in comparison with the "jelonka."

But, alas! They were unable to find any "jelonka." There were in existence only the deep pumps. In order to find one "jelonka" they wasted almost a half a day.

In order to shorten the time of the work of exploring the old forgotten oil pits, we recently started to use tractors and to build the moving towers, etc.

Thanks to all innovations the production of our oil fields is increasing with every coming year and lowers the price of the oil products. For example: in taking the oil out of the pit thru "jelonka" in our region 29 kopek a pood, while a pood of oil being taken out from a pit by means of a deep pump cost us 18 kopek (this was during the first quarter of 1925-1926). But the workers are watching not only upon the gain of oil, but also upon its expenditure.

Electric Motors.

The steam machines and the oil motors used by the former owners were rather expensive moving power and very uneconomical from the point of view of expenditure of the burning stuff.

Therefore our oil fields began to be equipped with the electric motors.

For heating purposes in the houses we began to use the gas which we have in sufficient quantity.

Such a change of the heating stuff produced a favorable effect upon the common health of our region.

During the past time the residents of Balahani complained about smoke and smoke duel. They said: "We cannot see the sun; it looks like the eternal night here." But now the sun is warmly and gently shining over the Soviet oil fields and looks like glad to see the achievement of the workers' hands.

V. Kouznetsov.

Balahani, August 31, 1926.

P. S. I beg the comrade worker correspondent of the communistic newspaper, The DAILY WORKER, who will read this letter to explain to me to writing how his fellow comrades are working in the industrial establishments where they have to work. Our workers are very anxious to hear about them.

Workers of Denver Pay Respect to Debs at I. L. D. Mass Meet

By a Worker Correspondent.

DENVER, Colo., Nov. 15.—Workers of Denver and their friends gathered under the auspices of the International Labor Defense here to pay their last tribute to Eugene V. Debs. Speakers of various shades of opinion paid their tribute to Debs.

The I. L. D. and the Workers' Party both had speakers. A member of the I. W. W., as well as former members of the socialist party, also paid their respects.

After the regular scheduled speakers finished their talks the meeting was thrown open for remarks from member of the audience and a number of union men and others made short talks on the work Debs did in organizing his fellow-workers in the rause of emancipating themselves from capitalism. At the conclusion a collection was taken for the benefit of class-war prisoners.

At the conclusion of the meeting a large number of the audience signed up for membership in the I. L. D.

Workers of Houston Demand Recognition of Soviet Republic

By a Worker Correspondent.

HOUSTON, Tex., Nov. 15.—More than 100 persons celebrated the ninth anniversary of the Russian revolution in this city. A resolution was adopted demanding immediate recognition of the Soviet Union. Attention was drawn to the fact that Houston, world's second greatest cotton port, ships more cotton to the Soviet Union than to any other country. The resolution was sent to all representatives in congress from Texas.

Principal speakers eulogizing and drawing lessons from the revolution, were Comrade Nathan Bell, formerly of Russia, and Comrade Stanley a Clark, organizer of District 10. Voluntary donations amounted to $52.

Perth Amboy Greets Passaic Strike Film with Much Enthusiasm

(By Worker Correspondent)

PERTH AMBOY, N. J., Nov. 15.—"The Passaic Strike," picture story of the great Passaic strike was shown in Perth Amboy at Washington Hall, and an enthusiastic crowd of 500 workers packed the hall eager to see this picture.

Workers from the cable works, copper works, young workers from the pocket-book and hat factories, and many local trade unionists applauded the picture as scene after scene was thrown on the screen.

When the piano played "Solidarity Forever" and other workers' songs, all joined in singing with enthusiasm. Profits from the show amounted to $248.93.

INDUSTRIALIZATION OF SOUTH IS PRODUCING MANY SOCIAL CHANGES; DEMOCRATS RAPIDLY LOSE CONTROL

New York, Nov. 15.—Before the Civil War the southern regions of the United States were almost entirely agricultural, dominated by large landowners exploiting Negro slaves. Industrial development began after the Civil War and the freeing of the slaves, but for many years proceeded only slowly. The conquered states of the south remained under the domination of the republican party of the northern manufacturers.

Since the World War, however, industrialization has progressed rapidly in the southern states. Increased cost of labor in the north gave southern manufacturers an opportunity for profitable exploitation of the southern population which was unorganized industrially and which lacked protective legislation. Northern capital, especially in textiles, began to move south in search of cheap labor.

The state of North Carolina affords an example of this process. In 1914 there were 5,507 manufacturing establishments in North Carolina, employing about 127,000 workers. In 1923 the entrance of large capital and the consequent centralization of industry had reduced the number of establishments to 2,670; but the number of workers employed had increased to 174,000.

Total wages paid by manufacturers in 1914 were $46,000,000; in 1923, $127,000,000. In 1914 the cost of materials consumed in manufactures was $170,000,000; in 1923, $416,000,000, while in the same period the value of the products increased from $289,000 to $951,000,000, and further increased in 1925 to $2,045,000,000.

Factory Over Farm.

In 1910 the value of all farm products in the state of North Carolina was nearly equal to the value of manufactured products. In 1925 the value of manufactures was twice as great as the value of farm products.

North Carolina now ranks second only to the northern state of Massachusetts in the textile industry. The value of its cotton goods rose from $72,680,000 in 1910 to an estimated $400,000,000 in 1925.

Florida Development.

A similar development, to a greater or less degree, took place in the other southern states. Even before the recent speculative land boom the state of Florida showed considerable economic development. The National City Bank has published the following table showing the development in Florida from 1900 to 1920 as compared with the same figures for the United States as a whole:

| Increase of: | Pop. | R.R. mileage | Products |
|---|---|---|---|
| Florida | 82% | 58% | 524% |
| U. S. | 30 | 21 | 447 |

The increase of industrial capital and the increase of population by migration from the north both have profound political effects in the south and, in fact, upon the whole country.

Split in Party Support.

Traditionally, thruout the so-called "solid south" the democratic party has been supreme in local politics. This supremacy was the result of the Civil War and the antagonism to the northern republican party. It was perpetrated partly out of fear of the newly enfranchised Negroes who naturally support the party of their liberators. Investment of northern and industrial capital is gradually breaking into the solidity of the southern democrats representing ancient sectionalism and the traditions of the old land owners.

The migration of northern businessmen, land speculators and petty bourgeois settlers from the northern states has contributed another weakening influence. Most of the great numbers migrating into Florida, for instance, come from the republican regions of Indiana, Iowa, Ohio and Pennsylvania.

The democratic party continues to control the south, except for a few border states, where the control shifts from one party to the other; but in maintaining the control the party has been compelled to compromise on all important issues (tariff, etc.) and the control is seriously threatened in the future.

Mellon Will Settle Chicago Railroad's Debt to Government

WASHINGTON, Nov. 15. — Secretary of the Treasury Mellon has indicated to the reorganization committee of the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul railroad his willingness to accept a plan considered for settlement of the corporation's $55,000,000 obligation to the government it was learned at the treasury today.

The railroad, it was understood, proposes to pay $35,000,000 in cash of liquidate the debt to the treasury, $17,000,000 to liquidate the debt to the director general's account and $3,000,000 in preferred stock of the reorganized railroad.

$50,000 Conspiracy Charge.

Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Auer were charged today with conspiracy in true bills voted by the grand jury for the alleged sale of approximately $50,000 worth of Florida land they claimed was near Daytona Beach, but which in reality was in the wilderness.

Drunken Driving—Hurt.

Two were injured and an unidentified man with whom they had been riding was dead today following an automobile crash against a viaduct. The injured, Miss Dorothy Sansen, 23 and Louis Parker, 24, were said

ART IS USED AS WEAPON, NEGRO WORKERS LEARN

Interesting Discussion at Open Forum

That the negroes are not only waking up to the understanding of the "finer things of life," but are also understanding the connection between those "finer things" and their everyday life—are realizing that everything, beauty, art, truth is connected with the "endless filthy struggle" was proven Sunday, Nov. 7, in the open forum meeting at 3358 Michigan under the auspices of the American Negro Labor Congress. Brother Isbell, the president of the local branch of the American Negro Labor Congress was chairman of the meeting.

Whitaman Voices Opinion.

Lovett Fort-Whiteman, the national organizer of the American Negro Labor Congress, spoke of the purpose of the open forum meetings. He mentioned the facts: That the forums are established as centers of enlightment in order that the Negro may find out the political, social and economic forces affecting them. The Negro, as all other oppressed races, try to "get away from themselves." The American Negro Labor Congress open forum meetings wish to bring them to view; the imaginative, the emotional and artistic sides of the Negro.

Wentworth and Ferro Speak.

Mr. Ferro, connected with the Art institute and Mr. Wentworth, novelist spoke on the subject "The Negro and Art." Mr. Wentworth, in a thrilling shaking voice, told us how art was a revelation of truth to him. "We learn things thru tragedies. For example, the Hay-market slaughter is one of a number of the kind of events that took me out of my religious govrement and led me to have a radical view on industrial life" concluded Mr. Wentworth.

Mr. Ferro, a timid artistic type of a person, spoke in a low effective voice. He stated that due to oppression the artistic ability the Negro turned into himself his finer emotions and ideas. To give an instance: The inhabitants of Egypt and Central Africa are remembered for their artistic contributions to the world. The Negro is a descendent of these two, yet the great majority of them do not appreciate art. In earlier years there was no distinction between white and colored artists. It is only in recent years that this difference is current it is probably due to our economic system.

CONCLUSION.

The discussions "On Negro and Art" that followed showed that all those present not only followed the lecture attentively, but also had thoughts of their own to offer. The general conclusions they came to ran be summed up in the following statements: That art is a link of all the chain of life. That, under the present system, even art is not a free field. The great artists are subsidized by the capitalists and, therefore, have to paint what pleases big finance. That is, even artists are tools of capitalism. Someday, however, art will be left a field free for originality and freedom.

Before adjourning the chairman announced that anyone can suggest topics for discussion. That it is their forum and they could do what they please. It meets every first and third Sunday.

Mrs. Dawes Condemns 'Peace Societies', Are 'Communistic', She Says

(Special to The Daily Worker)

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich., Nov. 15.—Club women were discussing today the strong criticism of Miss Jane Addams of Chicago and the activities of the Women's International Society for Peace and Freedom during an Armistice Day address by Mrs. Rufos A. Dawes, of Evanston, official of the National Federation of Women's Clubs.

Warning her audience against peace societies with "Communistic tendencies," Mrs. Dawes said she spoke freely "because Miss Addams herself does not conceal the fact she does not believe in our ideas of American loyalty."

Injured Motorman a Suicide.

STERLING, Ill., Nov. 15. — F. M. Smith, 58, veteran city and interurban motorman, committed suicide today sending a 38 caliber bullet into his forehead. Three years ago he lost a leg in a crash between two interurbans, one of which he was driving, between Sterling and Dixon. Continued pain from leg, together with poor business was given as a cause of the act.

WIN THE YOUNG WORKERS

CONDUCTED BY THE YOUNG WORKERS LEAGUE

Young Miners! Fight for Your Union!

By YOUNG COAL MINER

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., — In the coal mines there are thousands of young fellows employed. These young miners are members of the union, have the same privileges as the adult miners, etc. But when it comes to taking interest in the work of the union, or attend local meetings, they are not there. To them the union is merely something that they have to belong to in order to hold their jobs. When their local meets they are to be found in the poolrooms, anywhere but at the meetings. And up until now the large majority of them are a lot of deadwood taking no part to the work of the union. Worse then that they take no interest in the union.

This is very dangerous to the future existence of the U. M. W. A., if it is to exist as a fighting organization that it has been in the interests of the coal miners. There are many struggles ahead of us, some that threaten the very existence of our union. In order to exist, and fight the operators it will take every man in the union to remain loyal to what the union stands for. Yet we find a very important section of our membership, the youth taking very little interest in our union, going farther and farther away from us and that is very very danger ous.

That is why wherever there is a Save the Union ticket out in this election, you will find them paying special attention to the young miners and wherever possible you will find young miners on the Save the Union tickets, running for important and responsible offices in the union. That is one way of getting the young miners back into the work of the union.

And it is because the Save the Union committees recognize the fact that if the union of the miners is going to go on and fight for the interests of the coal miners the young miners will have to do their share.

Miners! you too will have to help to bring the young miners back into the work of the union. Tell every young miner that you work with every young miner that you know, what I. M. W. of A. stands for, the struggles that it has gone thru, the struggles that are ahead of us if our union is to be saved for the miners' interests. And if you do that you will be bringing into the union—new life a new fighting spirit that will greatly assist us in being able to withstand the attacks of the operators, and help us to go forward in our fight for more wages and better conditions for all miners.

WORKERS AIDED IN PURCHASING OF OWN HOMES

Wales Labor Government Forms Plan

By W. RANCIS AHERN
Federated Press.

SYDNEY, Australia, Nov. 15. — The labor government of the state of New South Wales is about to launch out on a home-building scheme for the workers. The government will follow the Queensland example of advancing to the workers almost the full amount of the purchase money of the homes, repayable by instalments, and hold as security a life policy of the worker covering the amount owing to the state. In this way the government will be secured and the dependents of the worker assured of a home free of all encumbrance in the event of his death.

Arranga Payments.

It is proposed that a deposit shall be paid on a sliding scale in accordance with the amount earned yearly by the workers, as follows: Yearly earnings to $1,250, no deposit; yearly earnings from $1,250 to $2,000, 5 per cent deposit; yearly earnings from $2,000 to $2,500, 10 per cent deposit; $2,500 to $3,750, 15 per cent deposit; $3,750 to $5,000, 20 per cent deposit; over $5,000, 25 per cent deposit.

It is also proposed that government lands shall be utilised as far as possible to carry out the scheme, and, so that the purchaser shall not be overloaded by heavy commitments, he shall have the option of leasehold tenure, with the right to convert into freehold at any time.

New York I. L. D. to Give Reception for Political Prisoner

NEW YORK, Nov. 15. — Charles Cline, a member of the I. W. W., whose release from 13 years of imprisonment in a Texas prison for participating in a Mexican rebel expedition to aid in the overthrow of the despotic rule in Mexico, will speak at a reception and dance to be given in his honor by the New York section of the International Labor Defense on Friday evening, November 19 at Manhattan Lyceum, 66 East 4th Street.

Everyone who attends this affair is assured of a good time. Dancing and refreshments until morning. Tickets at 50 cents are on sale at the I. L. D. office, 799 Broadway, Room 422, DAILY WORKER, 108 East 14th St., Room 32, and at the Jimmie Higgins Book Store, 127 University Place.

Fireman Gassed.

Four firemen were rushed to the hospital in a serious condition today from illuminating gas fumes following a fire.

They were: Battalion Chief Chris Peterman, Capt. George Gubbins and Firemen John Sullivan and Adward Halper. All are expected to recover.

Why don't you write it up? It may be interesting to other workers.

PORTER RISKS PENSION TO TELL TRUTH ABOUT P. R. COMPANY UNION

By ROBERT W. DUNN, Federated Press.

Si Taylor, born a slave in Virginia near where Lee surrendered to Grant, a porter for the Pullman Co. for nearly 40 years, has just been retired from service. He is one of the oldest and most militant members of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters. His joined after he failed to secure justice for Pullman porters within the company's plan of "employe representation."

Since the plan began in 1920, Si has served in the local committee of Pennsylvania Railroad Terminal District in New York City. He has also served three years on the higher or Zone General Committee. His knows Pullman company unionism inside out, for he has served on company union committees longer than any other porter.

White-haired but vigorous, Si Taylor tells of his experiences with the Pullman plan as interpreted and administered by superintendent, Jimmie Mitchell, whom the porters call the "Mussolini of the Pullman Co. in the Penn. Terminal District."

Mitchell, according to a Brotherhood pamphlet, has long been known to "bulldose, intimidate and punish unoffending and defenseless porters and maids." He once remarked that his ambition in life is "to keep the porters under his thumb."

"The company union committee meetings were controlled by Mitchell and associates," says Taylor. "If he didn't like the conduct of a porter he would hammer on the table with his fist and tell the cringing committeemen the man couldn't work for him any longer." Alone among the committeemen Si Taylor would speak up. Many times he saved the porters their jobs. Many times he stated on the thin edge of discharge for his action. But being a veteran porter and popular with the men, the company hesitated to fire him. On one occasion the $12,000 a year head of the company's Bureau of Industrial Relations called him into his office and remarked threateningly:

"Some of our old men have turned damn fool and joined the union. It won't do them any good, I'll warn them." Once when Taylor circulated a petition signed by some 200 porters asking for a wage increase, Mitchell told him: "You should have been retired long ago, instead of coming around asking for more wages." Mitchell failed to send the petition to the Pullman office in Chicago, but Taylor took it there himself on his next run.

"Were the ballots ever tampered with in company union elections?" I asked Taylor. "Well, we never got convincing legal proof, but we know that in one election where Roy Lancaster (then company union committee secretary, now Brotherhood secretary-treasurer) was running, 50 ballots bearing his name were erased and the name of his opponent—a company man —written in and counted. We also know that after the ballots are cast in Pennsylvania Terminal District, the ballot box is supposed to be put away in the locker of the assistant superintendent while the key to the box resides in his desk. The company bosses could change as many ballots as they cared to."

As an active member of the Zone General committee, Taylor fought hard for the porters but in the minutes of this company union committee his remarks in their behalf were always deleted. Company union committees never thought of holding a session unless the local company boss was present to open with prayer and steer decisions for the company. Taylor quickly learned that "superintendents don't like plain talk, especially from colored porters" and hence the company union was a farce.

Taylor fought hard against the discharge of Roy Lancaster when he was dropped from service on a frame-up charge after 17 years without a blot on his card. "I told the company then it was cutting off its nose to spite its face" in firing such in influential and respected porter. The company didn't listen. Lancaster was fired and a few weeks later the Pullman Porters Brotherhood got under way.

When Si Taylor was retired this month before his full 40 years' service were in, he told the company officials he expected it. "I've been here 39 years, 3 months and 3 weeks—24 years without a mark on my service card. He was informed that "the company has something against you," and told that company executives could withhold his pension of about $20 a month. In addition to this veiled threat, he was asked what he had to say about the charge that he had played close to A. Philip Randolph, general organizer for the Brotherhood. His reply was: "Don't say Randolph. Say all the officers of the Brotherhood. I'm a member of the union and proud of it." Whether his pension comes or not, Si Taylor declares he will stand by the new union till death."

N. Y. Paper Box Strikers Appeal to Negro Scabs

NEW YORK, Nov. 15. —(FP)— A special circular entitled An Appeal to All Colored Workers has been put out by the Paper Box Makers' Union under Manager Fred Caiola. The union is striking for recognition in all shops and improved conditions. Colored strike-breakers have been brought in in some cases and even made to assault white and colored pickets.

The union declares that it does not discriminate against colored workers in any way and protects them in their jobs in peace times when employers urge the union to remove colored workers from shops. Colored members of the union have been staunchly fighting with the rest for union conditions. The union circular appeals to non-union colored workers to consider that the employers will cast them aside when the strike is over, because they have no union to protect them, and urges all to join the union fight.

We will send sample copies of The DAILY WORKER to your friends—send us name and address.

WORKER THEATER ANNOUNCES FIRST PLAY IN GOTHAM

"Biggest Boob" to Be Shown December 4

NEW YORK, Nov. 15. — The first English language proletarian theater in America, the Workers' Theater, announced today that the opening date of its first production, "The Biggest Boob in the World," a fantastic labor comedy translated from the German by Upton Sinclair, will be December 4.

The play will be given in the Church of All Nations, 9 Second Ave. The author is Karl Wittvogel, whose play, "The Seven Telephone Calls" was prepared for production by the Greenvich Village Theater last year and dropped at the eleventh hour.

Destar Directs.

Jasper Deeter, actor and producer of the Provincetown Players, is directing the cast of workers. The scenery, designed by Hugo Gellert, Louis Lozowick, and William Gropper, will be in the modern Russian style, broad, simple and grotesque.

Florence Rauh, executive secretary of the Workers' Dramatic League, announced that 100 seats a night will be given to the strikers of New York and vicinity. The play will be repeated in the Church of All Nations on Dec. 5 and 10, and will then be taken to the halls of various labor organizations in Greater New York.

Started by Gold.

The Workers' Theater was organized last spring with Michael Gold of the New Masses, as the guiding spirit. A group of workers, actors, and stage technicians was assembled, and a studio at 64 Washington Square South secured for holding dancing and acting classes, as well as lectures by such celebrated critics, writers, and artists as John Howard, J. P. McEvoy, Mossaiye Olgin, Louis Lozowick, Hugo Gellert and John Dos Passos.

Spirit of Labor.

The aim of the theater, according to Michael Gold, is to present to American audiences the spirit of labor in drama that will touch closely the life of the workers. Gold contends that the American and European stage is decadent, that it panders to the taste of a small wealthy and effete audience, and therefore has no significance in the life of the nation. He plans to model the Workers' Theater here after some of the newer theaters of Russia, which, according to Huntley Carter, noted British critic, are now the most vigorous and alive in the world.

Among the plays which the workers' group plans to produce shortly in New York are Upton Sinclair's "Singing Jailbirds," George Kaiser's "Gas," Ernst Toller's "Machine Wreckers," Meierhold's "China Roar," and Schofield's "Men at War."

Denied New "Plot" on Benito.

ROME, Nov. 15. — The government today denied absolutely that there was any grounds for reports circulated in the United States yesterday that a new attempt had been made to assassinate Premier Mussolini.

KELLOGG DOESN'T GET RISE OUT OF AMERICAN LABOR

Tried to Bring About Mexican Break

By LAURENCE TODD
Federated Press.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 15. — (FP) — Secretary of State Kellogg appears to have made no progress in alienating the support of the American Federation of Labor from the Mexican Regional Federation of Labor by his announcement that Mme. Kollontai, new Soviet minister to Mexico, was too dangerous a Communist to be permitted to pass thru this country. Relations between the A. F. of L. and the labor movement beyond the Rio Grande are undisturbed. Reports that a new and threatening note has been delivered by Kellogg to President Calles have served only to renew the friendly cooperation between the labor movements in the two republics. Such is the opinion at the office of the Pan-American Federation of Labor.

No Investigation Yet.

It is true that the recent convention of the A. F. of L., striving to ever any discussion of the struggle between church and state in Mexico, did adopt a resolution calling for investigation into the facts as to any financial backing of the Mexican labor movement by the Mexican government. But that resolution did not specify any machinery for making the inquiry, and up to date no step has been taken to send an American inquiry committee to Mexico to scan the moral record of the "from."

Parallel an A. F. of L.

Possible reasons—aside from common sense and courtesy—for forbearing this proposed investigation might include the record of the A. F. of L. itself during the world war. At that time its policies became so intertwined with those of the Wilson administration, and so many of its leaders became members of government boards and commissions, that anti-labor employers on the one hand and anti-war radicals on the other became alarmed at the extent of this alliance. There was even established an American Alliance for labor and democracy, headed by Samuel Gompers, which secured with the president's secret warfund thru the committee on public information. The organization furnished speakers from among labor union officials, for all kinds of war-time efforts to mobilize public sentiment. It was especially active against the People's Council of America, which sought to secure from the American government, upon its entrance into the war, a definite statement of war aims in order to hasten peace discussions.

Sass Strategy.

The A. F. of L. is accordingly inclined to regard the relations of the Mexican labor movement as strictly and purely a domestic affair, to be considered as local strategy, in the same way that the pro-war actions of the A. F. of L. in 1917-18 served its own interests and the current sentiment of its membership. In the same way, the presence in Mexico of a Soviet envoy will not drive the A. F. of L. chiefs to any break with Mexican labor, but will be viewed as a necessary evil, under Mexico's political circumstances. The A. F. of L. remains anti-Soviet, but will continue to point out that the Communists have no influence in Mexico despite the presence of a Soviet envoy there for the past two years.

THE SUNDAY WORKER

CRIB A NEW NOVEL by Charles Yale Harrison

(Copyright, 1928, by Daily Worker)

"Is she insane?"

"It's a reaction from her life with her husband; he was a profligate, and so she's a miser. They tell a story about him, he used to pay his hands in cash, and would drive about the country in a buckboard with little canvas bags, each containing a thousand dollars in gold. One time he dropped one bag and didn't miss it; one of his hands brought it to him, and old Hank looked at the man with contempt, and put his hand into his pocket and pulled out a half dollar. 'Here,' he said, 'here's the price of a rope; go buy one and hang yourself!'"

"So now she's taking care of the money!"

"Exactly. She pays all her bills by registered mail, and preserves the receipts and insists on having a return receipt from the post office, and when that comes she files the two together, and when the receipted bill comes back, she files and indexes that. She won't let a book-keeper do it, because you can't find any employes who can be trusted to attend to this properly. She spends hours poring over her business papers, and discovering people's carelessness and incompetence. She employs lawyers, and then she employs other lawyers to check them up, and then a detective agency to find out how the lawyers are selling her out. She's convinced the county authorities are persecuting her, and that they're all a lot of crooks—she mayn't be so wrong in that. She won't let a book-keeper do it, because you can't find anything about the house; dusting the furniture and nagging at the servants because they won't take care of things."

The two walked on down the beach. "Up over that hill," said Vee, "lives old Hank's sister; he left her part of the estate, and the two women have quarrelled about the boundary line and he water-rights. Tessie Thatcher's an old rake—hires men to work for her, and makes them her lovers, and writes them tooth-some letters, and then they try to blackmail her, and she sells them to go to hell, and they bring suit for unpaid salaries, and sell the letters to the newspapers, and they're all published; but Tessie doesn't care, she knows that nothing can hurt her social position, she's too rich; and besides, she's an old booze-fighter, and knows how to forget troubles."

"My God!" exclaimed Bunny. "What property does to people!"

"To women especially," said Vee. "It's too much for their nerves. I look at the old women I meet, and think, which of them do I want to be? And I say, Oh, my God! and jump into my car and drive fifty miles an hour to get away from my troubles, and from the people who want to tell me theirs!"

"Is that what you were doing when the judge sent you to jail for a week?" laughed Bunny.

"No," she answered, "that was a publicity stunt, the bright idea of my advertising man."

CHAPTER XIV
The Star
I

Bunny went back to Angel City and discovered that if he wanted to follow Vee Tracy's program of dodging other people's troubles, he had made a fatal mistake to get interested in a labor college. He went to see Mr. Irving, and found the young instructor up to his ears in the growing pains and disputes of the labor movement. All Summer long his job had been interviewing leaders and sympathizers, and trying to get them together on a program. He had managed to get the college started, with three teachers and about fifty pupils, mostly coming at night; but it was all precarious—the difficulties seemed overwhelming.

There were a handful of progressive and clear-minded men and women in the labor movement; and then there was the great mass of the bureaucracy, dead from the ears up; also a little bunch of reckless radicals, who would rather have no bread at all than half a loaf. The old line leaders would have nothing to do with the college if these "reds" got in; on the other hand, if you excluded the "reds," they would set up a clamor, and a lot of genuine liberals would say, what was the use of a new college that was so much like the old one?

The labor movement had its traditions, having to do with getting shorter hours and more pay for the workers; and the old officials were bound by that point of view. The average union official was a workingman who had escaped from day labor by the help of a political machine inside the union. Anything new meant to him the danger of losing his desk job, and having to go back to hard work. He had learned to negotiate with the employers and smoke their cigars, and in a large percentage of cases he was spending more money than his salary. Here in Angel City, the unions had a weekly paper, that lived by soliciting advertising from business men—and what was that but a respectable form of graft? When you took any fighting news to an editor of that sort, he would say the dread work, "Bolshevism," and throw your copy into the trash-basket.

STRIKE STRATEGY

By WILLIAM Z. FOSTER

ARTICLE XVI

THE FIGHT AGAINST THE TERROR

The employers use many weapons to crush strikes; starvation, demoralizing propaganda, playing off one section of workers against another, bribing of leaders, etc., and to all these methods and interspersed with them they add sheer terrorism. With plain force they seek to break the workers' ranks and drive them back to work. They always have their own private armies of plug-uglies and provocateurs who systematically terrorize strikers. But their great reliance is on the state.

The state is the strong right arm of the capitalist class, the great guardian of their class interests. They control and dominate it from top to bottom. It is ever at their service, with its hostile, anti-labor legislation, its injunction breeding courts, its army, its state police, its deputy sheriffs, etc. The degree to which the employers use this great instrument of legalized violence against the workers depends upon the urgency of their need.

If the strike is a small one they may confine their violence to the thuggery of their private plug-uglies and local police. If the strike is more important they will call in the courts, with their train of injunctions, jails, and the rest of it. And if the strike is a great one of far-reaching political significance they will use the troops if need be to crush it. Ever and always when they want it they use the state against the workers. Their use of its armed force is limited only by the degree of their necessity.

The question of fully meeting the use of the state power of the capitalists against the workers in strikes and other struggles raises the central problem of the whole movement, the problem of the overthrow of the capitalist system. So long as the capitalists control the state just that long will they use its forces militantly against the workers and in defense of their profit-making system. Hence, the workers, to finally solve the problem, must get control of the state themselves. This will inevitably involve a bitter struggle for power between the two classes. But a fundamental discussion of this basic problem lies beyond the scope of this booklet, which is to elaborate a system of strike strategy applicable under present conditions.*

COURAGE AND INTELLIGENCE

Although the complete solution of the use of the state and the employers' private forces against the workers awaits the achievements of power by the latter, nevertheless much can be done under present conditions to ward off, counter, prevent, and weaken such attacks by the employers. The strike strategist must learn to move courageously and intelligently in this more crucial matter. The history of the American labor movement is replete with the militant defense made by workers driven desperate by fierce employers' attacks, such as in Homestead, Colorado, West Virginia, McKees Rocks, Herrin, etc.

When confronted with such open ruptures, the left wing must stir the whole labor movement to its depths to land its maximum support, moral, financial, industrial, and political to the attacked workers. If this is done the capitalists will often not consider the game worth the candle, to provoke a costly upheaval among the broad masses for the sake of brutally oppressing one small section. A skillfully cultivated "public opinion" will, under existing American conditions, help to meet such situations. Liberal organizations will help to create this. The employers in Passaic, for example, learned that their tear bombs and police clubbings, in the face of a thoroughly exposure, and a determined strike leadership, were not breaking the strike but putting life into it.

STRIKE INJUNCTIONS AND NO-STRIKE-LAWS

Arbitrary restrictions upon the right to strike, such as the issuance of injunctions, adoption of Industrial Court no-strike laws, etc., the workers can break down by a display of militancy. These are nettles. Touch them lightly and they scorch you, but grasp them firmly and they lose their virulence.

The hesitating way the conservatives handle these issues only strengthens the evils. Mass violation of such anti-strike legislation and abuses is the way to deal with them. No injunction deprives the right of picketing can stand in the face of a rigid determination of strikers to picket notwithstanding. The collapse of the Kansas Industrial Court when Howat's miners struck in spite of it was typical of what happens to such tyrannical laws generally when confronted by a militant labor movement.

The time was when the A. F. of L. advocated officially the application of such aggressive tactics in cases of injunctions. But in these days of intensified class collaboration the bureaucratic policy grows weak and insipid. Now its fight against injunctions amounts to little more than sentimental protests and fruitless attempts to line up "Labor's friends" in the two old parties to vote against the right of the courts to issue injunctions in labor disputes.

FREE SPEECHES

Similar militant tactics can be used with good effect when the companies, through their city government agencies, attempt to prohibit free speech and the holding of public meetings during strikes or organizing campaigns. The thing to do is to hold them anyhow and to go to jail if necessary. A well-waged free speech fight is never lost. Not even in the black steel districts of Pennsylvania, officials or stockholders, could they prevent us from having meetings in the campaign of 1918-19. They prohibited them in Homestead, Braddock, Rankin, McKeesport, Duquesne, and other cities, but in each case we defeated them by taking to the streets in spite of their official ukases.

Free speech fights are an excellent means to unite and inspire the workers in such situations, provided the campaigns are conducted so that the workers realize their direct connection with the wage struggle. Care must be taken not to precipitate such free speech fights prematurely, before the workers realize what is at stake, else they will not support them.

The employers have a keen sense of the importance of militant working class leaders in the struggle. Hence, a settled policy of theirs is to arbitrarily remove these militants wherever they get a chance. The railroading to jail of such labor fighters has long since been a favorite weapon of American employers. The frame-up and the hired jury are their means to this end. The cases of Tom Mooney, W. K. Billings, Sacco, Vanzetti, Cline, and Rangel are only a few of scores who have paid the penalty.

This line of attack, the crippling of our leadership, is one that must not be allowed to go on unchecked. Under existing circumstances the best protection that can be thrown around them is a wide and bitter fight to arouse the working class in their defense, when any are taken. This agitation must not flag until they are finally released. These outrageous arrests and imprisonments can be made the occasions of such great upheavals and protests among the workers, that the capitalists will often be compelled to slow up if not abandon altogether their persecution plans. The labor movement must militantly defend its fighting leaders. It must be organized definitely to this end. The organization best fitted for such purpose is the International Labor Defense.

*Worker students, to learn the role of the state in the class struggle, should read "The State and Revolution," by Lenin.

Brewing a New War

Italy, France, Turkey and Jugo-Slavia are mobilising, according to dispatches.

Relations between France and Italy are extremely strained. Mussolini's plot to create friction between France and Spain by organizing so-called uprisings in Catalonia and then exposing them thru the medium of fascist secret service men has resulted in France withdrawing its tentative agreement to surrender the Syrian mandate to Italy.

Unable to display the promised colonial concession before the Italian people as an achievement Mussolini takes up the sword against Turkey once more.

Jugo-Slavia, alarmed at the war-like preparations in neighboring countries, and having an ax of her own to grind in the shape of a desire for unrestricted outlet to the sea, puts her war machinery into motion and Greece also will not remain inactive in the face of hostile demonstrations.

The Balkans and the eastern Mediterranean area are boiling again with fascist Italy as the center of the disturbance.

Even the capitalist press is speculating now on how long the Mussolini regime can last. John Steele, writing for the Chicago Tribune from Rome, says:

After Benito Mussolini, what?

This is the question all Italy and most of the rest of the world is asking more persistently since the last attempt on the duce's life . . .

Premier Mussolini's death is an event that must be envisaged as possible any moment. . . . It must be remembered that there is no other form of protest possible in Italy against the fascist regime . . . . since the establishment of fascism thousands of socialists, liberals and other dissidents have lost their lives, property and health at the hands of fascist mobs. . . . . THERE ARE HUNDREDS, PERHAPS THOUSANDS, OF YOUNG MEN WHO WOULD CONSIDER IT NOT ONLY AN ACT OF FILIAL PIETY, BUT A PATRIOTIC DUTY TO KILL PREMIER MUSSOLINI. (Emphasis ours.)

Typical of the expressions in other capitalist organs, the above shows that it is no longer possible to conceal the fact that all of Italy is a Mount Aetna likely to burst forth at any moment.

The history of dictators of the Mussolini type afflicted with a combination of the Napoleon and Ceasar complexes, shows that they have always resorted to attempts at foreign conquest as their power waned in order to make themselves symbolical of the nationalist pride of the country.

Mussolini will be no exception.

His death or dethronement will be sudden or else the fascist organization will provoke a war which will be quite in line with its imperialist policy.

It is quite likely that war would have broken out before this if it were not for the fact that the impoverished European nations have not the financial strength to wage a major struggle without putting themselves more completely at the mercy of American imperialism. But even with this negative factor given its full importance no one reading the news from Europe can avoid the conclusions that war is nearer than at any time since the signing of the armistice.

And an armistice it was—a temporary cessation of hostilities until new forces could be rallied and new alignments made.

But in the welter of darkness which envelops western and southeastern Europe there is at least one ray of light. It is the league of peoples which seems to be making substantial progress under the leadership of the Soviet Union and which at least tentatively includes Turkey, Persia, Afghanistan and the new and powerful China which is rising steadily on the ruins of feudal reaction and imperialist oppression.

The spokesmen of capitalism would have us believe that the question must be put on Asia versus Europe and in the event of an important offensive started by Mussolini or some other representative of reaction will try to raise the bugaboo of Asiatic domination.

But class conscious workers know and the rest of the working class will learn that the question must be put in the form of a struggle of the working class and the colonial peoples against world imperialism which is led now by the workers' and peasants' government of the Soviet Union.

GERMAN NATIONALISTS INDIGNANT AS EMBASSY CELEBRATES ARMISTICE

BERLIN, Nov. 15 — Nationalists were aroused today over the fact that the German embassy in Washington displayed German flags on Armistice Day, and the local Anzeiger is bitterly attacking the government and Ambassador von Maltzan.

"If it is true, it is a most ignominous self-humiliation," declared the Local Anzeiger. "Our former enemies were commemorating Armistice Day not only because it marked the end of the war, but equally because it meant the defeat of the reich, unconditional surrender to arrogant victors and humiliation by the most spiteful and criminal peace treaty in the world's history. The outrage of Nov. 11 is burning the hearts of Germans today as it did eight years ago."

The Local Anzeiger has urged the foreign office to take action against the embassy in Washington but it is understood that the foreign office supports the embassy, taking the attitude that the display of the German flags was merely an act of courtesy.

Filipino Legislature Fights Dictatorship Established by Wood

MANILA, Nov. 15.—Altho the legislature is officially adjourned, all the members were still in Manila today and were casting about for a method of checkmating Governor General Wood's move of abolishing the board of control.

Representative Isaac Lacson proposed that the legislature refuse to meet in the future.

Wood indicated there would be no radical changes at the present time in administering to the government-owned properties.

Before the board of control was abolished Wood and Quezon had already decided to dispose of the government-owned cement plant and had agreed not to sink additional money in the government coal mines, which have already lost more than $8,000,000.

It was disclosed that Wood cannot dispose of the government railroad or close the national bank without the consent of the legislature.

FIVE MINERS DIE IN GAS BLAST IN W. VIRGINIA

Ten Escape as Others Are Injured

(Special to The Daily Worker)

MOUNDSVILLE, W. Va., Nov. 15—Five miners were killed and two others seriously injured in an explosion of gas at the Mound shaft of the Glendale Gas Coal company at Glendale, near here today. The bodies of three men were recovered.

Two Rushed to Hospitals.

Seventeen men were in the mine at the time of the explosion. Ten escaped when the blast shook the shaft, and two others were found, badly injured, by the first rescue crew. They were rushed to a Moundsville hospital.

The dead: Walter Fogle; Rueben Kirkhart; Mike Kovack; Thomas Rozarsen and J. E. Stefel. The bodies of Regerson and Stefel have not been recovered.

James Lemasters and H. M. Cumberlidge were seriously injured.

Claim "Ignerance of Cause."

Preliminary investigation failed to determine the cause of the explosion, officials stating that the mine had been "rock dusted" to prevent explosions of coal dust, shortly before the disaster.

RYAN ATTACKS REPORT OF N. Y. SCHOOL BOARD

Demands Promotion of Radical Teacher

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, Nov. 15. The report of the board of superintendents to the board of education, which attempted to explain why Dr. Abraham Lefkowitz, high school teacher accused of being a radical, was not promoted, was vigorously attacked by Joseph P. Ryan, president of the Central Trades and Labor Council.

Ryan is a member of the Committee of One Hundred on Intellectual Freedom for Teachers, which was formed when the school board denied promotion to three teachers, including Dr. Lefkowitz, because of their "radical ideas."

Ryan declared that "if Dr. Lefkowitz is capable of holding a position in the public school system as a teacher he is capable of being a first assistant.

"Associate Superintendent Mandel in his report charged Dr. Lefkowitz with certain acts of activities back in 1919. Why should he be denied promotion now because of things that happened seven years ago?" Ryan asked.

The committee of one hundred, which includes other labor officials besides Ryan, intends to carry on the fight against the board's ruling.

Says Peace Depends Upon Amity Between Britain and America

(Special to The Daily Worker)

LONDON, Nov. 15.—World peace can only result from close friendship between Great Britain and the United States, declared Premier Bruce of Australia at the imperial conference here. He said he meant by Great Britain, not just England, but all of the dominions.

"With that mutual understanding and respect which I am convinced can be brought about between the peoples of the great American nation and the British empire the world's peace can be assured in the future and the way paved for progressive alleviation of the hideous burden of armaments which today is pressing so heavily on all nations," he said.

Bruce's comments were received rather coldly by the press. The Morning Post remarked that "nothing seemed to result from co-operation with the United States." It cited the United States' gain in trade in China at the expense of Britain, and the recent rubber reprisals.

Reveals That Court of Arbitration Robs Workers of Huge Sums

MELBOURNE, Australia, Nov. 15—(FP)—A sensational announcement was made in the federal arbitration court at Melbourne by Deputy-President Judge Webb. He said the formula on which the court based the basic wage from time to time was wrong and that as a result the workers were being penalized. It was almost impossible to estimate the sum lost to the workers in wages, but it was stupendous.

The announcement has caused a protest from industrial leaders, who bitterly complain that it shows that for years past the workers have been systematically robbed by the juggling of the cost of living figures prepared

Everyone Must Bow to Fascist Emblems Is Latest Decree

ROME, Nov. 15—An order making it compulsory to lift the hat as a token of respect when processions carrying the fascist legion or standards of fascist organizations pass thru the streets has been issued by Secretary General Turati. The order is applicable to foreigners as well as natives. Ignorance of the law will not serve as an excuse from punishment, it was declared.

110 Years Old, Still Serving.

KREMENCHUG, Ukraine, Nov. 15.—One hundred and ten years old, and having served under five czars, Ivan Shtcharbin is now appointed chairman of the permanent congress of building workers. He has been on the job for the past 97 years, and it is declared, never missed a day. Schtcharbin has been married four times and has 26 living children.

SHAW 'SUCCUMBS' TO OFFERS FOR MOVIE RIGHTS

Changes His Mind on Commercialism

LONDON, Nov. 16.—The American films have finally captured George Bernard Shaw. For a fee of $100,000 the veteran writer is about to sign a contract for the filming of "Cashel Byron's Profession," a novel of prize fighting written more than 40 years ago. Shaw says he never thinks of the book "without a shudder at the narrowness of my escape from being a successful novelist at the age of 26."

Tunney to Star.

Gene Tunney, world's heavyweight champion, may be the hero, with Jack Dempsey, the man he dethroned, as the villain. "Cashel Byron's Profession" was Shaw's fourth novel. It was written in 1882 but was not published for six years, because no publisher would accept it.

Razzes World.

The story first saw the light of day in the now defunct socialist weekly "Today," running serially because Shaw, being connected with the periodical, furnished the copy free of charge.

It has since been published in book form, but without profit to Shaw until the present opportunity arose to sell it, now in the movies.

In the preface to a recent edition Shaw wrote:

"Blame me not if these exercises of a raw apprentice break loose again and insist on their right to live. The world never did know chalk from cheese in matters of art, and never will since it is only the young and the old who have time to read, the real being too busy living. My exercises may be more fit for the market than my masterpieces."

Introduce Diary and Love Letters in Case of Hall-Mills Murder

COURT HOUSE, Somerville N. J., Nov. 15—The Rev. Edward Wheeler Hall's diary and several love letters in which he told of his great love for Mrs. Eleanor Mills, his choir singer, were admitted as evidence in the Hall-Mills murder trial today over vigorous objections by the defense counsel.

Mrs. Mills' scarf was also entered as evidence, the scarf, the diary and the letters were found in the Mills' house several weeks after Rev. Hall and Mrs. Mills were shot to death in Dreammere's lane four years ago.

The defense objected to their introduction on the ground that they were not found at the scene of the crime.

The diary is a little brown notebook. The letters were scrawled on many loose pages, all of which were entered as evidence.

Judge Charles W. Parker ruled that the jury should be given an opportunity to see the letters and the diary. He thought it was "competent" evidence. The letters showed "motive" and were competent on that point, he ruled.

Community Chests to Raise $57,000,000 in 1926 for Charity Work

NEW YORK, Nov. 15.—The American Association for community organization today announced that final reports from 29 cities participating in the community chest campaign, indicated a general increase in community giving over last year. The 29 cities this year raised $11,468,000 against $10,481,000 in 1925.

Thirty other cities which have completed their campaigns but have not yet reported are expected to add about $2,700,000. November community chests, beginning this week, will aim at a total of $25,000,000, bringing the autumn campaign total for 156 cities to about $40,000,000. Spring campaigns will be held in about 160 other cities to raise an additional $17,000,000, which would bring this year's total for 310 cities to $57,000,000.

so large importance to the union and its progress. The majority of the joint board is in favor of the abolition on the ground of economy. It is a book-keepers' job and the joint board feels that a book-keeper can do it much better than a cloak-maker.

False Issue.

But because a right-wing member happens to hold the position, this false issue is made into a major one and an occasion for the calling of an unauthorized "mass meeting." The call for the meeting was signed by five right-wing members of the joint board and made to appear as if it were an official circular issued by the joint board.

Long before the last election, when the right-wing leadership was swept from office by an overwhelming vote of the membership, the left-wingers, at that time not represented on the joint board, advocated the abolition of the office of secretary-treasurer on the same ground of economy that they make now.

Referendum.

But feeling that the membership might misunderstand its intentions, the joint board decided to submit the matter to a referendum vote of the members of the union. This vote will be taken on Tuesday. But in spite of the fact that this referendum vote is to be launched, the right wing officials call a meeting in the nature of a protest against the "high-handed" manner in which they claim the joint board is acting in the matter. It is quite plain that these discredited officials have the sole object in mind of regaining the posts that they mismanaged and were ousted from by a big membership vote.

Issue Circular.

In order that a misunderstanding may not arise in the minds of the membership concerning the question now before the union, the joint board has issued the following circular to the members of the union in Chicago which follows in part and which significantly opens with an appeal for unity against the bosses, a thing which, quite characteristically, the right-wing overlooks.

"Your joint boards calls upon you to unite against your common enemy, the bosses.

"For the first time in the history of our union a matter of this sort is being presented to the membership for a referendum vote. This is in line with the general policies of the present administration and in contrast to the former administration who had imposed upon the membership its will by way of force.

Deciding Final.

Your decision will be carried out to the last letter whether it is for our proposal or against it. We are making this proposal because we believe it is for the best interest of our union and membership.

Attack Administration.

"Yet some of our members, mostly composed of former officials of the union, who by overwhelming majority of the membership have been voted out of leadership, find it necessary to launch an attack against the present administration.

"And the Jewish Daily Forward has issued the slogan of 'Save the Union.' The very same people who carried thru the expulsion policy, they who spent hundreds and thousands of dollars without the consent of the membership, dare to raise the issue of 'capturing the treasury.'

Joint Board United.

"Tho they try their utmost to create the impression that there is friction in the joint board, nevertheless it is a fact that the joint board is united in all the major problems confronting it and doing all in its power to better the conditions of the membership. Those who sign the leaflet have always handicapped the activities of the union in every way possible, and their present call is issued against the joint board and consequently against the union."

The circular was signed for the joint board by E. Nadle, Secretary and B. Soll, Chairman.

KANSAS CITY, Nov. 15.—The Federal Trust Company here, with deposits of $2,000,000, has been closed by order of the board of governors. The bank is now in the hands of the state finance commissioners.

President F. E. Laughlin blamed heavy runs of depositors during the past two weeks for the action. A general banking business was done by the company.

heard complimentary remarks on her appearance from people who understand why she is here and why she is anywhere. Politicians—particularly aldermen—who expect to get re-elected are a bit nervous about appearing before Marie with teeth untarnished by tobacco juice. It is sometimes more profitable for a politician—a capitalist politician—to be seen squirting a stream of Virginia mixture into the gutter than to be photographed endangering the usefulness of his suspenders bowing to a queen. Capitalist politicians are utilitarians.

WHY did Marie come to the United States? Some say to prepare the ground for a loan. I would not be surprised. And if that is true, what American capitalist or capitalist group is or are liable to benefit from the loan? And why is it that a country like the United States that led the world in conferring the order of the iron-nailed boot on monarchism, is today the only country in the world that receives a representative of monarchism with as much enthusiasm as it would receive a first class pugilist?

* * *

THIS is a very interesting question. I think questions are usually as conducive to achieving results as explanations. In Berlin, a crowd unites in the hissing of the crown prince that is that yell in front of a department store. So they hand out the old raspberry and give it to the prince. Because they have come to the conclusion that kings and princes are a lot of hums and worse. Here in America it happens that most people either have some kind of a job or else live on somebody else who has.

* * *

IT is very hard to believe that the American masses should be indifferent to an incident that brings out in bold relief the difference between the way a royal parasite lives and the standard of living of those who produce the worlds' wealth. Yet, only Communists and their followers make any attempt to bring this lesson home to the masses. I believe that it has already been amply proven that the American people are not sympathetic to Marie's visit, yet but for the protests of the Communists the American masses would not know that this bawdy queen is partly responsible for the misery of the Roumanian people.

Use Bombing Plane in Williamson Co. Gang Warfare Now

HARRISBURG, Ill., Nov. 15.—An innovation in Williamson county's gang warfare occurred when an airplane flew over Charley Birger's roadhouse, situated on the hard road between here and Marion, three bombs being dropped. One of the bombs exploded in the roadhouse rushed out, set up machine guns and began firing at the plane which was flying low. The plane rose quickly and got out of range. The exploded bomb fell about 100 feet from the house.

After making one circle of the building the plane disappeared. The two unexploded bombs are being preserved by Birger's men. Birger at his home this afternoon showed considerable excitement and uneasiness over this method of his enemies.

WORKERS AT GARY COLD SHOULDER QUEEN

Current Events

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY

HENRY FORD is not going to worry about a wolf at the door because he has decided to give some of his employes six days' pay for five days' work. When the announcement was first made by Henry's press agent there was considerable chuckling in certain sections of the trade union movement and equally vigorous furrowing of brows in certain capitalist quarters. But Henry knew his onions and even tho he does not encourage the odor of garlic in his factory, when he computes his yearly earnings he is quite satisfied that anything he has given away for nothing can be pawned for little money.

IN an interview with Carrol Binder of the Chicago Daily News, Ford frankly admitted that before any of his workers receives his pay check that worker must line Henry's pocket, so that Henry can afford to spend half a million dollars on the queen of Roumania or enjoy the luxury of proving that most of the ills that American flesh is heir to can be attributed to the Hebrews. Which is equal to saying that Henry is giving nothing of his own away. On the contrary, the workers are giving of their sweat and riches to Henry, Henry being wise enough to knew how to pull off the trick.

THERE is quite a strong movement on in England to convince the working classes that the cause of their trouble is the shortsightedness of the British workers. There is a so-called labor mission in this country right now from England, with the object of finding out how the American capitalists manage to manage their wage slaves. One member of the mission is no other than Ernest Bevin, who was the "Napoleon" of the British general strike. Bevin is hobnobbing with a couple of "airs", and those "airs" are using Bevin as a fig-leaf to cover their capitalist nakedness. They believe that Bevin will be able to convince the British workers that hard work will mean prosperity for them.

IS it surprising that the British miners are flocking to anti-labor banks to be supported to any appreciable extent only by the Russian workers? Ernest Bevin was the outstanding leader of the British general strike.

MINERS TO ACT ON NEW TERMS OF GOVERNMENT

Delegate Conference in Close Vote

(Special to The Daily Worker)

LONDON, Nov. 16. — "They are the most abominable terms ever put before a body of men. They could not possibly be worse," A. J. Cook, secretary of the Miners' Federation of Great Britain told the members of the delegate conference of the union meeting in London to consider the last government proposals.

With the Welsh and Yorkshire districts talking and voting against the government proposals under the leadership of Cook, a vote of 432,000 against 352,000 carried a motion referring the question to a vote of the districts with a recommendation to accept the government's basis of settlement.

The government proposals are briefly:

District settlements involving longer hours.

Standard district agreements for three years.

A national tribune to accept and decide on appeals from either side.

The owners' portion of mine profits to be not more then 15 per cent and net less than 13 per cent.

Close Division.

The delegates who spoke in favor of referring the matter to the miners argued that they were doubtless the best terms possible under the circumstances and that the miners are growing weaker all the time.

The South Wales and Yorkshire delegates were in favor of continuing the fight. They pointed out that the acceptance of this settlement would mean the surrender of the national unions and the complete defeat of the miners in the struggle, and would force the union to divide its forces in a struggle against the nationally united owners, backed by the government.

Last Word With Miners

It is of importance that the vote was not taken on an individual basis, but by districts, thus eliminating a very large minority in the bigger districts.

SCIENTISTS PROPOSE MAKING OLD NEPTUNE SCAB ON COAL BARONS

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PARIS, Nov. 16.—(tns) — The tireless energy of the ocean may be harnessed and made to produce motive power, by the utilization of the difference in temperature between the surface of the sea and the lower depths, according to an announcement made before the Academy of Sciences here by Georges Claude, inventor of liquid air, and Paul Boucheret, a well-known scientist.

The theory of these men is that the tepid surface water of the ocean might be boiled in a vacuum and the cooler water of the depths used for condensation, thus producing steam. They claim that the sea could be made to produce 400,000 kilowatts of electrical energy per 1,000 cubic metars of water per second.

CUBA SEVERS ITS RELATIONS WITH URUGUAY

(Special to The Daily Worker)

HAVANA, Cuba, Nov. 16.—Diplomatic relations between Cuba and Uruguay have been broken at the command of President Machado of Cuba, who has ordered the Cuban minister to Uruguay to return to Havana and the legation at Montevideo closed.

The break was said to have been caused by the refusal of Uruguay to accept the remarks made by its delegate to the league of nations in objecting to Cuba becoming a member.

The delegate declared before the league that Cuba was a dependency of the United States under the existing Platt amendment. President Machado issued an ultimatum to Uruguay and when there was no reply he recalled his minister to Montevideo and closed the legation.

Seek Murderer of Two.

SIOUX CITY, Iowa, Nov. 16.—Authorities today were searching the countryside ten miles north of Scotland, S. D, 70 miles northwest of here, for the person or persons who last night murdered two and wounded three people at a farm near Scotland.

GARIBALDI GOES TO PRISON WITH COLONEL MACIA

French Fear Results of Open Trial

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PARIS, Nov. 16. — Colonel Ricciotti Garibaldi, nephew of the great Italian liberator, and accused of being an agent of fascism fomenting false plots against Italy on French soil while posing as a leader of the anti-fascist movement, has been sent to Santé prison to await trial for secreting arms and ammunition in France.

With him and on the same charge goes Colonel Macia, leader of the Catalan revolutionary movement against the Spanish directorate of Primo de Rivera. The two met in the office of the French secret police Garibaldi was absahed as he confronted Colonel Macia. The latter calmly smoked a cigarette and refused to speak to the Italian, who looked at the floor.

Macia's Denial.

Macia denies any connection with Garibaldi and states that the plot against the Spanish directorate that was nipped by French police was of his own making. But the police seem to have gathered sufficient evidence to show that the Italians who were involved in the Catalan attempt, were inspired by Garibaldi, himself alleged to be acting under orders of Italian fascisti.

Serious Affairs.

The French cabinet looks upon the trial of Garibaldi as a very serious affair of state. The fascisti have failed to satisfactorily prove that Garibaldi was not inspired by the fascisti in hatching so-called plots against the life of Mussolini from French soil. The French government is fearful lest Garibaldi was in the pay of the fascisti and fomented the plots, the details of which were known to Italian police, for the purpose of stirring up discord between France and Italy. This attempt is explained on the ground that Mussolini and his fascisti party are anxious to foment a war spirit to save themselves from a political debacle in their own country by

106 Members Failed to Help Keep The Daily Worker

By C. E. RUTHENBERG, Gen. Sec'y. Workers (Communist) Party

One hundred and sixty-six party members must complete their sale of Keep The DAILY WORKER certificates deily in order to raise the weekly contributions to the Keep The DAILY WORKER Fund to $5,000.

On Monday the contributions to the Keep The DAILY WORKER Fund were $299.43, which is $5.00 from sixty Party members, 106 less than required to raise the $5,000 weekly during the remainder of the campaign.

Each Party member has received a $5.00 book of the Keep The DAILY WORKER certificates. Each Party member has been asked to pay for these certificates, if he can do so and thus give the Keep The DAILY WORKER Fund a big boost, or to sell the coupons and turn in the $5.00 thus raised.

The Keep The DAILY WORKER certificates have now been in circulation for more then six weeks. Every Party member has had the opportunity to secure contributions among his friends and shopmates for that length of time. Those members who have made earnest efforts have had sufficient time to raise the $5,000 which is the quote they have been assessed to raise for the Keep The DAILY WORKER Fund.

About three thousand members have turned in $5.00 to the Keep The DAILY WORKER Fund, THERE ARE STILL SEVEN THOUSAND TO BE HEARD FROM.

The question we have to face in relation to the completion of the $50,000 fund, is WHETHER WE CAN STIR THESE SEVEN THOUSAND MEMBERS INTO ACTION TO RAISE $5.00 EACH DURING THE NEXT FIVE WEEKS.

Is The DAILY WORKER important enough in the eyes of these members as a weapon of our movement in the class struggle to induce them to make a real effort to raise the quota for the Keep The DAILY WORKER Fund?

We have told these members frankly the situation of The DAILY WORKER, the importance of completing the 50,000 fund, if we are to Keep The DAILY WORKER. Will these seven thousand members join with the three thousand who have already loyally supported The DAILY WORKER and push the campaign forward to victory?

CAN WE DEPEND UPON ONE HUNDRED AND SIXTY-SIX PARTY MEMBERS TO SEND IN FIVE DOLLARS EACH DAY TO RAISE FIVE THDUSAND DOLLARS A WEEK?

We ask those members who have not supported the Keep The DAILY WORKER Fund to answer these question by sending in their contributions.

WE ASK EVERY ONE OF THESE SEVEN THDUSAND MEMBERS TO IMMEDIATELY RALLY TO THE SUPPORT OF THE KEEP THE DAILY WORKER FUND.

WE ASK ONE HUNDRED AND SIXTY-SIX MEMBERS TO RESPOND TO THIS CALL EACH DAY.

We will record the answer in The DAILY WORKER each day.

Chicago Tribune Says Marie's Visit Aid to Huge Loan

Marie Is Worried

In her palatial 24 room suite at the Lake Shore Drive Hotel, Queen Marie was getting her face massaged by Miss Nancy Sawyer, masseuse. While the cream was being rubbed into the royal pores, the queen chatted of this and that, of the terrific heat of Chicago's buildings AND ABOUT THE "RED" DEMONSTRATION THAT GREETED HER WHEN SHE ARRIVED IN CHICAGO.

Gets Flat Welcome by Slaves of Steel

(Special to The Daily Worker)

GARY, Ind., Nov. 16.—The nervous enthusiasm with which the salons of Chicago's Gold Coast waited their turn in line to be "presented" to Marie von Hohanzellarn at the fashionable Drake Hotel was entirely lacking in the toilers of Gary's steel mills when her majesty rode thru the yards and shops in a special white observation car covered with glass.

It wasn't that the workers didn't want to know who was there to look at them. Roumanian flags flew from the tops of the buildings and they were told in advance of the coming of the queen to "inspect" them. They looked up from their heavy toil and saw the narrow-gauge royal special go slowly by. They saw the queen. And they gave her the cold shoulder.

Flat Welcome.

There was no show of enthusiasm, hardly one of recognition. There was no cheering and waving of greasy work caps as the Steel Corporation flirka in the Gleb-covered cars anticipated. Aboard the car in which the queen sat thora was a feeling of flat failure. The president of the Illinois Steel Co. shifted nervously in his seat. A high lord of the Elgin, Joliet & Eastern showed that he felt the tenseness created by the damp welcome. The queen felt it.

As the little white cars crept between the smelters past the furnaces and thru the yards, thousands of workers saw. Many of them, perhaps a majority, came from the Balkans, where Marie is known as the "mother-in-law of kings." There, too, were

Money Bags Busy at All Royal Functions

"It is certain that Queen Marie, by her tour, has substantially aided any negotiations which may be in progress for a $100,000,000 loan to Roumania from the U. S. A."

This is a leading article in Tuesday's Chicago Tribune. No other metropolitan newspaper has permitted itself to indulge in such plain speaking, with regard to the financial implications of Marie's visit. The Tribune goes further. It's well known statistician, Oscar Hewitt was given the job of computing the amount of money that the queen came in contact with in her social engagements with money bags in a score of wealthy American cities.

Tribune Opposes Loan.

Incidentally, it may be pointed out that the Tribune is against the loan to Roumania because it is against foreign loans in general. The paper, specifically the mouth organ of McCormack's International Harvester Co., is, generally, the spokesman of large midwest industrial capital that finds itself in disagreement with the international money transactions of Wall Street. That is why it can speak so plainly.

Once on the job, Oscar Hewitt made a complete analysis that led off with the sentence quoted above. After saying the queen has made many friends, Hewitt goes on: "A large percentage of these friends who have come in closest contact with her have good American dollars in large quantities."

Wealth Galore.

Then the figures. At one affair in New York there was 13 men and women present whose wealth aggregated $1,551,000,000. When the queen was feted by the Bankers' Club in New York all the major financial institutions of Wall Street were well represented. The resources of these banks is $7,350,000,000.

That same day she dined with Chas. M. Schwab and Judge E. H. Gary, who, between them, more or less control the Bethlehem Steel Co. and the United States Steel Corporation. In Philadelphia the lady was the house guest of Edward Stotesbury, a Morgan partner, who controls rich Drexel & Co.

The Packers.

The royal entertainers in Chicago were the big beef and iron families. The Roumanian consul general, Ira Nelson Morris, is a son of the original Morris, whose company is one of the big five. The head of the reception committee in Chicago was Arthur Meeker, vice-president of Armour & Co., with resources of over $231,000,000.

In Minneapolis, St. Paul, Kansas City and Seattle her majesty came into the closest contact with all the big flour, lumber and railroad families, whose fortunes run into many millions.

The real money was in New York.

And it was from New York that the negotiations for the loan were conducted. But Oscar Hewitt's figures on the rest of the country are none the less enlightening, because New York is the financial capital of the nation and the provincial millionaires have their fingers in the Wall Street pie in devious ways.

A Little Irony.

The Tribune statistician indulges in the irony that the freedom of his paper on this question allows him by finishing his study in the following manner:

"If, following her tour of this country, it develops that Roumania actually has applied for a loan, it is certain that she—perhaps without any thought of the loan—has made friendly acquaintances in a fertile field."

Worker Killed.

ROCKFORD, Ill., Nov. 16.—John D'Angelo, 35, was killed instantly today when the boom of a huge crane used in a scrap iron yard, collapsed and fell directly on him. Two other

Program of Work for Our Party Outlined

Central Committee Makes "Organization of Unorganized!" "A Labor Party in the 1928 Elections!" and "Work in the Trade Unions!" the Major Tasks of the Party.

THE Central Committee of the Workers (Communist) Party held a three days' session here last week to consider the situation in the United States economically and politically and draw a program for the party work for the coming six months.

The conclusions the committee came to in regard to the general situation was that in spite of the capitalist "prosperity" and the effects of concessions to certain sections of the aristocracy of labor by American imperialism, there were great opportunities for the growth and development of the Workers (Communist) Party thru work among the highly exploited, unorganized workers in the great machine industry of this country.

The sessions of the central committee opened on Wednesday, Nov. 11. There were present at the meeting the members of the committee, the heads of the party organization in Chicago, members of the Chicago district committee and the students at the national school of the Young Workers' League, the latter being invited to be present in order to add to their theoretical studies the knowledge to be gained thru listening to the reports and debates on the actual work of the party.

The first day and a half session of the central committee was devoted to the report of the political committee made by C. E. Ruthenberg, general secretary of the party and the resolution on the estimate of the present situation and the immediate program of work submitted in the name of the political committee.

The discussion of the report and resolution centered about the possibilities which had made itself apparent in certain sections of the party in regard to the opportunities for building the party and its influence among the masses in the present period of upward development of American imperialism. The report of Comrade Ruthenberg and the resolution of the political committee correctly reportdicated that there was any basis for such a pessimistic outlook. The resolution recognized the developments towards the right of the American Federation of Labor, but at the same time stressed the great opportunities for building the party influence by work among the unorganized workers in the great machine industries, as illustrated in the Passaic strike, and that the party could by active work among these workers, while not neglecting the struggle among the organized workers, strengthen itself and extend its influence. The resolution makes the following declaration on this question:

"With correct tactics the party can stimulate and lead struggles of the workers against the capitalists and become a popular party of the workers in these of 'capitalist prosperity' and 'stabilization' as well as during periods of 'hard times' and crisis. In these struggles the party can hasten the process of revolutionization of the working class."

Summarising the achievements of the party during the last year the resolution, has this to say:

"In spite of a period of capitalist prosperity, the party is breaking its isolation and succeeded in broadening its influence and increasing its prestige among the masses of the workers.

"The party must mobilize for fuller use of its strength in applying the policies and tactics there which it has made these gains and in taking up of its immediate program to build the party and extend its influence among the masses. Such a mobilization will bring even greater gains than recorded for the past year."

"A Labor Party in the 1928 Elections."

THE resolution of the Central Committee places the work of organizing the unorganized workers in the forefront of the party work, to which major attention must be devoted. It throws out the slogan of "A Labor Party in the 1928 Elections" and gives the party a concrete program for the realization of this program. These two campaigns with the work in the trade unions representing the most important work before the party.

While some shadings of opinion in regard to the present situation developed during the discussion the Central Committee unanimously adopted the resolution and the viewpoint it expressed.

The Organization Question.

The situation of the party organizationally after the reorganization was dealt with in detail in the resolution and was discussed at length. The resolution established the great gains for the party as a result of the reorganization, and categorically rejected the idea that the reorganization was a mistake, while at the same time recognizing the weaknesses which existed in the constitution of the unreorganized party.

The resolution demands of the party that at least half of the energies of the party must go into organization work for the next six months and outlines a concrete program to strengthen the party organization. This program calls for a "Party Mobilization Campaign" to include a campaign to draw back members who dropped out of the party during the reorganization, a recruiting campaign, classes for party functionaries, reorganizing the shop nuclei and street nuclei how to function, agenda for discussion at the meetings of the shop and street nuclei to draw the members closer to the party leadership and mobilize greater strength in the party campaigns. The language problem was discussed in detail and measures taken to enable those comrades who do not understand English to function in the reorganized party.

The proposals in the resolution, particularly the need of directing the party attention to the organizational problems were approved by all the speakers and this phase of the resolution was also approved unanimously.

Trade Union Work.

W. Z. Foster reported on the trade union work of the party, pointing out that the political committee has succeeded in liquidating the difference in regard to party policy in this field and that the party had a united policy for its work. He discussed in detail the party work in the various industries and the achievements of the past six months. The report and the policies outlined were discussed during a day's session and the report adopted unanimously.

Other questions taken up in the sessions of the Central Committee were, the situation in the Communist Party of the Soviet Union, on which Comrade Max Bedacht reported, the Anti-Imperialist work of the party, reported on by Comrade Gomez, The DAILY WORKER, reported on by Comrade

Rumor Hindenburg to Resign Next October; Term Expires in 1930

(Special to The Daily Worker)

BERLIN, Nov. 16. — President Hindenburg plans to offer his resignation as head of the German republic on the occasion of his eightieth birthday next October, according to the newspaper "Die Welt."

The newspaper states, however, that it is believed that his friends will persuade him to remain in office.

President Hindenburg was elected president of the German republic in 1925, his five-year term expiring in April, 1930.

STALIN'S SPEECH AT CONFERENCE OF THE C. P. OF THE SOVIET UNION

Assails Opposition as Anti-Leninists

By JOHN PEPPER

(Special Cable to The Daily Worker)

MOSCOW, U. S. S. R., Nov. 16.—Joseph Stalin, secretary of the Communist Party of the Soviet Union, was the last speaker as the special party conference came to a close after voting unanimous support to the Central Committee and setting the time for the regular party congress next autumn.

Following is a summary of Stalin's speech on the question of the opposition bloc led by Trotsky, Zinoviev and Kamenev whose proposals were beaten overwhelmingly by the assembled delegates:

STALIN'S SPEECH

Stalin pointed out that the well-known thesis of Engels, given out in 1840, in the last century, declaring that the proletariat is unable to triumph in a single country, was true at that time, but owing to the present development of imperialism, this must be replaced by Lenin's formula stating that the victory of socialism in single countries is quite possible, and probable under the new conditions of developing capitalism and proletarian class struggle.

The social-democrats are holding to the old formula of Engels precisely for the purpose of [illegible]

Zinoviev is in this case following in the path of the social-democrats. A similar case is the problem of the proletarian dictatorship in the impor-

KLAN-KLAN-CRAFT EXTENDS TO UTILITIES

Appointed Commissioners "Favoring" Insull

(Special to The Daily Worker)

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Nov. 16.—Out of this city's heated opposition to the proposed $55,000,000 merger of local public utilities, there came today another blast of scandal involving D. C. Stephenson, former grand dragon of the Indiana K. K. K., now serving a life sentence in the state penitentiary for murder, and a number of prominent state officials and financiers.

Asks injunction.

Asking for a restraining order preventing the Indiana public service commission from hearing the merger petition of the Indianapolis Light and Heat, the Merchents' Heat and Light and the Indianapolis Power and Light companies on November 18, Corporation Counsel Alva J. Rucker, in his petition filed in circuit court today, charged that Stephenson, Governor Ed Jackson, John W. Hazelrigg, chairman of the Indiana public service commission; Samuel Insull, Chicago utilities magnate, and other prominent financiers, conspired for a consideration of $19,000 to appoint to the public service commission persons favorable to the Insull interests.

The $19,000 was alleged to have been paid for use in political campaigns.

Asks information.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Nov. 16.—In an open statement to the people of Indiana, thru the press, Attorney General Arthur L. Gilliom today called upon anyone in the state having any testimony of fact relating to any alleged illegal activities of the Klan in Indiana, to submit to the proper, constituted authorities immediately.

Gilliom strongly criticized the Klan in his statement.

Condemns Klan.

It read in part: "In asking for testimony of facts I refer not to the already generally known activities of this always ill-advised and now happily disintegrating organization or of its leaders, but I ask for testimony of facts, if such there is, which would show that anyone in public life had contact with them and who in such contact may have violated the criminal code of the state."

CURRENT EVENTS

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY

Here he is now, a member of a British capitalist "labor mission," busying himself about the interests of British capitalism while more than a million miners are fighting for their very existence. With such leadership the workers cannot expect to win.

• • •

THE ability of the capitalist press to suppress news was never demonstrated to better advantage than during the visit of Marie of the bloody Roumanian government to Chicago. With the exception of an inadequate story of the demonstration staged by the Intl. Labor Defense on the day of the parasite's arrival, only a few lines appeared since. Efforts have been made by the wealthy flunkeys who are in charge of the queen's entertainment, thru their newspapers, to create the impression that Marie's panhandling excursion has a popular appeal. They have not succeeded.

REPORTERS that have any respect for themselves subtly express their contempt for the disgraceful conduct of our parasite class who scratch each other's eyes out in a mad competition for the privilege of going on their hands and knees to the wife of a moron king. A woman, too, even tho she may be a successful panhandler and passing to the sye, who has given no indication that her mental development is higher than a child of ten.

• • •

THE steel magnates and meat packing kings that would turn the guns on their employes if they baptized on mere wages are spending thousands of dollars entertaining Marie and her useless brood. When Marie wants a radio in her suite she gets it. The prince's valet spends half an hour fetching the prince's cigarette lighter into shape. While Marie was getting her face massaged in her room, she expressed her perturbation over the demonstrations made against her by the "reds." How this expression of royal discontent got by the city editors is more of a mystery then less.

SO much for the queen. Other items of interest that happened recently are: The revolt in Dutch Batavia. Holland is a small country with a very prosperous ruling class. Their prosperity can be attributed to the misery of their colonial slaves. The Communists led the revolt. The crown prince of Germany was seen by a group of workers going into a department store on Friedenckstrasse. This wester had a fine automobile with his coat of arms on it and a couple of flunkeys to open and shut the doors for him. The workers demonstrated against him and the Communists followed it up by raising the issue in the Reichstag. They charged the prince with inciting the population to riot and the next thing we know is that the prince made himself scarce.

THE biggest news of the week, however, is the conference between the foreign ministers of Turkey and the Soviet Union at Odessa. Both are view to maintaining peace as far as possible despite the warlike preparations of that mad-dog of fascism, Mussolini. It was reported that Persia, China and Afghanistan were ready to join a league to preserve peace in the Orient or rather to defend themselves against the imperialist robbers. The Soviet Union is the guiding spirit in this peace move. And yet we are told that Communists are crazy for blood, arson and their byproducts!

OWING to the failure of the working class of the world—outside of Russia—to aid the British miners, the strikers are facing defeat. British industry has lost, directly, enough money since the strike started to subsidize the coal industry for the next ten years at least. But the British capitalists were determined to come to grips at this time with the most militant and most exploited section of its working class and the right wing labor leaders very neatly enabled the British capitalists to inflict a defeat on the miners. Now, the other sections of British labor will get in the sack. Of course the defeat is only temporary. The long struggle is not over yet, and class bitterness has been increased by several thousand per cent.

• • •

ITALY and France are watching each other suspiciously. One press agency put out a story that France mobilized troops on the Italian frontier and that Turkey took similar precautions with a view to be prepared for a move by Mussolini. In all probability the capitalists will hold their dogs in leash for the time being. But there is nothing more inevitable than a war before long.

THIS is more or less of a digression, or a random thot. There is a story told of Mussolini's threat to invade Turkey, a few years back. Benito expressed the opinion that his fascists could go thru Turkey like a dip thru a purse. Mustapha Kemal Pasha, the Turkish premier wired back saying that he had no objection to the fascists coming in, as Turkish farmers needed fertiliser for their land but some consideration should be given to the law of supply otherwise there might be some trouble in finding proportionate jackets for dead blackshirts. The brave Mussolini took refuge in silence and organised another plot against himself.

Gang Warfare Has Quieted Down Again in Williamson County

(Special to The Daily Worker)

HERRIN, Ill., Nov. 16.—The threatened continuance of gang warfare in Southern Illinois failed to materialize and the week-end passed in Williamson and adjoining counties with but little to indicate the existing factional hatred.

One man, Claude Craig, 35, was shot and killed near a roadhouse Monday night, but authorities today said he was not connected with either the Sheltons or Birgers and did not connect the incident with the feud.

Craig was shot three times, twice with a revolver through the region of the heart and e charge of buckshot in the right side. No one has been arrested and no witnesses have been found.

The airplane which last Friday injected e new method of waging gang warfare, has not been seen since it disappeared from the region of the Birger roadhouse after dropping three home-made bombs. The Birgers who Saturday threatened in reprisal to "wipe out the Sheltons" failed to carry out the threat.

raising a militant nationalist spirit thruout Italy.

Fear Open Trial.

The cabinet has instructed the minister of justice to take charge of the trial. He in turn has decided to press e charge of secreting ammunition and arms only. There is much temerity about the staging of an open trial for Garibaldi. It is feared that the testimony necessary to such a public hearing will further fan the flames that have flared up between Italy and France over this affair, combined with the border incidents of few weeks ago.

Twenty-three other Italians and Spaniards are to be tried with Garibaldi and Macia as accomplices in the two cases.

Forfeit $60,000 Bonds.

DANVILLE, Ill., Nov. 16.—Bonds of five Chicagoans totaling more than $50,000 were declared forfeited in the circuit court today by Judge Augustus Partlow when five Italians, indicted on the charge of assault to kill, assault to rob, and violating the state prohibition law, failed to appear in court when their cases were called for trial. The five men are Mike Carbiloco, Joe Desmarado, Tudy Giordano, Fred Mancuso and Tony Rossi.

STALIN SPEAKS AT ALL-UNION PARTY CONGRESS

Assails Opposition as Anti-Leninist

ialist surroundings. At that time Marx admitted the possibility of an exception for England and America, where, owing to feebly developed militarism and bureaucratism, the proletariat had some chance of obtaining political power "by peaceful means."

Lenin's Thesis.

According to Lenin this exception is inadmissible under the present conditions of the development of imperialism, when militarism and bureaucratism are thriving in England and America as well as in other countries. Lenin, having established the law of the unequal economic and political development of capitalism, adopted in consequence the idea that it is possible to have a victory of socialism in one single country. The Communist Party acknowledges that victory of the socialist elements over the capitalists is possible in a single country, but a complete triumph of socialism or the elimination of the contradiction existing between a Soviet country and the capitalist world would be possible only in the case of the victory of the revolution in several countries.

Divergence of Opposition.

Unlike the opposition, one must make a difference between the victory of socialism in one country and its final and complete construction. The declaration that the party underestimated the international efforts of the working classes to secure the victory of the revolution in our country is sheer calumny. The Comintern policies, such as the united front policy to help the British miners, etc., are united efforts of the international proletariat tending to world revolution, and also the development of our reconstruction.

The opposition is disorganizing and discrediting the Communist Party of the U. S. S. R., which is the vanguard of the Comintern; is supporting all sorts of Maslovs and Souvarines and is trying to disintegrate the Comintern. The oppositionists in declaring war on the Comintern ceased to be revolutionists and internationalists and became bablbers giving vent to some vous phrases only.

Assails Trotsky's Theory.

Referring to Trotsky's theory of the permanent revolution, Stalin reminds us that according to Lenin this theory is a semi-menshevist theory, ignoring the revolutionary role of the peasantry in the Russian revolution and dooming the proletariat of the U. S. S. R. to a fatalistic passivity. The Trotskyist point of view is nearer to Otto Bauer than to Lenin.

The party will not tolerate any longer that the opposition, though remaining a minority, should abuse the party group, that all dissatisfied elements slander the leading party apparatus and break the iron discipline of the party, that it should organize all condemned groups, preparing accordingly a new party under the banner of factional liberty.

Will Not Stand Attacks.

The party will not allow attempts of the opposition to use the difficulties standing in the way of socialist construction for the purpose of attacking the party, making demagogical appeals to the masses about the urgency of increasing wages 30 to 40 per cent, knowing that industry is unable at the present moment to stand such an increase.

The opposition is pursuing solely demagogic aims, using the dissatisfaction of the backward labor groups against the party. The party cannot allow defeatism to be encouraged, cannot allow it to be won nor attacks made on the Comintern and the disorganization of its sections. The opposition will either fulfill these conditions necessary for party unity or the party, having beaten the opposition yesterday, will beat it finally tomorrow.

Referring to the results of the international party struggles, Stalin made ironical comments on Trotsky's letter, written to the oppositionists last September, in which he predicted the future consolidation of the opposition bloc. Stalin emphasized the disorganization of the bloc, its best elements, like Comrade Krupskaya, having forsaken it. The results are quite contrary to those predicted in Trotsky's letter. The party long ago turned its back on the opposition, whose complete failure is obvious.

The conference, standing, cheered Stalin long and loud.

Athletic Commission Ruling.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Nov. 16.—Attorney General Carlstrom in an opinion today told the state civil service commission that the secretary of state athletic commission is not subject to the rules of civil service, being an official of the commission. Other clerical employes of the commission are subject and should be classified accordingly, the opinion says.

Workers Will Slap Last In Their Struggle With the Capitalist Politicians

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL

THE Federated Press correspondent at Washington reports that Senator Curtis, of Kansas, Coolidge-Mellon republican leader in the upper house of congress, upon meeting Senator Lynn Frazier, of North Dakota, a week following the recent election, jovially slapped the western solon on the back and addressed him as follows:

"Hello, Lynn! How are you? I'm coming in to see you and have a talk before long."

This should be important news for the workers and farmers, especially labor and farmers in Minnesota and the Dakotas, where the Fraziers and nonpartisan political action constitute an employing class antidote for the Hoover-Jones party and independent political action.

Frazier was elected on teh republican ticket in North Dakota. He was supported by what remains of the nonpartisan league.

In Minnesota some remnants of the repudiated nonpartisan league leadership in that state are trying to lure the workers and farmers back into the democratic party. At the same time there are rumors that Hendrik Shipstead, the farmer-labor senator from Minnesota, is being urged to run as a republican in 1928, when his term expires.

When Curtis slapped Frazier on the back at Washington, it was, to some extent, a verification of every charge that the Coolidge administration is seeking to embrace all the so-called insurgents in its all-inclusive political net. There are indications that the Coolidge cry for "Help!" will not go unheeded.

The republican "old guard" put Frazier out on the back doorstep in 1924 when the North Dakota senator supported LaFollette. Not only Frazier, but the whole LaFollette outfit, stayed around that same back doorstep making the worst kind of a racket asking to be let back in.

The door has been gradually opening. The republicans need the votes to keep the democrats from coming in the front door.

The negotiations between the "old guard" and the "insurgents" are not kept a secret. It is merely a matter of jobs. If Frazier can be prevailed on to accept some committee chairmanship, then it is felt that he can be hogtied to the machine of the G. O. P. sufficiently to maintain a working republican majority. All this will take place next year when the assembling of the new congress.

Efforts to win over the "insurgents" however, will be made even at the rapidly approaching short session of congress. First attempts at mollification will be made in the case of Senator George W. Norris, of Nebraska, who is in line for the chairmanship of the senate judiciary committee as a result of the death of Senator Albert B. Cummins of Iowa. There were threats against Norris, contending that he be barred from this committee appointment because he went into Pennsylvania during the recent campaign and urged the election of the democrat, William B. Wilson, to the United States senate. The predicament of the republican "old guard" may be judged from the fact that it was even willing to overlook this breach of party regularity. It is expected that the republican committee on committees will meet in a few days and make its position clear.

It is also declared that Senator Charles L. McNary, of Oregon, one of the authors of the McNary-Haugen farm relief measure that was rejected by the Coolidge cabinet with Mellon as chief opposition spokesman, will be promoted to the chairmanship of the senate committee on agriculture.

Senator James Couzens, of Michigan, who is somewhat "irregular" at times, may become chairman of the committee on education and labor, thus helping to spike his guns.

Norris, Frazier, McNary, Couzens, and perhaps Shipstead, will hail these appointments as "victories" for the progressives in congress. They are nothing of the kind. They are merely maneuvers to bring insurgency under the wing of the old guard.

The "old guard" maneuver will help destroy the influence of these politicians even as spokesman of the middle class.

It should also help unmask them as political agents of the great capitalists and therefore the worst enemies of the workers.

In the days ahead the LaFollette group will be drawn, more and more, into the regular republican machine. This is inevitable. But this should act as a stimulus toward the development of the Farmer-Labor movement, not only in Minnesota, the Dakotas, Montana and Washington, but in Iowa, Nebraska and other states as well.

The LaFollette politicians have been slapped on the back by the "old guard" in loving approval of what may be expected of them in the future.

In the next election struggle these LaFollette politicians will again come among the workers and farmers, with their back slapping stump speechin campaign, seeking the votes of these they have betrayed.

The time for the workers and farmers to repudiate that backslopping, vote-seeking campaign is now. The method is thru the building of the independent political action of the workers and farmers thru the Labor Party. That will be a slap in the face for both the big and little capitalist class politicians. But he who slaps last slaps best.

VARE AND SMITH WILL BE OUSTED SURVEY REVEALS

Senate Alignment Now Against Seating

WASHINGTON, Nov. 16.—William S. Vare of Pennsylvania and Frank L. Smith of Illinois, whose senatorial campaigns were featured by huge expenditures, will be ousted from the senate in the seventieth congress by an overwhelming vote, a partial poll has revealed.

G. O. P.'s Join Dems.

The poll revealed that at least 17 republican senators will vote along with virtually the entire democratic membership of the new senate to nullify their election. Such a lineup would result in the ousting of Vare and Smith by a two-to-one vote, as the republican organisation will have but a single vote plurality after next March 4.

The republican senators who are known to oppose the seating of Vare and Smith are Jones, Washington; McNary and Steiwer, Oregon; Johnson, California; Borah and Gooding, Idaho; Norris and Howell, Nebraska; Frazier and Nye, North Dakota; McMaster and Norbeck, South Dakota; Brookhart, Iowa, Capper, Kansas; LaFollette and Blaine, Wisconsin, and Couzens, Michigan.

Won't Condone Graft.

Not all these senators have come out publicly in denunciation of the Vare and Smith campaign funds, but those who are not as yet on record either voted to oust Tyrnan H. Newberry in 1922 for spending $195,000 or have told friends privately they would not condone the Pennsylvania and Illinois primaries. This poll, incidentally, does not represent the maximum anti-Vare or maximum anti-Smith strength in the senate. A half dozen more republican senators were reported ready to vote against both men, altho not yet committed.

Democrats Nearly Solid.

To date the democratic ranks have remained almost solid against the two senators elect. The lone break came when Senator Cole Blease, of South Carolina, announced he would vote to seat both Vare and Smith. But all around the senate had no control over primaries in the states.

The attitude of several prominent republicans in denouncing slush funds has done much to turn sentiment against Vare and Smith. "Old guardsmen" were shaken first when Theodore Roosevelt took to the stump to attack slush funds and big money. A far greater shock came only a few days ago, when General John J. Pershing criticized lavish use of funds in campaigns.

Pershing Backs Norris.

The Pershing statement, incidentally, has given fuel to Senator George W. Norris, insurgent leader, who campaigned against Vare in Pennsylvania. Norris declared Pershing's utterance was an endorsement of his own doctrine that use of slush funds meant auctioning off of public offices.

British Coal Mine Strikers to Act on New Terms Proposed

tricts from registering their votes against the motion.

But the matter is as yet far from settled. On a previous occasion the vote of the miners rejected an important recommendation of the delegate conference. It is possible that the same thing will occur again in regard to the present recommendation, which without question, spells defeat for the union.

Fighting Alone.

But the miners are fighting a lone battle. The government has mobilized its entire force against them and they have been derived of support from the rest of the British movement by the right wing leaders of the Trade Union Congress.

It will be at least a week before the result of the voting in the districts is shown. And there is the other question, of the owners not yet having fully agreed to the proposals set forth by Baldwin as outlined above.

Rev. Hall Planned to Elope with Mrs. Mills Trial Witness Relates

COURTHOUSE, SOMERVILLE, N. J., Nov. 16.—Mrs. Eleanor Mills, slain choir singer, and the Rev. Edward Wheeler Hall, were planning to elope four years ago, shortly before they were shot to death, the murdered woman's sister, Mrs. Elsie Barnhardt, an attractive dark-eyed woman, testified at the Hall-Mills murder trial yesterday.

"They were going to Japan as soon as Charlotte (Mrs. Mills daughter) was ont of school," said Mrs. Barnhardt.

"She told me she thought more of Rev. Hall's little finger than she did of Jimmy Mills' (her husband) whole head."

Who Will Carry the Message of Passaic to the Unorganized?

Sixteen thousand textile workers of Passaic are on the brink of victory after a hard-fought nine months' struggle. 16,000 unorganized textile workers are establishing their right to organize and bargain collectively in defense of their own interests. Their brave struggle has been a shining example to the millions of workers who, unorganized and unprepared, face the prospect of the coming onslaughts of the American employers.

These unorganized workers need the message of Passaic—need it urgently and energetically until they learn to follow the textile workers' example. The rubber workers, the auto workers, the food workers, the steel workers, the miners, must some into the ranks of the organized labor movement, must build up a bulwark of defense against the attacks of the employers. The kept press will surely not carry this message. Even the labor press, which in many instances is in the control of the labor bureaucrats, who are more anxious to maintain their soft berths, than to tread the stormy path of organization among the unorganized workers, has not yet taken up this urgent duty.

It therefore falls to the Communist daily—The DAILY WORKER—to take up this task, energetically and with vigor, as it has done consistently in the past. From The DAILY WORKER will come the stimulus toward organization in new fields and toward the mobilization of new forces inside the labor movement, against the forces of American capitalism.

Should The DAILY WORKER succumb at this critical time, when the Passaic strikers are on the verge of victory, the task of organizing Passaic thruout the United States, the task, of organizing the unorganized, would receive a serious setback. The present financial crisis in The DAILY WORKER must not be permitted to halt its work. THE DAILY WORKER MUST CARRY ON. The DAILY WORKER must be kept alive. The DAILY WORKER must reach an ever increasing number of organized workers. The DAILY WORKER must help to make Passaic a reality in every field of industry. You must do your share by securing donations among your fellow workers. Turn your book in at once. If you have not received one, we shall be glad to send it upon request. Act NOW. Help at once. # U. S. BATTLESHIPS SUPPORT DIAZ AS NICARAGUA HEAD

Attempt Intimidation on Liberals

MANAGUA, Nicaragua, Nov. 16.—While official congratulations from the United States were being extended to Adolfo Diaz, newly inaugurated reactionary president of Nicaragua, United States battleships are patrolling the harbors as a warning to liberals to "keep hands off."

The long arm of Washington was plainly visible in the election of Diaz, henchman of Chamorro.

Would intimidate Mexico.

Yesterday the American cruiser California left Corinto for the Gulf of Fonseca, primarily to let Mexico, who also has ships in the district, know that the United States is backing the present regime. The U. S. S. Rochester is patrolling the east coast.

At the inauguration dinner Lawrence Dennis, charge d'affaires for the United States, proposed a toast to Diaz, assuring him of the support of the United States.

Little enthusiasm was shown by the people by Diaz' inauguration, despite the fact that those that witnessed the ceremony were supposed to be his supporters.

Declare Huge Dividends.

WILMINGTON, Del., Nov. 16.—Directors of the E. I. du Pont de Nemours Company here have declared a dividend on common stock totaling $16,801,715, said to be the largest ever declared by the company.

WORKER WHO ACCEPTED CHALLENGE OF LADY ASTOR TO GO TO RUSSIA WRITES OF EXPERIENCES HE FINDS

The following is a letter from James Morton, London worker, who accepted the challenge of Lady Astor to take his family to Russia to live for a period. Lady Astor didn't think any one would accept her "daring challenge," but Morton did. This letter was sent to a worker in Los Angeles.

Dear Comrades: I have so many to write so that I will be compelled to organise my friends into groups. No. 1 Group consists of London comrades, who will pass all correspondence on to Liverpool. From Liverpool, letters can be sent to the comrades in the United States. So, now then, comrades altho I address you all in the aggregate I am thinking of you all individually and will be very pleased to have letters from you all.

We landed in Leningrad on Friday, August 27, and were met at the boat by a deputation from the Supreme Economic Council, who whisked us away in an auto to the Hotel Europa. We were asked to stay on their guests for a few days, but just arranged to stay long enough to allow Alan, who had been sick during the whole sea voyage, to recover a bit.

We left on Saturday night at 11, had a bed each in a sleeping car, had a good night's sleep and reached Moscow at 10:30 on Sunday morning. Here we were met by another delegation, which took us into a car and drove us to the Bolshoi Hotel. Surrounded by eastern luxury, we had a good time. We met a few old comrades and had very soon decided that we had reached the promised land.

On Monday I had an interview with Comrade Lepsi, the chairman of the Metal Workers' Union, who advised us to return to Leningrad, as it was a much better place for engineering workers, and also because it was much easier to get housing accommodation.

Meets Metal Workers.

After spending two days in Moscow, we returned to Leningrad, where we were met by a delegation of the Metal Workers' Union and taken to the Hotel D'Angleterre. We are still there and likely to be for a few weeks, until we get a permanent address.

Lots of Work.

To find work in Leningrad at engineering trades is very easy, but it is difficult to find work in a place where English workers can be understood. There is a tremendous activity here. Ship building, ship repairs, engineering, building, street repairs and other activities too numerous to mention. The place is agog with work. Reconstruction on a grand scale. It is a real eye-opener to a foreign worker. It seems almost impossible.

Sees Big Factories.

I was taken to the Metallicheskiy works, a huge plant employing many thousands of workers. There they were making boilers, building cranes, Deisel engines and turbine machinery. Everything on a big scale. It was like being at Armstrong-Whitworth's.

The workers here are all Russians, and the works committee, altho they welcomed me, and the director offered me work if I liked to start, thought it advisable that I should not be in a hurry and perhaps in a few days a job could be found for me where one worker at least spoke English. The next day I was taken to the great Putilov Engine Works—Red Putilov it is called now.

Gate Job.

Here my luck was in. The assistant superintendent in the foundry speaks a little English and is anxious to learn more. He was delighted at the idea of me starting there, but no more than I was. He said I would teach him English and he would learn me Russian. Everything was fixed up and I start to work tomorrow, Sept. 6, at the biggest plant in all Russia. There are over 5,000 members of the Communist Party working at the Red Putilov Fabrik.

Down the road from where I work is the Marti ship yard, called after the French Communist. All the works are called after working-class leaders.

We have had a great reception here. Everyone is greatly amused at the Astor affair. We have been chased by photographers and story writers.

Today, Sept. 5, great demonstrations have been held all over Russia to collect funds for the English miners. North, south, east and west the children, youths, soldiers, sailors, workers and peasants have been marching and collecting. What enthusiasm! What a display of working-class solidarity! It would be worth while living on dry bread to be here.

Leningrad from an early hour this morning has been a blaze of color and gaiety. Thousands of people of all ages marching. The police, military, naval sections, all marching with the workers and singing revolutionary songs. (I'm afraid my poor pen can not give justice to it all.) On they march, column after column. Mary and Alan beaming with joy, marching with the Young Pioneers. Tableaux in galore. Here a huge wooden figure (bust and head) representing a capitalist, top hat, eye-glasses and cigar complete, and a young Communist (very much alive) knocking hell out of him with an axe.

It is estimated that in Leningrad alone over $25,000 would be collected today. The activities here on behalf of the English miners make one ashamed and disgusted with that section of labor who run the labor movement in England.

I have met Mrs. Cook and the other miners' wives, also the other delegates. I attended a great meeting in the Uritsky Palace (formerly the Winter Palace) where they were met by the workers' delegates of Leningrad at a meeting organised by the trades council of this city. They got a magnificent reception. I wrote a report of the meeting and sent it to the Daily Herald.

It is getting late and I have been writing a number of letters today, so I will now conclude this one with fraternal greetings.

James Morton.

Pan-Pacific Workers' Conference Given Up Because of No Interest

SYDNEY, Australia, Nov. 16. The Pan-Pacific Labor Conference which was to have been held at Honolulu last July and was then postponed till November is now to be abandoned altogether. The reason for this is the lack of support given by the workers of Australia and the fact that other nations surrounding the Pacific signified they would not put in an appearance. The money collected in Australia to finance the conference is being returned to the unions concerned.

Labor councils in Australia feel very sore at the abandonment of the conference and characterize the lack of interest taken in the matter as a disgrace to the labor movement of Australia.

A resolution has been carried by the labor councils deploring the abandonment of the conference and urging the workers of Australia to try and arranga a conference at some future date.

NOTE:—This item refers to the Pan-Pacific Conference called by the Australian Labor Party in opposition to the conference of the All-Australian Trade Union Congress. The latter conference is being energetically pushed. It will be held at Canton, China, May, 1; 1927.

EXPLODE BOSS PROPERTY BUNK IN AUSTRALIA

Workers Short of Food and Clothing

By W. FRANCIS AHERN.

SYDNEY—(FP)—According to Napier Thompson, ex-president of the Australian Metal Trade Employers Assn., Australia is "a nation of capitalists," where wealth is widely distributed, where everybody is prosperous and where there are no poor.

A clipping of this statement from the N. Y. Times of July 30 reached the Australian bureau of The Federated Press when a commission was hearing evidence for higher minimum wage. Some of the evidence was heart-moving, telling of the grim struggle to make ends meet.

The evidence by various witnesses is typical of thousands of workers in the city of Sydney alone, and is a striking answer to the allegations that in Australia all are prosperous and none are poor.

A family of 5 was forced to live on $21 weekly, of which $8 had to be paid for rent. They were short of food and clothing. There was no milk for the three young children. Christmas toys for the children were unknown.

A mother with 7 children, eldest aged 12, said her husband earned $23.50 weekly, out of which she paid $5.50 for rent for a 3-room house. They went short of food and clothing.

Many similar stories were told—all showing that the minimum wage was not sufficient to provide a decent living. The majority of the Australian people (85% of whom are workers) are worse off than before the war.

Soviet Delegation to Study Oil Industry Goes Back to Russia

NEW YORK, Nov. 16 — Delegates sent here by the Soviet oil trust, Iskonft, to investigate American methods of producing and refining oil, have sailed back to Russia, after spending several months in the United States.

Revival of Russian petroleum industry will not mean an oil price war, declared S. M. Ganshin, vice president of the trust and a member of the delegation. The consumption of Europe and the rest of the world is more than sufficient to absorb the Russian and American output, he said.

Orders for a million dollars worth of oil equipment will be placed in the United States thru the Amtorg Trading Corporation, buying agency for the Soviet government.

Machado Threatens Dictatorship Over Cuba, "If Necessary"

HAVANA, Cuba, Nov. 16.—President Machado threatened in an Armistice Day speech here that if he did not get the co-operation of congress he would establish a dictatorship, if necessary.

"If a dictatorship is necessary to keep alive the memory of those heroes who died on the battlefield, I, with those who are willing to follow me, will go enough to attain that end," he said.

Mine Strike Cripples Many British Industries

LONDON, Nov. 16. — Absolute ruin is faced by British industries dependent upon a cheap fuel supply, says a review of recent developments in the coal lockout by the British correspondent of the International Federation of Trade Unions. In every part of the kingdom there are idle shipyards, damped furnaces, or closed textile mills.

The Daily Herald, organ of labor, finds that of the 85 blast furnaces which were in operation in the west of Scotland last April all have been closed down. The Scottish iron and steel trade has been paralyzed for months past. In the Middlesborough district only 5,000 men are working, of the normal force of 25,000 men. Arthur Pugh, secretary of the Iron and Steel Trades Federation, says that only five of the 470 blast furnaces of the metal industry are still working.

Lack of coal is likewise forcing some of the French furnaces to shut down, while there is arising in Germany a demand that coal exports be curtailed in order to reduce the rising cost of fuel to German manufacturers. German mine owners are working to secure long-term contracts to supply coal to former buyers of British coal. Belgian manufacturers are suffering from the fuel famine, and in the heavy industries the condition is described as alarming.

Labor Correspondence

1000 WORKER CORRESPONDENTS BY JANUARY 15 1927

JOURNALISM CLASS NOW MEETS AT 6:30 P. M. TO ENABLE WORKERS WITH MEETINGS ON SAME NIGHT TO JOIN

To comply with the request of many workers who want to become members of the Chicago class in worker correspondence the hour of the class meeting has been changed to 6:30 p. m. from 8 p. m. This change is made to enable workers who have other meetings on Friday night to attend the class in workers' journalism from 6:30 to 8 o'clock and thus be able to go to their other meetings after class.

The change will take effect this Friday night. All members of the class and those who have not yet joined, but intend to this week, are requested to be in the editorial rooms of The DAILY WORKER, 1113 W. Washington Blvd., at 6:30 sharp, so that no time will be lost.

Registration Still Open.

Registration for the class is still open and all workers who are interested in learning how to write news stories are invited to join. A course of study has been outlined this year which is designed to develop real labor journalists out of the members. Every phase of journalism will be taken up, from the writing of a single news story to the more complicated features of journalism.

Special lecturers will give instruction on special phases of labor journalism.

Class is Popular.

The class is becoming more popular each week, and new students are registering at each session. It is expected that with the change in the hour more workers will be able to join than before. Members of the class are requested to bring with them on Friday night a short story of some happening that they have seen or heard about, as these specimen stories form the basis for class criticism.

MOVIE WORKERS PRESENT DEMAND FOR RECOGNITION

Los Angeles Unions Are Ready to Strike

By WM. SCHNEIDERMAN,
(Worker Correspondent)

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 16.—The four unions making up the Studio Employes' Alliance have presented demands to the Los Angeles film executives for recognition of union conditions, failing which a general strike will be called here Dec. 1, as well as in the New York section of the industry.

Delegates in the Central Labor Council report hundreds of applications are coming into the union offices for membership since the opening of the organization drive in preparation for the strike.

C. L. C. Backs Move.

The Central Labor Council assures complete support to the strike if it takes place. They are anxious to make some kind of a showing before the next convention of the A. F. of L., which takes place in this city in 1927.

Other Drives Loom.

Organization drives in other industries may soon get under way for the same reason. It is interesting to note that most of the officials of the council were against inviting the next A. F. of L. convention here because of the issue of organization campaign raised by progressive delegates in this connection.

However, the opinion of Frank L. Johnston, reactionary president was overwhelmingly defeated by a vote of the delegates, who will be spurred on to organization drive in labor movement now in this open shop city.

IRON MOULDERS STRIKE AGAINST WAGE SLASHES, Y.W.L. INSPIRES WORKERS

By a Worker Correspondent.

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 16.—In the midst of an organization campaign carried on by the Young Workers' League at the O'Keefe & Marrit stove factory, fifty moulders in the foundry rooms walked out against a wage cut, and are now under the direction of the moulders' union.

Two strike issues of the "Stove Worker," bulletin of the Young Workers' League, have already been distributed. Attempts have been made to use scabs, but five workers who were transferred to the foundry refused to scab, and were fired.

The league bulletin urges the young stove workers to refuse to scab on their fellow-workers who are striking, and warns of a threatened lockout, for which they must be prepared.

The bosses are attempting to scare the workers by spreading rumors of laying off the entire force and closing down the factory because of the "slack season."

GIRL, 12, JAILED FOR AIDING IN PASSAIC RELIEF

Jersey Police Threaten Young Pioneers

By a Worker Correspondent.

ROSSELLE, N. J., Nov. 16.—Anna Kortnowsky, 12-year-old member of the Young Pioneers, was arrested today for selling bread cards for the relief of the Passaic textile strikers' children. The little girl was dragged from the house where she was trying to sell a card by a member of the local police and thrown into a foul cell in police headquarters. She was held there for over six hours before her parents were able to get her release.

Given Rough Treatment.

During the six hours she was held in jail the child was subjected to the most brutal treatment and questioning. The police questioned her at length regarding the Young Pioneers and Mary told them what the Pioneers were—an organization of workers' class children fighting for the workers' class.

The police told her parents that they would certainly have detectives on hand at the next meeting of the Pioneers. They intimated that the Pioneer group in Rosselle would be broken up by force if it were found as radical as Mary's reply indicated.

Another Pioneer Grilled.

This is not the first occurrence of this kind in Rosselle. A few weeks ago Herbie Axel, an 11-year-old Pioneer, showed his teacher a copy of the Young Comrade. The teacher was horrified. She took Herbie to the principal of the school, who, after questioning him, evidently found it needed help to curb this infant "menace," and called the police department. A detective was sent over to the school and Herbie's mother was also called into conference. Mrs. Axel said that she knew Herbie belonged to the Pioneers and that she entirely approved of their program. The principal then threatened to expel Herbie from school unless he left the Pioneers. His mother replied that her son would continue to be a member of the Pioneers at all costs, as she thought something was needed to counteract the poisonous capitalistic propaganda of the public schools.

The Challenge of Youth

Why Every Young Worker Should Join the Young Workers (Communist) League

By SAM DARCY

IS JUST OFF THE PRESS!

It's something new and vitally necessary in the work of revolutionary youth. This pamphlet tells in simple language what the Young Workers League is and why young workers should join it. It analyses the condition of the working youth of this country and deals with their problems as no other book or pamphlet has done up to now.

The Immediate Program for the Work of the Party

RESOLUTION UNANIMOUSLY ADOPTED BY THE CENTRAL COMMITTEE OF THE WORKERS (COMMUNIST) PARTY

I. The General Situation.

1. The Economic Situation.

THE industries of this country are still operating at a high rate of production, with on indication of an immediate sharp trend toward depression. The figures showing the trend of production during the last few months still show a general upward tendency. Even such industries as textile and mining, which have been in a partial state of crisis, show some improvement, the latter as the result of the export of coal to Great Britain and the Continent to fill the shortage caused by the strike of the British miners. There are in the background, factors indicating the instability and weakness of the present situation such as the decrease of exports, the recession in building operations, the downward trend of the automobile industry, the dangers in the credit system resulting from inflated installment sales, but it is very likely that the present scale of production and employment will hold good for at least another six months. It is upon this basis that the party must formulate its program of work for the immediate future.

The fact that the workers are not sharing as a class in the general prosperity of capitalist industry is shown by the course of production and wages. Certain sections of the workers, the organized, skilled workers, who make the aristocracy of the labor movement, have made gains as a result of the concessions made by the capitalists to make them allies of American imperialism, but this is not true of the masses of workers. During the six years from 1919 to 1925 wages show a decrease of 9% and the cost of living a decrease of 11% indicating only a very slight gain in the real wages of the workers. During this period, however, the production per worker in American industry has increased 43% which has enormously increased the profits of the capitalists and given them the benefits of the increased production of wealth by American industry.

At the present time there are movements for wage increases among sections of the workers. The furriers won a wage increase, the garment workers are fighting for an increase and the railroad workers are pressing demands under the Watson-Parker Bill. On the other hand, wage cuts have taken place in the textile industry and in the mining industry through opening of many mines on the open shop basis with wages under the Jacksonville agreement. A general effort to reduce the wages of the miners will undoubtedly take place with the expiration of the Jacksonville agreement next spring.

The agricultural crisis continues in a sharp form among certain sections of the farmers, notably in the corn belt and cotton, while the general situation in the agricultural field is that the farmers are not sharing in the favorable economic situation which the capitalists are enjoying.

2. The Political Situation.

POLITICALLY, the situation in the United States can be best characterised as a growing conflict between that part of finance capital with growing investments and interests in European and especially in foreign fields, and industrial capital supported by the petty bourgeois, which is primarily interested in American industries. This line is not always clear, being blurred by interests running in both directions, but the main line of the struggle between the capitalist groups is the conflicting interests of these two groups. The affiliation of the United States with the World Court, the funding of the debts of European countries to the United States growing out of the war on terms which granted partial cancellation were victories for the international bankers, won in the face of the opposition of industrial capital. The need of creating the means of repayment of the enormous loans and investments in Europe by the international bankers, is developing a movement having their support for the revision of the tariff to enable foreign goods to enter the American market on a more favorable basis. This movement is resisted by the industrial capital which profits from the high tariff. The general results of the election was a partial defeat for international banking capital, which will lead to sharper struggles between the two contending groups.

While this internal struggle goes on between the two groups of capitalist interests, the capitalist class as a whole is united in its struggle against the workers and farmers. The income tax revision by the last congress, the proposal of Coolidge to grant the capitalists a reduction of from $150,000,000 to $250,000,000 on most years income tax payments, show how the capitalists use the government power to strengthen their position economically. At the same time, the attack upon the workers thru the use of governmental power against them grows more dangerous. The passage of the Watson-Parker Bill, which practically robs the railroad workers of the right to strike, the threatened extension of this law to the miners, the proposals for registration of the foreign-born workers, the Supreme Court decision in the Marion case, establishing as the highest law of the land that strikes may be illegal, all forge new weapons for the capitalists in the struggle against the workers. The capitalists also united against the farmers to defeat all proposals for relief of the farmers from the crisis which continues in agriculture.

No effective resistance to these attacks among the workers and farmers developed during the election campaign. The movement for a labor party made some strides forward and in certain agricultural states the farmer-labor parties carried on widespread campaigns, but no mass movement of the workers and farmers against this use of the governmental power against them developed.

It remains the major task of our party to carry on a widespread campaign of agitation to unite the workers, in alliance with the farmers, for independent political action, to resist these attacks, using the concrete governmental action against them as the basis of our campaign.

3. The Labor Movement.

THE reactionary bureaucrats who compose the leadership of the organized labor movement continue to elaborate and intensify their policy of cooperation with the capitalist employers which tends to degenerate the trade unions toward company unions and to make the organized labor movement an adjunct of American capitalism, rather than an organization for militant class struggle in the workers' interests. This is manifested among other things, by their support of the Watson-Parker law, the extension of the Baltimore and Ohio plan, the elaboration of the so-called Monroe Doctrine of Labor, the establishment of a Trade Union Life Insurance company, the extension of labor banking, and other forms of trade union capitalism. With the exception of the paper resolutions against company unions and for a shorter workday, the convention of the American Federation of Labor maintained its position of opposition to every progressive proposal to strengthen and build the organized labor movement and to carry on a militant fight for the class interests of the workers.

There is thus being created an upper stratum of the aristocracy of labor, which shares somewhat in the immediate profits of American capitalism and has a high standard of life itself. Because of the favorable situation of this section of the workers, it does not give support to the struggles of highly exploited, unorganized workers in the great machine industry of this country, leaving them to shift for themselves. These highly exploited, unorganized workers are not sharing in the profits of American imperialism, and movements of struggle against the capitalists are developing among them. Our party, as the only organization which fights for the interests of these workers while at the same time not neglecting the work to stimulate the skilled organized workers into militant struggle, is becoming the leaders of these struggles. This has been shown in the Passaic strike. Despite the wishes of the reactionary leaders of the aristocracy of labor, widespread support was given to the Passaic strikers and these leaders were finally compelled to give lip service to the struggles of these workers.

The achievements of the party in the Passaic strike shows the possibilities of the development of a movement against the reactionary class collaboration policies of the official leaders of the labor movement and represent a victory for the left wing.

The militant class struggle in the workers' interests by the Furriers' Union under leadership of the left wing, resulting in a victory for the workers against the right wing supported by President Green, also represents a new achievement for the left wing. The fight of the New York Joint Board of the International Garment Workers' Union is a movement in the same direction. The development of a broad progressive bloc with the slogan, "Save the Miners' Union" against the reactionary leadership of John L. Lewis in the United Mine Workers is an especially important indication of the growth of the sentiment to make the union organs of militant class struggle, especially since the mining industry is one of the basic industries toward which the party must direct its attention.

4. The Party and the General Situation.

THE above analysis of the existing situation shows, that while there are difficulties in the way of the party in developing a revolutionary movement of the workers and building the party in the favorable economic situation of American capitalism, which has enormously strengthened it, and the trend toward the formation of the skilled, organized workers and the class collaboration policies which the official leaders of the labor movement follow, there are also favorable conditions in the movements for wage increases and struggles against wage cuts by the great mass of highly exploited unorganized workers in the machine industry, as well as left wing developments in sections of the organized labor movement. The party can, by carefully formulated tactics, take full advantage of the favorable situation, develop the revolutionary movement of the workers, increase its influence and leadership and strengthen and build the party.

II. Immediate Program of Work of the Party.

1. Achievements of the Party.

THE facts recited in the foregoing analysis prove that the party still stands before the elementary task of uniting the workers into motion against their class enemy and of developing a class ideology. The orientation of the party must founded on a clear comprehension of these facts.

The great strength and resources of American imperialism coupled with the relatively undeveloped strength of the workers, the capitalist offensive and victories over the workers in many industries in recent times, have produced a spirit of pessimism in certain sections of the labor movement which is manifested in some sections of the party. While it is true that the favorable economic position of American imperialism, which enables it to provide general employment and to corrupt certain sections of the working class, puts great objective difficulties in the path of a revolutionary workers' party, nevertheless a sober estimate of the situation and the problems presented by it, upon which a practical program is based, will enable the party to overcome these difficulties and to increase its influence and increase its strength. Pessimism in the labor and revolutionary movements is objectively an aid to the bourgeoisie and their agents in the labor movement. The rejection of all pessimistic moods is a prerequisite to the successful accomplishment of the revolutionary tasks.

The class struggle continues even under the most favorable conditions of capitalist production. Such conditions inevitably produce movements of the workers demanding a greater share of the wealth they produce. With correct tactics the party can stimulate and lead struggles of the workers against the capitalists and become a popular party of the workers in time of "capitalist prosperity" and "stabilization" as well as during periods of "hard times" and crisis. In these struggles the party by the employment of correct tactics can hasten the process of revolutionization of the working class.

In the present period, the party must particularly direct its attention to those highly exploited, unorganised workers in the great machine industry, who under all conditions are the great reservoir from which the revolutionary movement draws its strength by initiating movements for the organization of these workers, developing programs for their struggles and giving leadership to their fights, the party can increase its strength and build its influence. At the same time it must initiate movements among the organized and skilled workers, seizing every opportunity to stimulate the movement against the class collaboration policies of the reactionary bureaucrats and to develop militant movement of class struggle. The Passaic strike and the movement in the miners' union are typical exemples of the possibilities for great achievement by the party in applying such a policy.

The record of the achievements of our party during the past year also show that there is no basis for this pessimism, and that the party has been able to develop those tactics which have widened its influence and strengthened its leadership among the working masses. The organization of the 16,000 Passaic strikers represents the first broad movement among the unorganised workers in the highly developed, unorganised machine industry for many years. The organization of these workers, the leadership of their strike during nine months, the development of wide support to their struggle in the relief organization for their support, stands as a major achievement of the party.

The part the party has played in the Furriers' strike, the first big strike resulting in a victory which has developed for many years, increased the influence and prestige of the party. The party leadership in the movement for the protection of the foreign-born workers established its influence, and brought it into a common struggle with four hundred thousand organized workers. Thru throwing out the slogan of a united labor ticket in the election campaign, the party was able to stimulate the movement for a labor party in a number of places and to actually aid in the organizing of labor parties in some localities.

All of these gains of the party were made thru application of the united front tactics thru which it drew masses of workers into common struggle with it.

In spite of the period of capitalist prosperity, the party is breaking its isolation and succeeded in broadening its influence and increasing its prestige among the masses of workers. Its position today is the organized labor movement and among the working masses generally, is far in advance of what it was a year ago.

The party must mobilize for fuller use of its strength in applying the policies and tactics thru which it has developed for the gains got in taking up of its immediate program to build the party and extend its influence among the masses. Such a mobilization will bring even greater gains than are to be recorded for the past year.

The immediate program which the party must make the centre of its work is the following:

A—Organization of the Unorganized.

THE work of organizing the unorganized into labor unions must take first place in the work of the party. The conditions for organising the unorganized are most favorable during a period of high scale production by capitalist industry. Movement for the organization of the unorganized are developing in various parts of the country. It is the duty of the party nuclei in the factories to take the initiative in developing such movements and to give them the greatest possible support. The party already has established achievements in this field, but there must be a greater mobilization of the party forces for this work and its extension on a much greater scale. This movement must also be initiated and stimulated in the trade unions, central bodies, and local unions of the trade unions generally.

It is the workers in the highly developed machine industry of the United States who are largely unorganized. It is exactly these workers who should first respond to Communist agitation and be the backbone of the Communist movement. The party must take the leadership in the fight to organize these workers and thus extend its influence among them. The party must mobilize its strength to create scores of Passaics and to increase the number of workers organized under its leadership to hundreds of thousands.

B—Work in the Existing Trade Unions.

DESPITE the emphasis which the party has placed upon the necessity of organizing every party member for work in the existing trade unions, only a small part of the party strength is brought to bear in this field. The raising of the number of party members who belong to the union, the organization of the party fractions, the development of a broad left wing in the trade unions are prerequisites to the growth of our party influence in every field of work. The conditions for the development of a broad left wing in the trade unions are becoming more favorable and the party must take the necessary steps, thru the entry of the members into the unions, the organization of party fractions and systematic work in the unions to hasten this development and to create a broad movement of the rank and file workers which will challenge the influence of the reactionary bureaucrats and win the trade unions for a policy of militant class struggle against capitalism. The present struggle in the Miners' Union must have the full support of the party.

C—A Labor Party in the 1928 Elections.

THE party must now raise the slogan, "A Labor Party in the 1928 Elections" and set to work systematically to build up the movement to realize this slogan. The attack of the capitalist government on the rights of the workers to strike must be made a central point in our agitation for the labor party. The sending of the president's message to congress setting forth the capitalist program, will create a favorable opportunity for issuance of the slogan and initiation of the campaign on the basis of a labor program opposed to the capitalist program. The steps to be taken immediately in this campaign are the following:

1. During the year 1927 municipal elections will take place in a large number of states. Our party has not learned to connect its general agitation with the local questions affecting the lives of the workers. The party organization in each city must study the local political questions, formulate a program on the basis of the workers' issues and raise the slogan of "A United Labor Ticket in the City Elections—A Labor Party for the 1928 Elections" in connection with these municipal elections. The aim which the party must set itself is to organise local labor parties, or, if this objective cannot be achieved, to organize committees for the formation of a labor party, in the elections this year, the party organisations in many places did not prepare early enough for the election campaign and consequently failed in placing a ticket in the field. This must not happen in the municipal elections. Steps must be taken immediately to see that a united labor ticket is placed on the ballot in every city in which the municipal elections take place, or if this cannot be achieved, a party ticket.

a—In connection with this mobilization of the party for the election campaigns next year, it is necessary to carry on an ideological campaign in the party to bring to the party members an understanding of the necessity of the party participating in the election campaigns to the fullest possible extent. Our party still responds too little to the possibilities for development of a movement of the workers and extending the party influence thru election campaigns. These campaigns constitute a major opportunity for agitation among the workers and the party must utilize them to the fullest extent. Election campaigns as a means of political propaganda and agitation have especially great significance for our party. Active participation in election campaigns will be the means of our first approach to many American workers.

2. The party must take up in earnest the work of forming trade union committees for the formation of a labor party in every local union, in the central labor bodies of each city, and on a state scale, as outlined in the resolution of the last convention. The formation of a network of trade union committees for the formation of a labor party thruout the whole country will create a solid basis for the realization of the slogan, "A Labor Party in the 1928 Elections."

3. The party should endeavor to initiate under trade union auspices if this can be achieved, if not, under party auspices, a referendum of workers in the factories thru a petition addressed to the executive council of the American Federation of Labor requesting that body to call a national conference of trade unions, cooperatives, labor fraternal organizations and labor political parties for the formation of a labor party to represent labor in the 1928 elections.

* * * *

D—Councils for Protection of the Foreign-Born.

WITH the reconvening of congress, the bills for the registration, photographing and finger printing of the foreign-born workers will again come, to the fore. The party must give full support to the National Council for the Protection of the Foreign-Born in the fight against these laws. The campaign of the party must be directed to draw the native-born workers into this struggle by agitation showing that the registration law is directed against the right to organize and the standard of life of the whole working class. The fight against the registration laws must be coupled with the campaign for the labor party.

E—The Struggle Against American Imperialism.

THE determining factor in the present period is the dominant and still rising character and influence of American imperialism. This necessitates that our party, in conformity with the emphasis laid down in the decisions of the Fifth American section of the last plenum of the Comintern, pay the utmost attention to this important field for Communist activity. The domination of the two American continents by U. S. imperialism, its steady penetration into European economy and politics, and its increasing interest in the Far East, makes it possible for our party, by paying strict attention and devoting the necessary energy to anti-imperialist work, to greatly aid the struggles of the colonial and semi-colonial peoples and assist in the progress of the world revolution, more directly perhaps than in many other fields.

F—Agricultural Work.

THE continuance of the crisis among sections of the farmers with difficult conditions generally in the agricultural field, create a favorable situation for the extension of the work of the party. The program of the party for work among the farmers must be taken up with greater energy and full advantage taken of the possibilities in this field.

G—Other Party Campaigns.

ALL of the above campaigns of the party can be strengthened by intensification of the special forms of party activities, such as the building of the youth movement and realization of the slogan, "A Young Workers League Unit wherever there is a party unit," the work among the Negroes, the systematic organization and greater support of the work among women. The political committee must take the necessary steps to furnish concrete programs for these activities and secure more energetic support from the whole party.

Non-party organizations, formed to unite broad masses of workers on specific issues of the class struggle are of extraordinary importance for the party in the present period as a means of broadening the working class fighting front, as a source of contact with non-party workers and as a recruiting ground for the party. Active participation in such organizations is an essential part of the united front tactics and remains as before one of the primary duties of all party members.

All of these campaigns must be so directed that new strength and influence develops FOR THE PARTY from them. The various forms of the party activities must not be conducted so as to create separate organizations competing with the party, but as various forms of one whole, the party, which is the leading and directing influence, and all of which result in building the party and the revolutionary movement in the United States.

III. Inner Party Problems.

1. Factionalism in the Party.

THE party has made a considerable degree of progress in eliminating factionalism in the party during the past year, particularly since the last plenum of the Central Committee in May. Here and there remnants of the whole condition still exist in the party and further efforts to liquidate these situations must be made. The line of the Central Committee for complete unification of the party and abolishing of all its forces, both in the membership and leadership must be followed until all remnants of factionalism are ended and the party carries on its work as a united whole.

THE party is following a line which rejects both right wing deviations and ultra-left sectarianism. Wherever manifestations of either appear in the party, they must be exposed and repudiated. Neither of these deviations from Leninism appear in the party in a crystallised form extending thru the party.

However, right wing manifestations have appeared in a number of instances in our trade union work, particularly in the city of New York. The right wing manifestations here referred to have become outstanding in the conduct of some of our comrades leading the strike of the cloakmakers. Permeated by a craft union ideology, these comrades not only resisted the party policy on amalgamation, but failed also to carry out the decisions of the party that a militant struggle be waged against the Sigman right wing machine which consciously worked for the defeat of the strike in order to use the defeat to eliminate the left wing from control of the union. The failure to pursue a militant policy in this and many other matters demanded by the party has weakened the party influence among the masses in the cloakmakers' strike.

The party must therefore resolutely resist all these manifestations, endeavoring to convince the comrades of their mistakes and bring them to the party line. If these measures do not result in the correction of these right wing deviations, the party will be obliged to take stronger measures.

3. Party Education.

THE New York Workers' School represents a big achievement for the party. Hundreds of comrades are receiving a training in Marxism and Leninism thru the classes of this school. Similar schools on a smaller scale are being developed in other cities. This work is of the utmost importance to the party and must be given the fullest support and extended. A training in the theoretical basis of Communism is the best guarantee that our party will remain true to the correct Communist policies and reject all deviations to the right or left. Such training will also strengthen the party for every phase of its work.

4. The Daily Worker.

THE maintaining of The DAILY WORKER, the extension of its influence by increasing its circulation, is one of the major tasks of the party. The DAILY WORKER plays a great part in the life of the party. It is a centralizing influence, which gives the party membership the line of the party from day to day on the events of the class struggle. In a special resolution, the Central Committee has pointed out in detail the importance of The DAILY WORKER to the party and must give careful attention to this resolution and take up in earnest the work which it sets for the party in relation to The DAILY WORKER.

IV. The Party Reorganization.

1. The Results of the Party Reorganization.

THE party took up the work of reorganizing the party on the basis of street and shop nuclei approximately one year ago. The party now has sufficient experience with the new form of organization to establish the fact that the party policy of centralizing the party and organizing shop and street nuclei in place of the language and territorial branches was correct. The reorganization has turned the face of the party toward the workers in the factories. The work of the party in the Passaic strike, and in other places where similar work is now under way, the formation of such factory nuclei as that in the Ford plant, issuing a factory paper reaching from ten to fifteen thousand workers each month, an achievement which is duplicated on a lesser scale in two score other great industries, shows the possibilities of the new form of organization in building the party influence and establishing contact between the party and the masses of workers. The Central Committee emphatically rejects any suggestion that the reorganization was a mistake. What is needed is not a backward step, but more careful, systematic work to build more functioning shop nuclei and to teach the street nuclei how to carry on their work effectively.

2. More Attention to the Organization Problems.

IN establishing the gains for the party thru the reorganization, the Central Committee does not ignore the many manifest weaknesses of the party organization at the present time. The party has many organizational problems to solve. The teaching of shop nuclei how to become really living, functioning organizations, the instruction of the street nuclei in their work, the meeting of the language difficulties which exist, the making of the inner life of the shop and street nuclei of the party interesting to the members, the mobilization of all the members in the party work, must be all given earnest attention in order to solve these problems. Many of the weaknesses of the party organization are due to the fact that the party has not given sufficient attention to the organization side of its work. The party organization is the basis of all the party work. Unless we build a strong, efficient organization all our work will suffer. The party must turn its attention to this work. The Central Committee instructs that for the immediate future, at least half of the energies of the leading committees of the party must be devoted to the work of strengthening the party organization. Where the district organizers have taken up this problem in earnest, immediate far-reaching results have been attained, as for instance, Comrade Tallentire in Minnesota, where the dues payments have increased from 385 three months ago to 1,000 in the month of October, with the cor-

CLOAKMAKERS CONTINUE WAR ON JOB SHOPS

Ten of Forty Thousand Still on Strike

NEW YORK, Nov. 16.—Settlement by striking cloakmakers of their four and a half month struggle with the Industrial Council of Cloak & Suit Mfgrs. — "inside" manufacturers, — leaves about 10,000 strikers still out in the fight against the cloak jobbers. The Intl. Ladies' Garment Workers' Union estimates in addition that about 7,000 unemployed cloakmakers are added to the strikers; 15,000 are back in settled shops of "independent" manufacturers. If the terms of settlement reached between the union representatives and inside manufacturers are approved by the membership of each side, the same terms will apply in all settled shops of independents.

Wage increases of $4 to $9, about 10 per cent over those recommended by the governor's advisory commission which spent two years investigating the industry, have been granted. Likewise the 44-hour week recommended by the governor's commission has been changed to a 42-hour week for the first two years of the agreement and 40-hours for the last year. The joint labor bureau recommended is to be established and the provisions of the old agreement dealing with unemployment insurance, Prosanis label and joint board of sanitary control are to be continued.

Discharge Terms.

The most important concession of the union is granting the manufacturers the right to discharge 10 per cent of their working forces annually, provided that the employer has 35 or more working and that he dismisses no worker who has not been given 52 weeks' pay for the year. Inside manufacturers employing less than 35 may only exercise the discharge right if they do not let out any work, employ no contractors. What the union will gain from the jobbers in the way of recognition of responsibility for conditions in contractors' shops depends on the settlement made. Also the question of limitation of contractors depends on this. The guarantee of 26 weeks work a year is sacrificed, altho inside manufacturers in the association average about 37 weeks' work a year. Contractors shops get an average of only 26.23 weeks work a year.

Cost $2,000,000.

The spring sample season begins in a week or two so that there will be employment for the most skilled workers fairly quickly. But the bulk of the cloakmakers are not expected to be at work until January when the spring manufacturing season begins in earnest. The fall season has been lost to those not returned to settled shops. The strike is said to have cost the union about $2,000,000.

"INDUSTRIAL FREEDOM" SLOGAN USED BY OPEN SHOP TO RALLY CONFERENCE AGAINST UNIONISM

By ROBERT DUNN, Federated Press.

"WE must build our redoubts" is the slogan under which the American plan-open shop conference is rallying its members to its 10th semi-annual session in Dallas, Tex., Nov. 16-17. The words are from an address by Charles Evans Hughes warning against "destructive forces now operating thruout the world"—which the open shop conference interprets as bolshevism and labor unionism.

The American plan-open shop conference is a loose association of employers' associations established in 1922. Its headquarters are in Salt Lake City, Kansas City, San Francisco and Detroit.

IN urging business executives to attend the Dallas convention the invitation committee promises "It's the place where you meet the men who are on the firing line. . . . You will be in an open shop city, you will be among your friends, we need you, we want you and we expect you to come."

Attending the conference will be "men who are making real progress in handling the biggest problem now before the American public—the labor problem."

UNDER the caption, "Held High the Torch of Industrial Freedom," an inviting booklet tells of American Federation of Labor efforts to war on the open shop. "Day and night without surcease, these enemies of American institutions are striking at the very foundations of our industrial peace, social unity and economic development. How futile, then, for any man even to attempt to cope with these perilous situations unaided, isolated, aloof."

THE invitation committee contains representatives of the Associated Building Employers of Detroit, Merchants' and Manufacturers' Association of Los Angeles—already mirrored to action by the decision of the A. F. of L. to convene there next autumn; the Open Shop Association of San Antonio, Texas; Florida Employers' Association; Employers' Association of Fort Wayne; Associated Industries of Seattle; Milwaukee Employers' Council, and the local American Plan-Open Shop Association of Little Rock, Ark.

These and representatives of some 200 militant anti-union American plan bodies will gather in Dallas to confer on bigger and better tactics for fighting trade unions.

IN its advice to local "industrial associations" the open shop conference is all for militancy and disciplined organization among employers. It says:

"The industrial association must be found fighting where the war is on and not confine itself to some odd quarter of its own selection and predilection." "The industrial association should not consider the community secure as long as there exists a single closed shop industry in that community."

THE same aggressive note, which may well serve as a battle challenge to the A. F. of L., is sounded in the observation that "closed shop conditions must be looked upon as a form of industrial pestilence which must be immediately cleaned up."

Instructions given in the minutes of the May Detroit convention tell how pressure may be brought against employers reluctant to break with unions: "Financial and building interests should be brought to the point that they will confine their awards to open shop contractors."

REMINISCENT of the A. F. of L. tilt with the Detroit churches are the instructions under presenting the open shop to churches: "Furnish your pastors with literature on the open shop. Meet with your ministerial association."

Finally the conferences defines its own function as that of a correlation agency helping local and state employers' associations in their struggle with unions. "The American plan-open shop conference must be known as a voice of industry for the open shop—as the militant, determined, intelligent group that is equipped to fight for, ably represent, the cause."

THE organization is committed to company unions, if necessary to head off real trade unions, and is especially interested in preventing organization of workers in the automobile and motion picture industries. Concerning the latter it says: "Every industrial association (including its affiliated bodies) should work to keep the motion picture industry in the open shop ranks."

The Dallas convention will undoubtedly take up methods for combatting the announced purpose of four big A. F. of L. unions to cut the closed union shop in their sections of the movie industry. The convention will also discuss new means of meeting the A. F. of L. campaign in the anto industry and in organization of the unorganized.

Plays for Workers, Is Aim of New Group

NEW YORK, Nov. 15.—(FP)—The Biggest Boob in the World, a fantastic labor comedy translated from the German by Upton Sinclair is the first production announced by the Workers' Theatre. Karl Wittvegat is author of the play. The play will be given Dec. 6 in the Church of All Nations, New York, and repeated there Dec. 8 and 10 before being taken to various labor halls thruout the city.

The aim of the Workers' Theatre, according to Michael Gold—editor New Masses and organiser of the group, is to present to American audiences the spirit of labor in drama that will touch closely the life of workers. Gold contends that the American and European stage is decadent, that it panders to the tasts of a small wealthy and effete audience, and therefore has no great influence in the life of the nation. He plans to model the Workers Theatre somewhat after the newer theatres of Russia, which, according to the noted British critic Huntley Carter, are now the most vigorous and alive in the world.

Wants Whiskay for Medicine.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 16.—L. C. Andrews, dry chief, is going to ask congress to permit the manufacture of whiskey in the United States. The whiskey is to be made for medicinal purposes, to replenish the present stock that will be exhausted within five years.

WOLL COMMENDS COOLIDGE FOR SOVIET POLICY

A. F. of L. Reactionary Is In Accord

Pretending to speak for the workers, Matthew Woll, reactionary vice-president of the American Federation of Labor, has sent a letter to President Coolidge commending him on his stand against recognition of the Soviet Union, as expressed in his Kansas City Armistice Day speech.

Chambere Prova It.

That the workers are in accord with Coolidge's policy is shown by the actions of the New York and United States chambers of commerce and the A. F. of L. against Russian recognition, Woll said to Coolidge.

Gives an Earfull.

Woll devoted 7,000 words, or about seven newspaper columns, to explain to Calvin the reasons the workers were opposed to recognizing Russia.

A large part of the letter was devoted to attacking Sherwood Eddy, who addressed the A. F. of L. convention at Detroit on Russia. He declared that Eddy was "in league with the Communists" to spread Soviet propaganda in the United States.

"Folly," Says Mr. Woll.

Mr. Woll informed Coolidge that future revolutions and internal turmoil in Russia are certain, and until the time when the Russian government is firmly established upon a program of international justice, America would be committing the greatest folly to offer recognition.

Asks for Fair Play from Police in Box Makers' Union Strike

NEW YORK, Nov. 16.—Fair play to striking paper box workers and the removal of policemen from delivery wagons was requested of the police department in a letter sent yesterday to Police Commissioner McLaughlin by Fred Caiola, manager of the Paper Box Makers' Union.

The police commissioner's attention was called to a recent statement by the manufacturers' association to the effect that "through concerted action efforts the full co-operation of the police department has been secured." The union maintains that every manufacturer has been furnished with officers who ride on every delivery wagon and prevent the striking union drivers from approaching the strikebreakers "with a view to convincing them that they are doing an injustice to the strikers."

"We beg of you to maintain a neutral position," concludes Mr. Caiola, "giving our boys the right and opportunity to do their lawful picketing. This can only be achieved by removing the policemen from the wagons."

2ND CONFERENCE OF NEW ENGLAND I. L. D. IS CALLED

Meeting to Be Held in Boston, Nov. 28

(Special to The Daily Worker)

BOSTON, Mass., Nov. 16.—The second annual conference of the International Labor Defense, New England district, will be held here, Nov. 28, at Franklin Union Hall, 41 Berkeley St. Delegates will attend from labor unions, working class organizations, and I. L. D. branches from Massachusetts, Rhoda Island, Maine, Varment and New Hampshire.

All Urged to Attend.

All affiliated and sympathetic organizations are urged to send delegates to the conference. The representation will be as follows: two delegates each for all trade unions, co-operatives, fraternal societies, and clubs; two delegates for each I. L. D. branch; each I. L. D. branch secretary can come as a delegate; former class war prisoners are invited as fraternal delegates.

Demonstration of Unity.

The aim of the I. L. D. is to make this conference an imposing demonstration of the unity of all progressive elements in the labor movement for the defense and support of persecuted workers and their families, and for organized resistance to capitalist persecution in America and thruout the world.

Suppression in New England.

That action is needed in New England is pointed out by the call for the conference, which says:

"The suppression of the civil rights of the workers has assumed such alarming proportions in New England, particularly in Massachusetts, that it demands the immediate consideration of every progressive workers' organization and of every forward looking individual interested in the progress and development of the labor movement. Facts show that labor speakers have been barred from using public meeting places by specific orders from local officials. Cities and towns have shut their doors tight to those who work to speak in the interests of labor.

"The constitutional right of workers to freedom of speech and assembly has been boldly violated by police and city officials in Boston, Lawrence, Fall River, Lynn, and other places where labor meetings have been interfered with or prohibited. Government departments are being used, not to serve the ends of justice, but rather as a means of establishing a widespread system of espionage over those who are active in the labor movement. Workers active in the struggle against the employers are prosecuted on trumped-up charges and given long jail sentences. Foreign-born workers are deported on pretexts dear to the hearts of the white terror. The fundamental rights of the workers to freedom of speech and assembly, to organize to better their conditions—these rights are being ruthlessly assailed and trampled under foot."

N. W. Parents' League to Meet Thursday Night

An important meeting of the Parents' League of the Northwest Side will be held Thursday, Nov. 18, at 3301 Le Moyne St. There will be election of officers. Carl Haessler, chief editor of the Federated Press will speak on "Who controls the schools and why."

OIL! A NEW NOVEL By Upton Sinclair

(Copyright, 1926, by Upton Sinclair)

And the same thing applied to the movement in its national aspects. The American Federation of Labor was maintaining a bureau in Washington, for the purpose of combatting the radicals, and this bureau was for practical purposes the same as any patriotic society; its function was to collect false statements about Russia from all over the world, and feed them to the American labor press. And of course, if any labor man was defiant, and insisted upon telling the other side, he would incur the bitter enmity of this machine, and they would throw him to the wolves. There would be a scare story in the capitalist press, telling how the Communists had got possession of the plasterers' union, or maybe the button workers, and the grand jury was preparing action against a nest of conspirators. The average labor leader, no matter how honest and sincere, shivered in his boots when such a club was swung over his head.

II

Also there was Harry Seager and his troubles. The Seager Business College had turned out a class of young men and women, thoroughly trained to typewrite. "All men are created free and equal," and also, "Give me liberty or give me death." And now these young people were going about in the business offices of Angel City, and discovering that nobody wanted employes to typewrite anything of that sort! In plain words these young people were being told that the Seager Business College was a Bolshevik institution, and the business men of the city had been warned not to employ its graduates. Th boycott was illegal n Angel City, and if any labor men tried to apply it, they would be whisked into jail in a jiffy. But imagine Harry Seager asking the district attorney to prosecute the heads of the "Merchants' and Manufacturers' Association, whose campaign contributions had put the district attorney into office!

Bunny went up to Paradise, and there was another bunch of grief. In preparation for the coming struggle over the wage scale, the oil operators were weeding out the "trouble-makers," which meant the active union men. And now for the first time, Koss Consolidated was following the policy of the rest. Ben Riley, one of the fellows who met in the Rascum cabin, had been told that he was no longer needed. They had too many men, the foreman had said, but that was a plain lie, because he had taken on half a dozen new men since. No, Ben was a Socialist, and had talked at meetings in Paradise, and distributed Socialist papers that showed the monstrous wastes in the oil industry, and the world-rivalry for oil which was to cause the next and great war.

It was Ruth who told Bunny about this; very seriously, with distress in her gentle eyes. "It's a shame, Bunny, because Ben has got no place to go. And here he's got a home, and a wife and two little girls."

Bunny was worried too; Dad had promised this kind of thing should not happen!

"Can't you do something about it?" pleaded Ruth.

"Well, Ruth, but Ben was a pumper, and that's in the department of operation, and Dad has only to do with the development work. He wouldn't butt in on the superintendent of operation."

"But then, ask him to give Ben a job on development work."

"I'll ask him, Ruth, but I know what he'll say. If he undertook to make that for men that other departments want to get rid of, he'd make bad feeling. You know what a lot of fuss he makes about good feeling inside the organization."

"Yes, Bunny, but then, what about Ben's feelings, and all the men?" Ruth persisted, with that surprising force that gentle people sometimes display. Ruth did not understand abstract questions, she had not theories about the "class struggle"; but when it came to a human fact, a grievance, then she was possessed by it, and as determined as Paul. These men who came to the cabin to argue and discuss, they were all her friends, and if they did not get a square deal, something must be done!

So here was Bunny in his old tormenting position watching a fight which he was powerless to stop, or even to mitigate! Ben Riley managed to get work on a ranch; he had to put in twelve hours a day, but all the same, he would come onto the tract at night and distribute his Socialist literature—and of course with a burning sense of bitterness, shared by his friends.

STRIKE STRATEGY

By WILLIAM Z. FOSTER

ARTICLE XVII

Under-Cover Men

American employers make more extensive use of under-cover men than any capitalists in the world. They plant large numbers of detectives and stool pigeons among the workers to betray and defeat them. Those under-cover men constitute a real problem in all important organizing campaigns and strikes. Strike strategy must include ways and means to uncover these traitors and to defeat their treacherous activities.

In all sections of the labor movement the under-cover men are a deadly influence, but nowhere so much as in newly-formed organizations of the unskilled. In established unions the employers, to control the masses, depend largely upon the corrupt and conservative bureaucracy. But in new unions and movements of the unorganized, the employers have to depend upon the under-cover men. Hence, employers flood such new unions with their detectives and try to capture them entire.

In about all the great movements of the unorganized in American industries under-cover men work their way into the leading committees. Often the leadership is saturated with spies and detectives. In some cases, as in the I. W. W. a dozen years ago, the rubber strike in Akron, under-cover men actually made up a majority of the leading union committees.

Under-cover men are obstructionists, provocateurs, spies, and disrupters. When many of them are working together in a new union they may engage in all these activities, simultaneously, but generally they are to be found performing one particular, organized role, the character of which is dependent on the state of the movement. The employers carefully fit their policies in the shops to barStrangling a Strike

Under-cover men appear as obstructionists especially when an organizing campaign is just beginning, or is just weakly going ahead. Then the employers may find it more advisable to try to choke out the movement quietly than to smash it in open struggle. Therefore, they set their stool-pigeons, well-organized and strategically situated, at a policy of systematic obstructionism. These worthies oppose the best leaders, spread defeatism among the workers, and block every effort to build or vitalize the movement. In this way many a promising movement has been killed.

The employers, to facilitate the slow strangulation of the movement, do not discharge or otherwise victimize leading workers, fearing thus to galvanize the whole body of workers into action. Under these circumstances, the left wing must militantly expose the harmful tactics of the detectives. It must fight for the democratization of the leading committees, and upon every possible occasion force these doubtful characters before mass meetings of the rank and file to defend their reactionary policies. When the leading union committee is controlled by under-cover men, ways must be found to crystallize the honest forces in the union and to gradually build a substitute leading body.

Provoking Premature Strikes

Where a movement is going ahead effectively and the choking process can not succeed, then the employers may decide to kill the union by a premature strike. Then the under-cover men become provocateurs, demanding a strike to adjust some discharge case or other grievance carefully rigged up by the employers. As strike provocateurs, the under-cover men are especially dangerous. They pretend to be the defenders of the rank and file. But the left wing must learn to keep its head and not allow the workers to be stampeded into hopeless strikes.

In flourishing organization campaigns, such as those in the packing and steel industries in 1917-19, the role of the under-cover men is reduced pretty much to that of the spy and informer. Then the under-cover man must pretend to go along with the movement in order to secure strategic assistance from the reactionary policies of the present trade union bureaucracy.

Consequently, in the packing and steel industry campaigns, some of the most effective organizers later were discovered to be detectives.

In strikes, notably of the unorganized, the under-cover men blossom forth primarily as disrupters and betrayers. Especially is this the case in the later, more difficult stages of these struggles. They then spread defeatism among the workers.

Spreading Defeatism

They head "back-to-work" movements, frame up acts of violence to jail the leaders or discredit the strike, and in numerous other ways seek to break the ranks of the workers. The policy of organized under-cover men in an organization of the workers may vary from time to time. But it is based in the methods most likely to break up the movement in the given circumstances.

Left wing leaders must learn how to combat the menace of the under-cover man. This is not to be done by inaugurating alarmist spy hunts such as have occurred in some unions. The best way to approach the problem is by a careful study of the given situation, and to systematically isolate those doubtful individuals who are manifestly carrying out the under-cover policy of the employers. This much can be done to neutralise these traitors and often they can be exposed and driven from the unions.

The Fight for Unity

The essence of good leadership in strike situations is to conduct a successful fight to establish and maintain the unity of the strikers in the face of innumerable splitting and disintegrating tendencies. The fighting policy of the employers against the workers is well-expressed by the time-honored axiom of all strategists, "Divide and Conquer." And their ways to divide and weaken the workers are many, devious, and difficult to defeat.

In the foregoing we have indicated some of the more important of these ways and how to checkmate them. The employers play skilled against unskilled, native workers against foreign-born, whites against blacks, unemployed against employed, adults against youth, men against

Methods of Division

The employers seek to demoralize the workers intellectually by injecting the poison of patriotism in their ranks and by cultivating religious prejudices among them. They starve the strikers and their women and children, they terrorize them with the courts, the army, the police, and various kinds of private thugs. To all these methods they add bribery, in the shape of cash payments to leaders, and of illusory concessions to the workers, such as company unions, welfare systems, temporary wage increases, etc.

They plant their provocateurs and detectives in the ranks of the workers to mislead and betray them. They try to force them back into the mills or shops with "Citizens' Committees" and "Back-to-Work" organizations. Their nondescript politicians and go-betweens try to poison the strikers' spirit in a hundred insidious ways. In fact quiver the employers have many deadly arrows of disruption to shoot into the ranks of the workers.

Unite the Primary Task

To defeat the employers' many phased policy of driving wedges between the different categories of workers, of starving, terrorizing, demoralizing, and bribing them; to maintain a solid, unbreakable unity of the strikers in spite of all these attacks, is the prime task of working class strike strategy. It is the sine qua non for winning strikes. And this can be accomplished by intelligent and loyal application of the general line of strategy above outlined.

American capitalism is strong but the workers can thwart it with correct policies and proletarian determination. The pressure of capitalist exploitation forces the workers to unite regardless of all obstacles. They tend to forget their differences and to see clearly the powerful enemy, who can be defeated only by united action. It is our task to speed up these unifying tendencies, to help the workers to rise superior to every difference and weakness among them. It is a battle for unity and it will be won

Royalism in the United States

It has often been stated that the capitalists are only patriotic to the profit system; that the particular country which they profess love is only a base of operations for them. This is true. When they have a quarrel with the capitalists of other countries they pull out the flag and dig up the necessary patriotic hokum in order to encourage the fighting spirit of their cannon fodder. They talk glibly on national holidays about "American traditions" and denounce the Communists who would introduce Marxism and Leninism instead of the "ideals of Washington, Jefferson and Lincoln."

The flunkeyism displayed by our parasitic class towards the royal bums from Roumania—about as dissolute and bawdy an outfit as ever sprung from the sewers of monarchism—shows that there is no essential difference between the republicanism of our ruling classes and the monarchism, of what is left of the European aristocracy.

The bourgeoisie no longer have any quarrel with the aristocracy. They can afford to put them on the payroll. They get a kick out of it. The glamor of royalty is used to good advantage by the British ruling classes to hold the shaky empire together and to dazzle the masses. It is quite evident that our bourgeoisie would give much to have a royal family in the White House instead of a president, provided they could get away with it. Kings nowadays mind their own business and it would be much cheaper to keep a royal family in champagne than to shoulder the cost of electing a couple of senators.

In Chicago Communists and radicals of other working class organizations organized demonstrations to bring the terror imposed on the people of Roumania to the attention of the masses. They succeeded and got arrested for their pains. Knowing that the working class have no illusions about royalty politicians who expect to be re-elected held aloof from the queenly kowtowing. But only the revolutionists upheld the best traditions of the American struggle against royalism and aristocracy. In the days when the rising American capitalist class were the instruments of evolution in giving the wheel of progress a forward turn.

International Labor to the Defense of Sacco and Vanzetti

Governor Fuller of Massachusetts is under strong guard in Paris because of the demonstrations carried out there by the French workers as a protest against the threatened death of Sacco and Vanzetti at the hands of the ruling classes in Massachusetts.

Every fresh attempt on the part of the ruling classes to feed those two Italian workers to the electric chair has been met by the workers with renewed efforts to block the executioner's hand.

Not only in the United States is this determination shown. The workers of every country in the world have expressed their indignation against the conspiracy aimed at those labor leaders. A conspiracy designed to make a horrible example of Sacco and Vanzetti and drive fear into the hearts of other members of the labor movement who are shouldering the responsibility of giving a forward lead to the working class movement.

That the capitalists have failed so far is a tribute to the growing class solidarity of the workers. But we must not rest on our oars. The late blow in the face to the Sacco and Vanzetti defense was given by Judge Thayer when he refused the victims of capitalist government a new trial despite the introduction of new evidence that justified another trial. Even many conservative capitalist papers admitted this.

The series of mass meetings and demonstrations now being organized in the United States to mobilize working class opinion behind the defense of our comrades should receive the enthusiastic support of every worker in the country.

Marx on Fordism

Workers are thinking about Ford's 5-day week. They are wondering if there is a catch to it. Beginning in Friday's issue The DAILY WORKER will run a series of articles telling in a simple way the economics of the Ford system as Karl Marx would have analyzed it. Most workers don't know that the greatest economist that ever lived, the economist of the workingclass, figured out the mechanics of Ford's system of exploitation before Henry was born. "Karl Marx on Fordism" will run in four daily articles. They are written by Thurber Lewis.

STRIKERS HAIL SETTLEMENT AS VICTORY SIGN

Toilers Enthused Over Breach in Passaic Mills

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PASSAIC, N. J., Nov. 16.—"The ranks of the mills are broken. The strikers are more determined today than ever before to fight the battle to a finish. If it takes another winter of suffering, we'll stand firm until the union is recognized." It was with this challenge that Gustav Deak, young president of the Passaic local of the United Textile Workers Union, leading the long fight against the mill barons, greeted the news of the surrender of the Worsted Mills to union demands, before a huge mass meeting of strikers.

The enthusiasm in the ranks of the strikers was never higher. Their morale has been lifted to an indomitable pitch by the victory in a large mill employing 700 workers. Mass meetings were held thruout the strike area and the Worsted settlement hailed as the first step to victory.

Messgar Talks.

A special meeting of the strikers affected by the Worsted Mill agreement was called at their strike headquarters. Gustav Deak and International Vice-president James Starr spoke to the workers. They introduced Manager Middy of the Worsted Co., who told the strikers that everything would be done to put them back to work at the earliest possible moment and to create harmonious application of the agreement signed.

While the other mills have not officially recognized the move of the Worsted officials, the strikers are confident that the first break will mean more are settling down to fight it out until the ranks of the mill owners weaken. There are rumors of the Botta and Botany mills taking steps looking towards negotiations with the union.

"Get a Card."

Vice-president Starr told the Worsted workers that when they reported at the gates to take up their jobs again that they must take their union cards with them. "If you haven't got one get it," he said.

President MacMahon of the U. T. W. called the Worsted settlement the first stride in the direction of the New Jersey textile industry.

Queen Gets Flat Welcome in Gary

mony Roumanions. But one would not know it.

Queen Tries to Break Ice.

The situation was becoming unbearable. The train came to a halt before a group of some 300 workers. It was the queen herself that made the effort to break the ice. She called out: "Are there any Roumanians here?" No answer. She called again. One man stepped forth. He went up to her majesty, and inclined his head as she did hers. He spoke to her in Roumanian for several minutes.

Taking advantage of the break in the ranks, a photographer, who was waiting impatiently for some movement that would afford a printable picture, called out: "How about a cheer for the queen?" The big steel men in the car looked daggers at the men. There was a tone of intimidation to their looks.

He Got Pictures.

A half-hearted cheer arose, a meaningless, unmeant cheer. And the photographer got his picture. The white car moved on. The hopes of dampness was only partially liquidated. Such was the welcome that the representative of Balkan oppressins got from the Gary steel workers.

25 WORKERS ARE SLAIN BY GOVERNMENT TROOPS IN NEW JAVA FIGHTING

LONDON, Nov. 16.—New uprisings have occurred in Java, according to a Central News dispatch from Batavia.

Five hundred workers attacked troops at Labocan. They were repulsed after heavy fighting. Twenty-five were killed, it is claimed.

Communications between Labocan and Batavia have been interrupted. The government is sending reinforcements to aid the troops in putting down the workers.

The number of casualties in the fighting, which has been intermittent since last week, now runs into the hundreds, it is reported here.

Will Seek Amendment to Nullify Decision of U. S. Supreme Court

MADISON, Wis., Nov. 15.—Senator LaFollette of Wisconsin today announced he would introduce a constitutional amendment at the coming session of congress to nullify the supreme court decision, upholding the right of the president to remove civil service officials without the consent of the state.

The decision approving the dismissal of Postmaster Myers of Portland, Ore., "tends to nullify the constitutional limitation on the president's appointive power afforded by the clause 'by and with the advice and consent of the senate,'" said LaFollette.

Corn Crop Yield of Illinois Is Far From Good, Survey Reveals

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Nov. 14.—Illinois corn yield is only slightly below the average but extra work and care, due to the varying quality, will be required in handling it, according to the November 1 joint report of the Illinois and federal departments of agriculture.

The state yield per acre is estimated at 35 bushels compared with an average of 36 bushels and 42 bushels last year. State production totals 326,820,000 bushels.

Frosts, rains and storm have caused grade corn loss thruout the state, the report states.

Sheffield, Anti-Calles Minister to Mexico, Has Coolidge Backing

WASHINGTON, Nov. 16.—James R. Sheffield, American ambassador to Mexico, who is returning to his post next week, has the full confidence and support of President Coolidge, it was declared at the white house today.

Sheffield favors a "vigorously policy" in dealing with Mexico on the oil and land laws controversy.

The presidential spokesman said Secretary of State Kellogg declined to comment on Mexico's reported suggestion that the differences between the two governments be referred to the Hague court for adjustment.

John Haynes Holmes to Speak on Passaic at Forum Here Sunday

John Haynes Holmes of New York will speak at the meeting of the Chicago Forum next Sunday afternoon, Nov. 21, discussing the significance of "The Passaic Strike."

Mr. Holmes has had active contact with the situation in several ways, particularly in the effort to maintain the rights of free speech in Passaic. He will deal with the strike as an episode in the progress toward industrial democracy in America.

New Leader and the Amalgamated Left Wing

Ten Important Facts The New Leader Ignored in Its Slanderous Attack Upon the Left Wing in the Trade Unions

By BEN GITLOW

THE New Leader of November 13 contains an editorial on the meeting held by the Amalgamated Section of the Trade Union Educational League on Saturday November 6 at the Central Opera House, New York City.

Ignoring entirely the issues raised at the meeting, the editorial concludes as follows:

"At any rate we are unable to tell where the spy ends and the Communist begins and there is reason for believing that in some cases both are employed by the same paymaster."

The editorial also charges that the meeting was a mask for the Communist Party.

One. The meeting was called by the Amalgamated Section of the Trade Union Educational League, not by the Communist Party.

Two. The meeting was called in order to explain how the reactionary machine in the Amalgamated was helping the Cloakmakers who were out on strike for 19 weeks.

Three. The direct cause for the calling of the meeting was the fact that a number of workers were deprived of their jobs upon the order of Beckerman, manager of the New York Joint Board of the Amalgamated, because they dared to take up in their shops collections for the striking cloakmakers. Some of those discharged for this reason were Sam Liptzen, A. Nelson, Philip Aronberg.

Facts of Meeting.

THE following facts were brought out at the meeting:

1—That Beckerman, the manager of the New York Joint Board, during the Cloakmakers' strike, with the approval of Hillman, closed a most shameful agreement with the New York clothing manufacturers. In the agreement not a single demand was won by the union. At a time when other needle trades unions had won or were fighting for the 40-hour week, and other demands, the Amalgamated accepted a 44-hour week, and gave further concessions to the manufacturers. The announcement of the Amalgamated agreement brought forth a statement by Mr. Finder, representing the cloak bosses, who were most bitterly fighting the union, praising the agreement and the leaders of the Amalgamated. This agreement accepted during the early stages of the cloakmakers' strike, and after the furriers had won a notable victory and were on the point of a blow at the cloakmakers and a great aid to the cloak bosses.

A. C. W. Delays.

2—That in spite of the fact that Sidney Hillman as president of the Amalgamated at the meeting called at Madison Square Garden to vote in favor of the strike, pledged the whole hearted support of the Amalgamated in the struggle, the Amalgamated failed until very late in the struggle to assist the cloakmakers, and than in driblets, the total sums amounting to only $27,500, an insignificant amount for an organization like the Amalgamated. That the Amalgamated is the one union in the needle trades that is in a very good position to financially assist the cloakmakers.

3—That Abraham Beckerman, the New York Joint Board manager, without the interference of Hillman and the general Executive board during the course of the strike worked closely with the opposition forces in the cloakmakers and carried on a vicious campaign against the strike and its left wing leaders.

4—That the decision to fax the members of the New York Joint Board of the Amalgamated for cloakmakers relief was made after Beckerman had given strict orders that there must be no collections taken for the striking cloakmakers in the shops, after a number of workers were discharged for doing so upon the orders of Beckarman, and deprived of a livelihood and a few days after the Amalgamation Section of the Trade Union Educational League had announced publicly that it would hold the Central Opera House meeting.

Scab Work Done.

5—That in Amalgamated shops in Newark, with the knowledge of the business agents, scab work has being done.

6—That the Beckerman Hillman right wing administration of the Amalgamated was working hand in glove with the reactionery right wing forces lead by Sigman in the International to sabotage the strike and create difficulties for the left wing leadership.

7—That when the omalgamation issue was raised during the strike by the General Strike Committee of the cloakmakers, Hillman who has always been taking credit for being in favor of amalgamation remained as silent as a clam.

8—That when delegates representing the New York Joint Board of the Amalgamated appeared at the conference of New York unions rallied to organize relief, they stated that they came as observers and had no power to commit their organization.

Opposed Picket Demonstration.

9—That when a decision was made by the conference to march to City Hall to protest before Mayor Walker against the unjustifiable mass arrests, the breaking up of picket lines and police brutality, Beckerman declared that the Amalgamated was not officially a part of the conference, that it had made no decision to participate in the march and therefore would not take part in the demonstration.

10—That when Philip Orlofsky, manager of the Cutters' Local No. 4 endorsed Smith for governor after the cloakmakers were bitterly fighting the strikebreaking atrocities of this Tammany governor, who tried to force arbitration, whose commissioner granted a decision in favor of the bosses, and whose judges granted the most severe injunction. Beckerman and Hillman remained absolutely silent and did not criticize Orlofsky for his treacherous endorsement.

New Leader Ignores Them.

THESE facts and many more raised at the meeting, the New Leader ignores and instead it raises a bogy-man about spies and agents of the bosses. If anything is proved by these facts, it is that the whole right wing machine in the needle trades together with the Jewish Daily Forward and its envious understudy The New Leader, are the agents of the bosses. That their role is one of treachery to the workers, one of substage against the workers militant struggles for better conditions.

The meeting held in Central Opera House was of great significance to the workers in the needle trades. Upon the platform were gathered the militant leaders of all the needle trades unions. It was a demonstration of the need of greater unification of the militant forces in the industry to meet the difficulties that have now become very clear to all workers in the needle trades, as a result of the furriers and cloakmakers' strike. The resolution of the meeting sounded a new note for the needle trades in addition to protesting against the substage of the cloakmakers on strike by the Amalgamated officials and pledging full support to the cloakmakers' strike.

It raised the issue of amalgamation and the defeat of the right wing by the compromising treacherous policy and for the militant fighting policy of the left wing.

The New Leader had never rare. It can offer no constructive proposals against the program of the left wing it can, like in its editorial, deal only in lies, insinuations and calumny.

Loeb. The statements of the political Committee on the situation in the Communist Party of the Soviet Union were unanimously approved, as were the resolutions on the other questions mentioned above.

The resolution on The DAILY WORKER calls for energetic support of the Keep The DAILY WORKER Campaign and a campaign to extend its influence by boosting up the circulation of the paper.

Inner Party Unity.

The resolution of the Central Committee establishes clearly that great progress had been made in uniting the membership and leadership of the party. While there still there remnants of factionalism remained it was agreed that there was less factionalism in the party work than at any time in its history.

Seek Appropriation for Paying Claims of Americans on Germany

WASHINGTON, Nov. 16.—A definite plan for the payment of $200,000,000 of claims of American citizens against Germany and the return of German property seized by the United States during the war was presented to the house ways and means committee by Under Secretary of the Treasury Winston.

An appropriation by congress of $100,000,000, the value of German ships and radio stations seized by the United States, was the first step proposed.

Police See Shooting of Former Ball Star

WEST PALM BEACH, Nov. 12.—John B. "Sook" Robinson, former ball player with the Rochester Internationals and Birmingham in the Southern League, now a deputy sheriff, was shot and probably fatally injured here early today, by J. V. Landes, meat clerk at the Pennsylvania Hotel, as two policemen looked on.

Use your brains and your pen to aid the workers in the class struggle.

Klan Claims Right to Operate Despite Contrary State Laws

WASHINGTON, Nov. 16.—The right of the ku klux klan of Georgia to operate in all states of the Union regardless of state laws was claimed before the supreme court today by attorneys for the secret order.

Appealing from an ouster order of the Kansas supreme court, the klan counsel invoked the constitutional privileges of free speech and free press to support the claim.

The Kansas court held that the klan had not complied with the state charter act for foreign corporations.

Fruit Growers Talk About Farm Relief

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 16.—The annual convention of the California Fruit Growers and Farmers' Association opened this week in Fullerton. The most vital problem facing them was raised in an opening speech by a representative of the state department of agriculture on the problem of relief for the difficult economic problem facing the farmer.

responding increase in the effectiveness of the work of the party units.

3. Party Mobilization Campaign.

IN order to turn the attention of the party to the work of strengthening the party organization and the training of the new party units in their work, a party mobilization campaign must be initiated immediately and during the next six months a large part of the party energies must be directed to the organizational problems. This party mobilization shall include the following:

A. The drawing back into the party of members who did not come into the reorganized party. Many members were dropped from the party thru lack of persistent propaganda to win them for the reorganized party and thru a too mechanical cutting off of these members from the reorganized party. These members can be drawn back into the party.

B. A recruiting campaign to win new members. Our nuclei must be developed the necessary organizational methods to draw into the party those workers it wins thru its activities in the class struggle. The party must learn that constant recruiting of new members must accompany the political and industrial campaigns of the party.

C. The training of efficient party officials for the shop and street nuclei. For this purpose, training schools for party officials must be established in every large city and comrades must be brought in for week-end lectures from the smaller centers.

D. Closer contact must be established between the sub-section, section and city committees with the nuclei, with representatives of these committees attending the meetings to give instructions on how to carry out the party campaigns and to train the shop nuclei how to carry on their work in the factories.

E. The shop and street nuclei must be furnished with agendas for discussion of the party problems, and work under the leadership of representatives of the committee having charge of the territory in which they are organized.

F. One of the weaknesses of the party organization is that the whole membership is not drawn into the party campaigns. The nuclei must be trained in the assignment of work to every member with regular reports on the carrying out of the work assigned.

G. In connection with this campaign, there must be a campaign for systematic payment of dues by all party members so as to register the whole strength of the party monthly dues.

H. The organization department and agitprop department shall work out concrete instructions for the carrying out of the above phases of the party mobilization campaign. The campaign to draw back the old members and recruit new members shall be so developed, as to make the Lenin memorial meetings the climax of these campaigns.

4. The Language Difficulty.

CAREFUL study must be made of the question of lack of understanding of English by the party members and their consequent difficulty in participating in the work of the new party units, and organization readjustments made to meet this problem. One step to solve this problem can be made by concentrating larger numbers of members of one language group in a street nucleus and having regular translations made. This shall not, however, be permitted to interfere with the development of the shop nuclei nor shall street nuclei composed of one language group be formed. The establishment of English classes for those members who do not understand or speak English shall be systematically undertaken.

The strengthening and more regular functioning of the language fractions will also help to solve this problem. Each language fraction must undertake a campaign to place the language fractions on a more efficient basis, with regular meetings and discussions. At these language fraction meetings representatives designated by the leading party committees should also give reports and instructions on the party campaigns in the language of the fraction or thru translated speeches. Such discussions of party questions in the language sections shall, however, only take place under the leadership of a representative of the leading committee of the territory in which the fraction is located.

5. Workers' National Language Federations Sympathetic to the Party.

THE system of national language federations within the party cannot be rebuilt. The party must be one centralized organization with the shop and street nuclei as its basic units. The organization of the national language federations sympathetic to the party in which the party fractions work may be a necessary step in the case of those language groups in which no mass organizations of workers exist. The party is supporting the organization of such a federation consisting of the Finnish workers' clubs. The political committee must study the question whether there are other language groups in relation to which a similar step is necessary and give instructions to the party fraction of such language groups to take the initiative in organizing such a national federation sympathetic to the party and its program.

6. Party Dues.

IN order to draw into the party a larger number of the exploited farmers the Central Committee finds it necessary to reduce the dues of the party in the agricultural sections to 25 cents a month. This reduction shall also apply in cases where husband and wife are both members of the party and the wife is not employed and earning an independent livelihood. In such cases the husband shall pay the regular fifty cents dues and the wife, 25 cents monthly.

WORKERS AT GARY COLD SHOULDER QUEEN

Current Events

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY

HENRY FORD is not going to worry about a wolf at the door because he has decided to give some of his employes six days' pay for five days' work. When the announcement was first made by Henry's press agent there was considerable chuckling in certain sections of the trade union movement and equally vigorous furrowing of brows in certain capitalist quarters. But Henry knew his onions and even tho he does not encourage the odor of garlic in his factory, when he computes his yearly earnings he is quite satisfied that anything he has given away for nothing can be pawned for little money.

IN an interview with Carrol Bindar of the Chicago Daily News, Ford frankly admitted that before any of this workers receives his pay check that worker must line Henry's pocket, so that Henry can afford to spend half a million dollars on the queen of Roumania or enjoy the luxury of posing that most of the ills that American flesh is heir to can be attributed to the Hahrews. Which is equal to saying that Henry is giving nothing of his own away. On the contrary, the workers are giving of their sweat and straw to Henry. Henry being wise enough to know how to pull off the trick.

THERE is quite a strong movement on in England to convince the working classes that the cause of their trouble is the shortsightedness of the British workers. There is a so-called labor mission in this country right now from England, with the object of finding out how the American capitalists manage to manage their wage slaves. One member of the mission is no other than Ernest Bevin, who was the "No-poison" of the British general strike. Bevin is beknobbing with a couple of "stars", and those "stars" are using Bevin as a fig-leaf to cover their capitalist nakedness. They believe that Bevin will be able to convince the British workers that hard work will mean prosperity for them.

* * *

IT is surprising that the British miners are fighting an almost lone battle, supported to any appreciable extent only by the Russian workers. Ernest Bevin was the outstanding leader of the British general strike.

MINERS TO ACT ON NEW TERMS OF GOVERNMENT

Delegate Conference in Close Vote

(Special to The Daily Worker)

LONDON, Nov. 18. — "They are the most abominable tarma avar put before a body of man. They could not possibly be worse," A. J. Cook, secretary of the Miners' Federation of Great Britain told the members of the delegate conference of the union meeting in London to consider the last government proposals.

With the Welsh and Yorkshire districts talking and voting against the government proposals under the leadership of Cook, a vote of 432,000 against 252,000 carried a motion referring the question to a vote of the districts and a recommendation to accept the government's basis of settlement.

The government proposals are briefly:

District settlements involving longer hours.

Standard district agreements for three years.

A national tribuna to accept and decide on appeals from either side.

The owners' portion of mine profits to be not more than 15 per cent and not less than 13 per cent.

Close Division.

The delegates who spoke in favor of referring the matter to the miners urged that they were doubtless the best terms possible under the circumstances and that the miners are growing weaker all the time.

The South Wales and Yorkshire delegates were in favor of continuing the fight. They pointed out that the acceptance of this settlement would mean the surrender of the national agreement, one of the central issues of the struggle, and would force the union to divide its forces in a struggle against the nationally united owners, backed by the government.

Last Word With Miners

It is of importance that the vote was not taken on an individual basis, but by districts, thus eliminating a very large minority in the bigger districts.

SCIENTISTS PROPOSE MAKING OLD NEPTUNE SCAB ON COAL BARONS

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PARIS, Nov. 18.—(Ins) — The tireless energy of the ocean may be harnessed and made to produce motive power, by the utilization of the difference in temperature between the surface of the sea and the lower depths, according to an announcement made before the Academy of Sciences here by Georges Claude, inventor of liquid air, and Paul Bousharet, a well-known scientist.

The theory of these men is that the tepid surface water of the ocean might be boiled in a vacuum and the cooler water of the depths used for condensation, thus producing steam. They claim that the sea could be made to produce 400,000 kilowatts of electrical energy per 1,000 cubic meters of water per second.

CUBA SEVERS ITS RELATIONS WITH URUGUAY

(Special to The Daily Worker)

HAVANA, Cuba, Nov. 16.—Diplomatic relations between Cuba and Uruguay have been broken at the command of President Machado of Cuba, who has ordered the Cuban minister to Uruguay to return to Havana and the legation at Montevideo closed.

The break was said to have been caused by the refusal of Uruguay to explain the remarks made by its delegate to the league of nations in objecting to Cuba becoming a member.

The delegate declared before the league that Cuba was a dependency of the United States under the existing Platt amendment. President Machado issued an ultimatum to Uruguay and when there was no reply forthcoming, he recalled Cuba's minister to that country and closed the legation.

Seek Murderer of Twa.

GARIBALDI GOES TO PRISON WITH COLONEL MACIA

French Fear Results of Open Trial

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PARIS, Nov. 18. — Colonel Ricciotti Garibaldi, nephew of the great Italian liberator, and accused of being an agent of fascism fomenting false plots against Italy on French soil while posing as a leader of the anti-fascist movement, has been sent to Santa prison to await trial for secreting arms and ammunition in France.

With him and on the same charge goes Colonel Macia, leader of the Catalan revolutionary movement against the Spanish directorate of Primo de Rivera. It was learned in the office of the French secret police Garibaldi was sheshed as he confronted Colonel Macia. The latter calmly smoked a cigarette and refused to speak to the Italian, who looked at the floor.

Macia's Denial.

Macia denies any connection with Garibaldi and states that the plot against the Spanish directorate that was nipped by French police was of his own making. But the police seem to have gathered sufficient evidence to show that the Italians who were involved in the Catalan attempt, were inspired by Garibaldi, himself alleged to be acting under orders of Italian fascisti.

Serious Affairs.

The French cabinet looks upon the trial of Garibaldi as a very serious affair of state. The fascisti have failed to satisfactorily prove that Garibaldi was not inspired by the fascisti in hatching so-called plots against the life of Mussolini from French soil. The French press continues to declare that Garibaldi represents the spy of the fascisti and foresaw the plots, the details of which were known to Italian police, for the purpose of stirring up discord between France and Italy. This attempt is explained on the ground that Mussolini and his fascisti are anxious to foment a war spirit to save themselves from a political debacle in their own country by

Monday $299.43

106 Members Failed to Help Keep The Daily Worker

By C. E. RUTHENBERG, Gen. Sec'y. Workers (Communist) Party

One hundred and sixty-six party members must complete their sale of Kasp The DAILY WORKER certificates daily in order to raise the weekly contributions to the Kasp The DAILY WORKER Fund to $5,000.

On Monday the contributions to the Kasp The DAILY WORKER Fund were $299.43, which is $5.00 from sixty Party members, 106 less than required to raise the $5,000 weekly during the remainder of the campaign.

Each Party member has received a $5.00 book of the Kasp The DAILY WORKER certificates. Each Party member has been asked to pay for these certificates, if he can do so and thus give the Kasp The DAILY WORKER Fund a big boost, or to sell the coupons and turn in the $5.00 thus raised.

The Kasp The DAILY WORKER certificates have now been in circulation for more than six weeks. Every Party member has had the opportunity to secure contributions among his friends and shopmates for that length of time. Those members who have made earnest efforts have had sufficient time to raise the $5,000 which is the quota they have been assessed to raise for the Kasp The DAILY WORKER Fund.

About three thousand members have turned in $5.00 to the Kasp The DAILY WORKER Fund. THERE ARE STILL SEVEN THOUSAND TO BE HEARD FROM.

The question we have to face in relation to the exemplation of the $50,000 fund, is WHETHER WE CAN STIR THESE SEVEN THOUSAND MEMBERS INTO ACTION TO RAISE $5.00 EACH DURING THE NEXT FIVE WEEKS.

Is The DAILY WORKER important enough in the eyes of these members as a weapon of our movement in the class struggle to induce them to make a real effort to raise their quota for the Kasp This DAILY WORKER Fund?

We have told these members frankly the situation of The DAILY WORKER, the importance of completing the $50,000 fund, if we are to Kasp The DAILY WORKER. Will these seven thousand members join with the three thousand who have already loyally supported The DAILY WORKER and push the campaign forward to victory?

CAN WE DEPEND UPON ONE HUNDRED AND SIXTY-SIX PARTY MEMBERS TO SEND IN FIVE DOLLARS EACH DAY TO RAISE FIVE THOUSAND DOLLARS A WEEK?

We ask those members who have not supported the Kasp The DAILY WORKER Fund to answer these question by sending in their contributions.

WE ASK EVERY ONE OF THESE SEVEN THOUSAND MEMBERS TO IMMEDIATELY RALLY TO THE SUPPORT OF THE KEEP THE DAILY WORKER FUND.

WE ASK ONE HUNDRED AND SIXTY-SIX MEMBERS TO RESPOND TO THIS CALL EACH DAY.

We will record the answer in The DAILY WORKER each day.

Chicago Tribune Says Marie's Visit Aid to Huge Loan

Marie Is Worried

In her palatial 24 room suite at the Lake Shore Drive Hotel, Queen Marie was getting her face massaged by Miss Nancy Sawyer, masseuse. While the cream was being rubbed into the royal pores, the queen chatted of this and that, of the terrific heat of Chicago's buildings AND ABOUT THE "REO" DEMONSTRATION THAT GREETED HER WHEN SHE ARRIVED IN CHICAGO.

Gets Flat Welcome by Slaves of Steel

(Special to The Daily Worker)

GARY, Ind., Nov. 16.—The nervous enthusiasm with which the scions of Chicago's Gold Coast waited their turn in line to be "presented" to Maria von Hohanzollern at the fashionable Drake Hotel was entirely lacking in the toilers of Gary's steel mills when her majesty rode thru the yards and shops in a special white observation car covered with glass.

It wasn't that the workers didn't want to know who was there to look at them. Roumanian flags flew from the tops of the buildings and they were told in advance of the coming of the queen to "inspect" them. They looked up from their heavy toil and saw the narrow-gauge royal special go slowly by. They saw the queen. And they gave her the cold shoulder.

Flat Welcome.

There was no show of enthusiasm, hardly one of recognition. There was no cheering and waving of greasy work caps as the Steel Corporation hicks in the glass-covered cars anticipated. Aboard the car in which the queen sat there was a feeling of flat failure. The president of the Illinois Steel Co. shifted nervously in his seat. A high lord of the Elgin, Joliet & Eastern showed that he felt the tenseness created by the damp welcome. The queen felt it.

As the little white cars crept between the smelters past the furnaces and thru the yards thousands of workers saw. Many of them, perhaps a majority, came from the Balkans, where Marie is known as the "mother-in-law of kings." There, too, were

Money Bags Busy at All Royal Functions

"It is certain that Queen Marie by her tour, has substantially aided any negotiations which may be in progress for a $100,000,000 loan to Roumania from the U. S. A."

This is a leading sentence in Tuesday's Chicago Tribune. No other metropolitan newspaper has permitted itself to indulge in such plain speaking with regard to the financial implications of Marie's visit. The Tribune goes further. It's well known statistician, Oscar Hewitt was given the job of computing the amount of money that the queen came in contact with in her social engagements with money bags in a score of wealthy American cities.

Tribune Opposes Loan.

Incidentally, it may be pointed out that the Tribune is against a loan to Roumania because it is against foreign loans in general. The paper, specifically the mouth organ of McCormick's International Harvester Co., is generally the spokesman of large industrial capital that finds itself in disagreement with the international money institutions of Wall Street. That is why it can speak so plainly.

Once on the job, Oscar Hewitt made a complete analysis that led off with the sentence quoted above. After saying the queen has made many friends, Hewitt goes on "A large percentage of these friends who have come in closest contact with her have good American dollars in large quantities."

Wealth Galore.

Then the figures. At one affair in New York there was 43 men and women present whose wealth aggregated $1,551,000,000. When the queen was feted by the Bankers' Club in New York all the major financial institutions of Wall Street were well represented. The presidents of these banks in $[illegible] aggregate.

The same day she dined with Chas. H. Sabin and Judge E. H. Gary, who, between them more or less control the Bethlehem Steel Co. and the United States Steel Corporation. In Philadelphia the lady was the honor guest of Edward Stotesbury, a Morgan partner, who controls with Drexel & Co.

The Packers.

The royal entertainers in Chicago were the big beef packing families. The Rumanian queen is a scion of the original Armours, whose company is one of the five. The head of the reception committee in Chicago was Arthur Meeker, vice president of Armour & Co., with resources of over $231,000,000.

In Minneapolis St. Paul, Kansas City and Seattle her majesty came into the closest contact with all the big flour, lumber and railroad families, whose fortunes run into many millions.

The real money was in New York. And it was from New York that the negotiations for the loan were conducted. But Oscar Hewitt's figures on the rest of the country are none the less enlightening, because New York is the financial capital of the nation and the provincial millionaires have their fingers in the Wall Street pie in various ways.

A Little Irony.

The Tribune statistician indulges in the irony that the freedom of his paper in this question allows him by finishing his study in the following manner:

"If, following her tour of this country, it develops that Roumania actually has applied for a loan, it is certain that she—perhaps without any thought of the loan—has made friendly acquaintances in a fertile field."

Worker Killed.

ROCKFORD, Ill., Nov. 15.—John D'Angelo, 35, was killed instantly today when the boom of a huge crane used in a scrap iron yard, collapsed and fell directly on him. Two other

Program of Work for Our Party Outlined

Central Committee Makes "Organization of Unorganized!" "A Labor Party in the 1928 Elections!" and "Work in the Trade Unions!" the Major Tasks of the Party.

THE Central Committee of the Workers (Communist) Party held a three days' session here last week to consider the situation in the United States economically and politically and draw a program for the party work for the coming six months.

The conclusions the committee came to in regard to the general situations was that in spite of the capitalist "prosperity" and the affects of con-

[illegible] of the party organization in Chicago, members of the Chicago district committee and the students of the national school of the Young Workers' League, the latter being invited to be present in order to add to their theoretical studies the knowledge to be gained thru listening to the reports and debates on the actual work of the party.

The first day and a half session of the central committee was devoted to the report of the political committee made by C. E. Ruthenberg, general secretary of the party and the resolution on the tactics of the present situation and the immediate program of work submitted in the name of the committee.

The discussion of the report and resolution centered about the peculiar [illegible] which had made itself apparent in certain sections of the party in regard to the opportunities for building of the party and its influence among the masses in the present period of [illegible] development of American industry. The report of Comrade [illegible] and the resolution of the [illegible] were unanimously approved.

dicted that there was any basis for such a pessimistic outlook. The resolution recognized the developments towards the right of the American Federation of Labor, but at the same time stressed the great opportunities for building the party influence by work among the unorganized workers in the great machine industries, as illustrated in the Passaic strike, and that the party could by active work among these workers, while not neglecting the struggle among the organized workers, strengthen itself and increase its influence. The resolution makes the following declaration on this question:

"With correct tactics the party can stimulate and lead struggles of the workers against the capitalists and become a popular party of the workers in times of 'capitalist prosperity' and 'stabilization' as well as during periods of 'hard times' and crisis. In these struggles the party can hasten the process of revolutionization of the working class."

Summarizing the achievements of the party during the last year the resolution, has this to say:

"In spite of the period of capitalist prosperity, the party is breaking its isolation and succeeded in broadening its influence and increasing its prestige among the masses of the workers.

"The party great machine for fuller use of its strength in applying the policies and tactics thru which it has made these gains and in taking up of its immediate program to build the party and extend its influence among the masses. Such a mobilization will bring even greater gains than recorded for the past year."

"A Labor Party in the 1928 Elections."

THE resolution of the Central Committee places the work of organizing the organized workers in the forefront of the party work, to which major attention must be devoted. It throws out the slogan of "A Labor Party in the 1928 Elections" and gives the party a concrete program for the realization of this program. These two campaigns with the work in the trade unions represent the most important work before the party.

While some shadings of opinion in regard to the present situation developed during the discussion the Central Committee unanimously adopted the resolution and the viewpoint it expressed.

The Organization Question.

The attention of the party organizationally after the reorganization was dealt with in detail in the resolution and was discussed at length. The resolution established the great gains for the party as a result of the reorganization, and categorically rejected the idea that the reorganization was a mistake, while at the same time recognizing the weaknesses which existed in the functioning of the reorganized party.

The resolution demands of the party that at least half of the energies of the party must go into organization work for the next six months and outlines a concrete program to strengthen the party organization. This program calls for a "Party Mobilization Campaign" to include a campaign to draw back members who dropped out of the party during the reorganization, a recruiting campaign, classes for party functionaries, training the shop nuclei and street nuclei how to function, agenda for discussion at the meetings of the shop and street nuclei to draw the members closer to the party leadership and mobilize greater strength in the party campaigns. The language problem was discussed in detail and measures taken to enable those comrades who do not understand English to function in the reorganized party.

The proposals in the resolution, particularly the need of directing the party attention to the organizational problems were approved by all the speakers and this phase of the resolution was also approved unanimously.

Trade Union Work.

W. Z. Foster reported on the trade union work of the party, pointing out that the political committee has succeeded in liquidating the differences in regard to party policy in this field and that the party had a united policy for its work. He discussed in detail the party work in the various industries and the achievements of the past six months. The report and the policies outlined were discussed during a day's session and the report adopted unanimously.

Other questions taken up in the sessions of the Central Committee were, the situation in the Communist Party of the Soviet Union, on which Comrade Max Bedacht reported, the Anti-Imperialist work of the party, reported on by Comrade Gomez, The DAILY WORKER, reported on by Comrade

(Special to The Daily Worker)

BERLIN, Nov. 16. — President Hindenburg plans to offer his resignation as head of the German republic on the occasion of his eightieth birthday next October, according to the newspaper "Die Welt."

The newspaper states, however, that it is believed that his friends will persuade him to remain in office.

President Hindenburg was elected president of the German republic in 1925, his five-year term expiring in April, 1930.

STALIN'S SPEECH AT CONFERENCE OF THE C. P. OF THE SOVIET UNION

Assails Opposition as Anti-Leninists

By JOHN PEPPER

(Special Cable to The Daily Worker)

MOSCOW, U. S. S. R., Nov. 16.—Joseph Stalin, secretary of the Communist Party of the Soviet Union, was the last speaker in the special party conference came to a close after voting unanimous support to the Central Committee and setting the time for the regular party congress next autumn.

Following is a summary of Stalin's speech on the question of the opposition bloc led by Trotsky, Zinoviev and Kamenev whose proposals were beaten overwhelmingly by the assembled delegates:

STALIN'S SPEECH

Stalin pointed out that the well-known thesis of Engels, given out in 1840, in the last century, declaring that the proletariat is unable to triumph in a single country, was true at that time, but owing to the present development of imperialism, this must be replaced by Lenin's formula stating that the victory of socialism in single countries is quite possible, and probable under the new conditions of developing capitalism and proletarian class struggle.

The social-democrats are holding to the old formula of Engels precisely for the purpose of making easier their struggle against the Communists.

Zinoviev is in this case following in the path of the social-democrats. A similar case is the problem of the proletarian dictatorship in the impe-

INDIANA KLAN GRAFT EXTENDS TO UTILITIES

Appointed Commissioners "Favoring" Insull

(Special to The Daily Worker)

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Nov. 16.—Out of this city's heated opposition to the proposed $55,000,000 merger of local public utilities, there came today another blast of scandal involving D. C. Stephanson, former grand dragon of the Indiana K. K. K., now serving a life sentence in the state penitentiary for murder, and a number of prominent state officials and financiers.

Asks Injunction.

Asking for a restraining order preventing the Indiana public service commission from hearing the merger petition of the Indianapolis Light and Heat, the Merchants' Heat and Light and the Indianapolis Power and Light companies on November 18, Corporation Counsel Alfa J. Rucker, in his petition filed in circuit court today, charged that Stephenson, Governor Ed Jackson, John W. McCardle, chairman of the Indiana public service commission; Samuel Insull, Chicago utilities magnate, and other prominent financiers, conspired for a consideration of $15,000 to appoint to the public service commission persons favorable to the Insull interests.

The $15,000 was alleged to have been paid for use in political campaigns.

Gilliom strongly criticised the klan in his statement.

Condemns Klan.

It read in part: "In asking for testimony of facts I refer not to the already generally known activities of this always ill-advised and now happily disintegrating organization or of its leaders, but I ask for testimony of facts, if such facts be, which would show, that anyone in public life had contact with them and who in such contact may have violated the criminal code of the state."

CURRENT EVENTS

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY

Here he is now, a member of a British capitalist "labor mission," busying himself about the interests of British capitalism while more than a million miners are looking for their very existence. With such leadership the workers cannot expect to win.

* * *

THE ability of the capitalist press to suppress news was never demonstrated to better advantage than during the visit of Marie of the bloody Romanian government to Chicago. With the exception of an inadequate story of the demonstration staged by the Intl. Labor Defense on the day of the parasite's arrival, only a few lines appeared since. Efforts have been made by the wealthy flunkeys who are in charge of the queen's entertainment, thru their newspapers, to create the impression that Marie's panhandling excursion has a popular appeal They have not succeeded.

* * *

REPORTERS that have any respect for themselves snbily express their contempt for the disgraceful conduct of our parasite class who scratch each other's eyes out in a mad competition for the privilege of going on their hands and knees to the wife of a moron king. A woman, too, even tho she may be a successful panhandler and pessing to the eye, who has given no indication that her mental development is higher than a child of ten.

* * *

THE steel magnates and meat packing kings that would turn the guns on their employes if they insisted on more wages are spending thousands of dollars entertaining Marie and her useless brood. When Marie wants a radio in her suite she gets it. The prince's valet spends half an hour getting the prince's cigarette lighter into shape. While Marie was getting her face massaged in her room, she expressed her perturbation over the demonstrations made against her by the "reds." How this expression of royal discontent got by the city editors is mere of a mystery than less.

SO much for the queen. Other items of interest that happened recently are: The revolt in Dutch Batavia Holland is a small country with a very prosperous native class. Their prosperity can be attributed to the misery of their colonial slaves. The Communists led the revolt. The crown prince of Germany was seen by a group of workers going into a department store on Friedenckstrasse. This waster had a fine automobile with his coat of arms on it and a couple of flunkeys to open and shut the doors for him. The workers demonstrated against him and the Communists followed it up by raising the issue in the Reichstag. They charged the prince with inciting the population to riot and the next thing we know is that the prince made himself scarce.

THE biggest news of the week, however, is the conference between the foreign ministers of Turkey and the Soviet Union at Odessa, with a view to maintaining peace as far as possible despite the warlike preparations of the mad-dog of fascism, Mussolini. It was reported too, that Persia, China and Afghanistan were ready to join a league to preserve peace in the Orient or rather to defend themselves against the imperialist robbers. The Soviet Union is the guiding spirit in the peace move. And yet we are told that Communists are crazy for blood, arson and their byproducts!

OWING to the failure of the working class of the world—outside of Russia—to aid the British miners, the strikers are facing defeat. Starving industry has lost, directly, enough money since the strike started to subsidize the coal industry for the next ten years at least. But the British capitalists were determined to come to grips at this time with the most militant and most exploited section of its working class and the right wing labor leaders very easily enabled the British capitalists to inflict a defeat on the miners. Now, the other sections of British labor will get it in the neck. Of course the defeat is only temporary. The long struggle is not over yet, and class bitterness has been increased by several thousand per cent.

ITALY and France are watching each other suspiciously. One press agency put out a story that France mobilized troops on the Italian frontier and that labor leaders very easily enabled the British capitalists to inflict a defeat on the miners. Now, the other sections of British labor will get it in the neck. Of course the defeat is only temporary. The long struggle is not over yet, and class bitterness has been increased by several thousand per cent.

* * *

THIS is more or less of a digression, or a random shot. There is a story told of Mussolini's threat to invade Turkey, a few years back. Benito expressed the opinion that his fascists could go thru Turkey like a dip thru a puree. Mustapha Kemal Pasha, the Turkish premier wired back saying that he had no objection to the fascists coming in, as Turkish farmers needed fertilizer for their land but some consideration should be given to the law of supply otherwise there might be some trouble in finding appropriate clay jobs for the fascist blackshirts. Mussolini took refuge in silence and organized another plot against himself.

Gang Warfare Has Quieted Down Again in Williamson County

(Special to The Daily Worker)

HERRIN, Ill., Nov. 16.—The threatened continuance of gang warfare in Southern Illinois failed to materialize and the week-end passed in Williamson and adjoining counties with but little to indicate the existing factional hatred.

One man, Claude Craig, 35, was shot and killed near a roadhouse late Saturday night, but authorities today said he was not connected with either the Sheltons or Birgers and did not connect the incident with the feud.

Craig was shot three times, twice with a revolver through the region of the heart and a charge of buckshot in the right side. No one has been arrested and no witnesses have been found.

The airplane which last Friday injected a new method of waging gang warfare, has not been seen since it disappeared from the region of the Birger roadhouse after dropping three home-made bombs. The Birgers who Saturday threatened in reprisal to "wipe out the Sheltons" failed to carry out the threat.

Garibaldi Goes to Prison with Macia

raising a militant nationalist spirit thruout Italy.

Fear Open Trial.

The cabinet has instructed the minister of justice to take charge of the trial. He in turn has decided to press a charge of secreting ammunition and arms only. There is much lamenting about the staging of an open trial for Garibaldi. It is feared that the testimony necessary to such a public hearing will further fan the flames that have flared up between Italy and France over this affair, combined with the border incidents of few weeks ago.

Twenty-three others, Italians and Spaniards are to be tried with Garibaldi and Macia as accomplices in the two cases.

Forfeit $50000 Bonds.

DANVILLE, Ill., Nov. 16.—Bonds of five Chicagoans totalling more than $50,000 were declared forfeited in the circuit court today by Judge Augustus Partlow when five Italians, indicted on the charge of assault to kill, assault to rob, and violating the state prohibition law, failed to appear in court when their cases were called for trial. The five men are Mile Capralone, Joe Decasardo, Tony Giordano, Fred Mancuso and Tony Fenni.

STALIN SPEAKS AT ALL-UNION PARTY CONGRESS

Assails Opposition as Anti-Leninist

ialist surroundings. At that time Marx admitted the possibility of an exception for England and America, where, owing to feebly developed militarism and bureaucratism, the proletariat had some chance of obtaining political power "by peaceful means."

Lenin's Thesis.

According to Lenin this exception is inadmissible under the present conditions of the development of imperialism, when militarism and bureaucratism are thriving in England and America as well as in other countries. Lenin, having established the law of the unequal economic and political development of capitalism, adopted in consequence the idea that it is possible to have a victory of socialism in one single country. The Communist Party acknowledges that victory of the socialist elements over the capitalists is possible in a single country, but a complete triumph of socialism or the elimination of the contradiction existing between a Soviet country and the capitalist world would be possible only in the case of the victory of the revolution in several countries.

Divergence of Opposition.

Unlike the opposition, one must make a difference between the victory of socialism in one country and its final and complete construction. The declaration that the party underestimated the international efforts of the working classes to secure the victory of the revolution" in our country is sheer calumny. The Comintern policies, such as the united front policy to help the British miners, etc., are united efforts of the international proletariat tending to world revolution, and also the development of our revolution.

The opposition is disorganizing and discrediting the Communist Party of the U. S. S. R., which is the vanguard of the Comintern; is supporting all sorts of Menlove and Snowdenites and is trying to disinterrate the Comintern. The oppositionists in declaring war on the Comintern ceased to be revolutionaries and internationalists and became bourgeois giving vent to sonorous phrases only.

Assails Trotsky's Theory.

Referring to Trotzky's theory of the complete victory of socialism reminds us that according to Lenin this theory is a semi-menshevist theory, ignoring the revolutionary role of the peasantry in the Russian revolution and considering the proletariat of the U. S. S. R. to a fatalistic passivity. The Trotzkyist point of view is nearer to Otto Bauer than to Lenin.

The party will not tolerate any longer that the opposition, though remaining a minority, should abuse the party group, that all dissatisfied elements slander its leading party apparatus and break the iron discipline of the party, that it should organize all condemned groups, preparing accordingly a new party under the banner of factional liberty.

Will Not Stand Attacks.

The party will not allow attempts of the opposition to use the difficulties standing in the way of socialist construction for the purpose of attacking the party, making demagogical appeals to the masses about the urgency of increasing wages 30 to 40 per cent, knowing that industry is unable at the present moment to stand such an increase.

The opposition is pursuing solely demagogic aims, using the dissatisfaction of the backward labor groups against the party. The party cannot allow defeatism to be encouraged, cannot allow it to be sewn on the attacks made on the Comintern and the disorganisation of its sections. The opposition will either fulfill these conditions necessary for party unity or the party, having beaten the opposition yesterday, will beat it finally tomorrow.

Referring to the results of the International party struggles, Stalin made ironical comments on Trotzky's letter, written to the oppositionists last September, in which he predicted the future consolidation of the opposition bloc. Stalin emphasizes the disorganization of the bloc, its best elements, like Comrade Krupskaya, having forseken it. The results are quite contrary to those predicted in Trotzky's letter. The party long ago turned its back on the opposition, whose complete failure is obvious.

The conference, standing, cheered Stalin long and loud.

Athletic Commission Ruling.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Nov. 16.—Attorney General Carlstrom in an opinion today told the state civil service commission that the secretary of state athletic commission is not subject to the rules of civil service, being an official of the commission. Other clerical employes of the commission are subject and should be classified accordingly, the opinion says.

Workers Will Slap Last In Their Struggle With the Capitalist Politicians

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

THE Federated Press correspondent at Washington reports that Senator Curtis, of Kansas, Coolidge-Mellon republican leader in the upper house of congress, upon meeting Senator Lynn Frazier, of North Dakota, a week following the recent elections, jovially slapped the western colon on the back and address ed him as follows:

"Hello, Lynn! How are you? I'm coming in to see you and have a talk, before I go."

This should be important news for the workers and farmers, especially labor ont in Minnesota and the Dakotas, where the Frasiers and nonpartisan political action constitute an employing class antidote for the Farmer-Labor Party and Independent political action.

Frasier was elected on teh republican ticket in North Dakota. He was supported by what remains of the nonpartisan league.

In Minnesota some remnants of the repudiated nonpartisan league leadership in that state are trying to lure the farmers and farmers back into the democratic party. At the same time there are rumors that Hendrik Shipstad, the farmer-labor senator from Minnesota, is being urged to run as a republican in 1928, when his term expires.

When Curtiss slapped Frazier on the back at Washington, it was, to some extent, a verification of every charge that the Coolidge administration is seeking to enmesh all the so-called insurgents in the all-inclusive political net. There are indications that the Coolidge cry for "Help!" will not go unheeded.

The republican "old guard" put Frazier out on the back doorstep in 1924, when the North Dakota senator supported LaFollette. Not only Frazier but the whole LaFollette outfit, stayed around that same back doorstep making the worst kind of a racket asking to be let back in.

The door has been gradually opening. The republicans need the votes to keep the democrats from coming in the front door.

The negotiations between the "old guard" and the "insurgents" are not based on principle. It is merely a matter of price. If Frazier can be prevailed on to accept some committee chairmanship, then it is felt that he will be hogtied to the machine of the G. O. P. sufficiently to maintain a working republican majority. All this will take place next year with the assembling of the new congress.

Efforts to win over the "insurgents" however, will be made even at the rapidly approaching short session of congress. First attempts at mollification will be made in the case of Senator George W. Norris, of Nebraska, who is in line for the chairmanship of the senate judiciary committee as a result of the death of Senator Albert B. Cummins of Iowa. There were threats against Norris, demanding that he be barred from this committee appointment because he went into Pennsylvania during the recent campaign and urged the election of the democrat, William B. Wilson, to the United States senate. The predicament of the republican "old guard" may be judged from the fact that it is even willing to overlook this breach of party regularity. It is expected that the republican committee on committees will meet in a few days and make its position clear.

It is also declared that Senator Charles L. McNarty, of Oregon, one of the authors of the McNary-Haugen farm relief measure that was rejected by the Coolidge cabinet with Mellon as chief opposition spokesman, will be promoted to the chairmanship of the senate committee on agriculture.

Senator James Consens, of Michigan, who is somewhat "irregular" at times, may become chairman of the committee on education and labor, thus helping to spike his guns.

Norris, Frazier, McNary, Cenzens, and perhaps Shipstead, will hail these appointments as "victories" for the progressives in congress. They are nothing of the sort. They are merely maneuvers to bring insurgency under the wing of the old guard.

The "old guard" maneuver will help destroy the influence of these politicians even as spokesman of the middle class.

It should also help unmask them as political agents of the great capitalists and therefore the worst enemies of the workers.

In the days ahead the LaFollette group will be drawn, more and more, into the regular republican machine. This is inevitable. But this should act as a stimulus toward the development of the Farmer-Labor movement, not only in Minnesota, the Dakotas, Montana and Washington, but in Iowa, Nebraska and other states as well.

The LaFollette politicians have been slapped on the back by the "old guard" in giving a foretaste of what may be expected of them in the future.

When the next election struggle comes the LaFollette politicians will again come among the workers and farmers, in their back slapping stump speeching campaigns, seeking the votes of those they have betrayed.

The time for the workers and farmers to repudiate that back-slapping, vote-seeking campaign is now. The method is thru the building of the independent political action of the workers and farmers thru the Labor Party. That will be a slap in the face for both the big and little capitalist class politicians. But he who slaps last slaps best.

Rev. Hall Planned to Elope with Mrs. Mills Trial Witness Relates

COURTHOUSE, SOMERVILLE, N. J., Nov. 16.—Eleanor Mills, slain choir singer, and the Rev. Edward Wheeler Hall, were planning to elope four years ago, shortly before they were shot to death, the murdered woman's sister, Mrs. Elsie Barnhardt, an attractive dark-eyed woman, testified at the Hall-Mills murder trial yesterday.

"They were going to Japan as soon as Charlotte (Mrs. Mills daughter) was out of school," said Mrs. Barnhardt.

"She told me she thought more of Rev. Hall's little finger than she did of Jimmy Mills' (her husband) whole hand."

VARE AND SMITH WILL BE OUSTED SURVEY REVEALS

Senate Alignment Now Against Seating

WASHINGTON, Nov. 16.—William S. Vare of Pennsylvania and Frank L. Smith of Illinois, whose senatorial campaigns were featured by huge expenditures, will be ousted from the senate in the seventieth congress by an overwhelming vote, a partial poll has revealed.

G. O. P.'s Join Dems.

The poll revealed that at least 17 republican senators will vote along with virtually the entire democratic membership of the new senate to nullify their election. Such a lineup would result in the ousting of Vare and Smith by a two-to-one vote, as the republican organization will have but a single vote plurality after next March 4.

The republican senators who are known to oppose the seating of Vare and Smith are Jones, Washington; McNary and Steiwer, Oregon; Johnson, California; Borah and Gooding, Idaho; Norris and Howell, Nebraska; Frazier and Nye, North Dakota; McMaster and Norbeck, South Dakota, Brookhart, Iowa, Capper, Kansas, La Follette and Blaine, Wisconsin, and Couzens, Michigan.

Won't Condone Graft.

Not all these senators have come out publicly in denunciation of the Vare and Smith campaign funds, but those who are not as yet on record either voted to oust Tryman H. Newberry in 1922 for spending $195,000 or have told friends privately they would not condone the Pennsylvania and Illinois primaries. This poll, incidentally, does not represent the maximum anti-Vare and anti-Smith strength in the senate. A half dozen more republican senators were reported ready to vote against both men, altho not yet committed.

Democrats Nearly Solid.

To date the democratic ranks have remained almost solid against the two senators-elect. The lone break came when Senator Cole Blease, of South Carolina, announced he would vote to seat both Vare and Smith on the ground the senate had no control over primaries in the states.

The attitude of several prominent republicans in denouncing slush funds has done much to turn sentiment against Vare and Smith. "Old gentlemen" were shaken first when Theodore Roosevelt took to the stump to attack slush funds and their users A far greater shock came only a few days ago, when General John J. Pershing criticized lavish use of funds in campaigns.

Pershing Backs Norris.

The Pershing statement, incidentally, has given fuel to Senator George W. Norris, insurgent leader, who campaigned against Vare in Pennsylvania. Norris declared Pershing's utterance was an endorsement of his own doctrine that the use of slush funds meant auctioning off of public offices.

tricts from registering their votes against the motion.

But the matter is as yet far from settled. On a previous occasion the vote of the miners rejected an important recommendation of the delegate conference. It is possible that the same thing will occur with regard to the present recommendation, which, without question, spells defeat for the union.

Fighting Alone.

But the miners are fighting a lone battle. The government has mobilized its entire force against them and they have been derived of support from the rest of the British movement by the right wing leaders of the Trade Union Congress.

It will be at least a week before the result of the voting in the districts is shown. And there is the other question, of the owners and as yet have fully agreed to the proposals set forth by Baldwin as outlined above.

Who Will Carry the Message of Passaic to the Unorganized?

Sixteen thousand textile workers of Passaic are on the brink of victory after a hard-fought nine months' struggle. 16,000 unorganized textile workers are establishing their right to organize and bargain collectively in defense of their own interests. Their brave struggle has been a shining example to the millions of workers who, unorganized and unprepared, face the prospect of the coming onslaughts of the American employers.

These unorganized workers need the message of Passaic—need it urgently and energetically. Until they learn to follow the textile workers' example. The rubber workers, the auto workers, the food workers, the steel workers, the miners, must come into the ranks of the organized labor movement, must build up a bulwark of defense against the attacks of the employers. The kept press will surely not carry this message. Even the labor press, which in many instances is in the control of the labor bureaucrats, who are more anxious to maintain their soft berths, than to tread the stormy path of organization among the unorganized workers, has not yet taken up this urgent duty.

It therefore falls to the Communist daily—The DAILY WORKER—to take up this task, energetically and with vigor, as it has done consistently in the past. From The DAILY WORKER will come the stimulus toward organization in new fields and toward the mobilisation of new forces inside the labor movement, against the forces of American capitalism.

Should The DAILY WORKER succeed at this critical time, when the Passaic strikers are on the verge of victory, the task of organizing Passaic throuout the United States, the task of organizing the unorganized, receive a serious setback. The present financial crisis in The DAILY WORKER must not be permitted to halt its work. THE DAILY WORKER MUST CARRY ON. The DAILY WORKER must be kept alive. The DAILY WORKER must reach an ever increasing number of organized workers. The DAILY WORKER must help to make Passaic a reality in every field of industry. You must do your share by securing donations among your friends and workers. Turn your book in at once. If you have not received one, it shall be glad to send it upon request. Act NOW. Help at once. # U. S. BATTLESHIPS SUPPORT DIAZ AS NICARAGUA HEAD

Attempt Intimidation on Liberals

MANAGUA, Nicaragua, Nov. 16.—While official congratulations from the United States were being extended to Adolfo Diaz, newly inaugurated reactionary president of Nicaragua, United States battleships are patrolling the harbors as a warning to liberals to "keep hands off."

The long arm of Washington was plainly visible in the election of Diaz, henchman of Chamorro.

Would Intimidate Mexico.

Yesterday the American cruiser California left Corinto for the Gulf of Fonseca, primarily to let Mexico, who also has ships in the district, know that the United States is backing the present regime. The U. S. S. Rochester is patrolling the east coast.

At the inauguration dinner Lawrence Dennis, charge d'affaires for the United States, proposed a toast to Diaz, assuring him of the support of the United States.

Little enthusiasm was shown by the people by Diaz' inauguration, despite the fact that those that witnessed the ceremony were supposed to be his supporters.

Declare Huge Dividends.

WILMINGTON, Del., Nov. 16.—Directors of the E. I. du Pont de Nemours Company here have declared a dividend on common stock totaling $16,301,715, said to be the largest ever declared by the company.

WORKER WHO ACCEPTED CHALLENGE OF LADY ASTOR TO GO TO RUSSIA WRITES OF EXPERIENCES HE FINDS

The following is a letter from James Morton, London worker, who accepted the challenge of Lady Astor to take his family to Russia to live for a period. Lady Astor didn't think any one would accept her "daring challenge," but Morton did. This letter was sent to a worker in Los Angeles.

Dear Comrades: I have so many to write to that I will be compelled to organise my friends into groups. No. 1 Group consists of London comrades, who will pass all correspondence on to Liverpool. From Liverpool, letters can be sent to the comrades in the United States. So, now then, comrades altho I address you all in the aggregate I am thinking of you all individually and will be very pleased to have letters from you all.

We landed in Leningrad on Friday, August 27, and were met at the boat by a deputation from the Supreme Economic Council, who whisked us away in an auto to the Hotel Europa. We were asked to stay as their guests for a few days, but just arranged to stay long enough to allow Alan, who had been sick during the whole sea voyage, to recover a bit.

We left on Saturday night at 11, had a bed each in a sleeping car, had a good night's sleep and reached Moscow at 10:30 on Sunday morning. Here we were met by another delegation, which took us into a car and drove us to the Bolshoi Hotel. Surrounded by eastern luxury, we had a good time. We met a few old comrades and had very soon decided that we had reached the promised land.

On Monday I had an interview with Comrade Lepsi, the chairman of the Metal Workers' Union, who advised us to return to Leningrad, as it was a much better place for engineering workers, and also because it was much easier to get housing accommodation.

Meets Metal Workers.

After spending two days in Moscow, we returned to Leningrad, where we were met by a delegation of the Metal Workers' Union and taken to the Hotel D'Angleterra. We are still there and likely to be for a few weeks, until we get a permanent address.

Lots of Work.

To find work in Leningrad at engineering trades is very easy, but it is difficult to find work in a place where English workers can be understood. There is a tremendous activity here. Ship building, ship repairs, engineering, building, street repairs and other activities too numerous to mention. The place is agog with work. Reconstruction on a grand scale. It is a real eye-opener to a foreign worker. It seems almost impossible.

Sees Big Factories.

I was taken to the Metallicheaky works, a huge plant employing many thousands of workers. There they were making boilers, building cranes, Deisel engines and turbine machinery. Everything on a big scale. It was like, being at Armstrong-Whitworth's.

The workers here are all Russians, and the works committee, altho they welcomed me, and the director offered me work if I liked to start, thought it advisable that I should not be in a hurry and perhaps in a few days a job could be found for me where one worker at least spoke English. The next day I was taken to the great Putilov Engine Works—Rad Putilov it is called now.

Gets Job.

Here my luck was in. The assistant superintendent in the foundry speaks a little English and is anxious to learn more. He was delighted at the idea of me starting there, but no more than I was. He said I would teach him English and he would learn Russian. Everything was fixed up and I start to work tomorrow, Sept. 6, at the biggest plant in all Russia. There are over 8,000 members of the Communist Party working at the Red Putilov Fabrik.

Down the road from where I work is the Marti ship yard, called after the French Communist. All the works are called after working-class leaders.

We have had a great reception here. Everyone is greatly amazed at the Astor affair. We have been chased by photographers and story writers.

Today, Sept. 5, great demonstrations have been held all over Russia to collect funds for the English miners. North, south, east and west the children, youths, soldiers, sailors, workers and peasants have been marching and collecting. What enthusiasm! What a display of working-class solidarity! It would be worth while living on dry bread to be here.

Leningrad from an early hour this morning has been a blaze of color and gaiety. Thousands of people of all ages marching. The police, military, naval sections, all marching with the workers and singing revolutionary songs. (I'm afraid my poor pen cannot give justice to it all.) On they march, column after column. Mary and Alan beaming with joy, marching with the Young Pioneers. Tableaux in galore. Here a huge wooden figure (hust and head) representing a capitalist, top hat, eye-glasses and cigar complete, and a young Communist (very much alive) knocking hell out of him with an axe.

It is estimated that in Leningrad alone over $25,000 would be collected today. The activities here on behalf of the English miners make one ashamed and disgusted with that bunch of fakers who run the labor movement in England.

I have met Mrs. Cook and the other miners' wives, also the other delegates. I attended a great meeting in the United Soviet (Parliament of the Dumas) where they were met by the workers' delegates of Leningrad at a meeting organized by the trades council of this city. They got a magnificent reception. I wrote a report of the meeting and sent it to the Daily Herald.

I is getting late and I have been writing a number of letters today, so I will now conclude this one with fraternal greetings. James Morton.

Pan-Pacific Workers' Conference Given Up Because of No Interest

SYDNEY, Australia, Nov. 16.—The Pan-Pacific Labor Conference which was to have been held at Honolulu in July and was then postponed till November is now to be abandoned altogether. The reason for this is the lack of support given by the workers of Australia and the fact that other nations surrounding the Pacific satisfied they would not put in an appearance. The money collected in Australia to finance the conference is being returned to the unions concerned.

Labor-councils in Australia feel very sore at the abandonment of the conference and characterize the lack of interest taken in the mattar as a disgrace to the labor movement of Australia.

A resolution has been carried by the labor councils daploring the abandonment of the conference and urging the workers of Australia to elect and arrange a conference at some future date.

NOTE:—This item refers to the Pan-Pacific Conference called by the Australian Labor Party in opposition to the conference of the All-Australian Trade Union Congress. The latter conference is being energetically pushed. It will be held at Canton, China, May, 1, 1927.

EXPLODE BOSS PROPERTY BUNK IN AUSTRALIA

Workers Short of Food and Clothing

By W. FRANCIS AHERN.

SYDNEY—(FP)—According to Naplar Thompson, ex-president of the Australian Metal Trade Employers Assn., Australia is "a nation of capitalists," where wealth is widely distributed, where everybody is prosperous and where there are no poor.

A clipping of this statement from the N. Y. Times of July 29 reached the Australian bureau of The Federated Press when a commission was hearing evidence for a higher minimum wage. Some of the evidence was heart-moving, telling of the grim struggle to make ends meet.

The evidence by various witnesses is typical of thousands of workers in the city of Sydney alone, and is a striking answer to the allegations that in Australia all are prosperous and none are poor.

A family of 5 was forced to live on $21 weekly, of which $8 had to be paid for rant. They were short of food and clothing. There was no milk for the three young children. Christmas toys for the children were unknown.

A mother with 7 children, eldest aged 12, said her husband earned $22.50 weekly, out of which she paid $6.50 for rent for a 3-room house. They went short of food and clothing.

Many similar stories were told—all showing that the minimum wage was not sufficient to provide a decent living. The majority of the Australian people (85% of whom are workers) are worse off than before the war.

Soviet Delegation to Study Oil Industry Goes Back to Russia

NEW YORK, Nov. 16. — Delegates sent here by the Soviet oil trust, Grosneft, to investigate American methods of producing and refining oil, have sailed back to Russia, after spending four months in the United States.

Revival of Russian petroleum industry will not mean an oil price war, declared S. M. Ganshin, vice-president of the trust and a member of the delegation. The consumption of Europe and the rest of the world is more than sufficient to absorb the Russian and American output, he said.

Orders for a million dollars worth of oil equipment will be placed in the United States thru the Amtorg Trading Corporation, buying agency for the Soviet government.

Machado Threatens Dictatorship Over Cuba, "If Necessary"

HAVANA, Cuba, Nov. 16.—President Machado threatened in an Armistice Day speech here that if he did not get the co-operation of congress he would establish a dictatorship, if necessary.

"If a dictatorship is necessary to keep alive the memory of those heroes who died on the battlefield, I, with those who are willing to follow me, will be enough to attain that end," he said.

Mine Strike Cripples Many British Industries

LONDON, Nov. 16. — Absolute ruin is faced by British industries dependent upon a cheap fuel supply, says a review of recent developments in the coal lockout by the British correspondent of the International Federation of Trade Unions. In every part of the kingdom there are idle shipyards, damped furnaces, or closed textile mills.

The Daily Herald, organ of labor, finds that of the 85 blast furnaces which were in operation in the west of Scotland last April all have been closed down. The Scottish iron and steel trade has been paralyzed for months past. In the Middlesbrough district only 2,000 men are working of the normal force of 25,000 men. Arthur Pugh, secretary of the iron and Steel Trades Federation, says that only five of the 470 blast furnaces of the metal industry are still working.

Lack of coal is likewise forcing some of the French furnaces to shut down, while there is arising in Germany a demand that coal exports be curtailed in order to reduce the rising cost of fuel to German manufacturers. German mine owners are working to secure long-term contracts to supply coal to former buyers of British coal. Belgian manufacturers are suffering from the fuel famine, and in the heavy industries the condition is described as alarming.

Labor Correspondence

1000 WORKER CORRESPONDENTS BY JANUARY 15 1927

JOURNALISM CLASS NOW MEETS AT 6:30 P. M. TO ENABLE WORKERS WITH MEETINGS ON SAME NIGHT TO JOIN

To comply with the request of many workers who want to become members of the Chicago class in worker correspondence the hour of the class meeting has been changed to 6:30 p. m. from 8 p. m. This change is made to enable workers who have other meetings on Friday night to attend the class in workers' journalism from 6:30 to 8 o'clock and thus be able to go to their other meetings after class.

The change will take effect this Friday night. All members of the class and those who have not yet joined, but intend to this week, are requested to be in the editorial rooms of The DAILY WORKER, 1113 W. Washington Blvd., at 6:30 sharp, so that no time will be lost.

Registration Still Open.

Registration for the class is still open and all workers who are interested in learning how to write news stories are invited to join. A course of study has been outlined this year which is designed to develop real labor journalists out of the members. Every phase of journalism will be taken up, from the writing of a single news story to the more complicated features of journalism.

Special lecturers will give instruction on special phases of labor journalism.

Class is Popular.

The class is becoming more popular each week, and new students are registering at each session. It is expected that with the change in the hour more workers will be able to join than before. Members of the class are requested to bring with them each night a short story of some thing that they have seen or heard about, as these specimen stories form the basis for class criticism.

MOVIE WORKERS PRESENT DEMAND FOR RECOGNITION

Los Angeles Unions Are Ready to Strike

By WM. SCHNEIDERMAN,
(Worker Correspondent)

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 16.—The four unions making up the Studio Employes' Alliance have presented demands to the Los Angeles film executives for recognition of union conditions, failing which a general strike will be called here Dec. 1, as well as in the New York section of the industry.

Delegates to the Central Labor Council report hundreds of applications are coming into the union offices for membership since the opening of the organization drive in preparation for the strike.

C. L. C. Backs Move.

The Central Labor Council assures complete support to the strike if it takes place. They are anxious to make some kind of a showing before the next convention of the A. F. of L. which takes place in this city in 1927.

Other Drives Loom.

Organization drives in other industries may soon get under way for the same reason. It is interesting to note that most of the officials of the council were against inviting the next A. F. of L. convention here, because of the issue of organization campaign raised by progressive delegates in this connection.

However, the opinion of Frank L. Johnston, reactionary president was overwhelmingly defeated by a vote of the delegates, who will be spurred on to strengthen the labor movement now in this open-shop city.

IRON MOULDERS STRIKE AGAINST WAGE SLASHES, Y.W.L. INSPIRES WORKERS

By a Worker Correspondent.

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 16.—In the midst of an organization campaign carried on by the Young Workers' League at the O'Keefe & Merritt stove factory, fifty moulders in the foundry rooms walked out against a wage cut, and are now under the direction of the moulders' union.

Two strike issues of the "Steve Werkar," bulletin of the Young Workers' League, have already been distributed. Attempts have been made to use scabs, but five workers who were transferred to the foundry refused to scab, and were fired.

The league bulletin urges the young steve workers to refuse to scab on their fellow-workers who are striking, and warns of a threatened lockout, for which they must be prepared.

The bosses are attempting to scare the workers by spreading rumors of laying off the entire force and closing down the factory because of the "slack season."

GIRL, 12, JAILED FOR AIDING IN PASSAIC RELIEF

Jersey Police Threaten Young Pioneers

By a Worker Correspondent.

ROSSELLE, N. J., Nov. 16.—Mary Kortnowsky, 12-year-old member of the Young Pioneers, was arrested here for selling bread cards for the relief of the Passaic textile strikers' children. The little girl was dragged from the house where she was trying to sell a card by a member of the local police and thrown into a foul cell in police headquarters. She was held there for over six hours before her parents were able to get her release.

Given Rough Treatment.

During the six hours she was held in jail the little child was subjected to the most brutal treatment and questioning. The police questioned her as to her attitude regarding the Young Pioneers, and Mary told them what the Pioneers were—an organization of workingclass children fighting for the workingclass.

The police told her parents that they would certainly have detectives employed in the next meeting of the Pioneers. They intimated that the Pioneer group in Rosselle would be broken up by force if it were found as radical as Mary's reply indicated.

Another Pioneer Grilled.

This is not the first occurrence of this kind in Rosselle. A few weeks ago Herbie Axel, an 11-year-old Pioneer, showed his teacher a copy of the Young Comrade. The teacher was horrified. She took Herbie to the principal of the school, who, after questioning him, evidently found he needed help to curb this infant "red menace," and called the police department. A detective was sent over to the school and Herbie's mother was also called into conference. Mrs. Axel said that she knew Herbie belonged to the Pioneers and that she entirely approved of their program. The principal then threatened to expel Herbie from school unless he left the Pioneers. His mother replied that her son would continue to be a member of the Pioneers at all costs, as she thought something was needed to counteract the poisonous capitalist propaganda of the public schools.

The Immediate Program for the Work of the Party

RESOLUTION UNANIMOUSLY ADOPTED BY THE CENTRAL COMMITTEE OF THE WORKERS (COMMUNIST) PARTY

I. The General Situation.

1. The Economic Situation.

THE industries of this country are still operating at a high rate of production, with an indication of an immediate sharp trend toward depression. The figures showing the trend of production during the past few months still show a general upward tendency. Even such industries as textile and mining, which have been in a partial state of crisis, show some improvement, the latter as the result of the export of scab coal to Great Britain and the Continent to fill the shortage caused by the strike of the British miners. There are in the background, factors indicating the instability and weakness of the present situation such as the decrease of exports, the recession in building operations, the downward trend of the automobile industry, the dangers to the credit system resulting from inflated installment sales, but it is very likely that the present scale of production and employment will hold good for at least another six months. It is upon this basis that the party must formulate its program of work for the immediate future.

The fact that the workers are not sharing as a class in the general prosperity of capitalist industry is shown by the course of production and wages. Certain sections of the workers, the organized, skilled workers, who make the aristocracy of the labor movement, have made gains as a result of the concessions made by the capitalists to make them allies of American imperialism, but this is not true of the masses of workers. During the six years from 1919 to 1925 wages show a decrease of 9% and the cost of living a decrease of 11% indicating only a very slight gain in the real wages of the workers. During this period, however, the production per worker in American industry has increased 45% which has enormously increased the profits of the capitalists and given them the benefits of the increased production of wealth by American industry.

At the present time there are movements for wage increases among sections of the workers. The furriers won a wage increase, the garment workers are fighting for an increase and the railroad workers are pressing demands under the Watson-Parker Bill. On the other hand, wage cuts have taken place in the textile industry and in the mining industry through opening of many mines on the open shop basis with wages under the Jacksonville agreement. A general effort to reduce the wages of the miners will undoubtedly take place with the expiration of the Jacksonville agreement next spring.

The agricultural crisis continues in a sharp form among certain sections of the farmers, notably in the corn belt and cotton, while the general situation in the agricultural field is that the farmers are not sharing in the favorable economic situation which the capitalists are enjoying.

2. The Political Situation.

POLITICALLY, the situation in the United States can be best characterized as a growing conflict between that part of finance capital with growing investments and interests in Europe and generally in foreign fields, and industrial capital, supported by the petty bourgeois, which is primarily interested in American industries. This line is not always clear, being blurred by interests running in both directions, but the main line of the struggle between the capitalist groups is the conflicting interests of these two groups. The affiliation of the United States with the World Court, the funding of the debts of European countries to the United States growing out of the war on terms which granted partial cancellation were victories for the international bankers, won in the face of the opposition of industrial capital. The need of creating the means of repayment of the enormous loans and investments in Europe by the international bankers, is developing a movement having their support for the revision of the tariff to enable foreign goods to enter the American market on a more favorable basis. This movement is resisted by the industrial capital which profits from the high tariff. The general results of the election was a partial defeat for international banking capital, which will lead to sharper struggles between the two contending groups.

While this internal struggle goes on between the two groups of capitalist interests, the capitalist class as a whole is united in its struggle against the workers and farmers. The income tax revision by the last congress, the proposal of the Mellon plan for the capitalists a reduction of from $150,000,000 to $250,000,000 on next year's income tax payments, show how the capitalists use the governmental power to strengthen their position economically. At the same time, the attack upon the workers thru the use of governmental power against them grows more dangerous. The passage of the Watson-Parker Bill, which practically robs the railroad workers of the right to strike, the threatened extension of this law to the miners, the proposals for registration of the foreign-born workers, the Supreme Court decision in the Dorchy case, establishing as the highest law of the land that strikes may be illegal, all forge new weapons for the capitalists in the struggle against the workers. The capitalists also united against the farmers to defeat all proposals for relief of the farmers from the crisis which continues in agriculture.

No effective resistance to these attacks among the workers and farmers developed during the election campaign. The movement for a labor party made some strides forward and in certain agricultural states the farmer-labor parties carried on widespread campaigns, but no mass movement of the workers and farmers against this use of the governmental power against them developed.

It remains the major task of our party to carry on a widespread campaign of agitation to unite the workers, in alliance with the farmers, for independent political action, to resist these attacks, using the concrete governmental action against them as the basis of our campaign.

3. The Labor Movement.

THE reactionary bureaucrats who compose the leadership of the organized labor movement continue to elaborate and intensify their policy of cooperation with the capitalist employers which tends to degenerate the trade unions toward company unions and to make the organized labor movement an adjunct of American capitalism, rather than an organization for militant class struggle in the workers' interests. This is manifested among other things, by their support of the Watson-Parker law, the extension of the Baltimore and Ohio plan, the elaboration of the so-called Monroe Doctrine of Labor, the establishment of a Trade Union Life Insurance company, the extension of labor banking, and other forms of trade union capitalism. With the exception of the paper resolutions against company unions and for a shorter workday, the convention of the American Federation of Labor maintained its position of opposition to every progressive proposal to strengthen and build the organized labor movement and to carry on a militant fight for the class interests of the workers.

There is now being created an upper stratum of the aristocracy of labor, which shares somewhat in the imperialist profits of American capitalism and has a high standard of life, itself. Because of the favorable situation of this section of the workers, it does not give support to the struggles of highly exploited, unorganized workers in the great machine industry of the country, leaving them to shift for themselves. These highly exploited, unorganized workers are not sharing in the profits of American imperialism, and movements of struggle against the capitalists are developing among them. Our party, as the only organization which fights for the interests of these workers while at the same time not neglecting the work to stimulate the skilled organized workers into militant struggle, is becoming the leaders of these struggles. This has been shown in the Passaic strike. Despite the wishes of the reactionary leaders of the aristocracy of labor, widespread support was given to the Passaic strikers and these leaders were finally compelled to give lip service to the struggles of these workers.

The achievements of the party in the Passaic strike shows the possibilities of the development of a movement against the reactionary class collaboration policies of the official leaders of the labor movement and represent a victory for the left wing.

The militant class struggle in the workers' interests by the Farmers' Union under leadership of the left wing, resulting in a victory for the workers against the right wing supported by President Green, also represents a new achievement for the left wing. The fight of the New York Joint Board of the International Garment Workers' Union is a movement in the same direction. The development of a broad progressive bloc with the slogan, "Save the Miners' Union" against the reactionary leadership of John L. Lewis in the United Mine Workers is an especially important indication of the growth of the resistance to make the union organs of militant class struggle, especially since the mining industry is one of the basic industries, toward which the party must direct its attention.

4. The Party and the General Situation.

THE above analysis of the existing situation shows, that while there are difficulties in the way of the party in developing a revolutionary consciousness of the workers and building the party in the favorable economic situation of American capitalism, which has enormously strengthened it, and the trend toward the right of the skilled, organized workers and the class collaboration policies of the official leaders of the labor movement follow, there are also favorable conditions in the movements for wage increases and struggles against wage cuts by the great mass of highly exploited unorganized workers in the machine industry, as well as in left wing developments in sections of the organized labor movement. The party can, by carefully formulated tactics, take full advantage of the favorable situation, develop the revolutionary movement of the workers, increase its influence and leadership and strengthen and build the party.

II. Immediate Program of Work of the Party.

1. Achievements of the Party.

THE facts recited in the foregoing analysis prove that the party still stands before the elementary task of setting the workers into motion against their class enemy and of developing a class ideology. The orientation of the party must be formed on a clear comprehension of these facts.

The great strength and resources of American imperialism coupled with the relatively underdeveloped strength of the workers, the capitalist offensive and victories over the workers in many industries in recent times, have produced a spirit of pessimism in certain sections of the labor movement which is also reflected in some sections of the party. While it is true that the temporary stabilization of American imperialism, which enables it to provide general employment and to corrupt certain sections of the working class, puts great objective difficulties in the path of a revolutionary workers' party, nevertheless a higher estimate of the situation and the problems presented by it, upon which a practical program is based, will enable the party to cope with all difficulties and to extend its influence and increase its strength. Pessimism in the labor and revolutionary movements is given rise to an aid to the bourgeoisie and their agents in the labor movement. The rejection of all pessimistic moods is a prerequisite to the successful accomplishment of the revolutionary task.

The class struggle continues even under the most favorable conditions of capitalist production. Such conditions inevitably produce movements of the workers demanding a greater share of the wealth they produce. With correct tactics the party can stimulate and lead struggles of the workers against the capitalists and become a powerful party of the workers in time of capitalist prosperity and "stabilization" as well as during periods of "hard times" and crisis in these struggles the party has the employment of correct tactics can hasten the process of revolutionization of the working class.

In the present period, the party must particularly direct its attention to the highly exploited, unorganized workers in the great machine industry, who under all conditions are the great reservoir from which the revolutionary movement draws its strength by initiating movements for the organization of these workers, developing programs for their struggles and giving leadership to their fights, the party can increase its strength and build its influence. At the same time it must initiate movements among the organized and skilled workers, seizing every opportunity to stimulate the movement against the class collaboration policies of the reactionary bureaucrats and to develop militant movement of class struggle. The Passaic strike and the movement in the miners' union are typical examples of the possibilities for great achievement by the party in applying such a policy.

The record of the achievements of our party during the past year also show that there is no basis for this pessimism, and that the party has been able to develop those tactics which have widened its influence and strengthened its leadership among the working masses. The organization of the 16,000 Passaic strikers represents the first broad movement among the unorganized workers in the highly developed, unorganized machine industry for many years. The organization of these workers, the leadership of their strike during nine months, the development of wide support to their struggle in the relief organization for their support, stands as a major achievement of the party.

The part the party has played in the Furriers' strike, the first big strike resulting in a victory which has developed for many years, increased the influence and prestige of the party. The party leadership in the movement for the protection of the foreign-born workers established its influence, and brought it into a common struggle with four hundred thousand organized workers. Thru throwing out the slogan of a united labor ticket in the election campaign, the party was able to stimulate the movement for a labor party in a number of places and to actually aid in the organizing of labor parties in some localities.

All of these gains of the party were made thru application of the united front tactics thru which it drew masses of workers into common struggle with it.

In spite of the period of capitalist prosperity, the party is breaking its isolation and succeeded in broadening its influence and increasing its prestige among the masses of workers. Its position today in the organized labor movement and among the working masses generally, is far in advance of what it was a year ago.

The party must mobilize for fuller use of its strength in applying the policies and tactics thru which it has made these gains and in taking up of its immediate problems to build the party and increase its influence among the masses. Such a mobilization will bring even greater gains than are to be recorded for the past year.

The immediate program which the party must make the centre of its work is the following

A—Organization of the Unorganized.

THE work of organizing the unorganized into labor unions must take first place in the work of the party. The conditions for organizing the unorganized are most favorable during a period of high scale production by capitalist industry. Movement for the organization of the unorganized are developing in many parts of the country. It is the duty of the party to build the party and to take the initiative in developing such movements and to give them the greatest possible support. The party already has creditable achievements in this field, but there must be a greater mobilization of the party for this work and its extension on a much greater scale. This movement must also be initiated and stimulated in the trade unions, central bodies, and organs of the trade unions generally.

It is the workers in the highly developed machine industry of the United States who are largely unorganized. It is exactly these workers who should first respond to Communist agitation and be the backbone of the Communist movement. The party must take the leadership in the fight to organize these workers and thus extend its influence among them. The party must mobilize its strength to create scores of Passaics and to increase the number of workers organized under its leadership to hundreds of thousands.

B—Work in the Existing Trade Unions.

DESPITE the emphasis which the party has placed upon the necessity of organizing every party member for work in the existing trade unions, only a small part of the party strength is brought to bear in this field. The raising of the number of party members who belong to the union, the organization of the party fractions, the development of a broad left wing in the trade unions are prerequisites to the growth of our party influence in every field of work. The conditions for the development of a broad left wing in the trade unions are becoming more favorable and the party must take the necessary steps, thru the entry of the members into the unions, the organization of party fractions and systematic work in the unions to hasten this development and to create a broad movement of the organized workers which will challenge the influence of the reactionary bureaucrats and win the trade unions for a policy of militant class struggle against capitalism. The present struggle in the Miners' Union must have the full support of the party.

C—A Labor Party in the 1928 Elections.

THE party must now raise the slogan, "A Labor Party in the 1928 Elections" and set to work systematically to build up the movement to realize this slogan. The attack of the capitalist government on the rights of the workers to strike must be made a central point in our agitation for the labor party. The sending of the president's message to congress setting forth the capitalist program, will create a favorable opportunity for issuance of the slogan and initiation of the campaign on the basis of a labor program opposed to the capitalist program. The steps to be taken immediately in this campaign are the following:

1. During the year 1927 municipal elections will take place in a large number of states. Our party has not learned to connect its general agitation with the local questions affecting the lives of the workers. The party organization in each city must study the local political situations, formulate a program on the basis of the workers' issues and raise the slogan of "A United Labor Ticket in the City Elections—A Labor Party for the 1928 Elections," in connection with these municipal elections. The aim which the party must set itself is to organize local labor parties. If this objective cannot be achieved, to organize committees for the formation of a labor party. In the elections this year, the party organizations in many places did not prepare early enough for the election campaign and consequently failed in placing a ticket in the field. This must not happen in the municipal elections. Steps must be taken immediately to see that a united labor ticket is placed on the ballot in every city in which the municipal elections take place, or if this cannot be achieved, a party ticket.

a—In connection with this mobilization of the party for the election campaigns next year, it is necessary to carry on an ideological campaign in the party to bring to the party members an understanding of the necessity of the party participating in the election campaigns to the fullest possible extent. Our party still responds too little to the possibilities for development of a movement of the workers and extending the party influence thru election campaigns. These campaigns constitute a major opportunity for agitation among the workers and the party must utilize them to the fullest extent. Election campaigns as a means of political propaganda and agitation have especially great significance for our party. Active participation in election campaigns will be the means of our first approach to many American workers.

2. The party must take up in earnest the work of forming trade union committees for the formation of a labor party, in every local union, in the central labor bodies of each city, and on a state scale, as outlined in the resolution of the last convention. The formation of a network of trade union committees for the formation of a labor party thruout the whole country will create a solid basis for the realization of the slogan, "A Labor Party in the 1928 Elections."

3. The party should endeavor to initiate under trade union auspices if this can be achieved, if not, under party auspices, a referendum of workers in the factories thru a petition addressed to the executive council of the American Federation of Labor requesting that body to call a national conference of trade unions, cooperatives, labor fraternal organizations and labor political parties for the formation of a labor party to represent labor in the 1928 elections.

* * * *

D—Councils for Protection of the Foreign-Born.

WITH the reconvening of congress, the bills for the registration, photographing and finger printing of the foreign-born workers will again come to the fore. The party must give full support to the National Council for the Protection of the Foreign-born in the fight against these laws. The campaign of the party must be directed to draw the native-born workers into this struggle by agitation showing that the registration law is directed against the right to organize and the standard of life of the whole working class. The fight against the registration laws must be coupled with the campaign for the labor party.

E—The Struggle Against American Imperialism.

THE determining factor in the present period is the dominant and still rising character and influence of American imperialism. This necessitates that our party, in conformity with the emphasis laid upon this in the decision on the American question of the last plenum of the Comintern, pay the utmost attention to this important field for Communist activity. The domination of the two American continents by U. S. imperialism, its steady penetration into European economy and politics, and its increasing interests in the Far East, makes it possible for our party, by paying strict attention and devoting the necessary energy to anti-imperialist work, to greatly aid the struggles of the colonial and semi-colonial peoples and assist in the progress of the world revolution, more directly perhaps than in many other fields.

F—Agricultural Work.

THE continuance of the crisis among sections of the farmers with difficult conditions generally in the agricultural field, create a favorable situation for the extension of the work of the party. The program of the party for work among the farmers must be taken up with greater energy and full advantage taken of the possibilities in this field.

G—Other Party Campaigns.

ALL of the above campaigns of the party can be greatly strengthened by intensification of many forms of party activities, such as the building of the youth movement and realization of the slogan, "A Young Workers League Unit wherever there is a party unit," the work among the Negroes, the systematic organization and greater support of the work among women. The political committee must take the necessary steps to furnish concrete programs for these activities and secure more energetic support from the whole party.

Non-party organizations, formed to unite broad masses of workers on specific issues of the class struggle are of extraordinary importance for the party in the present period as a means of broadening the working class fighting front, as a source of contact with non-party workers and as a recruiting ground for the party. Active participation in such organizations is an essential part of the united front tactics and remains as before one of the primary duties of all party members.

All of these campaigns must be so directed that new strength and influence develops FOR THE PARTY from them. The various forms of the party activities must not be conducted so as to create separate organizations competing with the party, but as various forms of one whole, the party, which is the leading and directing influence, and all of which result in building the party and the revolutionary movement in the United States.

III. Inner Party Problems.

1. Factionalism in the Party.

THE party has made a considerable degree of progress in eliminating factionalism in the party during the past year, particularly since the last plenum of the Central Committee in May. Here and there remnants of the whole condition still exist in the party and further efforts to liquidate these situations must be made. The line of the Central Committee for complete unification of the party and mobilizing of all its forces, both in the membership and leadership must be followed until all remnants of factionalism are ended and the party carries on its work as a united whole.

2. Right and Ultra-Left Deviations.

THE party is following a line which rejects both right wing deviations and ultra-left sectarianism. Wherever manifestations of either appear in the party, they must be exposed and repudiated. Neither of these deviations from Leninism appear in the party in a crystallized form attending thru the party.

However, right wing manifestations have appeared in a number of instances in our trade union work, particularly in the city of New York. The right wing manifestations here referred to have become outstanding in the conduct of some of our comrades leading the strike of the cloakmakers. Permeated by a craft union ideology, these comrades not only resisted the party policy on amalgamation, but failed also to carry out the decisions of the party that a militant struggle be waged against the Sigman right wing machine which consciously worked for the defeat of the strike in order to use the defeat to eliminate the left wing from control of the union. The failure to pursue a militant policy in this and many other matters demanded by the party has weakened the party influence among the masses in the cloakmakers' strike.

The party must therefore resolutely resist all these manifestations, endeavoring to convince the comrades of their mistakes and bring them to the party line. If these measures do not result in the correction of these right wing deviations, the party will be obliged to take stronger measures.

3. Party Education.

THE New York Workers' School represents a big achievement for the party. Hundreds of comrades are receiving a training in Marxism and Leninism thru the classes of this school. Similar schools on a smaller scale are being developed in other cities. This work is of the utmost importance to the party and must be given the fullest support and extended. A training in the theoretical basis of Communism is the best guarantee that our party will remain true to the correct Communist policies and reject all deviations to the right or left. Such training will also strengthen the party for every phase of its work.

4. The Daily Worker.

THE maintaining of The DAILY WORKER the extension of its influence by increasing its circulation, is one of the major tasks of the party. The DAILY WORKER plays a great part in the life of the party. It is a centralizing influence, which gives the party membership the line of the party from day to day on the events of the class struggle. In a special resolution, the Central Committee has pointed out in detail the importance of The DAILY WORKER. The party must give special attention to this resolution and take up in earnest the work which it sets for the party in relation to The DAILY WORKER.

IV. The Party Reorganization.

1. The Results of the Party Reorganization.

THE party took up the work of reorganizing the party on the basis of street and shop nuclei approximately one year ago. The party now has sufficient experience with the new form of organization to establish the fact that the party policy of centralizing the party and organizing shop and street nuclei in place of the language and territorial branches was correct. The reorganization has turned the face of the party toward the workers in the factories. The work of the party in the Passaic strike, and in other places where similar work is now under way, the formation of such factory nuclei as that in the Ford plant, issuing a factory paper reaching from ten to fifteen thousand workers each month, an achievement which is duplicated on a lesser scale in two score other great industries shows the possibilities of the new form of organization in building the party influence and establishing contact between the party and the masses of workers. The Central Committee repudiates emphatically any suggestion that the reorganization was a mistake. What is needed is not a backward step, but more careful, systematic work to build more functioning shop nuclei and to teach the street nuclei how to carry on their work effectively.

2. More Attention to the Organization Problems.

IN establishing the gains for the party thru the reorganization, the Central Committee does not ignore the many manifest weaknesses of the party organization at the present time. The party has many organizational problems to solve. The teaching of shop nuclei how to become really living, functioning organizations, the instruction of the street nuclei in their work, the meeting of the language difficulties which exist, the making of the inner life of the shop and street nuclei of the party interesting to the members, the mobilization of all the members in the party work, must be all given earnest attention in order to solve these problems. Many of the weaknesses of the party organization are due to the fact that the party has not given sufficient attention to the organization side of its work. The party organization is the basis of all the party work. Unless we build a strong, efficient organization all our work will suffer. The party must turn its attention to this work. The Central Committee instructs that for the immediate future, at least half of the energies of the leading committees of the party must be devoted to the work of strengthening the party organization. Where the district organizers have taken up this problem in earnest immediate far-reaching results have been attained, as for instance, Comrade Tallentire in Minnesota, where the dues payments have increased from 385 three months ago to 1,000 in the month of October, with the cor-

CLOAKMAKERS CONTINUE WAR ON JOB SHOPS

Ten of Forty Thousand Still on Strike

NEW YORK, Nov. 16.—Settlement by striking cloakmakers of their four and a half month struggle with the Industrial Council of Cloak & Suit Mfgrs. — "inside" manufacturers, — leaves about 10,000 strikers still out in the fight against the cloak jobbers. The Intl. Ladies' Garment Workers' Union estimates in addition that about 7,000 unemployed cloakmakers are added to the strikers; 15,000 are back in settled shops of "independent" manufacturers. If the terms of settlement reached between the union representatives and inside manufacturers are approved by the membership of each side, the same terms will apply in all settled shops of independents.

Wage increases of $4 to $9, about 10 per cent over those recommended by the governor's advisory commission which spent two years investigating the industry, have been granted. Likewise the 44-hour week recommended by the governor's commission has been changed to a 42-hour week for the first two years of the agreement and 40-hours for the last year. The joint labor bureau recommended is to be established and the provisions of the old agreement dealing with unemployment insurance, Prosanis label and joint board of sanitary control are to be continued.

Discharge Terms.

The most important concession of the union is granting the manufacturers the right to discharge 10 per cent of their working forces annually, provided that the employer has 25 or more working and that he dismisses no worker who has not been given 52 weeks' pay for the year. Inside manufacturers employing less than 25 may only exercise the discharge right if they do not let out any work, employ no contractors. What the union will gain from the jobbers in the way of recognition of responsibility for conditions in contractors' shops depends on the settlement made. Also the question of limitation of contractors depends on this. The guarantee of 36 weeks work a year is sacrificed, altho inside manufacturers in the association average about 37 weeks' work a year. Contractors shops get an average of only 26-28 weeks work a year.

Cost $2,000,000.

The spring sample season begins in a week or two so that there will be employment for the most skilled workers fairly quickly. But the bulk of the cloakmakers are not expected to be at work until January when the spring manufacturing season begins in earnest. The full season has been lost to those not returned to settled shops. The strike is said to have cost the union about $2,000,000.

"We must build our redoubts" is the slogan under which the American plan-open shop conference is rallying its members to its 10th semi-annual session in Dallas, Tex., Nov. 15-17. The words are from an address by Charles Evans Hughes warning against "destructive forces now operating thruout the world"—which the open shop conference interprets as bolshevism and labor unionism.

The American plan-open shop conference is a loose association of employers' associations established in 1921. Its headquarters are in Salt Lake City, Kansas City, San Francisco and Detroit.

In urging business executives to attend the Dallas convention the invitation committee promises "it is the place where you meet the men who are on the firing line. . . . You will be in an open shop city, you will be among your friends, we need you, we want you and we expect you to come."

Attending the conference will be "men who are making real progress in handling the biggest problem now before the American public—the labor problem."

Under the caption, "Hold High the Torch of Industrial Freedom," an inviting booklet tells of American Federation of Labor efforts to war on the open shop. "Day and night without ceasease, these enemies of American institutions are striking at the very foundations of our industrial peace, social unity and economic development. How futile, then, for any man even to attempt to cope with these perilous situations unaided, isolated, alone."

The invitation committee contains representatives of the Associated Building Employers of Detroit, Merchants' and Manufacturers' Association of Los Angeles—already stirred to action by the decision of the A. F. of L. to convene there next autmn; the Open Shop Association of San Antonio, Texas; Florida Employers' Association; Employers' Association of Fort Wayne; Associated Industries of Seattle; Milwaukee Employers' Council, and the local American Plan-Open Shop Association of Little Rock, Ark.

These and representatives of some 200 militant anti-union American plan bodies will gather in Dallas to confer on bigger and better tactics for fighting trade unions.

In its advice to local "industrial associations" the open shop conference is all for militancy and disciplined organization among employers. It says:

"The industrial association must be found fighting where tha war is on and not confine itself to some sort of quarter of its own selection and prediection." "The industrial association should not consider the community secure as long as there exists a single closed shop industry in that community."

The same aggressive note, which may well serve as a battle challenge to the A. F of L., is sounded in the observation that "closed shop conditions must be looked upon as a form of industrial pestilence which must be immediately cleaned up."

Instructions given in the minutes of the May Detroit convention tell how pressure may be brought against employers reluctant to break with unions: "Financial and building interests should be brought to the point that they will confine their awards to open shop contractors."

Reminiscent of the A. F. of L. tilt with the Detroit churches are the instructions under presenting the open shop to churches: "Furnish your pastors with literature on the open shop. Meet with your ministerial association."

Finally the conferences defines its own function as that of a correlation agency helping local and state employers' associations in their struggle with unions. "The American plan-open shop conference must be known as a voice of industry for the open shop—as the militant, determined, intelligent group that is equipped to fight for, why represent, the cause."

The organization is committed to company unions, if necessary to head off real trade unions, and is especially interested in preventing organization of workers in the automobile and motion picture industries. Concerning the latter it says: "Every industrial association (meaning its affiliated bodies) should work to keep the motion picture industry in the open shop ranks."

The Dallas convention will undoubtedly take up methods for combatting the announced purpose of four big A. F. of L. unions to get the closed union shop in their sections of the movie industry. The convention will also discuss new means of mauling the A. F. of L. campaign in the auto industry and in organization of the unorganized.

Plays for Workers, Is Aim of New Group

NEW YORK, Nov. 16. (FP)—The Biggest Boob in the World, a fantastic labor comedy translated from the German by Upton Sinclair is the first production announced by the Workers' Theatre. Karl Wittvogel is author of the play. The play will be given Dec. 4 in the Church of All Nations, New York, and repeated there Dec. 8 and 9 before being taken to various labor halls thruout the city.

The aim of the Workers' Theatre, according to Michael Gold—editor New Masses and organizer of the group, is to present to American audiences the spirit of labor in drama that will touch closely the life of the workers. Gold contends that the American and European stage is decadent, that it pandere to the taste of a small wealthy and effete audience, and therefore has no great influence in the life of the nation. He plans to model the Workers Theatre somewhat after the newer theatres of Russia, which, according to the noted British critic Hunter Carter, are now the most vigorous and alive to the world.

Wants Whiskey for Medicine.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 16.—L. C. Andrews, dry chief, is going to ask congress to permit the manufacture of whiskey in the United States. The whiskey is to be made for medicinal purposes, to replenish the present stock that will be exhausted within five years.

WOLL COMMENDS COOLIDGE FOR SOVIET POLICY

A. F. of L. Reactionary Is In Accord

Pretending to speak for the workers, Matthew Woll, reactionary vice-president of the American Federation of Labor, has sent a letter to President Coolidge commending him on his stand against recognition of the Soviet Union, as expressed in his Kansas City Armistice Day speech.

Chambers Proves It.

That the workers are in accord with Coolidge's policy is shown by the actions of the New York and United States chambers of commerce and the A. F. of L. against Russian recognition, Woll said to Coolidge.

Gives an Earful.

Woll devoted 7,000 words, or about seven newspaper columns, to explain to Calvin the reasons the workers are opposed to recognizing Russia.

A large part of the letter was devoted to attacking Sherwood Eddy, who addressed the A. F of L. convention at Detroit on Russia. He declared that Eddy was "in league with the Communists" to spread Soviet propaganda in the United States.

"Folly," Says Mr. Woll.

Mr. Woll informed Coolidge that future revolutions and internal turmoil in Russia are certain and until the time when the Russian government is firmly established upon a program of international justice, America would be committing the greatest folly to offer recognition.

Asks for Fair Play from Police in Box Makers' Union Strike

NEW YORK, Nov 16 – Fair play to striking paper box workers and the removal of policemen from delivery wagons was requested of the police department in a letter sent yesterday to Police Commissioner McLaughlin by Fred Caiola, manager of the Paper Box Makers' Union.

The police commissioner's attention was called to a recent statement by the manufacturers' association to the effect that "through concerted association efforts the full co-operation of the police department has been secured." The union maintains that every manufacturer has been furnished with officers who ride on every delivery wagon and prevent the striking union drivers from approaching the strike-breakers "with a view to convincing them that they are doing an injustice to the strikers."

We beg of you to maintain a neutral position," concludes Mr. Caiola, "giving our boys the right and opportunity to do their lawful picketing. This can only be achieved by removing the policemen from the wagons."

2ND CONFERENCE OF NEW ENGLAND I. L. D. IS CALLED

Meeting to Be Held in Boston, Nov. 28

(Special to The Daily Worker)

BOSTON, Mass., Nov. 16.—The second annual conference of the International Labor Defense, New England district, will be held here, Nov. 28, at Franklin Union Hall, 41 Berkeley St. Delegates will attend from labor unions, working class organizations, and I. L. D. branches from Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Maine, Vermont and New Hampshire.

All Urged to Attend.

All affiliated and sympathetic organizations are urged to send delegates to the conference. The representation will be as follows: two delegates each for all trade unions, co-operatives, fraternal societies, and clubs; two delegates for each I. L. D. branch; each I. L. D. branch secretary can come as a delegate; former class war prisoners are invited as fraternal delegates.

Demonstration of Unity.

The aim of the I. L. D. is to make this conference an imposing demonstration of the unity of all progres sive forces in the labor movement for the defense and support of persecuted workers and their families, and for organized resistance to capitalist persecution in America and thruout the world.

Suppression in New England.

That action is needed in New England is pointed out by the call for the conference, which says:

"The suppression of the civil rights of the workers has assumed such alarming proportions in New England, particularly in Massachusetts, that it demands the immediate consideration of every progressive workers' organization and of every forward looking individual interested in the progress and development of the labor movement. Facts show that labor speakers have been barred from using public meeting places by specific orders from local officials cities and towns have shut their doors tight to those who seek to speak in the interests of labor.

"The constitutional right of workers to freedom of speech and assembly has been boldly violated by police and city officials in Boston, Lawrence, Fall River, Lynn, and other places where labor meetings have been interfered with or prohibited. Government departments are being used, not to serve the ends of justice, but rather as a means of establishing a widespread system of espionage over those who are active in the labor movement. Workers active in the struggle against the employers are prosecuted on trumped-up charges and given long jail sentences. Foreign-born workers are deported to certain death in the lands of the white terror. The fundamental rights of the workers to freedom of speech and assembly, to organize to better their conditions—these rights are being ruthlessly assailed and trampled under foot."

N. W. Parents' League to Meet Thursday Night

An important meeting of the Parents' League of the Northwest Side will be held Thursday, Nov. 18, at 2301 L. Monroe St. There will be election of officers. Carl Haessler, chief editor of the Federated Press will speak on "Who controls the schools & why."

(Copyright, 1926, by Upton Sinclair)

And the same thing applied to the movement in its national aspects. The American Federation of Labor was maintaining a bureau in Washington, for the purpose of combatting the radicals, and this bureau was for practical purposes the same as any patriotic society; its function was to collect false statements about Russia from all over the world, and feed them to the American labor press. And of course, if any labor man was defiant, and insisted upon telling the other side, he would incur the bitter enmity of this machine, and they would throw him to the wolves. There would be a scare story in the capitalist press, telling how the Communists had got possession of the plasterers' union, or maybe the button workers, and the grand jury was preparing action against a nest of conspirators. The average labor leader, no matter how honest and sincere, shivered in his boots when such a club was swung over his head.

II

Also there was Harry Seager and his troubles. The Seager Business College had turned out a class of young men and women, thoroughly trained to typewrite, "All men are created free and equal," and also, "Give me liberty or give me death." And now these young people were going about in the business offices of Angel City, and discovering that nobody wanted employes to typewrite anything of that sort! In plain words these young people were being told that the Seager Business College was a Bolshevik institution, and the business men of the city had been warned not to employ its graduates. To boycott was illegal in Angel City; and if any labor men tried to apply it, they would be whisked into jail in a jiffy. But imagine Harry Seager asking the district attorney to prosecute the heads of the Merchants' and Manufacturers' Association, whose campaign contributions had put the district attorney into office!

Bunny went up to Paradise, and there was another bunch of grief. In preparation for the coming struggle over the wage scale, the oil operators were weeding out the "trouble-makers," which meant the active union men. And now for the first time, Ross Consolidated was following the policy of the rest. Ben Riley, one of the fellows who met in the Rascum cabin, had been told that he was no longer needed. They had too many men, the foreman had said, but that was a plain lie, because he had taken on half a dozen new men since. No, Ben was a Socialist, and had talked at meetings in Paradise, and distributed Socialist papers that showed the monstrous wastes in the oil industry, and the world-rivalry for oil which was to cause the next and great war.

It was Ruth who told Bunny about this; very seriously, with distress in her gentle eyes. "It's a shame, Bunny, because Ben has got no place to go. And here he's got a home, and a wife and two little girls."

Bunny was worried too; Dad had promised this kind of thing should not happen!

"Can't you do something about it?" pleaded Ruth.

"Well, Ruth, but Ben was a pumper, and that's in the department of operation, and Dad has only to do with the development work. He wouldn't butt in on the superintendent of operation."

"But then, ask him to give Ben a job on development work."

"I'll ask him, Ruth, but I know what he'll say. If he undertook to make jobs for men that other departments want to get rid of, he'd make bad feeling. You know what a lot of fuss he makes about good feeling inside the organization."

"Yes, Bunny, but then, what about Ben's feelings, and all the men?" Ruth persisted, with that surprising force that gentle people sometimes display. Ruth did not understand class-war questions, she had not theories about the "class struggle"; but when it came to a human fact, a grievance, then she was possessed by it, and as determined as Paul. These men who came to the cabin to argue and discuss, they were all her friends, and if they did not get a square deal, something must be done!

So here was Bunny in his old tormenting position, watching a fight which he was powerless to stop, or even to influence. Ben Riley managed to get work on a ranch; he had to put in twelve hours a day, but all the same, he would come over to the tract at night and distribute his Socialist literature, and of course with a burning sense of bitterness, shared by his friends

STRIKE STRATEGY

By WILLIAM Z. FOSTER

ARTICLE XVII

Under-Cover Men

American employers make more extensive use of under-cover men than any capitalists in the world. They plant large numbers of detectives and stool pigeons among the workers to betray and defeat them. Those under-cover men constitute a real problem in all important organizing campaigns and strikes. Strike strategy must include ways and means to uncover these traitors and to defeat their treacherous activities.

In all sections of the labor movement the under-cover men are a deadly influence, but nowhere so much as in newly-formed organizations of the unskilled. In established unions the employers, to control the masses, depend largely upon the corrupt and conservative bureaucracy. But in new unions and movements of the unorganized, the employers have to depend upon the under-cover men. Hence, employers flood such new unions with their detectives and try to capture them entire.

In about all the great movements of the unorganized in American industries under-cover men work their way into the leading committees. Often the leadership is saturated with spies and detectives. In some cases, as in the I. W. W. a dozen years ago, the rubber strike in Akron, under-cover men actually made up a majority of the leading union committees.

Under-cover men are obstructionists, provocateurs, spies, and disrupters. When many of them are working together in a new union they may engage in all these activities, simultaneously, but generally they are to be found performing one particular, organised role, the character of which is dependent on the state of the movement. The employers carefully fit their policies in the shops to har-

Strangling a Strike

Under-cover men appear as obstructionists especially when an organizing campaign is just beginning, or is just weekly going ahead. Then the employers may find it more advisable to try to choke out the movement quietly than to smash it in open struggle. Therefore, they set their stool-pigeons, well-organized and strategically situated, at a policy of systematic obstructionism. These worthies oppose the honest leaders, spread defeatism among the workers, and block every effort to build or vitalize the movement. In this way many a promising movement has been killed.

The employers, to facilitate the slow strangulation of the movement, do not discharge or otherwise victimize leading workers, fearing thus to galvanize the whole body of workers into action. Under these circumstances, the left wing must militantly expose the harmful tactics of the detectives. It must fight for the democratization of the leading committees, and upon every possible occasion force these doubtful characters before mass meetings of the rank and file to defend their reactionary policies. When the leading union committee is controlled by under-cover men, ways must be found to crystallize the honest forces in the union and to gradually build a substitute leading body.

Provoking Premature Strikes

Where a movement is going ahead effectively and the choking process can not succeed, then the employers may decide to kill the union by a premature strike. Then the under-cover men become provocateurs, demanding a strike to adjust some discharge case or other grievance carefully rigged up by the employers. As strike provocateurs, the under-cover men are especially dangerous. They pretend to be the defenders of the rank and file. But the left wing must learn to keep its head and not allow the workers to be stampeded into hopeless strikes.

In flourishing organisation campaigns, such as those in the packing and steel industries in 1917-19, the role of the under-cover men is reduced pretty much to that of the spy and informer. Then the under-cover man must pretend to go along with the movement in order to secure strategic

Consequently, in the packing and steel industry campaigns, some of the most effective organizers later were discovered to be detectives.

In strikes, notably of the unorganized, the under-cover men blossom forth primarily as disrupters and betrayers. Especially is this the case in the later, more difficult stages of these struggles. They then spread defeatism among the workers.

Spreading Defeatism

They head "back to work" movements, frame up acts of violence to jail the leaders or discredit the strike, and in numerous other ways seek to break the ranks of the workers. The policy of organized under-cover men in an organization of the workers may vary from time to time. But it is based in the methods most likely to break up the movement in the given circumstances.

Left wing leaders must learn how to combat the menace of the under-cover man. This is not to be done by inaugurating alarmist spy hunts such as have occurred in some unions. The best way to approach the problem is by a careful study of the given situation, and to systematically isolate those doubtful individuals who are manifestly carrying out the under-cover policy of the employers. This much can be done to neutralize these traitors and often they can be exposed and driven from the unions.

The Fight for Unity

The essence of good leadership in strike situations is to conduct a successful fight to establish and maintain the unity of the strikers in the face of innumerable splitting and disintegrating tendencies. The fighting policy of the employers against the workers is well-expressed by the time-honored axiom of all strategists, "Divide and Conquer." And their ways to divide and weaken the workers are many, devious, and difficult to defeat.

In the foregoing we have indicated some of the more important of these ways and how to checkmate them. The employers play skilled against unskilled, native workers against foreign-born, whites against blacks, unemployed against employed, adults against youth, men against assistance from the reactionary policies of the present trade union bureaucracy.

Methods of Division

The employers seek to demoralize the workers intellectually by injecting the poison of patriotism in their ranks and by cultivating religious prejudices among them. They starve the strikers by [illegible] their women and children; they terrorize them with [illegible] courts, the army, the police, and various kinds of pri[illegible] things. To all these methods they add bribery, in the [illegible] of cash payments to leaders and of illusory concessions to the workers, such as company unions, welfare systems, temporary wage increases, etc.

They plant their provocateurs and detectives in the ranks of the workers to mislead and betray them. They try to force them back into the mills or shops with "Citizens' Committees" and "Back to Work" organizations. Their nondescript politicians and go-betweens try to poison the strikers' spirit in a hundred insidious ways. In the quiver the employers have many deadly arrows of disruption to shoot into the ranks of the workers.

Unity the Primary Task

To defeat the employers' many-phased policy of driving wedges between the different categories of workers, of starving, terrorizing, demoralizing, and bribing them; to maintain a solid, unbreakable unity of the strikers in spite of all these attacks, is the prime task of working class strike strategy. It is the sine qua non for winning strikes. And this can be accomplished by intelligent and loyal application of the general line of strategy above outlined.

American capitalism is strong but the workers can thwart it with correct policies and proletarian determination. The pressure of capitalist exploitation forces the workers to unite regardless of all obstacles. They tend to forget their differences and to see clearly the powerful enemy, who can be defeated only by united action. It is our task to speed up these unifying tendencies, to help the workers to rise superior to every difference and weakness among them. It is a battle for unity and it will be w[illegible]

Royalism in the United States

It has often been stated that the capitalists are only patriotic to the profit system; that the particular country which they profess love is only a base of operations for them. This is true. When they have a quarrel with the capitalists of other countries they pull out the flag and dig up the necessary patriotic hokum in order to encourage the fighting spirit of their cannon fodder. They talk glibly on national holidays about "American traditions" and denounce the Communists who would introduce Marxism and Leninism instead of the ideals of Washington, Jefferson and Lincoln."

The flunkeyism displayed by our parasitic class towards the royal huns from Roumania about as dissolute and bawdy an outfit as ever sprang from the sewers of monarchism shows that there is no essential difference between the republicanism of our ruling classes and the monarchism, of what is left of the European aristocracy.

The bourgeoisie no longer have any quarrel with the aristocracy. They can afford to put them on the payroll. They get a kick out of it. The glamor of royalty is used to good advantage by the British ruling classes to hold the shaky empire together and to dazzle the masses. It is quite evident that our bourgeoisie would give much to have a royal family in the White House instead of a president provided they could get away with it. Kings nowadays mind their provided they could get away with it. Kings nowadays mind their own business and it would be much cheaper to keep a royal family in champagne than to shoulder the cost of electing a couple of senators.

In Chicago Communists and radicals of other working class organizations organized demonstrations to bring the terror imposed on the people of Roumania to the attention of the masses. They succeeded and got arrested for their pains. Knowing that the working class have no illusions about royalty politicians who expect to be re-elected hold aloof from the queenly kowtowing. Not only the revolutionists uphold the best traditions of the American struggle against royalism and aristocracy, in the days when the rising American capitalist class were the instruments of evolution in giving the wheel of progress a forward turn.

International Labor to the Defense of Sacco and Vanzetti

Governor Fuller of Massachusetts is under strong guard in Paris because of the demonstrations carried out there by the French workers as a protest against the threatened death of Sacco and Vanzetti at the hands of the ruling classes in Massachusetts.

Every fresh attempt on the part of the ruling classes to feed those two Italian workers to the electric chair has been met by the workers with renewed efforts to block the executioner's hand.

Not only in the United States is this determination shown. The workers of every country in the world have expressed their indignation against the sentiments aimed at those labor leaders, a conspiracy designed to make a horrible example of Sacco and Vanzetti and drive fear into the hearts of other members of the labor movement who are shouldering the responsibility of giving a forward lead to the working class movement.

That the capitalists have failed so far is a tribute to the growing class solidarity of the workers. But we must not rest on our oars. The late blow in the face to the Sacco and Vanzetti defense was given by Judge Thayer when he refused the victims of capitalist government a new trial despite the introduction of new evidence that justified another trial. Even many conservative capitalist papers admitted this.

The series of mass meetings and demonstrations now being organized in the United States to mobilize working class opinion behind the defense of our comrades should receive the enthusiastic support of every worker in the country.

Marx on Fordism

Workers are thinking about Ford's 5-day week. They are wondering if there is a catch to it. Beginning in Friday's issue The DAILY WORKER will run a series of articles telling in e-simple way the economics of the Ford system as Karl Marx would have analyzed it. Most workers don't know that the greatest economist that ever lived, the economist of the workingclass, figured out the mechanics of Ford's system of exploitation before Henry was born. "Karl Marx on Fordism" will run in four daily articles. •They are written by Thurber Lewis.

STRIKERS HAIL SETTLEMENT AS VICTORY SIGN

Toilers Enthused Over Breach in Passaic Mills

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PASSAIC, N. J., Nov. 16.—"The ranks of the mills are broken. The strikers are more determined today then ever before to fight the battle to a finish. If it takes another winter of suffering, we'll stand firm until the union is recognized." • It was with this challenge that Gustev Desk, young president of the Passaic local of the United Textile Workers Union, leading the long fight against the mill barons, greated the news of the surrender of the Worsted Mills to union demands, before a huge mass meeting of strikers.

The enthusiasm in the ranks of the strikers was never higher. Their morale has been lifted to an indomitable pitch by the victory in a large mill employing 700 workers. Mass meetings were held almost the strike area and the Worsted settlement fanned as the first step to victory.

Manager Talks.

A special meeting of the striker affected by the Botany Mill agreement was called at their strike headquarters Dastiny Hook and International Vice-president Julius Stark spoke to the workers. Then introduced Manager Mills of the Worsted Co. who told the strikers that every thing would be done to put them back to work at the earliest possible moment and to create harmonious application of the agreement signed

While the other mills have not officially recognized the move of the Worsted officials, the strikers are confident that the first break will mean more are willing down to full and not until the ranks of the mill owners weaken There are rumors of the Botany and Forstmann mills looking towards negotiations with the union.

"Get a Card."

Vice-president Stark told the Worsted workers that when they reported at the gates to take up their jobs again that they must take their union cards with them "If you haven't got one—get it," he said

President Max Mallom of the U. T. W. called the Worsted settlement the first stride [illegible] of the New Jersey textile industry.

many Roumanians But are would not show it

Queen Tries to Break Ice

The situation was becoming unbearable. The train came to a halt before a crowd of some 300 workers. It was then upon herself that made an effort to break the ice. She called out "Is there any Roumanians here?" No answer. She called again. One man stepped forth. He went up to her majesty and inclined his head as she did here. He spoke to her in Roumanian for several minutes.

Taking advantage of the break in the ranks, a photographer, who was waiting impatiently for some movement that would afford a printable picture, called out "How about a cheer for the queen?" The big steel men in the car looked daggers at the men. There was a tone of intimidation to their looks

He Get Picture.

A half-hearted cheer arose, a meaningless, unmusical cheer. And the photographer got his picture. The white car moved on. The sense of dampness was only partially liquidated. Such was the welcome that the representative of Balkan oppression got from the Gary steel workers.

25 WORKERS ARE SLAIN BY GOVERNMENT TROOPS IN NEW JAVA FIGHTING

LONDON, Nov. 16.—New uprisings have occurred in Java, according to a Central News dispatch from Batavia.

Five hundred workers attacked troops at Labocan. They were repulsed after heavy fighting. Twenty-five were killed, it is claimed.

Communications between Labocan and Batavia have been interrupted. The government is sending reinforcements to aid the troops in putting down the workers.

The number of casualties in the fighting, which has been intermittant since last week, now runs into the hundreds, it is reported here.

Will Seek Amendment to Nullify Decision of U. S. Supreme Court

MADISON, Wis., Nov. 15. Senator LaFollette of Wisconsin today announced he would introduce a constitutional amendment at the coming session of congress to nullify the supreme court decision, upholding the right of the president to remove civil service officials without the consent of the state.

The decision approving the dismissal of Postmaster Myers of Portland, Ore., "tends to nullify the constitutional limitation on the president's appointive power afforded by the clause by and with the advice and consent of the senate," said LaFollette.

Corn Crop Yield of Illinois Is Far From Good, Survey Reveals

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Nov. 14 Illinois corn yield is only slightly below the average but extra work and care, due to the varying quality will be required in handling it, according to the November 1 joint report of the Illinois and Federal departments of agriculture

The state yield per acre is estimated at 35 bushels, compared with an average of 36 bushels and 42 bushels last year. State production totals 326,625,000 bushels

Floods, rains and storms have caused great corn loss through the state, the report states.

Sheffield, Anti-Calles Minister to Mexico, Has Coolidge Backing

WASHINGTON, Nov. 16 - James R Sheffield, American ambassador to Mexico, who is returning to his post next week, has the full confidence and support of President Coolidge. It was declared at the white house today

Sheffield favors a vigorously policy in dealing with Mexico on the oil and land law controversy.

The presidential spokesman said Secretary of State Kellogg declined to comment on Mexico's reported suggestion that the differences between the two governments be referred to the Hague court for adjustment.

John Haynes Holmes to Speak on Passaic at Forum Here Sunday

John Haynes Holmes of New York will speak at the meeting of the Chicago Forum next Sunday afternoon, Nov. 21, discussing the significance of "The Passaic Strike."

Mr Holmes has had active contact with the situation in several ways, particularly in the effort to maintain the rights of free speech in Passaic. He will deal with the strike as an episode in the progress toward industrial democracy in America.

New Leader and the Amalgamated Left Wing

Ten Important Facts The New Leader Ignored in Its Slanderous Attack Upon the Left Wing in the Trade Unions

By BEN GITLOW

THE New Leader of November 13 contains an editorial on the meeting held by the Amalgamated Section of the Trade Union Educational League on Saturday November 8 at the Central Opere House, New York City.

Ignoring entirely the issues raised at the meeting, the editorial concludes as follows:

"At any rate we are unable to tell where the spy ends and the Communist begins and there is reason for believing that in some cases both are employed by the same paymaster."

The editorial also charges that the meeting was a mask for the Communist Party.

One. The meeting was called by the Amalgamated Section of the Trade Union Educational League, not by the Communist Party

Two. The meeting was called in order to explain how the reactionary machine in the Amalgamated was helping the Cloakmakers who were on an strike for 10 weeks.

Three. The direct cause for the calling of the meeting was the fact that a number of workers were described their jobs upon the order of Beckerman, manager of the New York Joint Board of the Amalgamated, because they dared to take up in their shops collections for the striking cloakmakers. Some of those discharged for this reason were Sam Liptzen, A. Netzkin, Philip Aronberg

Facts of Meeting.

THE following facts were brought out at the meeting

1—That the action the manager of the New York Joint Board, during the Cloakmakers' strike with the approval of Hillman closed a most shameful agreement with the New York cloaking manufacturers. In this agreement not a single demand was won by the cloakmakers. At a time when other needle trades unions had won or were fighting for the 40-hour week, and other demands, the Amalgamated accepted a 44-hour week and gave further concessions to the manufacturers. The announcement of the Amalgamated agreement brought forth a statement by Mr Finder representing the cloak bosses, who were most utterly fighting the union, praising the agreement and the leaders of the Amalgamated. This agreement accepted during the early stages of the cloakmakers' strike, and after the furriers had won a notable victory and the 40 hours, was a blow at the cloakmakers and a great aid to the cloak bosses!

A. C. W. Delays.

2—That in spite of the fact that Sidney Hillman as president of the Amalgamated at the meeting raid at Madison Square Garden in favor of the strike, pledged the whole hearted support of the Amalgamated to the impending struggle, the Amalgamated failed until very late in the struggle to assist the cloakmakers, and then in driblets, the total sums amounting to only $27,500, an insignificant amount for an organization like the Amalgamated. That the Amalgamated is the one union in the needle trades that is in a very good position to financially assist the cloakmakers.

3—That Abraham Beckerman, the New York Joint Board manager, without the interference of Hillman and the general Executive board during the course of the strike worked closely with the opposition forces in the cloakmakers and carried on a vicious campaign against the strike and its left wing leaders.

4—That the decision to tax the members of the New York Joint Board of the Amalgamated for cloakmakers relief was made after Beckerman had given strict orders that there must be no collections taken for the striking cloakmakers in the shops, after a number of workers were discharged for doing so upon the orders of Beckerman, and deprived of a livelihood and a few days after the Amalgamation Section of the Trade Union Educational League had announced publicly that it would hold the Central Opere House meeting.

Scab Work Dens.

5—That in Amalgamated shops in Newark, with the knowledge of the business agents, scab work has being done.

6—That the Beckerman Hillman right wing administration of the Amalgamated was working hand in glove with the reactionary right wing forces lead by Sigman in the International to sabotage the strike and create difficulties for the left wing leadership.

7—That when the amalgamation issue was raised during the strike by the General Strike Committee of the cloakmakers, Hillman who has always been taking credit for being in favor of amalgamation remained silent as a clam.

8—That when delegates representing the New York Joint board of the Amalgamated appeared at the conference of New York unions called to organize relief, they stated that they came as observers and had no power to commit their organizations

Opposed Picket Demonstration.

9—That when a decision was made by the conference to march to City Hall to protest before Mayor Walker against the unjustifiable mass arrests, the breaking up of picket lines and police brutality, Beckerman declared that the Amalgamated was not officially a part of the conference that it had made no decision to participate in the march and therefore would not take part in the demonstration

10—That when Philip Orlofsky, manager of the Cutters' Local No 4 endorsed Smith for governor after the cloakmakers were bitterly hitting the strikebreaking atrocities of this Tammany governor, who tried to force arbitration, whose commission granted a decision in favor of the bosses, and whose judges granted a most severe injunction. Beckerman and Hillman remained absolutely silent and did not criticise Orlofsky for his treacherous endorsement.

New Leader Ignores Them.

THESE facts and many more raised at the meeting the New Leader ignores and instead it raises a huge hue about spies and agents of the bosses if anything is proven by these facts it is that the whole right wing machine in the needle trades together with the Jewish Daily forward and its unions undemocratically. The New Leader, are the agents of the bosses. That their role is one of treachery to the workers, one of sabotage against the workers militant struggles for better conditions.

The meeting held in Central Opera House was a great success from the audience in the needle trades. Upon its plate was were gathered the militant leaders of all the needle trades unions. It was a demonstration of the need of creating an relation of the mil tant forces in the industry to meet the conditions that have now become the lot of the real workers in the needle trades as a result of the furriers and cloakmakers' strike. The resolution of the meeting sounded a new note for the needle trades in addition to protests against the attacks of the bosses on the cloakmakers' strike by the Amalgamated officials and pledging full support to the cloakmakers' strike

It raised the issue of amalgamation and the defeat of the right wing for its corresponding treacheries during and for the militant fighting policy of the left wing

The New Leader had better rave. It can offer no constructive proposals against the program of the left wing it can, like in its editorial, deal only in lies, insinuations and calumny.

responding increase in the effectiveness of the work of the party units.

3. Party Mobilization Campaign.

IN order to turn the attention of the party to the work of strengthening the party organization and the training of the new party units in their work, a party mobilization campaign must be initiated immediately and during the next six months a large part of the party energies must be directed to the organizational problems. This party mobilization shall include the following:

A. The drawing back into the party of members who did not come into the reorganized party. Many members were dropped from the party thru lack of persistant propaganda to win them for the reorganized party and thru a too mechanical cutting off of these members from the reorganized party. These members can be drawn back into the party.

B. A recruiting campaign to win new members. Our party has never developed the necessary organization measures to draw into the party those workers it wins thru its activities in the class struggle The party must learn that constant recruiting of new members must accompany the political and industrial campaigns of the party.

C. The training of efficient party officials for the shop and street nuclei. For this purpose, training schools for party officials must be established in every large city and comrades must be brought in for week-end lectures from the smaller centers.

D. Closer contact must be established between the sub-section, section and city committees with the nuclei, with representatives of these committees attending the meetings to give instructions on how to carry out the party campaigns and to train the shop nuclei how to carry on their work in the factories.

E. The shop and street nuclei must be furnished with agendas for discussion of the party problems, and work under the leadership of representativos of the committee having charge of the territory in which they are organized.

F. One of the weaknesses of the party organization is that the whole membership is not drawn into the party campaigns. The nuclei must be trained in the assignment of work to every member with regular reports on the carrying out of the work assigned.

G. In connection with this campaign, there must be a campaign for systematic payment of dues by all party members so as to register the whole strength of the party monthly dues.

H. The organization department and agitprop department shall work out concrete instructions for the carrying out of the above phases of the party mobilization campaign. The campaign to draw back the old members and recruit new members shall be so developed, as to make the Lenin memorial meetings the climax of these campaigns.

4. The Language Difficulty.

CAREFUL study must be made of the question of lack of understanding of English by the party members and their consequent difficulty in participating in the work of the new party units, and organization readjustments made to meet this problem. One step to solve this problem can be made by concentrating larger numbers of members of one language group in a street nucleus and having regular translations made. This, shall not, however, be the one centralized organization with the shop and street nuclei as its basic units. The organization of the national language federations sympathetic to the party in which the party fractions work may be a necessary step in the case of those language groups in which no mass organizations of workers exist. The party in supporting the organization of such a federation consisting of the Finnish workers' clubs. The political committee must study the question whether there are other language groups in relation to which a similar step is necessary and give instructions to the party fraction of such language groups to take the initiative in organizing such a national federation sympathetic to the party and its program.

5. Party Dues.

IN order to draw into the party a larger number of the exploited farmers the Central Committee finds it necessary to reduce the dues of the party in the agricultural sections to 25 cents a month. This reduction shall also apply in cases where husband and wife are both members of the party and the wife is not employed and earning an independent livelihood. In such cases the husband shall pay the regular fifty cents dues and the wife, 25 cents monthly.

U. S. PLANS TO TAKE NICARAGUA

Keep The DAILY WORKER

Build It Into a Powerful Weapon of the Revolutionary Workers

Resolution Adopted by the Central Committee in Plenary Session November 12.

The party is still confronted with the first steps in the task of placing The DAILY WORKER on a firm and secure footing and of making it a necessary and powerful weapon of the party, as well as the chief moulder of opinion and policy in the labor movement.

The repeated financial crises, which have occurred, have not only taken away valuable energy from other important mass work, developing to some extent a sense of insecurity and impending disaster, most detrimental to the party, have revealed the fact that The DAILY WORKER has not yet established for itself a broad and stable body of supporters.

The party has not yet successfully mobilized all its resources behind our daily organ. The machinery for the support of The DAILY WORKER has been given too little care and attention from the leading committees and comrades of the party as well as the lower units. The DAILY WORKER is not yet the collective product or the combined concern of the entire party.

The party has not yet learned to use The DAILY WORKER as its collective organizer. It is not yet sufficiently used to mobilize our party for quick response to our campaigns, both national and local. The party must immediately mobilize its forces for support ing the paper. The broadest possible supporting machinery should be organized, including party and non-party elements which will give serious and continuous attention to the upkeeping of The DAILY WORKER. The building of such a machine should be the immediate concern of every unit of the party.

The foreign language sections of our party must realize more and more deeply the overwhelming importance of an English Communist daily as the leading organ of the revolutionary movement and should, while not minimizing the support of the foreign language press, stimulate and encourage to an increasing extent the support of The DAILY WORKER.

The immediate task for the party at the present time is the raising of the $50,000 Keep The DAILY WORKER Fund, to place the paper firmly on its feet for the coming period. Upon the completion of this campaign, the party must engage in an intensive effort to build up its circulation, by a subscription campaign on a broad scale.

With the firm co-operation and the united efforts of our entire party in this period of great advances of our party on many fronts, there is every reason to believe that we will be able to build a powerful Communist daily with ever increasing support and influence.

CENTRAL COMMITTEE
WORKERS (COMMUNIST) PARTY,
C. E. RUTHENBERG, General Secretary.

Current Events

By T. O'FLAHERTY

IT was rather considerate of the United States district attorney not to indict our whole police force and a big chunk of our judiciary while the queen of Roumania was among us. Now that the lady has departed, Chicago can return to normalcy as our late President Harding would say. For the benefit of those who live in the wide open spaces where news is as scarce as hen's teeth, let it be said that an honorable judge and a police captain, who is secretary to the chief of police, and divers other policemen and citizens, and saloonkeepers, beer peddlers, etc., have been indicted for alleged violations of the Volstead act.

• • •

WE hasten to agree with our honored mayor, that a person should be considered innocent until proven guilty. The reverse attitude is taken by the capitalists where the workers are concerned. It must be particularly trying on our mayor to be shocked with such a reflection on his administration after a hard week's work straining his mayoral suspenders bowing to the queen. Unless I am mistaken, the judge involved—his name is Harry Walker—is the same individual who sat in judgement on Communists who were arrested last year for holding street meetings. The honorable judge was sorry he could not send them to jail for expressing such views. Now others may be sorry if a jury finds the honorable judge innocent.

NO doubt the interests of state will be invoked to prevent the imprisonment of our police force as it would be difficult to train a new force in time to guard the queen of Spain's champagne supply, who is said to be borrowing money for a visit to the U. S. Also there is a little strike on down in the loop—at least one. And I saw by the papers as Dooley would say that an officer of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union was arrested the other day for daring to be in the vicinity of a struck shop. What would the scab clothing manufacturers do without our police force, I ask to ask? And what would happen to the morale of the police force

Soviet-Turkish Amity Forced by Imperialist Acts, Says Chicherin

(Special to The Daily Worker)

MOSCOW, Nov. 18. — Russia and Turkey have been pressed into international mutuality and friendship by the crushing force of imperialistic nations alone, declared Georges Chicherin, Soviet commissar of foreign affairs in a speech at a Turko-Russian banquet at Odessa, following his conference with Bushdi Bey, Turkish foreign minister.

M. Chicherin pointed out that both Russia and Turkey had suffered destruction of property because of the onslaughts of the imperialistic nations, and were now rebuilding on a new basis.

'CODE' CABLES ARE DODGE TO COVER RETREAT

Marie Fears Further Manifestations

Queen Marie is going home in a hurry. Reports from Louisville, Ky. state that her entire eastern return trip will be cancelled and that she will depart immediately for New York, arriving there on Saturday and awaiting the Wednesday sailing of the Berengaria with no further public appearances. Her attendants announce that the queen is alarmed over the condition of her husband's health following the receipt of two coded messages from Bucharest.

At the same time, a press dispatch from Bucharest advises that Premier Varaesa, reporting on the condition of his majesty Ferdinand, assured the members of parliament that there was no need for fear over the king's illness, that he suffered from an ailment long standing and that ours was one.

Got Her Loan.

On top of this is the fact that the royal itinerary was previously curtailed at the time the $100,000,000 loan to Roumania was announced and following the Chicago demonstrations of workers against the queen.

It was well known to the queen's hosts that in both Cleveland and Detroit, where she was to make appearances, there was strong opposition to the official welcomes arranged by the two cities.

Cleveland Afire.

In Cleveland, the city council was thrown into an uproar and one member threatened with expulsion for trying to read a resolution of protest. In Detroit, the Federation of Labor passed a vigorous resolution against the queen and her government. In both places, the International Labor Defense was making extensive plans to record her majesty a reception similar to the one she received in Chicago.

The Hungarian community in Cleveland had constituted itself the nucleus around which sentiment was crystallized against the queen. The opposition became so strong that Mayor Marshal said, "Certain elements here were outspoken in their antagonism against the queen" and added that "it might be advisable to cancel the visit."

The chief of police of Cleveland has made arrangement for an armed guard of 1,000 police and firemen to act as a guard.

Why The Hurry.

In view of these facts, it becomes decidedly problematical whether it is King Ferdinand's illness or the fear of further demonstrations against her, that has prompted the queen to cancel her engagement.

The fact that the messages received from Bucharest that have been made the basis for the postponement were written in code and have not been made public, would indicate that these messages might offer the much needed excuse to cancel engagements that can result only in further embarrassment to the royal travellers.

N. Y. Demonstration.

Reports from New York state that International Labor Defense is preparing to give the queen a send off in the form of a rousing demonstration against her white terror government. While the cancellations so far made have saved the royal lady this ordeal in both Cleveland and Detroit, it will be difficult to avoid the wrath of the New York workers since, to get to Europe, it is necessary to sail on an ocean liner. It will be very difficult to get aboard the Berengaria secretly.

The DAILY WORKER will run again, for the benefit of the New York demonstration, the story of "Cotopaxenesti" that caused her majesty and her retainers to shudder in genuine fear when they arrived in Chicago and learned that the story was out.

NEGOTIATIONS ON FOR EVACUATION OF RHINE BY FRENCH AND ENGLISH

(Special to The Daily Worker)

LONDON, Nov. 18. — Complete evacuation of German territory by troops of Great Britain and France is seen soon as the result of negotiations now being conducted between the British and French foreign departments.

It is believed that the evacuation will be effected by Jan. 1, if the obstacles in the way can be ironed out.

The desire of French and English army officers to keep their soft jobs on the Rhine, and thus causing them to make unfavorable reports on German militaristic activities is one of the main obstacles, it is said. Another is the activity of the German nationalists in fostering hatred between Germany and France.

100 WORKERS ENTER PASSAIC WORSTED MILL

First Mill in History of Region to Sign Up

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PASSAIC, N. J., Nov. 18.—So far approximately one hundred strikers have gone back to work at the New Jersey Worsted Spinning company, the first of the textile mills in the district to sign up with the union. This mill recognized the United Textile Workers last week, signing an agreement with them thru James Starr, vice-president of the union.

There are still eight mills on strike, including the two plants owned by the Forstmann and Huffmann interests in Clifton and Garfield. The mill which has settled is owned by W. Gaunt, a young man of Enghish parentage, whose father owns cotton mills in England. It employs about 700 workers normally.

Norman Midgley, the new superintendent of the mills, has introduced some improvements in the mills, according to the workers who went back this week. The place has been cleaned up and conditions made more sanitary.

Cheer Workers.

When the first workers to go back to this mill arrived Monday, they found a large crowd of strikers outside waiting to cheer them. Inside the mill they discovered that less than fifty of the hundred or more employes who had been working there during the strike had stuck to their jobs in face of the return of the victorious strikers.

The Passaic Worsted Spinning company is the first mill in the Passaic district which has ever signed an agreement with a labor union, according to Mr. Starr. Which means that a very important landmark in the stormy labor history of this region has been passed.

Mills Still Struck.

The mills which are still on strike are the Botany Worsted, employing in normal times about 5,500 workers, and the Garfield Worsted, with 1,200 to 1,500 workers, both owned by the same interests; the two Forstmann and Huffmann mills with capacity for 4,500 to 5,000 workers; the Gera mills and the New Jersey Worsted, run by the same company and employing between 1,200 and 1,500 workers each; the United Piece end Dye Works in Lodi, with 4,500 workers, and the Dundee Textile mills with 500 workers. All these mills are still badly crippled by the strike. Such workers as they have now are for the most part recruits from the outside. The strikers themselves are still holding out firmly.

Can Extract Gas and Oil from Poor Grade of Coal, Says German

PITTSBURGH, Nov. 18. — Gasoline and lubricating oils may be extracted from the poorest grade of bituminous coal, Dr. Frederich Bergius, noted German fuel technologist, told the international conference on bituminous coal, in session here today.

Faced with a shortage of petroleum, Germany already has developed a process for distilling soft coal which is commercially practicable, Dr. Bergius informed the 900 scientists from all parts of the world assembled here to

KUOMINTANG OF U. S. MEETS ON CANTON ISSUE

Conference Will Hinge on Canton Question

(Anti-Imperialist News Service)

LOS ANGELES, Calif., Nov. 18. — Chinese from all over the United States are arriving in this city to engage in a bitter convention struggle which will be waged around the demand of unqualified support of the Canton government in its fight against imperialism and for the unification of China under nationalist rule. The occasion will be the special conference of the Kuomintang of China in America, which opens its sessions here Saturday, Nov. 20.

The convention will determine whether or not the Kuomintang branches in this country are to be dominated by the business and other right wing elements.

Left wing ferment has been increasing in the organization since the national American headquarters, at San Francisco, began openly to desert the cause of the anti-imperialist movement in China last year. Yu Yau Yen and Tang Sen, who were appointed delegates from the United States to last year's general convention of the Kuomintang at Canton, did not go to Canton at all. Instead, they proceeded to Shanghai, where they ranged themselves with the group of traitors led by Chen Lu. When the San Francisco office refused to take disciplinary action against its delegates for this betrayal, the general headquarters of the Kuomintang withdrew all authority from it.

Upon the demand of the Seattle branch of the Kuomintang in America, the present special conference was called, to consider: (1) election of new officers for the Kuomintang of China in America; (2) disciplinary action against the traitor delegates Yu and Tang.

The All-American Anti-Imperialist League, 166 N. La Salle street, Chicago, is sending a special representative to the convention. The representative, who is a Chinese, will present the invitation in the name of the All-America Anti-Imperialists' League and will extend a formal invitation to the Kuomintang of China in America to participate in the world congress against imperialism which is to meet at Brussels, Belgium, next January.

South Americans to Give Encouragement to Soviet Recognition

ODESSA, Nov. 18. — Three hundred South American tourists are expected here in a few days according to an announcement, by the Soviet fleet. The South Americans will be guests of the government and after seeing the chief cities of Russia will re-embark at Leningrad.

The visit has awakened hopes here of speedy recognition of Russia by South American countries.

Mason Freed in Wine Conspiracy, Stone Is Held for Same Charge

Ralph W. Stone, former prohibition director, will probably be placed on trial for complicity in the alleged $1,000,000 wine withdrawal conspiracy before the first of the year, it was learned today.

State Senator Lowell B. Mason and Percy Owen, Stone's predecessor in office, were freed by a jury on virtually the same charge. Stone then was one of the main prosecution witnesses. The jury was out little more than an hour.

Mason had previously been re-elected to the state legislature on a dry platform.

REFERENDUM STRIKE VOTE OF CLOAKMAKERS ENDORSES SETTLEMENT

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, Nov. 18.—Voting upon the question of a settlement with the "inside" manufacturers already ratified by mass meetings of the 40,000 workers on strike in the New York cloak industry, a referendum resulted in 9,946 for the agreement and 2,533 against. This allows the majority of the strikers to return to work and lays the basis for further negotiations to settle with the as yet unsigned bosses.

Urges Government Protection

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PORTLAND, Ore., Nov. 18.— Following in the footsteps of the St. Louis conference between cotton growers and cornbelt farmers, the National Grenge, meeting here in national convention, endorsed the movement for farm relief which has been opposed by the Coolidge administration and elected a committee to investigate the advantages of the Canadian wheat pool looking towards the application to the farmers of the United States.

A resolution urging the setting up of an export debenture plan which would guarantee farmers protection for their surplus crops was passed with only one dissenting vote.

Foot e Success.

The Canadian wheat pool in the province of Alberta a co-operative method of marketing the crop and thus spoiling the speculations of the gamblers, has proved a notable success. One of the keynotes of the Grange meeting is a demand for a farm co-operative movement initiated and conducted by the farmers themselves for their own protection.

Twenty seven states of the union are represented in the Grenge convention.

St. Louis Conference Continues.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Nov. 18.— Continuing the discussion of the opening day in which the Coolidge administration was vigorously attacked by both representatives of the cotton growers of the south and the farmers of the north, the special farm conference meeting here, evolved two methods of meeting the serious crisis confronting the cotton planters.

One view was for immediate government relief thru measures passed by congress combined with a curtailment of cotton acreage to lower the crop surplus and another view being was a plan for co-operative supervision of crops thru the organizations of the farmers that could afford relief with adequate government assistance.

Political Significance.

The political significance of the conference is that it is a meeting ground for the farmers of both the north and the south coming together for the first time on a common platform that has as its basis the crisis that is operating in both sections of the country.

"Breaking Chains" Soviet Wonder Film

The Chicago censors have just passed, with only a few minor changes, one of the most artistic of the new Russian films, "Breaking Chains." This film, which has been shown in Moscow, Leningrad and Berlin, is to be shown on Friday, December 3, at the Douglas Park Auditorium, Ogden and Keddie avenues. There will be two shows, one starting at 7:30 and one at 9:00 p. m.

Here is what a correspondent, who saw the film as its showing in Moscow, has to say about it:

An Epic Film.

The picture deals with revolution and counter-revolution, with the death of Lenin and the tremendous increases in party membership during the Lenin Memorial Enrollment. This film was reviewed very favorably in the New York Times by Walter Duranty, and likewise praised by a correspondent on the Chicago Daily News. Well it is on a par with all except the highest super-features of the American studies, the camera work is skillful, the suspense and continuity well sustained by good direction, and the acting vibrant with universal human sympathy.

Stars Are Workers.

"The two 'leads,' hero and heroine were only recently factory workers, and their charming naturalness is seldom marred by that over-acting that robs so many European products of all chance of success on the American screen. There is no camera consciousness, no apelliatt grabbing. Just a smooth, delightful development of a story packed with human interest, thrilling action, and entirely plausible behavior of plain folks who find upon their shoulders the pioneering duty of a new social order.

Human Plot.

"Katje, a girl of ten or twelve, is orphaned by the struggle on the bar-

PAVE WAY FOR PERMANENT U. S. INTERVENTION

American Navy to Rule in Nicaragua

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, Nov. 18.—An avenue apparently was opened today for the United States to maintain a permanent naval force in Nicaraguan waters to combat what the state department considers the active encroachment of "Mexican radicalism" into the countries of the Caribbean.

Such a policy would amount to a virtual American protectorate over Nicaragua, and will not be at all displeasing to American concerns that have large interests in the country.

Diaz Makes Request.

The advance has been opened by the request of Adolfo Diaz, the new puppet president of Nicaragua, for permanent intervention by the American government into the affairs of the Latin republic.

Diaz has stated that this intervention is necessary for the protection of neighboring countries, principally Mexico, from aiding and fomenting revolutionary activities" in his country. The state department has, of course, received his request sympathetically and is considering it.

Give Diaz Quick Recognition.

Diaz was elevated to the presidency of Nicaragua a few days ago and was promptly accorded recognition by the state department, which for a year prior had refused to recognize the government headed by Gen. Emilio Chamorro. The American government's opposition to Chamorro ultimately forced his withdrawal, and, under the guiding influence of the American charge at Managua Diaz was chosen to succeed him.

The state department has been "concerned" for some time over evidences of what it considers Mexican "interference" in the affairs of Nicaragua, and also of Guatemala.

Kellogg Will Recognize Chamorro Puppet.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 18. In violation of the spirit of the many declarations of policy he has made as to recognition of Central American governments based on seizure of power by military force Secretary Kellogg has unofficially announced his decision to recognize Adolfo Diaz as the constitutional president of Nicaragua. Diaz was made dictator a dozen years ago at the instance of the American bankers firms, Seligman & Co. and Brown Brothers, when American marines were occupying the country. He has been restored to power by Gen. Chamorro, after the latter had failed to get recognition for himself upon the

ATTACK DOLLAR DIPLOMACY.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 18.—An attack upon this government's action in recognizing the Diaz regime was made by Dr. T. S. Vaca, representing the liberal revolutionists.

He said: "The recognition of the Diaz government in Nicaragua and the proposed armed intervention is nothing but dollar diplomacy in its worst shape and a mere repetition of the events of 1912."

MINERS REJECT COMPROMISE IN UNION VOTING

Scotland and So. Wales Decide to Stick

(Special to The Daily Worker)

LONDON, Nov. 18.—Indications on Thursday were that the miners had rejected the terms of the government in the union ballot taken in the mine fields. Reports from the big districts in Scotland and South Wales were that the men had voted down the compromise proposals recommended by the delegate conference of the British Miners' Federation that met in London last week.

Final Result Friday.

The final results of the referendum will not be known until Friday. The terms of the government that were voted on were district settlements involving longer hours, these to run three years, and a national tribunal to be set up to consider appeals from the owners and the union. An arrangement as to distribution of profits would guarantee the owners from 13 to 15 per cent.

Cook Opposes.

A. J. Cook, the miners' secretary, took a sharp stand against recommending these terms to the miners when the matter was voted on at the delegate conference and the recommendation carried by narrow margin.

If the results of the vote are as the early returns indicate, for the second time the miners from the pits will have turned down compromise recommendations made by the delegate body, which corresponds to a special national convention.

Holmes Speaks Sunday at West Side Forum

The West Town Forum will give the first lecture of the season at the Mid-City Oddfellow Temple 3350 West Jackson Blvd., on Sunday evening, November 21st.

Dr. John Haynes Holmes, minister of the Community Church in New York will speak on the subject of "Race Prejudice, Its Cause and Cure."

At the conclusion of the lecture, there will be open discussion from the floor.

BRITISH MINERS "STICK IT OUT" DESPITE UNTOLD HARDSHIPS THEY AND FAMILIES SUFFER IN STRIKE

By GORDON CASGADEN
(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, Nov. 18.—Untold suffering prevails in the mining districts of England, Scotland and Wales, according to a well-known newspaper man who has just returned from the British Isles, where he was employed by one of the largest American newspaper syndicates.

"The half has not been told," he declared. "Despite the low standard of living prevailing before the strike these miners were determined to see it thru. It was not the wish of the men alone. They received splendid backing from their wives and families who saw that organized capital was making a class war on the working class

Papers Suppress Truth.

"We could not send the whole truth to our papers, for they would not tell the whole story of this valiant struggle against organized greed by hundreds of thousands of members of the British working class.

"But British newspaper men who represent Glasgow, Cardiff and other 'provincial' dailies paint dark pictures of conditions in those sections.

"Poor law guardians, officials charged with relief of the poor, have been urged to refuse aid to strikers. But this effort to coerce has failed. In reality it proved a boomerang, for it gave courage to miners on the verge of faltering. In many districts these poor law guardians actually refuse relief to wives and children of strikers, except where they are sick abed.

Intense Suffering.

"From every mining district comes the same story—intense suffering. Old-time miners, who for 40 and 50 years have stood the brunt of many fights with the coal barons, say that the present situation is worse than ever before. These toil-worn workers, bent with rheumatism, fractured lives or pneumonia, and other scars of the miners' struggle for a living, curse the mine owners as they watch their loved ones suffer from want of food and clothing in England's penetrating climate.

No School for Children.

"Tens of thousands of little children actually are absent from schools because they have not got shoes in which to walk. Expectant mothers are without proper bedclothes, while warm underclothing is lacking for both mothers and their babies. In many cases these families have pawned their all for food.

"The brutality of the mine owners is apparent to all, for they have had their henchmen stop miners and their families from picking coal to combat the cold, wet weather."

ricades, and is taken by her grandmother to the little village that had formerly been her home. Side by side with them in the hard boarded train rides another fugitive, a young counter-revolutionist, the man who had shot down Katje's father. He is the 'villian of the play,' but even in his delineation there is a fine restraint. As he enters his father's mansion he finds a committee of workers demanding the keys to the factory. The servants have already told their former master that henceforth he must cook his own dinner. The old parasite wants to end it all right there but the son has hopes for the future. So they take some of their jewels, bury the rest under the kitchen floor, and flee the country for three months until the czar will be restored.

White Officer Returns as Spy.

"One sees their high jinks in foreign capitals as the 'three months' drag out into three years, and then five years. Impoverished grand dukes bestow decorations in return for cash and other favors, as a coy courtesan proves when she shows the 'Cross of St. Anthony' on her garters, and thereby brings to earth the newly decorated financier. As their cash dwindles so do their boastings over military maps, and finally nothing remains but for the young 'White' to re-enter Russia as a spy and endeavor to dig up the hidden booty.

Factories Rebuilt.

"In the meantime, the Russian workers have rebuilt the factory. Katje, now five years older, stands at her father's loom and does the work he used to do. The perfect resemblance between the child that first plays the part and the charming Russian girl star is the art of effect many American directors have tried unsuccessfully to achieve. In the village school military maps are also studied but the arrows point the opposite way, toward the driving out of the White Guardists who would rob the workers of their victory, and an argument between two ten-year-old strategists winds up in a free-for-all fight.

"The intensity and high spirit of the free workers is shown in their efforts to electrify the whole local industry, an effort about to be crowned with success just as the spy returns to the village. His early successes, even to the extent of wining Katje away from her young engineer sweetheart, keep suspense at a high pitch. Time after time the villain almost sets the jewels flying but every time there is an interruption, often to the grave peril of the unsuspecting interrupter. Finally one slip arouses suspicion, and a second almost convicts, so in desperation to get the swag he blazes a trail of assault and murder that ends in his own death as he runs away.

"This would mark the end of an American film, but not so here. Katje feels deeply her own part in unwittingly contributing to the progress of the spy as she avoids her young lover and tries to forget in doubly hard work. Then a cloud settles up on the whole community as it anxiously follow the reports on the illness of the beloved leader, Vladimir Ilyitch (Lenin). Even the children show the deep psychic response, and, as in other Russian films, the child actors contribute heavily to the artistic success. The heights of pathos are reached when a five-year-old bravely asks that her most cherished possession, a doll, be also given to Lenin as her gift of love.

Ride Thru Storm for News of Lenin.

"Finally, as the villages are making ready, despite a raging blizzard, for the anniversary celebration of the 1905 Revolution, a fragmentary phone message indicates that Lenin may have died. Then the wires are down, and the suspense, which communicates itself clearly to the audience as it watches the film, will allow no other solution than that someone must ride to the city for definite word. A thrilling ride thru the blizzard, one borne after another is ridden down. The news is found to be true, and is finally relayed to the crowd that has waited in silence for six hours. It darkens all with a mantle of poignant grief. But soon comes the answer, a call to the masses to fill up the vacant place of Lenin with thousands of the best elements of the proletariat.

Heroine Joins Party.

"Katje hesitates. Should she ask for this treasured membership after she had unwittingly helped the spy? But the meeting decides for her, she shall be admitted, and her tremendous joy capped by her reconciliation with the over-ready engineer brings a lump and a cheer to the throats of those who watch.

"There is nothing trivial or trite in the whole film. Not a dull moment, not a hackneyed sentiment. As it unfolds it shows us the effect of the revolution on the inside of the Russian people, it reveals their strength and courage, their never failing humor, and their unquenchable will to freedom. . . . The picture will Russia

SACCO-VANZETTI CONFERENCE IN INTENSIVE DRIVE

Big Mass Meeting to Lead Off Protest

Some seventy-five earnest delegates from Chicago unions and other workers' bodies attended the Sacco-Vanzetti conference Monday night at Radtke Hall, Brother J. J. Wnerfel of the South Chicago Trades and Labor Assembly presided. The executive committee report, given by the secretary, Brother A. Wechsler, covered all preparations to date for the great protest meeting to be held at Ashland Auditorium on November 26.

A special report was made on the status of the case and a plan made for all possible energies of the delegates, and all Chicago workers, to be turned toward building a great public protest and demand for a new and fair trial for Sacco and Vanzetti, in Chicago.

Warn of Commutation.

A warning was sounded against the danger of a mere commutation to life imprisonment (such as happened to Mooney and Billings); and an appeal made for all labor to be awake to the need for a powerful mass protest, not only to save Sacco and Vanzetti, but also to defend the interests of labor.

The secretary announced that 20,000 admission tickets had been printed and thousands of posters, which can be obtained at the Machinists' Building, 113 South Ashland Blvd., and at other offices of labor bodies and papers. The conference deemed it advisable to charge a small admission of ten cents. Prominent Chicagoans are being invited to "add their voices" at the mass meeting, otherwise to send messages, according to the conference decision. These include Jane Addams, Dr. J. A. Lapp, Clarence Darrow, Prof. P. Douglas, Victor Orlansler, Wm. Cunnea, Wm. Z. Foster, Fred Moore, Judges Harass and Allegretti, Samuel Levine and A. Marimpietri, Mrs. G. E. Plumb, Agnes Nester, etc.

Notable Speakers.

The principal speakers so far arranged for are Vincenzo Vacirca, noted Italian speaker of New York; a labor senator exiled by Mussolini; John Fitzpatrick, president Chicago Federation of Labor; Rev. Clayton Morrison, editor of the widely circulated "Christian Century," Elizabeth Gurley Flynn, famous labor orator and national chairman of the International Labor Defense, and Anton Johannsen, popular labor organizer, chairman.

The conference has called upon all labor bodies and all workers to support this meeting and to overflow the Ashland Auditorium in a great demand for the life and freedom of Sacco and Vanzetti.

Display Portrait of Yellowley So Social Lions Will Know Him

DANVILLE, Ill., Nov. 11.—A large portrait of E. C. Yellowley, prohibition enforcement officer for Illinois and vicinity, found hanging on the walls of the Vista Grove Social Club when dry agents from the Springfield office raided the place, will be shipped to Mr. Yellowly at Chicago with the raiders' compliments.

Yellowley's portrait was hung there for the benefit of club members who did not know the gentleman. Underneath the picture was the caption, "Look Out For This Man."

Club officials overlooked the fact that Yellowley usually left his sleuthing to his subordinates.

Cleveland Writer Sees Queen Marie Here Like "Alice in Wonderland"

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

WILLIAM E. McDERMOTT, feature writer for the Cleveland Plain Dealer, takes the prize for literary pap fed to the readers of this exploitars' publication concerning the visit to that city of Queen Marie of Roumania.

This no doubt results from the fact that the two great neighboring industrial centers, Cleveland and Detroit, are each more than ever with protest against Marie's coming. The prostitute press is ever at its job of trying to smoothe out the rough spots for its owners and their retinue of parasites.

Peter Witt, member of the Cleveland city council, for instance, is no Bashevik. He leads the protest against difficulties.

Socialist members of the Cleveland city council were ousted during the war. Eugene V. Debs got his ten-year sentence to prison from a Cleveland judge. C. E. Ruthenburg, Alfred Wagenknecht and Charles Baker got jail sentences in Cleveland during the war. The status that stands in the public square dedicated to Tom Johnson and "free speech" is a relic of the past, a curiosity for sightseers.

Short shrift was therefore made of the effort of Councilman Witt to read to his fellow council members a statement prepared, not by Russians, but a committee of Cleveland Hungarians against the belly-crawling subservience of American officialdom to the visiting Roumanian monarch.

It was the Hessian army of Queen Marie that was sent into Hungary to help destroy the Hungarian Soviet Republic and erect the tyranny of the dictator, Horthy, with the blessing of the Paris peace conference, and Herbert Hoover, American food administrator in Europe. The Hungarians like other national minorities, groaning under the Roumanian heel, protest and suffer the usual punishment, death or imprisonment.

Cleveland's city mayor, city manager and the council's clark decided that the document proposed by Witt contained sactions that would offend the delicately attuned ears of Cleveland's do-nothings and their guest, "Romeny Marie." Reference to the beating of stripped women was held to be especially indelicate. Mind you, there was no denying that Queen Marie's jailers and soldiers had stripped and beaten helpless women, one of the direst tortures applied to the victims of the Roumanian terror, but it was not the "nice thing" to mention it. It might upset the nerves of the Euclid avenue idlers, who point with pride to the palace of John R. Rockefeller in their midst. So the sergeant-at-arms was even called in to put the gag on Witt. If Marie had come to town next Monday as planned, she would probably have given the local agents of big business some lessons on how to deal with obstreperous parliamentarians like Peter Witt.

The Cleveland Plain Dealer's scribbler, McDermott, however, offers the correct thing, in polley and manners. This "Brass Check" press eunuch writes the following:

". . . . I am grieved to hear the Roumanian government accused of dealing cruelly with the Hungarian people.

"But I cannot be made to believe that the beautiful Marie has had the slightest thing to do with the beating of halpless women. Even Mr. Witt admits she is a charming woman, and charming women are not usually bloodthirsty.

"Why should Marie be made to answer for either the good or the ills of her state, or for the conduct, noble or ignoble, of her individual subjects?

"She is not a policy or government, but a woman, a queen and a guest. We ought to try to be nice to her.

"By the way, speaking of this amiable rough house as to who shall be invited to the queen's party, has anybody thought to ask the queen whom she'd like to have? After all, it's her party, isn't it?"

Only the finished product of a capitalist newspaper editorial brothel could turn out such an "Alice in Wonderland" attitude toward life. Yet it is the pap that daily newspaper readers are supposed to feed on, not only on the occasion of Queen Marie's visit, but every day thruout the year.

It is true that General Averescu or the Bratiano brothers in turn become the power in Roumania's terror government. But the queen can escape no blame for the crime committed in her name and in the name of Ferdinand, the doddering king. The active part that the Bloody Marie plays in determining the policies of her government is revealed by the fact that she is now in this country developing those contacts that will result in huge loans being advanced to bulwark her crumbling throne.

To be sure, bit-wits of the kept press, who quickly pass away from the gaze both to an idea of their own, believe that Marie is here on a friendly visit having "parties" in all the principal cities, wading around in the rain and snow, just for the fun of it. The price that Marie has put on her visit is a $100,000,000 loan. She has no doubt already received pledges for this amount. Not for gin money. Not for cigarettes. Not cosmetics. Not to decorate herself as queen. But to maintain the tyranny she heads over the peoples of many tongues thrown together under Roumanian rule by the Versailles peace pact.

That is why she hasn't had much time to worry about the king's royal bellyache at home. She has not been in a position until now to rush back to the royal palace at Bucharest to see that Ferdinand does not overeat. It is only now that she is able to cut short her tour at Louisville and rush to New York preparatory to sailing home with her Christmas gift from American finance secretly pocketted.

Marie has attended to the growing ailments of her royal government, that needs continuous applications of precious gold in order to keep it alive. That gold will be supplied by Wall Street's international bankers because world finance must plug up the leaks in its sinking imperialist ship of state.

FINDS NO RACE DISCRIMINATION IN SOVIET UNION

Negro Student Tells of Equality

By THOMAS L. DABNEY,
Federated Press.

(Dabney is a member of the Teachers' Union, a former Brookwood Labor College student who went with the spontaneously formed American student delegation to Russia during the summer.—Ed.)

* * *

There is no discrimination against a worker in Russia because of his race or nationality. Every worker has the same economic and political rights and advantages, whether he be the member of the largest social group—the Great Russians—or a minority race like the Volga Germans or an undeveloped race like the Tartars. I was convinced of this during my travels in Russia the past summer. I talked with the heads of shop committees in Nijni Novgorod, Saratov and other cities where different nationalities were employed. I found no evidences of discrimination in any factory on account of race.

No Negro Discrimination.

In Moscow I met five Negro students from the Communist University of the Minorities of the East. In my conversation with one of them he said: "We are treated well by the Russians. We have suffered no discrimination on account of color. On the contrary, we are accorded absolute equality and freedom everywhere. Some Russians, of course, have seen no Negroes, so they eye us curiously and seem a little shy at first. But they lose this after they come to know us."

Council of Nationalities.

The Soviet government has made the greatest contribution to democratic government in modern times in its handling of the problems of race and nationality. This unique achievement was accomplished by the Soviet system of representation in the legislative body of the republic. The Soviet legislative organ—the central executive committee—is composed of two bodies, the Union Council and the Council of Nationalities.

The Union Council is composed of members elected by the Union Congress from among delegates of all the republics, in proportion to the population of the respective republics. This body represents the workers. The races and nationalities are represented in the Council of Nationalities, which is composed of five representatives from each autonomous and allied republic and one representative from each autonomous territory. The function of this body is to protect and further the interests and rights of the various races and minorities in the Soviet Union.

All Are Satisfied.

The races and minorities seem to be satisfied with this system. The commissar of education of the Volga German Commune assured our delegation that the Germans were enjoying all the rights and advantages granted by the Soviet authorities to other races. Before the revolution they were denied the privilege of studying German; now both German and Russian are taught in the schools.

In Kasan, capital of the Tartar republic, the commissar of education reiterated the story told us in the German Volga Commune. At the hills of the Caucasus we visited a village inhabited by a branch of the Turkish race where the tribes were without a written language during the days of the czar. Since the revolution the Soviet authorities have worked out a written language for these people and it is taught in their schools.

Every race and minority group is free to develop its own culture and to worship as it pleases. As a result of this policy racial conflicts have ceased and all peoples are loyal to the Soviet government.

AUSTRALIAN WORKERS MUST FIGHT BUREAUCRACY OF LEADERS AS WELL AS CORRUPTION OF STATE OFFICERS

SYDNEY, Australia.—(By Mail)—The Australian Workers' Union is the largest industrial organization in Australia, having about 125,000 members. However, its numerical strength is not used to the fullest advantage. The official policy is constitutional methods and arbitration. This has made the rank and file of the union very apathetic, and has as a consequence allowed a bureaucracy of unscrupulous officials to maintain control. It is absolutely unknown for a rank and file member of the union to be a delegate on their congresses; officials look after that part of the business.

On account of its army of organizers and officials, the A. W. U. was able to dominate the New South Wales branch of the Australian Labor Party for many years. They were not particular about their methods of keeping control of the political machine, and as a consequence they went too far, and were caught with a number of ballot boxes with sliding panels. As a result of this exposure A. W. U. officials lost their hold on the A. L. P., and their leader, J. Bailey, was expelled from the political party.

Try to Get Seek.

That was in 1923. Since that time Bailey and his followers have been trying every method of re-establishing their control, but without success.

Just recently they made a big effort by trying to oust the labor premier of N. S. W. (Mr. Lang). Mr. Loughlin was the Bailey nominee. When the vote was taken in the parliamentary caucus the figures were 23 each. As this was not decisive, the premier retained his position. The Communists do not like either Loughlin or Lang, but of the two, Lang is a thousand times better than Loughlin, and the Communists expressed themselves accordingly.

Call Special Conference.

The result of the battle is that the executive of the A. L. P. have convened a special conference to be held on November 12. This conference is of immense importance to us, as it looks likely to be a step forward for the Communist Party.

We hope to achieve the right to represent our unions on the A. L. P. conference, even tho we are members of the Communist Party. Every indication points to us winning this right at the special conference. The A. W. U. is engaged in a fierce campaign to defeat us.

South Australia.

There is a free speech fight being carried on in South Australia by the I. W. W. and other militants. There is a labor government in office in South Australia, but it appears that the authorities in charge of the park have refused to let the I. W. W. hold meetings there, altho it is a recognized meeting place. It is thought that if the government was sincere it could easily fix the matter up. All sections of the movement are rallying to the campaign. It is understood that the matter will be discussed at the A. L. P. conference which is being held in that state at the present time.

Queensland.

The political situation is very torrid in that state also. The A. W. U. officials have complete control over the Australian Labor Party of Queensland but they have not used that control in the best interests of the working class. The labor party has been in office for ten years in that state, and their record is very unsatisfactory.

Increase Own Salary.

At the beginning of the present session of parliament the politicians increased their own salary by $25 per week. A few weeks later the labor party nominees refused to grant a rise from £4 5s. 0d. to £4 15s. 0d. in the basic wage for Queensland workers.

This was resented very much by the workers. The Brisbane Trades and Labor Council asked the premier to meet a deputation. This the premier refused to do. The council was very angry about the matter and decided to call a conference of all unions on November 12 to consider the advisability of forming a new industrial party. Thus the industrial conference in Queensland, and the A. L. P. conference in N. S. W. will begin on the same day. Both of them are likely to have far-reaching results. Another thing that roused the resentment of the Queensland workers was the government's refusal to grant the basic wage to blind workers in institutions.

The customs department has stopped "The Communist International," "On the Road to Insurrection," "Ten Days that Shook the World," and other publications from entering Sydney.

Many Labor Councils and Unions have protested against this unwarrantable action of the authorities.

The Soviet Union's Cinema Industry

AN infant industry worth watching is the Russian motion picture industry. For the present its capital is "infinitesimal" compared with the mountain of gold with which Mr. Hayes' protegee operate, his chances of getting more money thru film export seems as tho it were impossible, considering the firm hold the American movies have on the public and picture-house owners the world over.

The Sovkino (Soviet Kino), the united distributing trust of the seven producing companies new making pictures, news, educational, spectacular and dramatic, is worth watching.

Great Interest in Movies.

The interest in kino in Russia today—like all the Russian interests—is very great. Nobody is content to take a quiet, dilletante interests. The Russian studies are full of workers, who talk dreams of expansion and production that make Hollywood seem unambitious.

"Well, for one thing," said a reporter, on one of the many Russian kine magazines, "the we may not be able to sell our Russian-made pictures for a while, certainly we are the coming market for pictures. Before the revolution we had only five or six hundred cinema theaters in all Russia. But we are the nation with the audience. Millions of eyes! Since the revolution we have built upwards of 1,000 small cinemas in the workmen's and peasants' clubs, in army headquarters, and in schools. We will continue the practice that was part of our propaganda in the early days of the revolution, of having motion pictures in boxcars that educate the peasants in the most remote railway points about the new way of life."

Russia's Natural Advantages.

When asked if Russia had any natural advantages for picture making that would offset the lack of capital, he replied: "Certainly, for our theater has the most magnificent tradition in the world of repertory and character acting. We are not bound to the American wheel, the pretty girl. We have the material for vast spectacles. Our producing companies are not overburdened with the vested interests of star salaries. The plan and the whole company can be the thing."

Though Russian films so far shown in the United States are Politkuns portions of reels made of Lenin's funeral and of Third International congresses and of American news reels, and a few badly made propaganda reels sold to labor organizations. Pictures of the Moscow Tokin flight are shortly to be released by Pathe. Mr. Leon Zandanow, who has been in New York for some time with the Amkino Corporation, making a report on American films for Russian purchase has returned to Moscow. He will be one of the chief participants in the reception which the Russian cinema industry plans to extend Douglas Fairbank and Mary Pickford, who are being shown in the biggest motion picture house on the Tverskaia in "The Thief of Bagdad."

Charlie Chaplin, who was adored as a friend of the Soviets during the early days of the revolution, has died down, and is not much in demand. His newer films have not been shown. The Chaplin interests demanded too large a price and the lasting myth of "Charlie of the masses" has given way to an impression that the hero of other days is a merchant no more generous than the rest of the outside world.

Work on Many Films.

The Soviet producing companies are working on many films, dramatic and comic. Two companies are in the far north taking pictures of life among the White Sea, with native reindeer, Lapplanders, etc., and one is in Siberia with a polar exploration expedition.

Of the many films made in celebration of the twentieth anniversary of the 1905 revolution there are several showing the historical events which took place in St Petersburg, Moscow and other centers. It is shown to the music of new compositions, "The Red Engine Driver," "The Siren of Revolution," "The Last Months of the Czar," "The Fall of the Romanoffs," "The Life of Lenin," "The Year of Revolution," "The Days of October," "The Battleship Potemkin," "The Mutiny," "The Red Army," "The Red Cavalry," "The Red Fleet," "The Red Partisans," "The Red Guards," "The Red Cossacks," "The Red Sailors," "The Red Soldiers," "The Red Workers," "The Red Peasants," "The Red Women," "The Red Children," "The Red Youth," "The Red Students," "The Red Intellectuals," "The Red Artists," "The Red Writers," "The Red Scientists," "The Red Inventors," "The Red Explorers," "The Red Pioneers," "The Red Scouts," "The Red Guards," "The Red Cossacks," "The Red Sailors," "The Red Soldiers," "The Red Workers," "The Red Peasants," "The Red Women," "The Red Children," "The Red Youth," "The Red Students," "The Red Intellectuals," "The Red Artists," "The Red Writers," "The Red Scientists," "The Red Inventors," "The Red Explorers," "The Red Pioneers," "The Red Scouts."

Cinemas and Children.

The various cinema journals constantly present articles on the subject of cinema stories for children, and one Moscow producing company has already begun a series of old Russian folk stories for the kine, with "The Tale of the Ice King" which has been exported to England with some success, because of the beautiful photography and the simple and romantic story.

Hindu Wins Court Decision

SAN FRANCISCO.—(FP)—Naturalization officials are at sea following the decision of the U. S. circuit court of appeals, sitting in San Francisco that S. G. Pandit, Hindu lawyer, cannot be deprived of his citizenship. This will probably be a test case for other Hindus claiming to have been naturalized before Hindus were declared ineligible.

What Makes a Girl Beautiful?

NEW YORK, Nov. 16.—(FP)—Natalie Saracho, Russian movie actress who has been employed by the Soviet film concerne, said upon her arrival inNew York on her way to picture making for American producers in Hollywood: "I believe that the Russian girls are the most beautiful in the world. It is a revolution and not a beauty shop which makes for real beauty and gives character to a girl's face."

With Mussolini at Helm, Italy Cannot Avoid War, Sage Says

Italy cannot avoid war, Ralph Dennis, Northwestern University professor and former vice-consul in Russia, told the Chicago Association of Commerce today in an address.

"While Mussolini has brought about great economic benefits for his people," said Dennis, "he has at the same time inflated the national spirit of Italy so that war cannot be avoided. The spirit of Mussolini is the spirit of war."

Pump Crushes Worker as Overcoat Catches

BEDFORD, Ind., Nov. 18.—William Beyers, 65, was instantly killed today when his long overcoat was caught in a pump line shaft at the Peerless quarry, north of here. Beyers was wound about the pump and crushed.

Missouri Bank Closes Doors After Slow Run

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo., Nov. 18.—The Farmers' and Merchants' Bank of Hunnewell, Shelby county, with total resources of $101,654, closed its doors today as a result of a slow run, the department was notified by A. L. Vaughn, president of the bank.

Twelve Arrested in Alleged Counterfeit Ring, Seek 20 Others

DETROIT, Nov. 18. Three new arrests were made here today in connection with a $1,000,000-a-year national counterfeit ring, uncovered by United States secret service agents.

A total of twelve persons have been arrested, eight here, three in Boston, where the counterfeiting plant was located, and one in Pittsburgh. Twenty others are under surveillance, including women, and other arrests are expected.

Bombing Charge Fails.

After deliberating fifteen minutes, a jury acquitted nine officials of the Italian Cleaners' and Dyers' Association who were under trial as a result of the bombing of the establishment of the M. Becker Cleaning Co., 2506 South Parkway. The state's witnesses were unable to connect the defendants in any way with the occurrence. The defendants called no witnesses. The jury did the rest.

150-Year-Old Russian Dies.

TIFLIS, Nov. 18.—Nikolajlowitch Andruszenko, who claimed to be 150 years old and who graphically described the retreat of Napoleon from Moscow, died here after walking several miles to purchase some tobacco.

Spain Issues Denial of Wholesale Arrests to Suppress Revolts

(Special to The Daily Worker)

MADRID, Nov. 18.—The government today issued a communique denying reports that the De Rivera government has imprisoned thousands of Spaniards to suppress revolts.

The communique stated that there are 3,468 fewer prisoners now than in 1919. It states that the number of prisoners in Spain is now 12,151.

Reports of military reverses in Morocco were also denied.

U. S. Gobs Scab on Chinese

SHANGHAI (FP).—The depths to which the imperialists stoop to strangle the rising labor movement of China is illustrated by the confession of the editor of The Orient, that at his suggestion during the general strike last year, navy printers from the Huron, Black Hawk and Canopus (American warships in Asiatic waters) were brought to Shanghai. "Thru the efforts of this loyal band of foreigners the daily papers were published on schedule time," he concludes.

The Chinese printers had gone out in sympathy with the general strike proclaimed as a protest against the massacre of students on May 30, 1925. American sailors did the dirty work of breaking the printers' strike, not only on the local papers in which American capital was interested, but on those published by their British competitors as well.

Use your brains and your pen to aid the workers in the class struggle.

GURLEY FLYNN TO BE HONOR GUEST AT GAY CABARET

Unique Function Offered by Chicago I. L. D.

Just two days before the great mass meeting, which will be held Nov. 26th, by the Sacco-Vanzetti conference of Chicago, that is, on Thanksgiving Eve, November 24th, the I. L. D. of Chicago will offer a unique and gay "Workers' Cabaret" where there will be excellent entertainment, refreshments, dancing, etc.

Flynn to Be Guest.

Elizabeth Gurley Flynn, national chairman of I. L. D., will be the guest of honor. She is secretary of the Sacco-Vanzetti committee of New York, and well-known for her work in the Patterson and Passaic strikes and as a powerful speaker.

The entertainment features on Thanksgiving Eve are to be most colorful and in variety. Mirror Hall, Western avenue and Division street, will be the scene of this affair and it will be "all set" for the occasion.

Only 1000.

As the hall is not unlimited in size, and since only 1,000 tickets will be sold, either in advance or at the door, the committee in charge has sent out word that all who want to be "in" on this event should buy their tickets early, and come early.

Admission is 75c. Wardrobe free. Tables for all. No collection.

I. L. D. and Arbeiter-Bund Give N. Y. Concert

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, Nov. 18.—Coming this Saturday, Nov. 20, there will be a concert and ball held at the New York Labor Temple, 243 E. 84th street, Room No. 10 under the auspices of the G. A. Uthmann Male Chorus, branch 43, International Labor Defense and the Arbeiter Bund of Manhatten and Bronx for the benefit of class war prisoners.

A splendid program has been prepared by the committee in charge. "G. A. Uthmann Male Chorus," the only German revolutionary singing society will give several numbers. The Handonium Orchestra whose members are becoming well-known for their artistic and good cooperation here in New York and vicinity, will let us enjoy several selections and the "Deutsche Polytarische Buehne" will produce a scene from Wilhelm Poland and a recitation by one of its members.

Alois Bolsano's orchestra will give several numbers and furnish the dance music. The admission is 50 cents.

New York Workers Greet Class-War Prisoner Friday

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, Nov. 18.—The reception arranged by the International Labor Defense, New York, in honor of Charles Cline, who spent 13 years in prison for trying to help the workers in Mexico, promises to be one of the finest worker affairs of the season.

Comrade Cline will give an account of his experiences in prison. In addition there will be good music, dancing, refreshments—all for 50c only. The proceeds of this affair will be used to defend workers who are thrown into prisons for participating in the class struggle and to help their families.

The reception will take place Friday, Nov. 19, 8 p. m. at Manhattan Lyceum, 66 E. 4th street. Come and bring your friends.

STRIKE STRATEGY

By WILLIAM Z. FOSTER

ARTICLE XIX

Partial Settlements

An important question in connection with strike settlements is whether or not partial settlements shall be made; that is, whether it is a good policy in strikes to make settlements with those employers who are willing to "sign up." For many years the left wing gave a categorical "no" answer to this question. It advocated the policy that all employers must settle at once or none can be signed up. It declared that partial settlements are organized scabbery.

In arriving at these conclusions the left wing was moved principally by (1) the disastrous effects of the policy of craft treachery of the reactionary labor leaders, (2) the fact that the left wing based its policies chiefly on the big trustified industries where partial settlements are manifestly impossible.

But the general conclusion that there shall be no partial settlements under any circumstances is wrong. It is ultra-leftist. In certain situations the workers find it advantageous to make such partial settlements. The problem is to find out when and under what circumstances they may

Judging Partial Settlements

When partial settlements serve the general strategical aim of splitting the ranks of the employers and enable the workers to play off one section of them against the others they are tactically advisable. Then it is a case of making one group of capitalists scab on the rest. But when such settlements weaken or divide the workers' ranks, or compromise the political purposes of a great strike they must be rigidly avoided.

Industries still in a highly competitive state, such as clothing, building, printing, etc., are the ones in which the method of the partial settlement is applicable. Often in such industries, by signing up individual employers, independent associations, or split-offs from the main employers' organization, the balance are so fearful of losing their present trade and permanent markets that they abandon their resistance.

Partial settlements at critical moments in competitive industries also sometimes stampede the main bodies of employers and break their associations. And by the same token, often the workers involved, seeing the employers' ranks thus crumbling and receiving financial aid from the workers who have settled, are encouraged to fight the harder.

But even in the competitive industries, because of the dangers which must be carefully guarded against. There are dangers of scab work being done in the settled shops in spite of all precautions; of lockouts of settled shops when the main association remains undefeated; of so much pressure is taken off the employers generally; of weakening the picket committees by making it difficult to tell which are really settled employers and which not; of robbing the strike of its mass character and thus its throbbing solidarity spirit; of creating an antagonism of interest between those workers who have gone back to work and those who remain on strike.

But even in the competitive industries, because of the generally growing strength of the employers, the value of the partial settlement is a diminishing quantity. More and more it is becoming necessary to defeat the employers en bloc, and to do this must ever be the left wing's chief aim.

In Trustified Industries

In industries which are thoroly trustified or in which a few large combinations of capital dominate, such as steel, packing, rubber, textile, automobile, etc., the value of the partial settlement has vanished. It is virtually out of the question to play off one set of employers against the others. They are too firmly united together, financially and industrially, for this. The workers must win against them as a whole, either upon a local or national scale, mostly the latter.

An impermissible form of partial settlement is that often practiced in the coal industry, where the reactionaries sign up some of the mines of certain companies and let the rest remain nonunion. This puts a premium upon nonunionism and gives the employers in question a terrible weapon to use against the organization. All they have to do in the slack seasons or other periods of active offensive transfer production from their union to nonunion plants. This they have done many times.

A Confession of Weakness

Likewise, in great strikes of workers in basic and key industries, such as the railroads, coal mining, etc., partial settlements are usually unwise and often disastrous. They destroy the political effect of such strikes. They are a confession of weakness, of failure to achieve the original aim of the strike, which was to defeat the government, or, the whole body of employers.

Had Farrington succeeded in his previously mentioned plan of signing up a state agreement for Illinois in the midst of the 1922 strike it would have ruined that great struggle, not merely because of the flood of Illinois coal thrown on the market, but especially because the settlement would have signalized the failure of the union to get control of the whole central competitive district. The employers very much favored Farrington's treacherous manuever. As a rule, in strikes of a broad and marked political character partial settlements are only justifiable in case of bad defeats, when it is a case of merely trying to save the pieces.

A form of partial settlement that the employers often favor is that along craft lines. Such settlements enable them to pit the skilled workers against each other and against the unskilled. Right wing leaders habitually make partial settlements of this character. The left wing must resolutely oppose them. They are fatal to the growth and progress of the labor movement.

FINDS NO RACE DISCRIMINATION IN SOVIET UNION

Negro Student Tells of Equality

By THOMAS L. DABNEY,
Federated Press.

(Dabney is a member of the Teachers' Union, a former Brookwood Labor College student who went with the spontaneously formed American student delegation to Russia during the summer.—Ed.)

* * *

There is no discrimination against a worker in Russia because of his race or nationality. Every worker has the same economic and political rights and advantages, whether he be the member of the largest social group—the Great Russians—or a minority race like the Volga Germans or an undeveloped race like the Tartars. I was convinced of this during my travels in Russia the past summer. I talked with the heads of shop committees in Nizni Novgorod, Saratov and other cities where different nationalities were employed. I found no evidences of discrimination in any factory on account of race.

No Negro Discrimination.

In Moscow I met five Negro students from the Communist University of the Minorities of the East. In my conversation with one of them he said: "We are treated well by the Russians. We have suffered no discrimination on account of color. On the contrary, we are accorded absolute equality and freedom everywhere. Some Russians, of course, have seen no Negroes, so they are us curiously and seem a little shy at first. But they lose this after they come to know us."

Council of Nationalities.

The Soviet government has made the greatest contribution to democratic government in modern times in its handling of the problems of race and nationality. This unique achievement was accomplished by the Soviet system of representation in the legislative body of the republic. The Soviet legislative organ—the central executive committee—is composed of two bodies, the Union Council and the Council of Nationalities.

The Union Council is composed of members elected by the Union Congress from among delegates of all the republics, in proportion to the population of the respective republics. This body represents the workers. The races and nationalities are represented in the Council of Nationalities, which is composed of five representatives from each autonomous and allied republic and one representative from each autonomous territory. The function of this body is to protect and further the interests and rights of the various races and minorities in the Soviet Union.

All Are Satisfied.

The races and minorities seem to be satisfied with this system. The commissar of education of the Volga German Communa assured our delegation that the Germans were enjoying all the rights and advantages granted by the Soviet authorities to other races. Before the revolution they were denied the privilege of studying German; now both German and Russian are taught in the schools.

In Kasan, capital of the Tartar republic, the commissar of education reiterated the story told us in the German Volga Commune. At the hills of the Caucasus we visited a village inhabited by a branch of the Turkish race where the tribes were without a written language during the days of the czar. Since the revolution the Soviet authorities have worked out a written language for these people and it is taught in their schools.

Every race and minority group is free to develop its own culture and to worship as it pleases. As a result of this policy racial conflicts have ceased and all peoples are loyal to the Soviet government.

AUSTRALIAN WORKERS MUST FIGHT "BUREAUCRACY OF LEADERS AS WELL AS CORRUPTION OF STATE OFFICERS

SYDNEY, Australia.—(By Mail)—The Australian Workers' Union is the largest industrial organization in Australia, having about 185,000 members. However, its numerical strength is not used to the fullest advantage. The official policy is constitutional methods and arbitration. This has made the rank and file of the union very apathetic, and has as a consequence allowed a bureaucracy of unscrupulous officials to maintain control. It is absolutely unknown for a rank and file member of the union to be a delegate on their congresses; officials look after that part of the business.

On account of its army of organisers and officials, the A. W. U. was able to dominate the New South Wales branch of the Australian Labor Party for many years. They were not particular about their methods of keeping control of the political machine, and as a consequence they went too far, and were caught with a number of ballot boxes with stidding panels. As a result of this exposure A. W. U. officials lost their hold on the A. L. P., and their leader, J. Bailey, was expelled from the political party.

Try to Get Back.

That was in 1923. Since that time Bailey and his followers have been trying every method of re-establishing their control, but without success.

Just recently they made a big effort by trying to oust the labor premier of N. S. W. (Mr. Lang). Mr. Loughlin was the Bailey nominee. When the vote was taken in the parliamentary caucus the figures were 23 each. As this was not decisive, the premier retained his position. The Communists do not like either Loughlin or Lang, but of the two, Lang is a thousand times better than Loughlin, and the Communists expressed themselves accordingly.

Call Special Conference.

The result of the battle is that the executive of the A. L. P. have convened a special conference to be held on November 12. This conference is of immense importance to us, as it looks likely to be a step forward for the Communist Party.

We hope to achieve the right to represent our unions on the A. L. P. conference, even tho we are members of the Communist Party. Every indication points to us winning this right at the special conference. The A. W. U. is engaged in a fierce campaign to defeat us.
